"The book is filled with amusing stories of China, most of which are familiar to all foreigners who have lived there, and which should prove fascinating to readers in other lands. Those who choose medicine as a career are sure of having thrilling experiences if they practise in far-away countries." V. G. Heiser, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 Ap 15 '39 550w

Time 33:95 Ap 24 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:102 My '39

FEATHERSTONHAUGH, DUANE. Press photography with the miniature camera; il. by the author. 159p $2 Am. photographic pub.

778 Photography (W) 39-27438

Brief manual on photography for amateurs and press photographers. "Beyond the concise chapters on the mechanical phases of the game, the author tells, in equally practical style, what news is, what to take, and why. He analyzes pictures to show what makes them talk, and what makes them talk to an editor. He explains the technique, psychology, ethics, and best policies for beating the deadline with difficult shots under impossible photographic conditions, and in spite of obstructing individuals, corporations, and police." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 35:326 Je 1 '39

N Y New Tech Bks 24:27 Ap '39

FEDDEN, HENRY ROMILLY. Land of Egypt. 120p il $4.50 Scribner [12s 6d Batsford]

916.2 Egypt [40-1342]

"Mr. Fedden, who has lived in Cairo for many years, writes not only of the sights to be seen but also of the beliefs, the way of life, that lie behind them. The greatest link between the past and the present is the fellah. . . Intertwined with this discussion of the political situation of the past and prognosis for the future is a beautifully written description of the country as it may be seen by the discerning tourist. The tombs and temples as analyzed are both historical and artistic monuments." Boston Transcript

"There is plenty of taste and intelligence here. This book should certainly accompany the traveler who wants something more than sunshine and superficial touring."

+ Books p16 O 15 '39 300w

"It is a small volume to contain so much but the author is adept at making one word do the work of three. There are 130 photographic illustrations which are colored by the words of the text. Mr. Fedden had synthesized his material and gives to the reader in a little over a hundred pages the result of years of observation. The tourist will find it a valuable book to read before going to Egypt and the stay-at-homes will see the country through expert eyes." Virginia Fletcher

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 550w

Manchester Guardian p7 My 16 '39 350w

"Mr. Fedden writes with commendable brevity, pith, and discrimination about a country with which he is sympathetically but unsentimentally familiar. . . Many photographs, exceptional in choice of subject and in quality really supplement the text. In the face of such general excellence it would be ungracious to call specific attention to fairly numerous slips in proof-reading." Ashton Sanborn

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 5 '39 450w

"This is not a book for the tourist to take to Egypt with him: it does not tell you how to get anywhere nor what to see next. But it is emphatically a book every tourist ought to read before going to Egypt, for everyone to read who has no chance of going there, and for those who have been there and want to recapture something of the old enchantment. . . Moreover, Mr. Fedden has a point of view, even a philosophy, which though he never forces it upon you, nevertheless permeates the whole book. One would like to say that it is civilised, if the word had not become so abused; it is better to say that it contains wisdom." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 162:968 Je 2 '39 750w

"The great wealth of illustrations of remarkable excellence, archaeological, architectural, topographical and ethnological, with which this volume is enriched is almost a danger to its author as it tends to divert the reader's attention from his text. Should it have that effect it would be a great pity as Mr. Fedden writes thoughtfully and interestingly about Egypt."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p286 My 13 '39 160w

FEDDEN, ROBIN. See Fedden, H. R.

FEDDER, RUTH. A girl grows up; il. by Mary Magill. (Whittlesey house publication) 235p $1.75 (8s 6d); school ed $1.24 McGraw

136.7354 Adolescence. Girls (W) 39-3432

Chapters on the difficulties and necessary adjustments of adolescents, especially the teenage girl. Partial contents: Gaining self-confidence; Acting your age; Growing up emotionally; Getting on with people; Associating happily with boys; The give and take of living. Lists some "books you may want to read."

Reviewed by I. V. Hiscock

Am J Pub Health 29:1356 D '39 80w

Booklist 35:350 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by E. M. Mack

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

J Home Econ 31:332 My '39 70w

Pratt p4 winter '40

"Adolescents, bewildered by the changing world as well as by their own development, will find the book an illuminating guide. Its sane consideration of the things all girls think of commends it to everyone who wants to lend a hand in this difficult business of growing up." R. L. Frankel

+ Survey 75:260 Ag '39 280w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT. The Oregon trail; the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean; sponsored by Oregon trail memorial assn, incorporated. (Am. guide ser) 244p il map $2 Hastings house

917.8 Oregon trail. West—Description and travel (W) 39-27221

Traces the Oregon trail from Council Bluffs, thru Missouri and Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Idaho, and Oregon, mainly over the present US 30. It gives also the alternate route, beginning at Ogallala, Nebraska, to Wyoming, and on, with side routes. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:273 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Books p21 My 7 '39 400w

New Repub 99:84 My 24 '39 40w

"One of the best of the Federal Writers' Project's books."

+ Time 33:91 Ap 24 '39 400w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT. Our federal government and how it functions [ed. by Joseph Gaer; sponsored by the Guild's com. for Federal writers' publications, incorporated]. (Am. guide ser) 234p $1.75 Hastings house

353 U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-18459

This book consists of material "taken from Washington: City and Capital, prepared by the Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration. (Government Printing Office, 1937). The material was revised and brought up to date. New material was added to include agencies that have come into existence since then." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

"Up to the usual high level of works produced by the Federal Writers' Project."

New Repub 100:84 Ag 23 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 100w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT. These are our lives [ed. with pref. by W. T. Couch; sponsored by the Univ. of North Carolina]. 421p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

330.975 South—Economic conditions. South—Social conditions (W) 39-27440

A collection of life histories told "by the people and written by members of the Federal writers' project of the Works progress administration in North Carolina, Tennessee, and Georgia." (Subtitle) Tho the stories are of real people, names of persons and in some cases, of places, have been changed. The sketches are grouped under the headings: On the farm; In mill village and factory; In service occupations; On relief.

Reviewed by B. A. Rogers

Am Econ R 29:639 S '39 170w

"A book of fascinating interest, very impressive in its realistic revelations, and very challenging to every student of the social life of the American people." Jerome Dowd

+ Ann Am Acad 205:143 S '39 270w

Booklist 35:324 Je 1 '39

"In all cases the material is handled honestly, sincerely and, one is compelled to believe, truthfully. Any account of human lives so treated inevitably is both interesting and moving. In this case it is also highly informative; the book should be required reading for all politicians, clergymen, newspaper editors and employers of labor, all of whom have the habit of interfering in human lives frequently with grossly inadequate information." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p7 Je 18 '39 450w

"To this reviewer it seems that here the Federal Writers' Project has at last struck that neat combination of literary worth and social documentation for which no doubt it has been striving." R. B. Vance

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 10 '39 310w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:v Ag '39 300w

Nation 149:80 Jl 15 '39 160w

"The Federal Writers Project has produced a book that is as important as any that has been written since the cultural renaissance dawned below the Potomac. The writers who contributed to it deserve well of the future." W. S. Meacham

+ N Y Times p10 My 21 '39 800w

Pratt p7 autumn '39

"Those who look upon the Federal Writers' Project with a jaundiced eye, on the theory that the directors of such projects are necessarily maestros of the boondoggle, should consider this volume. It is the work of good, and at times distinguished, craftsmen. The WPA may have spent some of its money in fantastically extravagant ways—although I believe such allegations to be considerably exaggerated—but 'These Are Our Lives' is not one of them." Virginius Dabney

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 My 27 '39 550w

"The important thing is this. In a single volume the Federal Writers' Project has caught the very tang and texture of the Southeast. In readability and literary excellence 'These Are Our Lives' ranks with the best that has come from these states. In authenticity it creates a new comparative standard." G. C. Stoney

+ Survey G 28:548 S '39 750w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT—Continued

"Something new in sociological writing. . . . [This book] gives the South its most pungent picture of common life, the Writers' Project its strongest claim to literary distinction."

+ Time 33:87 My 1 '39 500w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, ALASKA. A guide to Alaska; last American frontier; by Merle Colby. (American guide ser) 427p il maps $3 Macmillan

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel
(W) 39-27616

"In the first section of his book, Mr. Colby acquaints us with the history of Alaska, and the facts about its natural wealth, its commerce, transportation, government and defense, its people and the general conditions of their lives. The second and larger division guides us, in interesting detail, through the land. The excellent photographs are arranged in well assorted groups, and there are also drawings, prints and maps." (Books) Index.

Booklist 35:381 Jl 15 '39

"If what you want is information about Alaska, well arranged for guidance and well written for enjoyment, here is your book." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p10 Jl 30 '39 450w

Reviewed by Virginia Fletcher
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 650w

"A fascinating introduction to one of the least known American wonderlands."

+ Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 50w
Foreign Affairs 18:374 Ja '40 20w

"Beautiful and plentiful photographs tell part of the story. Four hundred pages of exciting text, which never overlook the colorful, the human, tell the rest. Details of travel by every means of transportation, including dog team, are given, and so on down to intimate but no doubt invaluable advice about what kind of underwear to take." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 102:v S '39 200w

"The book covers with extraordinary interest the whole of this 'last frontier' from Ketchikan to Nome and from Point Barrow on the Arctic Ocean to Attu, westernmost of the Aleutian Islands, 'the lonesomest spot this side of hell.' It is packed with information that is almost as attractive to the general reader as it is valuable to the intending visitor. To round out a really notable contribution to guide-book literature there is a generous number of superb illustrations from photographs and old prints and a fully adequate complement of maps." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 30 '39 440w
New Yorker 15:76 Jl 22 '39 30w
Pratt p19 winter '40

"The book is written in excellent English and has a flavor and humor that are certified to be Alaskan. It is certainly an enjoyable volume."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 13 '39 600w
Time 34:61 Jl 24 '39 110w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, CALIFORNIA. California; a guide to the Golden state; sponsored by Mabel R. Gillis. (Am. guide ser) 713p il maps $3 Hastings house

917.94 California—Description and travel. California—History (W) 39-27486

Both history and description with some objective comment on economic and social conditions. One section is devoted to accounts of a dozen of the larger cities and towns. Over three hundred pages are given to automobile tours. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:348 Je 15 '39

"The California State Guide is the best and most thorough guide available for the tourist who wants to take his California seriously." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p28 N 26 '39 250w

"For Californians, the writers have shown admirable restraint. They have kept their enthusiasm in respectable bounds, though there is perhaps less of the self-criticism which salted some of the guides to the older states. The book is generously illustrated and provided with maps." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 270w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39
New Repub 99:168 Je 14 '39 40w

"The book is valuable, inclusive and continuously interesting, an authentic and permanent record both for Californians and for visitors, and its writers have admirably performed their work of bringing unity out of the mass of material and balancing so many contrasting factors and points of view. A word should be said for the attractive format and the exceptional beauty of the photographs." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 30 '39 900w
Pratt p23 autumn '39

Reviewed by G. R. Stewart
Sat R of Lit 20:14 Jl 1 '39 230w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 60w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, CALIFORNIA. Death Valley: a guide; sponsored by the Bret Harte associates. (Am. guide ser) 75p il maps pa $1 Houghton

917.94 Death Valley, California
(W) 39-2776

"[The] purpose [of this guide] is twofold: first, to give a true picture of Death Valley and to tell its story simply; second, by means of carefully organized tours to enable a complete stranger to find his way around the Death Valley region easily and to have at his fingertips a great fund of information that has been compiled from many sources and from trips in and around Death Valley." Foreword

Booklist 35:233 Mr 15 '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, FLORIDA. Florida: a guide to the southernmost state; sponsored by state of Florida Dept. of public instruction. (Am. guide ser) 600p il maps $2.50 Oxford

917.59 Florida—Description and travel
(W) 39-29497

"[This volume] follows the established pattern of WPA guidebooks. A background section, summarizing and interpreting various phases of the state's development—historical, economic, cultural and civic—comes first. This is followed by a section devoted to individual cities. The rest of the book, except for the appendices, offers description of particular touring routes and of places and scenes along the road." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:199 Ja 15 '40

Reviewed by A. J. Hanna
Books p5 Ja 28 '40 700w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '39 250w

"Only such a set-up as a WPA Writers' Project could compile so thoroughgoing a treatise on an entire state as is this latest addition to the American Guide Series. The added achievement of being not only exhaustive, but largely interesting, fresh, authoritative, and at moments even entertaining, is unique for a guidebook." Theodore Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ja 20 '40 400w

"The WPA guidebook to Florida is useful for its contemporary and historical information, and its generalized comments are reasonably restrained in the main. There is some excess of color here and there, and some statements should have been checked more carefully." E. N. Jenckes

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 D 30 '39 950w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, IDAHO. Idaho lore [ed. by] Vardis Fisher, state director. (Am. guide ser) 256p il $2.50 Caxton printers

390.9796 Folklore—Idaho. Idaho 39-28975

The first state collection of folklore, in the Federal Writers' Project series. The material is classified under the headings: tales, and beliefs and customs, with many subheads under each. A section on songs and one on sayings is included. Index.

Booklist 36:152 D 15 '39

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 130w

"The well-stocked book has plenty of real flavor, as it has also variety. And its drawings are picturesque and profuse."

+ N Y Times p30 D 10 '39 320w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 15 '40 250w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, ILLINOIS. Illinois; a descriptive and historical guide; sponsored by Henry Horner, governor. (Am. guide ser) 687p il maps $3 McClurg

917.73 Illinois—Description and travel (W) 39-27645

This descriptive and historical guide is divided into three parts: Illinois, the general background; Illinois, cities and towns; and Illinois tours. Bibliography. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

Pratt p18 winter '40

Wis Lib Bul 35:214 D '39

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, KANSAS. Kansas; a guide to the sunflower state; sponsored by State department of education. (Am. guide ser) 538p il maps $2.50 Viking

917.81 Kansas—Description and travel (W) 39-27791

This guide "to the Sunflower state" stresses the part played by topography in the development of a dual state—one-crop economy in the west, diversified farming in the east. Information on history and historical sites is included. Nearly one half the book is devoted to automobile tours. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:70 O 15 '39

"The Kansas Guide is well written and carefully edited. If the other books are done with as much intelligent care as has been put into the Kansas book, the American State Guide project is well worth while." W. A. White

+ Books p4 Ja 28 '40 600w

"It is a good book. The writers who made it were more or less amateurs and naturally they made historical blunders—a few but not important. And naturally certain omissions occur and misapplications of award and blame. But the project as a project has done a splendid job for Kansas and Kansans should be proud." W. A. White

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 O 21 '39 350w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, KENTUCKY. Kentucky; a guide to the Bluegrass state; sponsored by the Univ. of Kentucky. (Am. guide ser) 489p il maps $2.50 Harcourt

917.69 Kentucky—Description and travel (W) 39-27890

"The volume has the sponsorship of the University of Kentucky, and the president of that institution, Frank L. McVey, says in a foreword: 'The articles in this book have described Kentucky scenes, resources and attitudes. Photographs and maps strengthen the written word. The traveler will rejoice that touring routes have been planned to reveal the most significant aspects of the state, and the interest of his journeys into Kentucky will be greatly enhanced if he has this book.' " (Springf'd Republican) Chronology. Selective bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:113 N 15 '39

Reviewed by B. L. Burman

Books p5 Ja 28 '40 600w

"This is a lively Baedeker. That it does not cover the State with the accuracy or the verve of its predecessor, the so-called 'Collins History of Kentucky,' a reference book produced by Lewis Collins in 1847, may be due to the anonymous symposium method implicit in a WPA project. Some of the historical sections are oddly perfunctory. . . The book has a delightful format. The photography is beautiful and interesting. Automobile tours are described with entertaining details. Any Kentuckian or would-be traveller in Kentucky would want to own the Kentucky Guide." E. N. Arling

+ — Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '39 270w

"One of the most delightful and informing of the American Guide series."

+ Christian Century 56:1277 O 18 '39 30w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson

Churchman 153:20 D 1 '39 250w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 21:19 N 25 '39 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 22 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:214 D '39

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, MASSACHUSETTS. The Albanian struggle, in the Old World and New; sponsored by the Albanian hist. soc. of Massachusetts [introd. by Rupert Emerson]. 168p il $2 Writer

325.2496 Albanians in the U.S. Albania—History 39-27485

The story of the part played by Albanian immigrants in the United States in the struggles for nationhood in their native country from 1912 to 1938. The book was in press in April, 1939, when word came of the conquest of Albania by Mussolini's troops. Tho largely devoted to history and politics, the book also comments on the Albanians' ways of life at home and in Massachusetts, on their customs, folklore, food, etc. Bibliography. Index.

"Although the bibliographical references are incomplete, the work is a concrete, objective chronicle, filled with interesting facts and presented in an admirable spirit of impartiality." J. S. Roucek

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:728 Ag '39 80w

"The sociology of nationalism and national minorities finds vivid exemplification in this study. The treatment is concrete with good illustrative material. This Federal Writers' study has obviously benefited by helpful contacts with members of the Harvard faculty." W. C. Lehmann

+ Am Soc R 4:867 D '39 150w

Booklist 35:342 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Boston Transcript p1 Je 3 '39 650w

"If the American minority that this little volume describes is small and inconspicuous, it is none the less full of interest. Its customs, though changed by the new environment, retain much that comes from the homeland. . . The writers of the book know how to extract full value from this interest. Their work is creditably done."

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 11 '39 450w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 15 '39 230w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, MASSACHUSETTS. The Berkshire hills; sponsored by the Berkshire Hills conference, incorporated. (Am. guide ser) 368p il maps $2.50 Funk

917.44 Berkshire hills (W) 39-27644

Informal guidebook to the Berkshire Hills district of western Massachusetts. There is much authentic history thruout the book, as

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, MASS.—Cont. well as a fund of local legends. The book contains a section on winter and summer sports in the Berkshire Hills. Illustrated with photographs. Maps. Index.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

"This is no ordinary guide book. It is a detailed, painstaking, humorous and fascinating chronicle of one very interesting section of our country." Peggy Lamson

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 21 '39 180w

Reviewed by C. K. Shipton

New Eng Q 12:802 D '39 1000w

"This is a good and adequate guidebook, which points to sights of interest, whether natural or man-made, and which gives readers and travelers the information they need on the necessary variety of subjects."

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 27 '39 330w

New Yorker 15:80 S 9 '39 30w

" 'The Berkshire Hills' proves to be one of the best written and most understanding of all the regional guides produced by the Federal Writers' project. With so large a proportion of legend in its pages, the volume has an advantage in not being held to too severe a test of historicity, for the legends, traditions and colorful aspects of local history are entertainingly related and have a certain substantiality, which beguiles the reader into accepting them at face value. . . Although composed in the form of a guidebook 'The Berkshire Hills' can be classed as a travel volume for leisurely reading. Historical statements and inferences are not infallible, but the volume is free from misrepresentation."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 650w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, MONTANA. Montana; a state guide book; sponsored by Dept. of agriculture, labor and industry, state of Montana. (Am. guide ser) 442p il maps $2.50 Viking

917.86 Montana—Description and travel
(W) 39-27792

"Although the main portion of the guide is given over to the tours, there is information on the flora, fauna, and natural resources, which is brief and well written. A glossary of local terms includes definitions such as 'Roll your bed!—You're fired,' and 'Slow elk—Beef butchered without the owner's knowledge.' " (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:70 O 15 '39

Reviewed by R. H. Fletcher

Books p5 Ja 28 '40 450w

"Much of the historical information is verbose and rambling. Then, too, the personal opinions of the writers on labor and religion is too evident. Accounts of labor difficulties border on propaganda. . . Regardless of these defects, one cannot read this guide book without having a desire to travel the historic trails and a tourist following the careful directions would come away with an enlarged understanding of the West." F. W. Stephens

Sat R of Lit 20:35 O 14 '39 300w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEBRASKA. Nebraska; a guide to the cornhusker state; sponsored by the Nebraska state historical society. (American guide ser) 424p il maps $2.50 Viking

917.82 Nebraska—Description and travel
(W) 39-27592

The book is in three main sections—first: The state in review, with chapters on Indians, government, agriculture, folklore, education, architecture, etc., etc; the second, Cities and towns; and the third, Tours. The appendices include a chronology and bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:381 Jl 15 '39

Reviewed by Allen Raymond

Books p8 Ag 20 '39 500w

New Repub 100:28 Ag 9 '39 40w

N Y Times p9 Ag 6 '39 380w

Pratt p18 winter '40

"This is the best book yet to be written about Nebraska. . . A fascinating state and people—and the Guide presents the whole picture. The book is rich with Americana." George Grimes

+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Jl 8 '39 600w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW ENGLAND STATES. Here's New England! a guide to vacationland; sponsored by the New England council, Boston. (Am. guide ser) 122p il maps $1 Houghton

917.4 New England—Description and travel
(W) 39-15700

Condensed guide to the six New England states. The coastline, the lake regions, the mountains, and historic shrines, all are considered briefly. Small maps of each section, with one large map. Index.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

"Another articulate example of what can be done by the Federal Writers' Project. . . The text is brief but suggestive, as it should be for those who run to read. It is the 22 maps, however, that will be most appreciated by the vacationist and the large additional one tucked into the back cover, pointing up such items as public beaches, bridle paths and the various winter sports centers, gives all of New England at a glance." R. A. C.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 1 '39 200w

"Helpful and inviting little book. . . New England is well set forth here in its individual character, as well as in its opportunities for happy holiday play."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 13 '39 290w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 200w

Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW JERSEY. New Jersey, a guide to its present and past; sponsored by the public library of Newark and the New Jersey guild associates. (Am. guide ser) 735p il maps $2.50 Viking

917.49 New Jersey—Description and travel
(W) 39-20654

Guidebook to New Jersey which "is an attempt to present not only the background and development of old New Jersey, but also the rapidly changing scene of the State today." (Pref) Contains data on 37 state tours, a chronology, a bibliography, and an index. Maps.

"It is a very thought-provoking volume, this guidebook, and worth the money. . . Like most of the admirable American Guide Series produced by the W. P. A.—a tangible and convincing refutation of charges of 'boon-doggling' in this white-collar project, this book is one for the reference shelf, and for useful browsing before starting out in one's family jaloppy for the great open spaces." Allen Raymond

+ Books p9 Ag 13 '39 650w

"The guide to New Jersey must have been one of the most difficult of the series to do, and is one of the best, typifying the great virtue of all of them: eager appreciation of the merits of the state and intelligent, critical detachment." B. D.

+ New Repub 101:212 D 6 '39 70w

Pratt p19 winter '40

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW JERSEY. New Jersey, a profile in pictures. (Am. guide ser) [59p] il $1 Barrows

917.49 New Jersey—Description and travel
(W) 39-27646

Over seventy photographs of bridges, historical buildings, industries, and scenery of the state of New Jersey, each with short descriptive comment.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

Books p9 Ag 13 '39 360w

"There are plenty of superlatives and near-superlatives in New Jersey, if that's what you are looking for; and you will find them pictured in this little book. But even more interesting than the superlatives is the beauty and the variety that you will also find in these seventy-odd photographs."
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 6 '39 130w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW JERSEY. Stories of New Jersey; its significant places, people and activities [sponsored by the N.J. assn. of teachers of social studies; N.J. guild associates, inc, co-operating sponsor]. 422p il maps $2 Barrows

917.49 New Jersey—Description and travel. New Jersey—History (W) 38-36014

Accounts of places, people, historic spots, industries, and ways of living in the state of New Jersey. Based upon pamphlets written and distributed by the Federal Writers' project in the state during 1936-1938. No index.

Booklist 35:228 Mr 15 '39

"Fine for supplementary reading and engrossing to anyone who wants to know a fascinating state."
+ Special Libraries 30:66 F '39

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW YORK (city). New York city guide; a comprehensive guide to the five boroughs of the metropolis—Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens, and Richmond [sponsored by the Guilds' com. for Federal writers' publications, incorporated]. (Am. guide ser) 708p il maps $3 Random house

917.471 New York (city)—Description (W) 39-27593

Detailed guidebook to New York city, which describes the city section by section. History, legend, politics, architecture, art criticism, and economic conditions all are discussed. Different sections take up travel, hotels, restaurants, schools, and museums. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:381 Jl 15 '39

"No other guidebook of the great American metropolis ever has been written to compare with this, and it is doubtful if one ever would have been compiled containing such a conglomeration of fact, feeling and cocksure opinion had it not been for the great depression and subsequent 'work relief' extended to the unemployed." Allen Raymond
+ Books p9 Jl 2 '39 850w

Reviewed by Sarah Chokla
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 480w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 8 '39 340w

Reviewed by R. M. Coates
New Repub 100:53 Ag 16 '39 950w

"The present guide book is a laborious but gallant production, full of good photographs and bad drawings and amusing scraps of knowledge." Peter Quennell
New Statesman & Nation 18:464 S 30 '39 1250w

"It is a practical guidebook for the visitor. It begins with travelers' information about hotels and subways and museums and theatres and the like. It never ceases to be a book of facts, figures, directions; and the visitor is never for an instant left bewildered, uncertain, at a loose end. . . And it is unfailingly clear as it is astoundingly detailed." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 23 '39 200w

"This is by far the best and most comprehensive guidebook to the town. It is perhaps, even too timely, unless constant revisions are planned. Practically everything anyone would want to know is easily found through an excellent index."
+ New Yorker 15:88 Je 24 '39 40w
Pratt p19 winter '40

"The 'Guide' I think, is a more valuable book than the 'Panorama.' It dithers along in the amiable tone of a Sunday supplement, a little too chatty sometimes, but never really boring. It will do splendidly as a primer for visitors from out of town, and New Yorkers may find a few things they hadn't known before. Just one word of warning; the guide to restaurants and night-clubs is haphazard and unselective." Russell Maloney
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:13 Je 24 '39 1050w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 163:297 Ag 25 '39 800w

"While the book cannot be classed as one of the best of the WPA guides, it is written with spirit. Any discriminating reader will find in it much that will help him to understand New York city. The illustrations consist both of photographs and paintings or drawings, some satirical or sociological in character. In a book aiming to convey impressions as well as cold facts these original works are not incongruous, but they lack the delineative power of the better photographs."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 2 '39 410w
Times [London] Lit Sup p540 S 16 '39 550w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW YORK (city). New York learns; a guide to the educational facilities of the metropolis. (Am. guide ser) 302p $1.50 Barrows

370.97471 Education—New York (city) 39-27647

"A guide to the educational facilities in the world's greatest city. . . It analyzes the city's numerous educational systems, both public and private, for children and adults, lists schools, and covers changing curricula, methods of teaching, classroom problems and outstanding achievements and experiments. Dr Frank P. Graves, state commissioner of education, writes an introductory chapter on the 'Metropolitan Background for Education.'" Springf'd Republican

Booklist 36:11 S '39
Pratt p7 winter '40
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 200w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NEW YORK (city). Reptiles and amphibians; an illustrated natural history; with decorations by the WPA Federal art project in the city of New York; sponsored by the Guilds' com. for Federal writers' publications, incorporated. 253p maps $2.25 Whitman, A.

598.1 Reptiles. Batrachia (W) 39-27367

Popular, profusely illustrated book on crocodiles, lizards, snakes, salamanders and newts, frogs and toads. Index.

Booklist 35:312 My 15 '39
Christian Century 56:547 Ap 26 '39 70w

"The photographs alone, reproduced on a coated paper which permits unusually clear and detailed pictures, make this a book that will fascinate naturalists of any age. The brief descriptions with their oversize headings will send the reader back to the pictures many times for details not seen at first sight. The text itself makes better reading for older boys and girls than is suggested by its somewhat 'school-bookish' appearance."
+ Horn Bk M 15:224 Jl '39 90w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara
Library J 64:470 Je 1 '39 80w

"Well illustrated, well written, accurate, and interesting. Excellent handbook."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 20w

"It is a volume that will help any young person, or older reader, to make a more discerning visit to the zoo or aquarium."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 6 '39 90w
Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, NORTH CAROLINA. North Carolina; a guide to the old north state; sponsored by N.C. Dept. of conservation and development. (Am. guide ser) 601p il maps $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

917.56 North Carolina—Description and travel (W)

"The present volume presents a coördinated picture of the state in all its manifold aspects —a state in which 'on the same day the winds may whisper in the palms at Smith Island and the snow cover trees common to Canada in the altitudes of Clingmans Dome.' It is the result of the work of writers, journalists, and research workers, who collected information from books, periodicals, chambers of commerce, State departments, actual travel over all the main highways, and talks with people in all sections. The enormous mass of material thus accumulated was gradually shaped into the form presented here—a comprehensive historical, economic, social, and scenic description that covers the seacoast, the tobacco and cotton country, and the famous recreational areas of the Appalachians." (Publisher's note) Suggested readings. Index.

Booklist 36:113 N 15 '39

"Beyond all doubt, the most interesting chapter is that called 'Natural Setting,' with beautiful illustrations of Linville Falls, Hatteras Light, Nag's Head Beach, rhododendron and azalea gardens, peach and apple orchards in full blossom, glorious dogwood and redbud forests and vast gorges, caves and cascades. Motorists will find The Guide indispensable." R. W. Winston

+ Books p4 Ja 28 '40 650w

Pratt p19 winter '40

"Not merely the best guide to the State, it is also the best general reference book available to either the native or the foreigner about life within the State. Nowhere else is there so much information (and accurate information) about the history, geography, industry, agriculture, habits, and customs of the Tar Heels collected with so much clarity in so brief a space." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 Ja 13 '40 240w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT, WASHINGTON, D.C. Our Washington; a comprehensive album of the nation's capital in words and pictures; sponsored by the Guilds' com. for Federal writers' publications, incorporated [prepared by Joseph Gaer]. (Am. guide ser) 179p maps $2 McClurg

917.53 Washington, D.C. (W) 39-27648

Photographic guide with brief text, illustrating the most worthy monuments and buildings to be seen by visitors to the national capital. Many of the photographs have been taken from the larger work: Washington, City and Capital, published by the Government Printing Office. The section of the book devoted to outline tours of the city and environs consists of detailed maps and their legends.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

"The excellent photographs, most of them the work of the photographer, W. Lincoln Highton, capture better than could any words the architectural beauties of the city as well as its more informal nooks and moods. In the text of 'Our Washington' a masterly job of condensation has been done." M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 3 '40 300w

"This . . . is a beautiful book, and it serves its purpose worthily."

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 13 '39 220w

Wis Lib Bul 35:164 O '39

FEDOTOFF-WHITE, DIMITRI. See White, D. F.

FEENEY, LEONARD. You'd better come quietly. 220p $2 Sheed

814 39-31329

Short, whimsical essays and sketches on a variety of subjects. Partial contents: The Blessed Sacrament explained to Barbara; Do not go to Bethlehem to find the obvious; Dialogue with an angel; The Blessed Trinity explained to Thomas Butler; Clean literature; The menace of puns; Notes on names. The author is a Roman Catholic priest.

"[Father Feeney's] is a book you want to quote rather than review. There is something in it for everyone, from his 'Trinity Explained to Thomas Butler' to a discourse in dispraise of puns. No unmarried man has the right to know as much about the subtleties of marital strife as he reveals in 'The Problem Mind.' You don't have to be married or Catholic or anything else to enjoy his tragi-comedy of the well off American family returning from Europe. I could wish that he had left out the chapter on 'Clean Literature' not because I disagree with him but because we all agree with him, except possibly on the meaning of clean."

+ — Boston Transcript p1 N 25 '39 360w

Cath World 150:371 D '39 170w

"If you liked 'Fish on Friday,' you will be delighted with this second collection of Father Feeney's essays and sketches. In addition to the expert gayety and therapeutic satire which characterize the first volume, there are several pieces which achieve the almost impossible fusion of poetic insight and profound philosophic power." F. X. Connolly

+ Commonweal 31:291 Ja 19 '40 130w

"There is a sureness of touch and a simplicity about these essays which reveal the highly skilled hand. The book should appeal to all who regret that the familiar essay is rapidly becoming an extinct literary form." Mason Wade

+ N Y Times p39 D 3 '39 500w

FEI, HSIAO-TUNG. Peasant life in China; a field study of country life in the Yangtze valley; with a pref. by Bronislaw Malinowski. 300p il maps $3.50 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

915.1 China—Social life and customs. Agriculture—China. Peasantry—China [39-15658]

A minutely detailed study of life in a small Chinese village (1500 population). The village chosen for study is located in a rice growing and silk raising district near Shanghai. The author's main interest is in the details of agriculture and industry but he devotes several chapters to family organization, inheritance of property, kinship, and other matters. Index.

Reviewed by Cornelius Osgood

Am Anthropol 42:154 Ja '40 300w

"This book exemplifies excellently the faults and virtues of the scientific approach to human beings. . . It is valuable as a man's photograph is valuable, giving the lines of his face without revealing the person he is. It is a detailed and careful study, and Dr. Fei has been well taught and shows all the signs of having been an honor student. And his professors and many others will find in his book an excellent source of information concerning the external existence of one small village in China." P. S. Buck

+ Books p12 Ag 27 '39 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:174 O '39 10w

"Dr. Fei has been trained in one British and two Chinese universities, and does not allow himself to be diverted for a moment from the scientific purpose of his study. . . In spite of its scientific outlook this book is no dry catalogue of facts. It makes fascinating reading for anyone interested in the real China. Particularly attractive is the description of family relationships." E. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 7 '39 430w

Nature 144:267 Ag 12 '39 650w

New Repub 102:158 Ja 29 '40 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Young
New Statesman & Nation 17:300 F 25 '39 900w
Reviewed by E. O. Hauser
Survey G 29:35 Ja '40 70w
Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 21 '39 170w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES K. In praise of comedy; a study in its theory and practice. 284p $3.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen, G]

808.7 Comedy

A scholarly treatise on the art of comedy, its history, theories concerning its nature, and criticism of these theories. The book closes with comment on some modern comedians—men and women as various as Charlie Chaplin and Gertrude Stein, the Marx brothers, and James Joyce, etc.

"As books on aesthetics go, this one is very readable." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:286 Ag 19 '39 900w

"Interesting thesis, but weakly handled."
New Yorker 15:88 N 4 '39 30w

"An ingenuous and melancholy volume. . . The closing part of this thesis is taken up with some exceptionally naive and solemn explanations of the humour of various comedians at the present day."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p506 Ag 26 '39 180w

FEILER, ARTHUR. International security. See Laves, W. H. C.

FEILING, KEITH GRAHAME. The second Tory party, 1714-1832. 452p $4 (15s) Macmillan

942.07 Tories, English. Great Britain—Politics and government [39-21544]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"It is not surprising to find in too many places inaccuracies of detail and carelessness concerning facts, not to mention judgments from which others would dissent. The cases noted are too numerous to mention in a review. A more serious weakness, perhaps, is the failure of the author to pay considered attention to either of the major terms in his title. . . Finally, some of the author's efforts to achieve an epigrammatic style are not happy." W. T. Laprade
— Am Hist R 44:888 Jl '39 700w

"It makes fascinating reading, and readers of it will look forward to another volume by the same author bringing the story down to more recent times. . . If any criticism of this brilliantly written book is to be voiced, it perhaps is that the author presupposes in his readers rather more knowledge than many are likely to have of general history and of the different parliamentary groups so constantly maneuvering in the making and unmaking of cabinets." J. R. Starr
+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:337 Ap '39 280w

"It is a long story and a tangled one, and Mr. Feiling has made a notable contribution toward unravelling it. . . He is tracing a development whose erratic course can only be charted by a careful following of factual detail. This he does in a most comprehensive fashion, and the student will be grateful for his wealth of information. Mr. Feiling's work is full of implications which mark out the lines on which interpretation must be built." Edgar McInnis
+ Canadian Hist R 20:53 Mr '39 320w

"With all its brilliant asides Dr. Feiling keeps steadily in view throughout this volume his main purpose of tracing the fortunes and development of the Tory party. He has chosen a singularly rich period for his purpose. . . [He] has given us a most interesting, as well as brilliant, book, certainly the most satisfactory as a whole of any that he has hitherto produced." Basil Williams
+ Eng Hist R 54:329 Ap '39 1100w

FEINER, RUTH. Yesterday's dreams; the story of two families; tr. from the German by Norman Alexander. 368p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 39-15267

Two boys, born the same night in an East Silesian town, but in totally different circumstances, are the central characters. One is Johann Pirelli, son of a repertory actor; the other is Wilhelm von Rautten, heir to a baronial estate. Again and again the affairs of the two cross, during the years from 1882 to the beginning of 1927. Gradually thruout that stretch of time circumstances change, and in 1927, Johann Pirelli is a smashing success in the theatrical world; von Rautten has gone back to the land.

"In spite of the rather extraordinary hodgepodge of materials that have been flung into 'Yesterday's Dreams,' the novel is integrated and effective. It has a very acceptable narrative in its foreground and underneath and through it all a poised philosophy of life that makes it outstanding in the long list of recent novels about Germany." F. H. Bullock
+ — Books p8 Je 25 '39 650w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 360w

"The characterisation throughout is adequate enough to engage our sympathy in the fortunes of the many diverse personalities who throng these crowded pages, and even among the pressing preoccupations of these stressful times I should be surprised if 'Yesterday's Dreams' fails to repeat here the success it has already achieved in the United States." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '39 270w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:461 S 30 '39 150w

"When a young writer continues the promise of a first novel in a second and a third and follows this up with a fourth which displays a steadily maturing talent it can be said with assurance that she has arrived. . . The book is thronged with real, unforgettable people and with scenes that are both strong and poignant." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p6 Je 25 '39 900w

"The workmanship that has gone into this novel is more than sound; it is expert. . . The novel is focused upon Pirelli and von Rautten as though their fortunes are wholly dependent upon their personalities, and they do in fact develop as though there were no war, no upheaval, no force but their own. It is the hero theory of history applied to fiction, and in such capable hands it produces a novel of romantic force. Miss Feiner may possibly penetrate deeper, to the roots of history, perhaps in her next book, and then we shall have a book of large dimensions." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Jl 1 '39 490w
Times [London] Lit Sup p671 N 18 '39 200w
Wis Lib Bul 35:167 O '39

FEIWEL, RAPHAEL JOSEPH. No ease in Zion. 365p il $3.75 Knopf [12s 6d Secker & Warburg]

296 Jewish question. Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem. Zionism 39-21854

Critical study of the Zionist experiment, of its difficulties, and of the great improvements brought about by the Jewish resettlement. There is an account of Jewish history included which is offered as a background for the understanding of the Jewish psychology. The author has lived for many years in Palestine. Index.

Reviewed by A. L. Sachar
Books p13 S 10 '39 950w

FEIWEL, R. J.—Continued

"Easily the best book written in recent years on the problems of Zionism in Palestine." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 650w
Christian Science Monitor p20 S 22 '39 600w
Commonweal 30:136 My 26 '39 120w
Foreign Affairs 18:172 O '39 30w

"The author of this book has had the advantage of living in the country for a number of years, and is consequently at his best in describing the social and economic changes that have taken place there since the war. . . Unfortunately the book is marred by some important omissions and many errors of fact." I. C.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 N 8 '38 440w
New Repub 99:230 Je 28 '39 60w

"No Ease in Zion is in every way an unusual and important book. . . What is neglected, perhaps, is the economic factor, the peasant revolt against imperialism which is the same in Palestine as in other colonial countries. But Mr. Feiwel, for all his historical materialist reasoning, is more interested in ruthlessly analysing the ideas and illusions by which men and nations are swayed." Eric Estorick

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:634 O 22 '38 750w

"Penetrating, skeptical, and often scintillating in its interpretation, this book is a momentous addition to the already overweighted stock of our literature on Palestine." D. H. Popper

+ Sat R of Lit 19:18 Ap 22 '39 380w
Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 22 '38 320w

FELDMAN, HARRY ALLEN. Music and the listener. 205p $2 Dutton

780.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 39-27243

Intended to aid the radio and concert listener with little musical knowledge to appreciate orchestral music. Partial contents: The roots of classicism; Haydn; Mozart; Beethoven; Romanticism and romanticists; Mendelssohn; Characteristics of rhythm and melody; Brahms; Bach; Acoustics, harmony, and Chopin; Impressionism—Debussy; The music of Stravinsky; Maurice Ravel; Futurism—Arnold Schönberg; Swing and the great American symphony. Index.

Booklist 35:266 Ap 15 '39
Books p11 Ap 23 '39 250w

Reviewed by Roy Lamson, Jr.

Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 180w

"In his eagerness to make his points clear Mr. Feldman has tended to fall into dangerous generalizations and oversimplifications. . . Mr. Feldman is at present teaching in one of the high schools of New York City. He has played in symphony orchestras under well-known conductors, and he knows his subject." H. H. Taubman

N Y Times p24 Ap 9 '39 230w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 310w
Wis Lib Bul 35:110 Je '39

FELDMAN, HERMAN, and SMITH, DONALD M. The case for experience rating in unemployment compensation and a proposed method. (Industrial relations monographs) 65p pa $1 Industrial relations counselors

331.25444 Insurance, Unemployment 39-16620

" 'The study has four main purposes: (1) to indicate the value in unemployment compensation of providing incentives to employers to reduce certain types of irregular employment, (2) to show that some opposition to experience rating derives from misunderstanding of its implications, (3) to point out that opposition based on faults of legislative drafting should not becloud the real issues, and (4) to present an appraisal of the administrative problems in the experience-rating provisions of state laws and other proposals being considered and to suggest a simple and effective experience-rating method.' " Am Econ R

Am Econ R 29:640 S '39 80w

Reviewed by C. A. Myers

J Pol Econ 47:901 D '39 250w

FELLER, ALEXANDER, and HURWITZ, JACOB E. How to deal with organized labor. 664p $6.50 Alexander pub. co.

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. Labor laws and legislation—U.S. U.S. National labor relations board 38-1711

"The book is huge, relatively expensive and therefore written for specialists—primarily for personnel managers and business executives. The language, however, is simple, highly readable and well adapted to classroom use or the lay reader. There are three main divisions of subject matter. The first is a quick summary of the structure, policies and recent history of organized labor. . . The second section reviews the powers and policies of the N.L.R.B. as revealed in its enabling Act and in Board decisions. . . The third section is devoted to a discussion of various possible labor policies under present social, economic and legal conditions." Am Econ R

"If American business could be induced to read this book, there would be fewer strikes and more agreements, less red blood spilled in futile 'massacres' and fewer red figures on the balance sheet, more folding money in the pockets of both workers and shareholders." R. R. R. Brooks

+ Am Econ R 29:165 Mr '39 700w

"Obviously conversant with the intricacies of labor relations, the authors have written a practical study from the viewpoint of lawyers seeking to furnish clients the best possible advice for action in a difficult situation." B. M. Selekman

+ Harvard Business R 17:366 spring '39 400w

Reviewed by R. R. R. Brooks

Nation 148:735 Je 24 '39 440w

FELLER, ALEXANDER, and HURWITZ, JACOB E. How to operate under the wage-hour law. 248p $3.50 Alexander pub. co.

331.0973 Wages—U.S. Hours of labor. Labor laws and legislation—U.S. 38-38319

"The purpose of the authors of this book has been to place in the hands of those directly interested (primarily employers) an explanatory statement of the applicability and provisions of the Fair Labor Standards act of 1938, more popularly known as the Wage-Hour law. The authors are attorneys, experienced in the field of labor law, and have previously collaborated on a study of the Wagner Labor Relations act. The crucial question regarding the Wage-Hour law in the minds of most employers is, 'Does it apply to my business?' Part 3 of the book approaches the answer to this question through a concise and lucid discussion of the concept of interstate commerce. . . Parts 1 and 2 are concerned with an explanation of the major provisions of the law, and of administrative and enforcement machinery, respectively. The text of the law itself and the administrative regulations issued to date are included as appendices." Am Econ R

"On the whole, the book achieves its purpose. It is explanatory rather than a mere reprinting of the law, and avoids the error of definitive statement on questions which can be settled only by judicial decision. The inclusion of an index would have enhanced its usefulness as a reference manual." T. A. Miller

+ — Am Econ R 29:172 Mr '39 270w

"The character of the authors' contribution [toward clarification of the law] should have saved them from any gross inaccuracies. Unfortunately, it would seem that only silence would accomplish that result."

Harvard Law R 52:871 Mr '39 120w

FELLOWS, CORABELLE (MRS SAMUEL C. CAMPBELL). Blue Star, by Kunigunde Duncan; told from the life of Corabelle Fellows. 211p il $2.50 Caxton printers

B or 92 Indians of North America—Education (W) 38-29053

A young girl in the early 1880s, Corabelle Fellows left her Washington home against the wishes of father and mother to go West to teach the Indians. She taught successfully in both government and mission schools and learned the ways of the Indians who gave her the affectionate title, Blue Star. Her life-story, told in the first person, closes with her marriage to an educated young man who was part English and part Sioux Indian.

Booklist 35:173 Ja 15 '39

Reviewed by E. L. Walton
Books p12 F 12 '39 190w

Reviewed by Philleo Nash
Canadian Forum 18:383 Mr '39 120w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '39 170w

"Her story, as she looks back on her life, is interesting and unusual, and it is told simply but with brightness and zest. The photographs are illustrative, and the whole book has character."
+ N Y Times p35 N 20 '38 250w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 15 '39 850w

FENDLER, DONN. Lost on a mountain in Maine; as told to Joseph B. Egan. 123p il map $1 Welles pub. co. inc, 471 Washington st, Wellesley, Mass.

B or 92 39-33967

In July, 1939, a twelve-year-old Boy scout, Donn Fendler, was lost for nine days in the wilderness north of Mt Katahdin in Maine. This is the boy's own account, taken down verbatim, of his wanderings and experiences during those days.

"Completely recovered, a normal boy who was never much of a talker and who acquired a swollen toe but no swelled head, writes a story no other boy should miss. And if any adult can read Donn's account of his gruelling experience without an extra thump of his heart, he is badly in need of mountain air himself." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p13 N 23 '39 390w

"The book contains 124 pages of absorbing narrative and 33 illustrations, while a complete map of his route through the wilderness aids the reader in following the trail of this remarkable youngster."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 31 '39 130w

FERBER, EDNA. A peculiar treasure. 398p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-27026

Edna Ferber's vitality gives color to her autobiography, as to her novels. Childhood days in Kalamazoo, Michigan and Ottumwa, Iowa, apprenticeship in journalism at the age of seventeen, followed by years of fame and fortune as a novelist are the stuff of her story. Its strongest threads are love for her country and devotion to her family and race.

Booklist 35:203 F 15 '39

"Edna Ferber's own story would have been good to read at any time. Doubtless many of her readers now will read it as though it were written at any time. For others, however, both those who are Jews and those who are not, her sanity and humor and love of freedom and of life will come with special forcefulness at this time. Being a writer, she hasn't preached about these things (well, only a little, only as much as one would expect of one who started out as a little girl with a passion for speaking pieces and a dream of being an actress). She just shows what happened to as amusing and wholehearted and impressive a person as any she has created, Edna herself." Mary Ross
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 800w

"He who reads Miss Ferber's autobiography touches a whole nation, or, if that be excessive, touches so many sides of the life of that nation that the result is much the same thing. I think she has done a swell job, and I prophesy that 'A Peculiar Treasure' will be widely bought and read. For it is only in the life of individuals that we can grasp the significance of the vast American experiment, and Miss Ferber's lively and generous career seems to be one of the more successful results of the experiment." H. M. Jones
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 101:210 Ap '39 1050w

"From several points of view A Peculiar Treasure is an engaging book. It gives us a vivid sketch of an active and successful woman: it traces the outline of a busy and exciting career: it helps to explain the methods and psychology of a modern best-seller. It is readable, diffuse, slipshod, enthusiastic, entertaining, naive. Miss Ferber is not fatuously self-complacent." Peter Quennell
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:998 Je 24 '39 1000w

"Here is her dramatic story, told with wit and humor and compassion, intensity and pride, and always with brilliant reporting. . . Here is the spirit of a nation; here is our peculiar treasure of democracy and freedom, to be guarded by us all." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p1 F 5 '39 1500w

"Just the sort of informal biography one would expect from Edna Ferber—honest, hearty, full of conscious lapses in 'good taste,' and pleasantly extroverted. . . Much interesting light is thrown on the origin of her best-selling novels. If there is one single motif that dominates Miss Ferber's brisk walk through her past, it is an unforced and contagious love for her country. There are photographs, most of them of the author, and very quaint." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 14:66 F 4 '39 130w

Pratt p27 summer '39

"It is, in spite of its chronology, a curiously unsorted, unrestricted story for a writer like Miss Ferber, who says, in this very volume, that good writing should be astringent and economical. It's a big, generous book, strung together by her years, held together by interest in a woman who knew where she was going—up to now. Swiftly, colloquially, she puts down everything that seems to come into her head. . . She portrays dramatically an American woman, a writer, a Jew—her own character, driving, direct, generous, nervous, affectionate, marked by great talent, not quite like any other character you ever saw, on the stage or off it." M. C. Banning
+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 F 4 '39 1750w

"The story inevitably follows a pattern of which the public never tires—the attainment of wealth and fame from modest (though in no sense impoverished) beginnings by talent and unaided effort, and the transformation of a 'small town' girl into a celebrity of the metropolis and the nation."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 5 '39 1150w

"There is an honesty, straight-forwardness and simplicity about Edna Ferber's autobiography which makes it indeed a 'peculiar treasure' for any young writer who seeks to know the problems involved in her craft." E. J. R. Isaacs
+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:311 Ap '39 600w

Time 33:26 F 6 '39 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p267 My 6 '39 460w

Wis Lib Bul 35:49 Mr '39

FERBER, NA. JOSEPH. I found out: a confidential chronicle of the twenties. 359p $3 Dial press

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 39-10976

"In the recapitulation of a series of city room assignments, a roving reporter of a Hearst-owned newspaper in New York draws aside the curtain and gives us a peep at the inside stories. He is Nat Ferber and his specialty is municipal misfeasance and similar misconduct. The assignments are in the nature of exposures and include such scandals as the dope peddling racket, the Arnold Rothstein murder and his connection with the Belgian financier, Captain Loewenstein, the Fallon trial for jury fixing, the uncovering of the bucket-shop swindles, and its related evils, political influence and bribery." Boston Transcript

"We all have a love of 'the low-down.' In these pages, tingling with life, Nat Ferber gives us 'the low-down' on a score of the most mysterious and fascinating news stories of the last three decades. Add to this the fact that the book is well written, that its sensationalism lies wholly in what it tells and not in any trickery of presentation, and that the author throughout maintains a singular modesty and you have a book which, of its class, will hardly be surpassed for many a day to come." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ Books p18 Ap 30 '39 950w

"In simple and straightforward language including much autobiographical material, Mr. Ferber tells his story, but reading between the lines, the inference can be drawn of personal danger and the detective's instinct for crime. Judged by that famous yardstick of muckraking, Lincoln Steffens's autobiography, Mr. Ferber's account is more sensational. One would like to believe that a deep feeling of humanism motivates this branch of the profession, but, more accurately described, it could be attributed to a brand of journalism now somewhat on the wane. This, however, is not by way of detracting from Mr. Ferber's stature." Julius Adelberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 330w

New Repub 99:56 My 17 '39 60w

"This book is mainly interesting for its views of yellow journalism in action. It rehearses the aims, the necessities, the works and expenditures of some of the men engaged in the manufacture of so-called news stories upon which banner headlines are built. But unfortunately it carries within itself the color and odor of the trade that it exposes. It is difficult to judge how much in the tales is factual and how much has been added to bolster the yarns for effective after-dinner conversation." Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p3 My 7 '39 460w

New Yorker 15:78 Ap 22 '39 40w

"Nat Ferber had a chance to do a great job here, but I'm afraid he missed the boat. I hope he makes it next time." J. F. Dinneen

Sat R of Lit 20:16 Je 3 '39 600w

FERGUSON, BLANCHE SMITH. Bird of paradise. 320p $2 Penn

39-9937

"An uncharted island, handy to Nassau, not too far from Havana, small enough to be almost unknown, but big enough to grow a million-dollar crop of pineapples, is the scene of a large part of this story of love and adventure. The red-headed girl who lives on the island has all kinds of troubles, from pirates to card sharps, when her difficulties are increased by the arrival of Timothy from New York." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ap 16 '39 100w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 29 '39 90w

"A romantic, not realistic, story." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Ap 16 '39 190w

FERGUSON, DONITA, and SHELDON, ROY. Fun with flowers; how to arrange yourself and your flowers; with il. by Jay Warmuth. 309p $2.50 Houghton

635.966 Floral decoration (W) 39-29491

Two New York florists discuss informally such topics as how to shop for cut flowers, how to treat them, how to arrange them; city gardens (penthouse, porch or patio); how to prepare a corsage; table decoration, selection of flowers for the window box, etc. Contains a dilettante's directory, color guide and flower calendar.

Booklist 36:195 Ja 15 '40

Books p10 Ja 28 '40 80w

"When we reach the discussion of how to wear flowers this original and amusing book becomes even more original and amusing. . . The book's smart style is a bit effortful, but its material is practical, useful and great fun. And the drawings (which include some 'don'ts') are also entertaining."

+ N Y Times p10 D 24 '39 270w

FERGUSON, JOHN DE LANCEY. Pride and passion, Robert Burns, 1759-1796. 321p $3 Oxford

B or 92 Burns, Robert 39-8763

In an attempt to portray Burns the man, the author has discarded the conventional chronological narrative in favor of a topical treatment in chapters headed: Scotland, Education, Men, Women, Livelihood, Song, The Scot. The book contains a briefly worded "Chronology of Burns's life." Index.

"This admirably effective restoration of Burns to the status of a credible person of his epoch was long overdue, but it is now done to stay." G. W. Whicher

+ Books p6 My 14 '39 950w

"Something should be said for the pure writing of 'Pride and Passion.' It has a fluency and dignity of style that are rare in works of this more or less recondite nature. A light, chiaroscuro irony plays over the pages. And if he has not specifically captured Burns, the man, with his words, Mr. Ferguson certainly has felt the flinty, barren, contemptuously prideful spirit of the Scotch people." E. B. Garside

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 8 '39 950w

"Here is a most critical and accurate setting forth of the salient facts of the life and temperament of the Scottish national poet. Mr. Ferguson tells us what kind of man Burns was, but his book does not re-create him. Only the poet's own talk could do that. I like to think of the meetings of Burns and Captain Grose, the jolly fat antiquary to whom we owe 'Tam O'Shanter.' What a transcript he could have left us of Burns' talk! In its absence each man must imagine it for himself." Horace Reynolds

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 My 20 '39 650w

New Repub 99:140 Je 7 '39 60w

"Mr. Ferguson has made not only a credible Burns for the first time but an interesting and important Burns. In the field of biography this is an outstanding event." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p3 My 28 '39 2050w

"Master of the details of his subject, Mr. Ferguson prefers to give results rather than processes. The 'take' of a week's research, one may guess, is often packed into a single sentence. The finished work is a triumph of clean-cut, well-poised scholarship. It is no disparagement of other recent studies to say that for general purposes this is probably the best biography of Burns. . . Critical commentary is only incidental in this biography. What there is, sometimes raises questions." Alexander Cowie

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:15 Ap 22 '39 600w

"A fresh and welcome survey for which one could wish that a less misleading title might have been found. If it is hard to write a good book on Burns, it is almost as hard to find a good title." Catherine Carswell

+ — Spec 162:818 My 12 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p440 Jl 22 '39 600w

Reviewed by R. C. Bald
Yale R n s 28:855 summer '39 550w

FERGUSON, JOHN HENRY. American diplomacy and the Boer war. 240p $2.50 Univ. of Pa. press [11s 6d Oxford]

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. South African war, 1899-1902

This volume "represents an attempt to assemble and organize the available evidence into a complete and accurate survey of the extent and manner in which the American government was involved in the Boer War. A greater strain was put upon our government than has been commonly realized. European powers wanted the United States to assist the Boers. . . Professor Ferguson is of the opinion that, in spite of the fact that public opinion in the United States came to be overwhelmingly in favor of the Boers, the American government acted throughout the war as if in friendly alliance with England, and by doing so did much to prevent intervention by European powers, thus assuring the annihilation of the Boer republics." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. M. Gelber
Canadian Hist R 20:436 D '39 400w

"Thoroughly documented study." J. J. O'Connor
+ Commonweal 30:461 S 8 '39 180w

FERGUSSON, ERNA. Venezuela. 349p il maps $3 Knopf

918.7 Venezuela (W) 38-29008

An account of the author's travels in Venezuela, with some history, social and political comment, and sketches of Bolívar and Gómez. By the author of Guatemala (Book Review Digest, 1937). Index.

Booklist 35:157 Ja 1 '39

Reviewed by Julian Bach, Jr.
Books p3 Ja 8 '39 1250w
Commonweal 29:530 Mr 3 '39 120w
Foreign Affairs 17:822 Jl '39 30w

"A sharply observant, sometimes humorous and always intelligent book about a South American country that is bound to be more important in world affairs in the future. . . Miss Fergusson makes it come alive. Fine chapter on the life and importance of Simon Bolivar."
+ New Repub 97:352 Ja 25 '39 70w

"Erna Fergusson is one of that small and honorable group of travel writers who combine appreciative observation, human interest and study with a sensitive and active literary conscience, and thus produce work of genuine value in this kind of book. Her 'Venezuela,' like its predecessor, 'Guatemala,' is suggestive and alive, as it is well-filled, varied and enjoyable; but it is naturally the more pertinent and important of the two studies. This timely and interesting travel book enriches our minds and sets them to work." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 8 '39 1550w
Pratt p25 summer '39

"It must not be thought that the writer exhibits other than the friendliest spirit toward Venezuela. But her reporting is accurate and her perspective adequate. And so she has produced a travel book which is well above the average and provides an introduction to those who want to know about one of our nearer neighbors. It forms a complement to Thomas Rourke's fascinating 'Gomez, Tyrant of the Andes,' which belongs on any five-foot shelf dealing with Latin America." Ernest Gruening
+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 Ja 14 '39 600w

"Shrewd, penetrating, readable, informative—these are terms that can be properly applied to Erna Fergusson's 'Venezuela.' The adjectives 'penetrating' and 'readable' are especially appropriate." R. W. N.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 4 '39 850w

"From the description that she gives, you know that [the author] has the gift of making friends and starting the tongues of strangers, for her record is as much what she hears as what she sees. More than that, it gives you a useful running comment on the books that opened the past of Venezuela and its current history to her. It is pleasant to find a traveler who gives the authors who have made her passage easy something more than a line of small type in a bibliography at the end." E. J. R. Isaacs
+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:389 My '39 700w
Wis Lib Bul 35:49 Mr '39

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. Swedish contributions to modern theology; with special reference to Lundensian thought. 250p $2.50 Harper

230.09485 Theology 39-31178

"Most theologians recognize that Barth has made a profound contribution to Christian thought. Professor Ferré believes that an equally profound contribution has been made by the Swedish writers Aulén, Nygren, and Bring. Although influenced by Barth, they have made an independent contribution and formulated a 'more constructive' system. After an introductory chapter Professor Ferré describes the Lundensian methodology. . . In the concluding chapters Professor Ferré exposes the difficulties involved in taking absolute positions." J Religion

"English readers are deeply indebted to Dr. Ferre for his scholarly, luminous, sympathetic, yet critical exposition of their teaching. Their work will hardly 'herald a new epoch in Christian thought' but it will serve a valuable purpose both as cadaver for the dissecting schools and as a stimulus to new and 'modern' attempts at theological reconstruction." A. C. Knudson
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 20 '40 750w

"There is much in Dr. Ferré's exposition that we may find irritating or repellant. But even when we are irritated the most, we feel we have overlooked much that these men of Lund have in no way overlooked." B. S. Easton
Churchman 154:19 Ja 1 '40 400w

"Professor Ferré makes some penetrating criticisms. He does not take his authorities whole. It is to be hoped that in his next book he will avoid some of the long and ponderous sentences which mar this one. It is, however, a substantial and excellent book, which opens the door to fresh theological adventures." E. J. Johanson
+ — J Religion 20:99 Ja '40 340w

FERRIS, HELEN JOSEPHINE (MRS ALBERT B. TIBBETS). Dody and Cap-tin Jinks; il. by Grace Paull. unp $1.50 Doubleday

(W)

Story of small Josephine, called Dody for short, and her canary Teddy, who could whistle the first three notes of Captain Jinks.

Booklist 36:155 D 15 '39

"Little girls can do with more stories like this, especially this year. For home, in this story, is consciously present as something appreciated, something as desirable as a down comforter in winter—and even for children this may be a winter of discontent." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 D 10 '39 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:373 N '39 50w

"Dody, the publishers say, is the author's own mother, which may account for the perfect understanding of a little girl's desires and the intimate tone of family fun which runs through the story, but the skill with which it is told is the author's own. Grace Paull's illustrations, pleasantly reminiscent of the early nineteen hundreds, are as droll and sprightly as ever, although the ubiquitous smiles on all the faces are a trifle wearisome." E. L. Buell

FERRIS, H. J.—Continued
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 7 '40 280w

FETTA, EMMA LOU. Murder in style. 276p $2 Doubleday 39-23301

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 130w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p10 Ag 13 '39 130w

"Well-groomed mystery with the correct accessories."
+ New Yorker 15:68 Ag 19 '39 50w

"Problem good and finish both logical and thrilling. Excellent."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 12 '39 40w

FFRENCH, YVONNE. Ouida; a study in ostentation. 191p il $3 Appleton-Century [8s 6d Cobden-Sanderson]
B or 92 De la Ramée, Louise (Ouida, pseud)
[38-22849]

A somewhat ironic, but not unsympathetic biography and critical appraisal of this Victorian romantic novelist whose works were denied to the daughters of the respectable English middle classes—and avidly read by men, women, youths and maidens of all classes. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:221 Mr 1 '39
Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Books p4 Ja 29 '39 1000w
Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 250w
Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 13 '38 900w
Commonweal 29:502 F 24 '39 300w
New Repub 98:203 Mr 22 '39 60w

"Miss ffrench has woven an interesting, if here and there somewhat meagre, narrative round the tragedy of this remarkable Victorian personage. . . I am sorry, though, that Miss ffrench should not have devoted rather more attention to the nature of her protagonist's literary talent, its origins, its affinities, its effect on others. True, she compares Ouida to Ronald Firbank; but the comparison might have been developed in greater detail." Peter Quennell
+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:22 Jl 2 '38 1100w

"Miss ffrench's book is well written and unpretentious, so that we cannot take issue with her for painting a miniature rather than a full-length portrait of her subject. Within its limitations the picture is arresting and pleasing. One could have wished, however, that Miss ffrench's 'study in ostentation' had searched into the psychological causes of Ouida's behavior instead of presenting the eccentricities to baffle and irritate." Frances Winwar
+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 29 '39 1000w
New Yorker 14:58 Ja 28 '39 30w

"Very interesting and valuable portrait sketch." K. F. Geroud
+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 F 4 '39 900w

"Miss ffrench does not claim to reveal much that is new, but she has used her material with skill, and her imagination and discernment with excellent effect, and produced an acute and admirable study, one of whose many good points is sympathy." Rose Macaulay
+ — Spec 160:1104 Je 17 '38 1000w

"Not too long or too short; calendared and informative but never overloaded with 'period' or rhetoric, 'Ouida: a Study in Ostentation' neither flatters nor patronizes its central figure. It deals frankly and understandingly with her failings; gives discrimination but generous praise to her talents; and rightly lays continuous growing emphasis on the fundamental selflessness and integrity which, for all her wrongheadedness, vanity and silly intransigence, were the real core of Ouida and the essence of her greatness."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Je 18 '38 700w

FICHTER, JOSEPH HENRY. Roots of change; with a foreword by James M. Gillis. 319p $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton-Century
923 Reformers. Social problems 39-16192

Biographical and critical sketches of fourteen persons active in the movements for social and economic change during the last three hundred years. Contents: Modern social worker: Vincent de Paul; Root of economic liberalism: Bernard Mandeville; Significant savage: Jean Jacques Rousseau; Restless rebel: Thomas Paine; Energetic dreamer: Robert Owen; Catholic lay leader: Antoine Frederic Ozanam; The socialism of a Protestant: Charles Kingsley; The socialism of a Catholic: Wilhelm von Ketteler; Marx, man, and machinery; Manning's cardinal principle; Leo and labor; Immigrant statesman: Carl Schurz; Tolstoy and the class struggle; Social philosophy of the Webbs. Index.

"A reading of this book will repay the general reader, and will be an inspiration for the student of social questions." R. A. Hewitt
+ America 61:382 Jl 29 '39 260w

"There is much to interest the general reader in this book, and Protestants who are not familiar with the writings of such thinkers as Vincent de Paul, Frederic Ozanam, Wilhelm von Ketteler, Henry Edward Manning, and Pope Leo XIII will find here readable sketches of the work and philosophies of these men. The book will find a useful place in any sociological reference library, whether in a Protestant or a Roman Catholic institution." C. A. Ellwood
+ — Am J Soc 45:606 Ja '40 400w

"For those, Catholic and non-Catholic, who want to know what direction Catholic thinking has taken in social matters, this book is required reading." W. M. Frohock
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 1 '39 600w

"Discriminating readers will find no fault with the author's choice of subjects. . . Although his style is weakened by occasional mannerisms, Father Fichter has given us a readable and helpful book." J. McS.
+ — Cath World 150:115 O '39 750w

"The disasters of the masses and the ideas and actions by which sincere men have thought it possible to effect their rescue form the stuff of Father Fichter's theme. It is to be hoped that a wide audience may be found for his stimulating report on what his research has disclosed." J. N. Vaughan
+ Commonweal 30:380 Ag 11 '39 750w
Reviewed by W. N. Pittenger
Living Church 102:12 Ja 10 '40 120w

"A series of brilliant and incisive essays. . . [The] book clears away many misconceptions and makes plainer the intellectual history of the last three hundred years. It is a brilliant bit of synthetic—in the good sense of the word—criticism, and the conclusions to which it forces the reader are valuable and important." Mason Wade
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 20 '39 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p599 O 14 '39 60w

FICKE, ARTHUR DAVISON. Mrs Morton of Mexico; decorations by Gladys Brown. 310p $2.50 Reynal
(W) 39-27902

Mrs Morton is a charming elderly Englishwoman living in a remote Mexican village. Served by three devoted native servants Mrs

Morton dispensed hospitality to the aristocrats, and pesos to the peasants, until she was practically regarded as a saint. The last great effort of her life was to preserve peace between the local constabulary and the drunken mourners at the funeral of her house-boy, Pedro.

Booklist 36:110 N 15 '39

"In spite of all the Books With a Purpose, the visitor below the border might do worse than to take Mr Ficke under one arm and Charles Flandrau under the other when he goes. It is true that these interpreters will not tell him much about The Revolution, but they will introduce him to the peasant Mexican who is the backbone of Mexico, and who doesn't know very much about The Revolution either." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p5 D 10 '39 850w

Reviewed by Frank Wood

Boston Transcript p1 N 18 '39 400w

Christian Century 56:1306 O 25 '39 70w

"Here is the color and flavor and fire of timeless Mexico, imprisoned between two covers of a smallish volume. Mexico has come alive even for those of us who have never met it in the flesh." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 25 '39 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

"On the negative side, 'Mrs Morton of Mexico,' written by one who has published many volumes of poetry . . . moves much too slowly in the first section of the book and is throughout rather loosely constructed. On the other hand its meditative, atmospheric and urbane qualities recommend it as unusual in the general run of fiction, for it rises to heights periodically, and presents besides a small but memorable series of life-breathing characters." Elizabeth Murphy

+ — Commonweal 31:209 D 22 '39 550w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 103:v F '40 100w

Nation 149:532 N 11 '39 80w

"This is one of the most agreeable books ever to have come out of Mexico, for its humor, serenity and casually expert workmanship. It seems to have been written for pure pleasure, rather than for some oblique political or sociological purpose." R. L. Martin

+ N Y Times p8 O 29 '39 800w

"It is as a poet that Mr. Ficke is best known. I make a special point of this because I cannot, unfortunately, give you the novel itself with the same enthusiasm. It may very well be, of course, that the fault lies with me. I am congenitally unable to appreciate what I can only define as high-falutin characterization. Congenitally unable to like any or all novels in which, under the fustian of a character, a symbol—and in this instance a pretty hackneyed one—coyly raises its pretty head." Grace Flandrau

Sat R of Lit 21:10 N 25 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:17 Ja '40

FIELD, MRS DOROTHY J. The human house. 125p il $2.75 Houghton

728 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans. Dwellings (W) 39-14955

In this book on how to plan "the perfect small home," the author advocates adopting a system of zoning, definitely designating certain rooms or spaces as activity zones, quiet zones, privacy zones, etc. The body of the book contains a few diagrams and plans, but photographs and plans of actual houses are grouped at the end.

Booklist 35:376 Jl 15 '39

Books p21 O 8 '39 180w

J Home Econ 31:586 O '39 120w

"Mrs Field writes in a meditative style, and possibly overelaborates some points. But she thinks of matters that might be overlooked and her book will afford enlightenment to many persons who have never fully considered the things that make a house and its surroundings satisfactory from the standpoint of its occupant."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 230w

Wis Lib Bul 35:142 Jl '39

FIELD, MEDORA (MRS ANGUS PERKERSON). Who killed Aunt Maggie? 294p $2 Macmillan 39-20248

Detective story.

Booklist 36:89 N 1 '39

"Miss Field romps gallantly through a surprising number of mystery tricks, and you'll enjoy the general excitement even if you can't feel as frightened as you really should. The author is a well known newspaper woman in the gone-with-the-wind country." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Ag 20 '39 210w

"It is rather nice to meet a Southern story that isn't completely submerged in atmosphere and accents. . . And the villain is very easily found. But it still is a pleasant book." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 70w

"The author has a pleasant and workmanlike style and does not subordinate everything to plot and action."

+ Christian Century 56:999 Ag 16 '39 40w

"The ending of the story may seem a bit artificial, but attentive reading of the book shows that it is fore-shadowed more than once in the course of the narrative." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 20 '39 220w

"The reader is spared an overdose of Southern atmosphere in this nicely constructed story. Not too difficult to guess the murderer, though."

+ New Yorker 15:68 Ag 19 '39 50w

"Of self-solving variety—with plenty of spine-tingling goings-on before hostess-narrator literally falls into solution of tangled plot. Commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 26 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 170w

FIELD, OLIVER PETER. Civil service law [sponsored by the Committee on training for public administration of the University of Minnesota]. 286p $5 Univ. of Minn. [22s 6d Oxford]

351.1 Civil service—U.S. 39-28505

"Apart from brief articles on special jurisdictions on particular topics, there has been no treatment of the judicial interpretation of the civil service statutes, ordinances, rules, and practices. The difficulty of organizing such a systematic study is very great, since most of the law is statutory and the decisions of the courts must be rendered in view of statutory phraseology rather than the common law of officers. This difficulty has been surmounted by the author in the statement of trends of judicial opinion and in the formulation of such generalizations as the courts themselves have developed. . . The law of the principal civil service operations is examined in turn: classification (in the sense of extension of the merit system); examination; appointment and veterans' preference; promotion and transfer; demotion and layoff; suspension and removal. The law of public pensions is not dealt with, nor is there a discussion of the legal position of unions of civil service employees." (Ann Am Acad) Includes table of some 1500 cases and an index.

"Professor Field's book is a commendable effort. . . If concrete and definite principles seem elusive, this is not the fault of the author. While civil service is two-thirds of a century old, it is just now entering the professional and technical stage. Furthermore, the commentator has always played an extremely important rôle in the development of the common law. That is why Professor Field has done a very worthy thing in bringing these decisions together in a single volume of running comment. Not the least of his contributions is an excellent organization and arrangement of subject-matter which may serve as a guide for future treatment of the subject." J. M. Pfiffner

FIELD, O. P.—Continued

\+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1090 D '39 360w

"This excellent and long-anticipated volume fills a large gap in the civil service literature. . . The book is written for personnel officers and draftsmen of laws and regulations. The student of administrative law and of public administration will also find the volume of interest and value." L. D. White

\+ Ann Am Acad 207:221 Ja '40 600w

"This book is a notable addition to the literature of administrative law, indispensable to the operating official, personnel officer, draftsman, and attorney." C. S. Ascher

\+ Columbia Law R 40:363 F '40 600w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Doctor Two-Guns. 284p $2 Morrow

39-9936

Western story.

"This is fast, full of lingo, and generally pleasing." Will Cuppy

\+ Books p17 Mr 19 '39 110w

"Well written—in fact, the best piece of work that Peter Field, author of half a score of Westerns, has yet turned out." G. W. Harris

\+ N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '39 220w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. The tenderfoot kid. 280p $2 Morrow

39-31265

Western story.

Booklist 36:151 D 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 29 '39 70w

"It's an ordinary run-of-the-mill Western yarn—distinctly a disappointment coming from Peter Field directly after his best tale, the excellent 'Doctor Two Guns,' which was published last Spring." G. W. Harris

N Y Times p30 O 29 '39 170w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN (MRS ARTHUR PEDERSON). All this, and heaven too. 596p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 38-27858

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"[Henrietta's] story as handled by Miss Field, makes good reading, but it does seem a pity to find an 'Elsie Dinsmore' atmosphere about it all. Moreover, it is a little astonishing to note how mean and irresponsible and doomed are all the Catholics, and how noble and respectable and successful are all the Protestants. The plot is graphically unfolded, but we were never drawn within the spell of Henrietta's personality."

Cath World 149:251 My '39 210w

"Miss Field has laboured lovingly to reconstruct the lives of her ancestors: she has spared no pains in the accumulation of material, and she has managed, too, to give to what must be conjectural episodes an air of verisimilitude; but the whole thing is immensely too long drawn out and the utter lack of any sort of distinction in the writing, so placidly and commonplacely correct in its even and unenterprising fluency, ultimately induces in the reader a relaxed receptiveness." Wilfrid Gibson

\+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Ap 6 '39 320w

Pratt p31 summer '39

Reviewed by Forrest Reid

Spec 162:686 Ap 21 '39 70w

"Miss Field has obviously enjoyed fitting together the documentary fragments of the story, and her pride and pleasure in the result will probably infect the reader. It is neat, smooth, sympathetic, picturesquely done work, and in all that belongs to middlebrow readability it deserves the highest praise."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Ap 1 '39 900w

FIELDS, HAROLD. The refugee in the United States. 229p $2.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

325.2 Refugees, Political (W) 38-29009

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by V. A. O'Rourke

Am Pol Sci R 33:540 Je '39 150w

"The problem of the refugee in the United States is of increasing importance. There is real need for a serious study that will bring together the various researches already available, analyze the present situation, indicate basic trends, and seek to point the way to possible solutions. Unfortunately Mr. Fields's book, unlike that of Sir John Hope Simpson, lacks the judicious quality so essential to a significant presentation of this most serious problem of our time." F. J. Brown

— \+ Ann Am Acad 203:209 My '39 310w

Cath World 149:634 Ag '39 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 50:6 Ap '39 190w

Foreign Affairs 17:634 Ap '39 20w

Reviewed by G. S. Anders

New Repub 98:257 Ap 5 '39 120w

Reviewed by U. Z. Engelman

Social Forces 18:310 D '39 450w

"This book is full of interesting and valuable information and should have a wide reading, both by the general public and by students of social problems. It is fully documented, contains numerous tables showing the distribution and occupation of immigrants, and a bibliography." H. E. Wagner

\+ Social Studies 30:88 F '39 160w

FILLER, LOUIS. Crusaders for American liberalism. 422p il $3.50 Harcourt

973.91 U.S.—Politics and government. Corruption (in politics). Liberalism 39-33508

History of the popular muckraking movement of thirty years ago when Ida M. Tarbell, Lincoln Steffens, David Graham Phillips, and others were in their prime. Chronology, bibliography, index.

Booklist 36:194 Ja 15 '40

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

Books p5 Ja 7 '40 1300w

"The book gains in importance because of the somewhat discouraged period in which we are living. It ought to stand some of our tired liberals back on their feet." James van Zant

\+ Churchman 153:20 D 1 '39 150w

Reviewed by James Rorty

Nation 149:654 D 9 '39 750w

"Mr. Filler makes the [muckraking] movement live again, in all its humors, victories, recessions and defeats. He does much to rescue it from the slights of younger and more impatient critics. His book will stand as one of its worthy memorials—and perhaps a forerunner of a new criticism of American life. The stink of vile betrayal from overseas, in a land where some of the successors of the muckrakers only recently thought they saw the fine flowers of hope for humanity, may speed the day." R. L. Duffus

\+ N Y Times p3 D 17 '39 1500w

New Yorker 15:107 N 18 '39 20w

Reviewed by Charles Angoff

No Am 248:407 winter '40 350w

"A useful and comprehensive book. . . Mr. Filler has done his canvas with breadth and with detail, and has shown a discrimination in his comment upon the varying qualities of the men and women whose work he describes. Those who lived through the decades just after the turn of the century will recapture in these pages a sense of the feelings which the muckrakers stirred so mightily; those of a newer generation can profitably learn of this phenomenon of American life, and find the chronicle an interesting one. . . It would have been easy to make a sensational story of the muckraking era. Mr. Filler has done better. He has made his book a sound, true, and interesting report." C. McD. Puckette

+ Sat R of Lit 21:12 D 9 '39 550w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:35 Ja '40 360w

FILSON, FLOYD VIVIAN. Origins of the Gospels; with a foreword by Frederick C. Grant. 216p $2 Abingdon

225.7 Bible. New Testament—Gospels—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 38-31234

Based on lectures delivered at summer conferences held at the Presbyterian Theological seminary, Chicago. The book is an attempt to present a "readable account of the present situation in the study of Gospel origins." Partial contents: The minister and Gospel criticism; The quest for the original Greek text; Were the Gospels written in Aramaic? Form criticism; Proposed solutions of the Synoptic problem; The Fourth Gospel. Bibliographical notes at ends of chapters. Indexes of names and of scripture references.

"During the last twenty years, very great changes have come in the critical study of the Gospels. In the very nature of the case, it is impossible for the average minister or Christian worker to keep up with all of the scholarly contributions in these fields. It is therefore a very great service which Floyd Filson has performed in bringing together a comprehensive survey of this work. . . As a widely read scholar combining a critical spirit with genuinely conservative instincts, Filson was admirably fitted to prepare this survey for American ministers. It should receive a wide reading and lead them on to a deeper study of the literature which is summarized here." C. T. Craig

+ Christian Century 55:1334 N 2 '38 650w

"No better compendium exists for the average clergyman's library. And it is entirely up-to-date, including even volumes published in the present year." B. S. Easton

+ Churchman 153:19 Ja 1 '39 270w

"Here is a book that rings the bell. Professor Filson has not been concerned to extend horizons of knowledge or to rearrange findings to form a new pattern. His purpose was a far more homely one: 'This book is written out of a conviction that a chief responsibility of those who deal constantly with the technical side of gospel study is to offer from time to time a plain statement of the trends of such a study' (p. 25). He hits the bull's-eye fairly and squarely." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 16:143 Ap '39 420w

Reviewed by S. J. Case

J Religion 19:297 Jl '39 260w

FINBERG, ALEXANDER JOSEPH. The life of J. M. W. Turner, R.A. 554p il $10 (30s) Oxford

B or 92 Turner, Joseph Mallord William

"Nobody was better qualified to write a life of Turner than the late Mr. A. J. Finberg, who died on March 15 of the present year. As he explains in his preface, the foundations of the present book, which he calls a 'Chronicle-biography,' were laid in 1904, when he was allowed by the then Keeper and Secretary of the National Gallery to explore the contents of eleven large deed-boxes consisting of practically the complete series of sketch-books and note-books Turner had used between his fourteenth and seventy-first years, and also of a large number of sketches and studies for many of his completed works. The following year Mr. Finberg was invited by the trustees to arrange and catalogue this material, which, together with the exhibited drawings, he arranged in chronological order, the result being the official 'Complete Inventory of the Drawings of the Turner Bequest,' published in 1909 in two volumes." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A. J. Finberg was born for research and to write just the definitive biography which is embodied in the present volume. . . This results, to be sure, in a good many passages of quite unexciting reading. The author knew, however, just what he was about. . . He was well advised and builded, perhaps, even better than he knew, for there emerges from his multitude of 'little facts' a more convincing portrait of Turner than any that has hitherto been drawn." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p13 D 17 '39 1000w

"Mr. Finberg has written a biography with which it is impossible to find fault. Its 400 unhurried, unimpassioned pages are crowded with detail painstakingly collected, carefully ordered, methodically recorded. . . But good biography is not necessarily achieved by careful documentation. A biography is the story of a man's life, and the reader naturally expects to gather what the man was like. Mr. Finberg's power of character-drawing is, to put it mildly, not equal to his powers of conscientious research." Eric Newton

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 16 '39 500w

Reviewed by John Cournos

N Y Times p2 Jl 30 '39 480w

"It can fairly be said that this last work of a man who devoted his life to the study of Turner supersedes Thornbury as the standard biography of one of England's greatest artists."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p275 My 13 '39 900w

FINDLEY, PALMER. Priests of Lucina; the story of obstetrics. 421p il $5 Little

618.2 Obstetrics—History. Physicians 39-21878

The first section of the book is arranged as a series of biographical sketches of the men who have made obstetrical science down to the time of Dr J. Whitridge Williams. The second part: History of special phases of obstetrics, considers such subjects as: anatomy, the forceps, the midwife, puerperal fever, and cesarean operations. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Smith, M.D.

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 5 '39 400w

"The book is very clear, very accurate and very attractive." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

+ N Y Times p21 Je 25 '39 900w

"In spite of its interest, this book can hardly be recommended to the general reader, since it presupposes more technical knowledge than he is likely to possess. To students, the medical profession, nurses, and others with biological background, it should prove interesting and highly stimulating." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 8 '39 450w

Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Jl '39 400w

FINEMAN, IRVING. Doctor Addams. 454p $2.50 Random house 39-5852

This long, somewhat involved novel about a doctor, deals with two aspects of a scientist's life; the man's interest in his work with the impingements of society upon his career, and his love life.

"'Doctor Addams' is a distinguished novel which will prove exciting to readers who accept the author's thoughtfulness and his frankness, and doubtless, by these same qualities, will repel others. Its appeal is to those who wish a mature, sincere and genuinely reflective novel." Mary Ross

FINEMAN, IRVING—Continued

+ — Books p5 Mr 12 '39 950w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 25 '39 150w

"Mr. Fineman's scientific conversations, esoteric as many of them are, are nevertheless unfailingly interesting. His conversations about love are interesting only if you like that sort of thing and like a lot of it. His heroine who learns about life, love, and herself by going to bed with most of her medical colleagues and then by marrying one of them in order to have children and a proper family life has appeared in fiction before, though never perhaps in as much detail. . . In 'Dr. Addams,' in short, science and society are absorbing, love is pretty much of a bore. Which is no reason why an adult reader cannot read it with both pleasure and profit." Dorothy Van Doren

+ — Nation 148:324 Mr 18 '39 850w

"For the lay reader it will require sturdy patience to get past the technical vocabulary and stylized writing of Irving Fineman's fourth novel to the rich core of the book. But behind the rind and the flesh there is a disturbing and penetrating philosophical content that every modern man will want to chew down to in order to understand his time." Stanley Young

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 12 '39 1000w

" 'Doctor Addams' is by far Mr. Fineman's best book, and every medical student and interne you meet for the next six months will be arguing about it. To my mind, everything in it that has to do with medical research and with the dilemma the pure scientist finds himself in today is tops. . . But 'Doctor Addams' is not only a medical novel. It's a novel about modern love and marriage. . . Well, I admit that Mr. Fineman has thought deeply and seriously and even nobly on all these subjects, but I must confess I wish he'd given us a little less of them. There's so much argument, often very eloquent, about sex that sex itself seems somehow crowded out of the picture despite the best efforts of the compliant but voluble Irene." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:92 Mr 11 '39 410w

"It is obvious that Mr. Irving Fineman has put an enormous amount of thought and effort to the writing of this novel. But he has tried too hard and used far too many words. Regretfully this reviewer confesses to have found 'Dr. Addams' labored, pretentious, and not a little absurd." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.

— Sat R of Lit 19:10 Mr 18 '39 600w

FINGALL, ELIZABETH MARY MARGARET (BURKE) PLUNKETT, countess of. Seventy years young; memories told to Pamela Hinkson. 441p il $5 Dutton [10s 6d Collins]

B or 92 39-27126

Reminiscences of Elizabeth, countess of Fingall, the wife of Lord Fingall, whose estate, Killeen, is one of the oldest inhabited castles in Ireland. The book contains not only anecdotes of famous people, but also an account of Irish affairs during her long life.

"Wholly fascinating autobiography—a book of no little value to the student of social phenomena, and withal a book that could have come from nowhere but Ireland." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ Books p12 F 12 '39 700w

"These memoirs are excellently written, and full of Irish wit and charm. . . Her book cannot be neglected by those who wish to know the many-sided Ireland of reality. It is a pity since everyone of importance who touched Ireland during these years—from Edward VII. to Michael Collins—appears in these pages, that there is no index." B. M. O'R.

+ Cath World 149:249 My '39 460w

New Repub 98:147 Mr 8 '39 50w

"A sympathetic and pleasantly sparkling autobiography, dotted with many famous names and illuminated with a few vivid characterizations. . . Some of its descriptions have real beauty. But the best of the book is rooted in Ireland: land, people, traditions and the complex of the recent past."

+ N Y Times p12 F 19 '39 550w

"These memories read like the gossip of a debutante. They are delightfully volatile, they sparkle with an elfin wit, they ramble and digress through a maze of events where the trivial frequently seems more impressive than the important. Their chronology would be maddening if Lady Fingall had not disarmed all criticism by confessing that she has no head for dates. . . But what a wealth of anecdote she might have included, had she been willing to find the space by omitting a few of the shooting parties." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 18 '39 500w

"She is a good raconteur, and the book bubbles with anecdotes of her experiences at home and abroad. . . It will hardly rank as one of the most important volumes in the year's output, but it will be high on the list of entertaining books. And its sidelights on Ireland and the Irish are important enough to claim attention from students of the period covered by the writer's recollections."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 1 '39 700w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Cape Horn snorter. 263p il map $2 Houghton

(W) 39-23188

Adventure story for young readers. It records the experiences of two American boys, Jim and Paddy during the War of 1812. When they were washed overboard while rounding Cape Horn they were rescued and befriended by Indians until they were picked up by the American frigate Essex. As crew members on the Essex they took part in the capture of several enemy vessels.

Booklist 36:90 N 1 '39

"When C. J. Finger tells a historical story he lets history take its course without forcing it into the pattern of a plot; things go on in the up-and-down way life does; you cannot guess what comes next unless you know more history than I do. He even makes me look up his characters in the records to see what happened to them afterward. . . I hope I meet again stories like this; they give me a good time ranging our sea history." M. L. Becker

+ Books p15 N 12 '39 450w

"The main characters are convincing, and the story is full of exciting encounters and events, bringing out a side of the War of 1812 which is comparatively obscure. Although it seems a little long at times, older boys will undoubtedly enjoy it." Josephine Smith

+ — Library J 64:952 D 1 '39 100w

Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 40w

FINK, ARTHUR EMIL. Causes of crime; biological theories in the United States, 1800-1915. 309p $3 Univ. of Pa. press [14s Oxford]

364 Criminal anthropology. Crime and criminals—U.S. 38-33675

Study of the work done by American doctors and others in research into the biological causes of crime from the time of Benjamin Rush (early nineteenth century) to William Healy (second decade of the twentieth century). Contents: Phrenology; Insanity; Moral insanity; Alcohol and drugs; Criminal anthropology I: the anatomy of the criminal; Criminal anthropology II: the physiology of the criminal; Heredity; Heredity: the Jukes; Heredity: human sterilization; Feeble-mindedness. Bibliography; Index.

"It hardly needs be said that the book might be very dangerous reading to an individual who read the contribution, let us say, on classificatory anatomy and faculty psychology and was unfamiliar with the critical views that have been added in recent years, such as Lashley's theory of equipotentiality. The book is a valuable contribution and will save the teacher and the critical student of criminology hours of weary hunting for minor historical threads in less accessible books and references. It will give him the essential gist of a writer or a viewpoint with a minimum expenditure of energy." W. T. Root

+ Am J Psychol 52:315 Ap '39 490w

"The book makes desirable outside reading material for a course in this field. Furthermore, it may be used to advantage as illustrative material on the development of a science and its practical application in a given culture. It is well documented, and is accompanied by an excellent bibliography of the field." A. L. Wood
+ Am Soc R 4:722 O '39 350w

"The reviewer feels that Fink has made a valuable contribution to criminology. By virtue of this book a gap in American criminology has been adequately filled. The story of American thought in the field of criminal biology is told in a manner that commands attention and in a fashion that makes possible the acquisition of a perspective regarding present thought." E. D. Monachesi
+ Ann Am Acad 202:266 Mr '39 400w

"The author has done well to bring all these men to notice; to show the biological theories as part of nineteenth century thinking on crime causation. The picture is one of maturing science wherein men staked their reputations upon a theory, a maturing from unitary statics to complex dynamics up to the point where the criminal is seen as a composite product that differs from all of us only in degree. This book with its fifty pages of bibliography and its careful documentation is a much needed systematic presentation that will be valued by serious students of criminology." L. M. Brooks
+ Social Forces 17:568 My '39 260w

"This book has much to recommend it. It is written interestingly, the subject is well covered and the arrangement of the material is excellent." S. W. Hartwell, M.D.
+ Survey 75:294 S '39 250w

FINKELSTEIN, LOUIS. The Pharisees; the sociological background of their faith. 2v ea $2.50 Jewish pub.

933 Pharisees. Jews—History—To A.D. 70
38-36491

"Dr. Finkelstein brings a wealth of new evidence from his rich store of Jewish learning to substantiate the thesis of Pharisaic liberalism. . . He traces the social and economic background in which the Pharisees functioned and proves that they were the leaders in the movement for economic democracy. They represented the plebeian tradition in Jewish life, using the law to oppose patrician inequalities." Books

---

Am Soc R 4:617 Ag '39 110w

Booklist 35:323 Je 1 '39

"An important and original contribution to an understanding of one of religion's great transition periods. The volumes should be in every Jewish home because they throw a flood of light on the spiritual impulses which still motivate Jewish life. They should be in every liberal Christian home because they help to dissipate the miasmas of misunderstanding which have unfortunately so long embittered the relations between two great religious traditions." A. L. Sachar
+ Books p14 Ja 22 '39 500w

Reviewed by R. M. Traver
Crozer Q 16:303 O '39 130w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman
J Religion 19:252 Jl '39 750w

"It is a happy circumstance that a distinguished Jewish scholar, who writes without prejudice and with both ample learning and a charming English style, should at this particular time give us these two informing volumes. . . It is a fascinating and often an enlightening study, but one feels that social forces are unduly stressed and that he minimizes the role which vital religion plays in transcending social situations." H. S. Coffin
+ — N Y Times p8 D 18 '38 600w

FINNEY, CHARLES GRANDISON. Past the end of the pavement. 268p il $2 Holt

39-32603

Episodes, in part autobiographical, in the lives of two small boys with a fondness for unconventional pets—water beetles, frogs, a drake, etc. The scene is a small western town; the time, the years just before the World war.

"Any one liking boys, and any one sympathetic to the uncharted world of woods and stream, anybody remembering with a grin the days when elders were ridiculous tyrants, will get a vast amount of pleasure out of Mr. Finney's book. Only a man who could write an autobiographical statement which says, 'Even now we (author and brother) have two Agassiz tortoises, a fat Gila monster, and a desert rattlesnake for pets,' could have written it. But what do the neighbors say, Mr. Finney?" Rose Feld
+ Books p2 N 26 '39 750w

Reviewed by Jean Arrowsmith
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 250w

"It is a beguiling book of delightfully amusing characters, unexpected incidents, a village background convincingly suggested, and an almost uninterrupted flow of irresistible talk. It is perhaps captious to complain that the boys at 8 and 10 talk almost as well as they do at 13 and 15; for their talk is always a joy in itself. The book is a paean to dauntless curiosity. Seldom, in such fashion, has the acquisition of knowledge been hymned with more irrepressible realism or a brighter mirth." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p7 N 26 '39 480w

"A hilarious and sympathetic account."
+ New Yorker 15:117 D 2 '39 40w

"When Mr. Finney writes about the biology of mermaids he is charming and funny, but when he writes about the miscegenations of drakes and hens he is not only incredible but self-consciously and unhumorously naughty." P. S.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 6 '40 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 180w
Time 34:86 D 11 '39 30w

FISCHER, BRUNO. So much blood. 263p $2 Greystone

39-16967

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p22 D 3 '39 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 180w

"The story is rather rough on the police, but it has plenty of mystery and action and some Greenwich Village romance besides." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p7 Je 18 '39 120w

"Lush and lurid."
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 17 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 210w

FISCHER, PAULINE BENEDICT. More stately mansions. 358p $2.50 Penn

39-29446

Tale of regeneration in modern life. A rising New York surgeon, temporarily at odds with life, and a young society woman tired of her marriage, meet on a westbound train. A message from a stricken mining town stops the train and the two young people go to help. The results are a new lease on life for all concerned.

Booklist 36:214 F 1 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p22 D 3 '39 120w

"A pleasant little novel."
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 100w

FISCHER, P. B.—Continued

"The conscious goodness of the reformed and their hearty welcome into the ranks of the righteous by the predestined saved detract somewhat from a completely convincing effort. But many readers will not mind that in their interest in the complicated plot." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p20 D 3 '39 320w

FISH, HELEN DEAN. Animals of American history; a picture book by Paul Bransom; with text. 50p $2 Stokes

591.97 Animal pictures. Zoology—Juvenile literature (W) 39-25673

Brief text and page-size pictures give the background for some of the important animals of the North American continent.

Booklist 36:116 N 15 '39

"The text, brief and in large clear type, keeps clear of sentimentality but makes plain the part that all these creatures had, one way or another, in the making of our country; the last chapter is a summing-up so straightforward, easy to remember and worth remembering, that I trust the various societies of animal friends will keep it before their clients." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 D 10 '39 240w

Reviewed by Ruth Page

Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 30w

"There is real need for such a book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:382 N '39 70w

"The idea for the book was well conceived and has been skillfully executed. It should appeal to children of any age." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 65:38 Ja 1 '40 100w

"Imagination and observation have gone into the making of these pictures and they are not without a sly touch of humor. The subjects are arranged in regional groups with a text which describes them and their places in American life. Unfortunately, this is not only a record of their contribution to man's progress but too often a record of gross and senseless killing. Interesting and beautiful in itself, this book is also an effective reminder of the need for wild-life conservation." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 F 4 '40 280w

"Paul Bransom's black-and-white drawings of animals are very fine and the accompanying text is informative on what the animals native to North America have done for us and what we have done to them."

+ New Yorker 15:88 N 25 '39 30w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS. Do you want to become a doctor? (Vocational guides) 176p $1.50 Stokes

610.7 Medicine—Study and teaching. Medical education. Profession, Choice of (W) 39-19708

This book of advice to the young person desiring to enter the medical profession contains chapters on: Preparation, Choice of a medical school, Cost of medical education, The internship, State licensing examination, The specialist, The future of medical practice, etc.

Booklist 36:11 S '39

Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 50w

Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

FISHER, MRS ANNE (BENSON). Wide road ahead; the story of a woman bacteriologist. 276p $2.50 Dutton

(W) 39-27127

This novel is based on presumably actual events in the life story of a woman bacteriologist, but a thread of romance is woven into the story and the author makes the usual claim that all the characters are fictitious.

Booklist 35:230 Mr 15 '39

"This unpretentious little book is good reading, both for its breezy, first-hand picture of a profession that few have occasion to see directly and for its attractive picture of a girl who succeeded, by wits and work, in breaking new ground and having—except at intervals—a good time while doing it." Mary Ross

+ Books p24 Ap 2 '39 550w

"There is a good deal of bacteriology in this story, a good deal of romance, a good deal of adventure. It will interest the readers who are ready to enjoy a combination of the three."

+ N Y Times p26 F 26 '39 440w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 21 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:113 Je '39

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD). Seasoned timber. 485p $2.50 Harcourt

(W) 39-27079

In her study of a poor academy in rural Vermont the author has symbolized the present-day struggle between the dictatorships and democracy. Timothy Hulme, middle-aged principal of the academy, is stimulated into full action when a wealthy graduate leaves the school a million dollars, provided certain undemocratic policies are adopted. The whole village takes sides, and when the melée is over, Timothy Hulme and the broad-minded policy of Clifford Academy are intact, altho Hulme's love affair has not prospered.

"To at least one reader the local fight is more interesting than the Indian-summer love affair that at times over-shadows it. The book is rich in aperçus touching the Vermont character, and its basic philosophy of rural education is trenchantly, often nobly, stated." Wilson Follett

Atlantic Ap '39 300w

Booklist 35:223 Mr 1 '39

"Miss Canfield has incorporated social drama in a story entertaining in its own right, woven closely and solidly out of the strong threads of daily living in a community and a section of America she understands thoroughly. But her story is also an allegory, one of pressing, vital significance to every American city and village and main street where the weapons of totalitarianism . . . have made their appearance. It relates the individual role of every American citizen to the large, confusing, tragic pattern of world-wide politics of today. As such it is an inspiring novel." William Soskin

+ Books p5 Mr 5 '39 1400w

Cath World 149:380 Je '39 110w

"In this novel, as in any other by Dorothy Canfield, there is a quality of maturity and solid substance that puts it in the class of distinguished fiction whether or not it becomes a best seller. Through it speaks an intelligent and resourceful personality."

+ Christian Century 56:386 Mr 22 '39 150w

"Reading the book, we are again impressed by the richness of the stores on which Mrs. Fisher can draw—her sensitive response to nature, her acquaintance with art and music, her carefully acquired information about educational methods and about the co-operative way in economics, and her sharp concern with world affairs. Withal, her story is pure Vermont, in its unsugared humor and independence of thought, as well as in its scenic background. We give tribute again to her control of her technique to convey the changing rhythms of her story and the interlocking of characters and events." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 11 '39 600w

Churchman 153:50 Ap 1 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

"Dorothy Canfield's plea for cooperatives, for decency, for human dignity, leaves no doubt in the reader's mind as to her stand in this democracy-fascism argument. Perhaps the first half of this novel is overly long . . . but Miss Canfield's leisurely, thoughtful prose gives a solid background for the seasoned-timber Vermonters who can weather all gales and for the complete portrayal of Timothy Hulme, one of the most lovable and real characters of modern fiction." P. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 29:584 Mr 17 '39 460w

"This is no flat parable Dorothy Canfield has written. It is a fine, strong, rounded novel, enriched with her learning and her keen sense of what stirs men's hearts and minds." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 102:v Jl '39 180w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p7 Je 23 '39 500w

Reviewed by Dorothy Van Doren
Nation 148:272 Mr 4 '39 300w

"The appearance of an anti-Fascist novel by Dorothy Canfield may serve to remind us of several things: that she has never hesitated to use her novels to tell her readers what she thought, and that she has known how to make them like it; that, though critics may not linger over her work, she has sound talent; and that she is as courageous as she is honest. 'Seasoned Timber' is only a somewhat better than middling novel, but it is a book that most of the young radicals ought to take off their hats to. When their conviction rises as naturally from the people and events they write about as Miss Canfield's does from the Vermont life she describes, they can afford to laugh at her occasional sentimentality." Granville Hicks

+ New Repub 98:284 Ap 12 '39 550w

"The story is told with a dash that makes it genuinely entertaining. . . Unfortunately, Miss Canfield has not been content to write a good novel, but has attempted to produce a masterpiece; and in her efforts to be profound has achieved an almost metaphysical silliness." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:90 Jl 15 '39 490w

"Thoughtful, very well written and showing a keen sense of relative values, the novel summarizes clearly and well many of the doubts and difficulties of this most doubtful and very difficult time." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 5 '39 950w

New Yorker 15:78 Mr 4 '39 100w

"If this is not one of the author's best books, the fault lies more with her subject than with her artistic ability. Somehow it is very difficult to put the life of a school into fiction, perhaps because all its details are so far removed from the average reader's world. Indeed, when one considers the handicap of Mr. Hulme's school, it is remarkable that 'Seasoned Timber' ends by being a well rounded piece of work. Through all its pages world events call with a present-day insistence, so that even a provincial town must face them, and Miss Canfield has finally brought her New England skillfully and inevitably into the current of a changing time." J. P. Marquand

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:5 Mr 4 '39 600w

"The story runs on conventional lines, and Miss Canfield's eloquence often runs away with her. She overwrites her simple theme. . . But the professional in Miss Canfield is compelling; she is able to put over her New England characters and their characteristic talk; she is able to make us see their landscape, smell their food, and take a mild interest in their politics and problems." Kate O'Brien

— + Spec 163:27 Jl 7 '39 350w

" 'Seasoned Timber' is, in a way, a propaganda book, but at least the plot is shaped to illustrate the propaganda, and it is not dragged in—which may perhaps be said of the romance. It is a story to increase the respect which Americans already have for the people of Vermont."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 600w

Reviewed by J. C. Colcord
Survey G 28:405 Je '39 200w

Time 33:61 Mr 6 '39 290w

Times [London] Lit Sup p371 Je 24 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:65 Ap '39

"Seasoned Timber is a bold and unconventional treatment of a burning theme, and if it fails to win the nation-wide hearing of Sinclair Lewis's It Can't Happen Here, that will not be because it does not deserve to. As a statement of faith it is no less militant, and as a novel it is one of Mrs. Fisher's most accomplished and appealing works." Ralph Thompson

+ Yale R n s 28:viii summer '39 180w

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD), and SCOTT, MRS SARAH (FISHER). On a rainy day. [48p] il $1 Barnes, A.S.

793 Games 39-240

All about the games which David and Elizabeth and Jimmy thought up to play on a rainy day. Altho told in story form, the directions are clear enough to be followed by other children.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 12 '39 350w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 30w

"A gay and clever book for children, designed to make their games more fun (and more educational, in a harmless sense) by stimulating their imaginations. The pictures are excellent."

+ Christian Century 56:159 F 1 '39 30w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 24 '39 180w

J Home Econ 31:401 Je '39 50w

"The many pictures do much to make the book appealing. The artist shows us real children, with plenty of lively and characteristic action, in pencil drawings that in reproduction have the softness and charm of the originals." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 19 '39 440w

New Yorker 15:108 My 13 '39 40w

Wis Lib Bul 35:118 Je '39

FISHER, MRS HELEN STEVENS, comp. Party fun; wholesome games from around the world. 121p il $1.35 Associated authors

793 Games 39-3161

"Original games and variations of familiar games contributed by people who have used them successfully. Arranged by type; such as, quiet games, active games, races, pencil and paper games, and stunts, and supplemented by party suggestions for each month. Part of the material is reprinted from the 'Party fun' column in the Christian Science Monitor." Booklist

Booklist 35:248 Ap 1 '39

Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

FISHER, VARDIS. Children of God; an American epic. 769p map $3 Harper

(W) 39-27649

Dramatic story of the Mormons, describing the strange beginnings of the sect, their growth, persecution, heroism, and migration across the western plains of the United States.

"The energy is there, sure enough. It shows in the rough-and-tumble vernacular, excellent for all its repetition; it invigorates the minor characters; best of all, it bursts out with great vividness in the mob scenes. . . Were the energy which finds such sure expression in this conflict and violence equally amenable to tenderness and laughter, this book would be once again as meaningful." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic O '39 600w

FISHER, VARDIS—Continued

Booklist 36:8 S '39

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
Books p3 Ag 27 '39 1400w

"This was an enormous task, an opportunity to make an enormous achievement. Here and there . . . the novel comes up to the nearly excellent; but usually, in every important respect, Mr. Fisher fails to bring his novel up to the level of his ambitions." Mark Schorer

— + Boston Transcript p1 S 9 '39 1400w

Reviewed by Earle Birney
Canadian Forum 19:260 N '39 400w

"From the beginnings of this strange movement to the end of the first half-century of its existence, the story moves with steady pace. The great leaders of Mormonism stand revealed in all their true greatness as well as in their no less true imperfections, and when the book ends the reader has the satisfying feeling that once again he has been informed, entertained and thrilled, and what more can a writer of historical romance desire?"

+ Christian Century 57:22 Ja 3 '40 150w
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 23 '39 700w

"This historical novel has a pious title, with microscopic piety in the text. . . The book is plentifully besprinkled with vulgarity and profanity as embodied in the coarse conversations of the characters. By modern standards of literature the novel may be said to have a quality of a certain kind. But as a meritorious work of art it is atrocious." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

— Churchman 153:23 D 15 '39 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

Reviewed by Helen Neville
Nation 149:419 O 14 '39 650w

"Vardis Fisher has brought something approaching genius to [the Mormon story]. The best historian of the Mormons is Linn; and even he, in the light of latter days, slipped a great deal. Vardis Fisher's novel has done the whole thing, from beginning to end, and with grace, and dignity and understanding and simplicity. He knows the Mormon people and the Mormon country—he ought to; that's where he comes from. These people are his people. . . This long and fascinating novel [is] good; it's sound in wind and limb." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 27 '39 1350w

"It is repetitious, wordy, freighted with interminable dialogue. Cast in the form of a novel, it is apt at any moment to do a quick-change act and appear as a straight historical chronicle. The prose is often careless, often tumid. Because he knows everything about his subject, the author believes himself licenced to tell everything about it. He never suggests when he can explain and he will explain at the drop of a semi-colon. And now, with these fair warnings behind me, I hurry to add that 'Children of God' is one of the most extraordinarily interesting stories I have ever read and that I have rarely encountered a book whose faults one is more eager and easily able to condone." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:57 S 2 '39 800w
Pratt p23 winter '40

" 'Children of God' will take its place as one of the finest fictionized accounts ever written of an episode in American history. As a novel it has limitations presumably insurmountable to an author intent on accuracy and impartiality. The use of historical figures as central characters in a work of fiction is never entirely satisfactory, but to Mr Fisher's credit it can be said that Joseph Smith and Brigham Young . . . are convincing and play their roles without a creak."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 800w
Time 34:62 Ag 28 '39 700w
Wis Lib Bul 35:167 O '39

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
Yale R n s 29:vi autumn '39 500w

FISHWICK, DWIGHT BROWN. White coats; a story of medical school. 223p $2 Dodd 39-29965

"This story, evidently from life, written for high school boys but interesting to any one, describes the life, studies, diversions, hopes and fears of a medical student through four years in medical school and starts him on his chosen career." Books

Reviewed by Louis Hirschhorn, M.D.
Books p8 Ja 14 '40 490w

"There is not much plot but plenty of intimate interest in this authentic picture of professional life."

+ Cath World 150:380 D '39 80w

FITCH, WILLIS STETSON. Wings in the night [foreword by Fiorello H. LaGuardia]. 302p il $2 Jones, Marshall

940.44 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives. European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations 38-33654

Account of the author's experiences in the Royal Italian Flying corps during the World war, where he was one of the first twenty American aviators on the Italian front, and served under Major LaGuardia.

"A minor but valuable footnote to history. . . [The] book reflects the zest, the recklessness and the valor of the young men who gambled their lives in aerial warfare. He writes with humor and sharp intensity, and his descriptions of combat over the Alps and the Adriatic are pulse stirring."

+ Books p11 F 12 '39 150w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 5 '39 480w

FITZPATRICK, EDWARD AUGUSTUS. I believe in education. 218p $2.50 (7s 6d) Sheed

370.1 Education—Philosophy 38-22110

Thirty-seven essays on the subject of education, expressing the belief that there is a "need in educational philosophy for a spiritual, humanistic center about which all the problems of education would be organized. This book is the formulation in a personal way of such a philosophy." (Introd) The author is dean of the Graduate school of Marquette university, and president of Mount Mary college. Index.

"The style of the book is, on the whole, forcible and closely-knit, although we notice occasional ungainly sentences and a curious recurrence of certain grammatical errors. Its ideas, if adopted in the right places, might be the foundation of a distinct revolution—in secular education, because of the insistence on a conscious, permeating, spiritual philosophy, and in current Catholic education, because of the author's disbelief in education by imposition and rote and his faith in self-activity as the potent means of learning." J. J. McC.

+ — Cath World 149:123 Ap '39 330w

"Because Dr. Fitzpatrick's educational creed has long been a force in both secular and Catholic school affairs, this book in which he states his personal beliefs about education will find many interested readers. . . Unfortunately this book does not contribute much either to the author's own position as a brilliant leader among schoolmen or to contemporary educational literature. It is a rather rambling discussion of a great many topics almost any one of which we should like to see Mr. Fitzpatrick treat at greater length and with more of his usual forcefulness." Ruth Byrns

+ — Commonweal 29:108 N 18 '38 110w

FITZPATRICK, JOHN CLEMENT, ed. Some historic houses; their builders and their places in history. 160p il $4 Macmillan

917.3 U.S.—Historic houses, etc. (W) 39-33965

Descriptions and photographs of some twenty houses, owned or cared for by the National Society of Colonial Dames. Partial contents: Dumbarton house, Washington, D.C.; Gunston hall, Virginia; Stenton mansion, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Quincy homestead, Massachusetts; Van Cortlandt house, New York; Webb house, Wethersfield, Connecticut; Cornwallis house, Wilmington, North Carolina; Ohio Company Land office, Marietta, Ohio; Tate house, Stroudwater, Maine; Indian Agency house, Portage, Wisconsin; Fatio house, St Augustine, Florida; McLoughlin house, Oregon city, Oregon.

Booklist 36:210 F 1 '40

Reviewed by J. S. Bassett

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 90w

"The writing is concerned with straightforward record and simple description, and is the more impressive for its avoidance of elaboration and flowery phrase."

+ N Y Times p4 D 31 '39 360w

FITZSIMMONS, CORTLAND. Mystery at Hidden Harbor. 300p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Lane]

38-25350

Detective story.

"Miss Ethel Thomas, the brisk middle-aged maiden who generally detects in Fitzsimmons mysteries, chalks up another success." Will Cuppy

+ Books p24 S 18 '38 160w

"The plot is exciting. . . Gradually the excitement dies away in spite of a last flare-up in a dramatic dénouement; and for this creeping paralysis I hold the lady detectives largely responsible. They are too little of the detective and too much of the lady to take control of the situation. . . [However] this is the first work of Mr. Fitzsimmons to be published on this side of the Atlantic and I recommend readers to give him a trial, as some may easily like his distinct flavour." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 17:545 Ap 8 '39 160w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 18:18 S 24 '38 40w

"If Mr. Fitzsimmons would appreciate that he has broken three rules of good detective fiction in his story and would try to avoid doing so again he should produce a better novel at his second attempt."

Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Ap 29 '39 190w

FITZSIMMONS, CORTLAND, and MULHOLLAND, JOHN. The girl in the cage. 302p $2 Stokes

39-22043

Detective story.

"A not too persuasively written puzzle." Will Cuppy

Books p20 O 1 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 90w

"John Mulholland, himself a famous magician, has collaborated to good effect with a writer of mystery tales and has run the thread of stage magic through all the course of this story's intricate (indeed, somewhat too intricate) plot. . . The story is told in the first person by a priest who is Peter King's friend, and those two and young Inspector Tim O'Donald form an original triumvirate in crime discovery." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p22 O 1 '39 200w

"Shows how application of Magicians' Rules can solve crime as well as fool audience. Continuous action saves rather dizzy yarn."

Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 9 '39 50w

FLACK, ISAAC HARVEY (HARVEY GRAHAM, pseud). The story of surgery; with a foreword by Oliver St John Gogarty [Eng title: Surgeons all]. 425p il $3.75 Doubleday [18s Rich]

617.09 Surgery—History (W) 39-27796

History of surgery from the days of primitive man and the Far Eastern civilizations to the present day. Bibliography. Indexes.

"The book is an unusual one; it is impossible to write about it without becoming enthusiastic." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 30:92 Ja '40 1500w

Booklist 36:62 O 15 '39

"The narrative is not romanticized, but a very scholarly and authentic piece of history. . . The author writes clearly and adeptly with an extremely good ear for a pointed paragraph, and an appropriate anecdote." Logan Clendening

+ Books p2 O 29 '39 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"A long and excellent account is given of British surgery and surgeons. Without professing erudition or research, Mr. Harvey Graham has produced a well-written and readable book which covers a very wide field accurately and with no important omission. One can understand why Mr. Oliver St. John Gogarty in his foreword pronounces this the best book on surgery he has ever read. The illustrations are well chosen and appropriate." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ap 11 '39 250w

New Repub 100:321 O 18 '39 20w

"The book is well written, the matter is simply expressed, and the facts are accurately stated and given due proportionate emphasis; whilst infusing the whole is a light realistic humour, devoid of facetiousness. It is because the book is what it is that I regret the over-exuberant and hyperbolic tone of the foreword, contributed by Dr. Oliver St. John Gogarty; and I am sorry that 'Harvey Graham' (a nom de plume, by the way) permitted such a foreword to appear. His wine is of such a quality as to need no ostentatious bush." Harry Roberts

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:716 My 6 '39 650w

"In most of its chapters the tale so ably told by Graham is comparable to the best of recent historical writing, and the book cannot fail to win the votes of readers and reviewers alike." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

+ N Y Times p10 S 17 '39 800w

"Dr. Graham is disappointingly superficial and rapid-fire in his account of surgical development since 1918, but otherwise his book covers the subject up, down, and crosswise. Notably interesting is the material on primitive surgery today." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:74 S 9 '39 1200w

Pratt p9 winter '40

"The medically trained reader will find in this book much stimulating information, a great deal of which it is safe to say will be new to him, and all of which is persuasively presented. Those with little or no knowledge of medical terms and operative methods may be baffled by some of its more technical passages, but they should find that these are more than compensated for by the wealth of dramatic anecdotes." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 S 16 '39 500w

"Mr. Graham has admirably fulfilled an onerous task, for his reading in preparation for such a book as this must have been extraordinarily diverse and unusually wide; his reward is that this story is eminently readable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p192 Ap 1 '39 550w

FLANDERS, MRS HELEN (HARTNESS), and others, eds. The new Green mountain songster; traditional folk songs of Vermont, collected, transcribed, and edited. 278p $3.50 Yale univ. press

784.4 Folk songs, American 40-1093

Collection of songs and ballads sung by Vermonters, based in part upon a compilation dating back to the Green Mountain Songster, brought out by an "Unknown Soldier of Sandgate" in 1823, and in part on the Archive for Vermont folksong. Words, music, and notes are included for each song, with a record of the source of each. Index.

"These folksongs have a very definite historical value. One thing they prove is that, while it may be true, as the 'Old Revolutionary Soldier' said in his preface, 'most people are fond of singing,' early Americans were easily pleased in the matter of music—and of verse also."

+ Christian Century 56:1474 N 29 '39 210w

"Of the extent and thoroughness of investigation behind the Yale edition there can be no question. . . Not only is the proportion of native-born verse high, but such homespun products reach a surprising level of excellence; a higher level, we are inclined to say, than is reached by the native products of the Kentucky and Tennessee hills. . . As great poetic achievement the pieces may fall short. But these pages are worthy not only of rapid scanning but of intellectual digestion." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 D 17 '39 550w

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 D 23 '39 170w

FLEMING, WALDO, pseud. See Williamson, T. R.

FLETCHER, ALFRED BRINSON WOODS (PETER FLETCHER, pseud). Life without fear; with a foreword by Percy L. Backus. 111p $1 Dutton

157.3 Fear. Christian life. Mental hygiene 39-2881

Discussion of fear and inferiority, their causes and alleviation thru understanding and sympathy.

Reviewed by C. S. Hall

Am J Psychol 53:170 Ja '40 250w

Reviewed by A. C. Dieffenbach

Books p16 Mr 5 '39 100w

"Somehow, consolation books seem about as effective in overcoming fear as the flounderings in the sea of fond papas to prove to wailing juniors that the big waves won't hurt. . . However it was pleasant to meet, through the medium of his book, the gentle and kindly Mr. Fletcher."

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 90w

"Spiritual insight, human kindness and an understanding of psychological motivation make this a great little book. Its one hundred pages bring no new findings on this universal human problem, but there is nothing that is trite and no wasted gesture. . . Among the many books on this subject we give this an A plus." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 153:16 Mr '39 100w

Reviewed by E. S. Conklin

J Religion 19:298 Jl '39 90w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 9 '39 190w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M. D.

Survey 75:125 Ap '39 100w

FLETCHER, PETER, pseud. See Fletcher, A. B. W.

FLEW, ROBERT NEWTON. Jesus and His church; a study of the idea of the ecclesia in the New Testament. 275p $2 Abingdon [6s Epworth]

225.8 Church. Bible. New Testament 38-39299

"Dr. Newton Flew's book opens with a discussion of the relation that exists between the Kingdom and the Church. . . This is followed by a refutation of the objection that Jesus could not have contemplated the gathering of a new community because He anticipated the approaching end of human history. . . The way is now prepared for the third, and by far the longest, chapter in the book. Divided into five main sections, it advances a fivefold argument to prove that, even if Jesus was not accustomed to use the word Church, His vision, at any rate, was full of the idea of a new community. . . The remainder of the volume is devoted to showing how this fivefold argument is endorsed by the life and teaching of the Primitive Church and to demonstrating the essential unity of the Apostolic message as revealed in five of the New Testament writers. A final chapter is then offered in which certain conclusions are drawn regarding the principle of authority to be deduced from this consensus." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"The principal of Wesley House, Cambridge, England, believes that Jesus did found the church—and makes a good case out of his conviction. His solution of the vexing eschatological angle to such an assertion is the best I have met to date." Eric Oesterle

+ Crozer Q 16:237 Jl '39 100w

"It is with more than usual pleasure that we commend this very timely and scholarly contribution."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p608 S 24 '38 600w

FLEXNER, JAMES THOMAS. America's old masters; first artists of the New World. 332p il $3.75 Viking

927.5 Artists, American. anals West, Benjamin. Copley, John Singleton. Peale, Charles Wilson. Stuart, Gilbert (W) 39-27903

Biographical sketches of the first four American painters to achieve international fame: Benjamin West, John Singleton Copley, Charles Willson Peale, and Gilbert Stuart. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:109 N 15 '39

"A very lively and interesting book. . . This is a good book, which gains much, I may add, from its numerous illustrations." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p8 N 12 '39 700w

Cath World 150:508 Ja '40 550w

Reviewed by Constance Rourke

Nation 149:528 N 11 '39 420w

"The author of 'Doctors on Horseback' explains at the outset that his present volume . . . is 'dedicated to history, not criticism; to biography, not the evaluation of pictures.' This purpose governs. Such critical comment on art as does enter the plan is shrewd and always pertinent. The book remains, from cover to cover, a human document." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p6 D 10 '39 1100w

"The one on West is the best, but all are done with taste and discrimination and they revivify a period and a group of artists we too often think of as museum material."

+ New Yorker 15:91 N 11 '39 50w

"A volume of exceptional interest. . . The most original feature of a book which necessarily in the main rests on diligent compilation, is the revaluation of Stuart's character. Mr. Flexner, quite ruthlessly, but also justly, sweeps away the accumulated mass of apologetics and hero-worship, which Stuart's memory has too long enjoyed. . . This book is well printed and illustrated. Its interest extends well beyond its nominal theme." F. J. Mather

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 O 28 '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:184 N '39

FLEXNER, MRS MARION W. Drina: England's young Victoria. 277p il $2.50 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Victoria, queen of Great Britain (W) 39-24187

A biography in fiction form of Queen Victoria from the age of four to the time of her proposal to Albert. The book stresses the development of character in Victoria's formative years. For high school age.

Booklist 36:155 D 15 '39

"Altogether this is a book to remember when reinforcing a high school library." M. L. Becker
+ Books p26 N 12 '39 400w

"This book will appeal more to established admirers of 'our own dear Queen' than to the 'teen-age readers to whom it is directed, since it is a narrative of description rather than the story of action it might have been, had it dealt with Cumberland's attempts to do away with the little Princess. These potentially exciting events are merely referred to."
Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '39 80w

"The author tells us she has spent years in the preparation of this book and has consulted with many authorities, old and contemporary, and presents a long bibliography which adds value to this appealing and human story of the childhood years of a real princess and queen." F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '39 300w

"A biography written like fiction in which Queen Victoria is so convincingly drawn that her royalty does not make her seem less of a natural girl. . . It is full of conversation and quite free from pedantry or a sense of grandeur. It carries the marks of careful study of her time and will make a good introduction to Victoria Regina." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:388 N '39 60w

"A biography of Queen Victoria's childhood and youth, written so clearly and with such charm that it will find many enthusiastic readers among young people." Florence O'Gara
+ Library J 64:953 D 1 '39 160w
New Repub 101:288 D 13 '39 20w

"It is a fine, rounded portrait which Mrs. Flexner has given us of Victoria in those formative years. . . The background of Georgian England is vividly presented, the social life and the political intrigues, and this is accented by reproductions of contemporary prints and portraits. The style and approach are of such maturity that readers need by no means be limited to those of the teen age." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 D 24 '39 500w

"Not unduly fictionalized and yet lively."
New Yorker 15:90 N 25 '39 40w

"Miss Flexner has written a chatty study, something between a novel and a biography. It covers very familiar ground in a tolerably convincing and entertaining fashion."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p674 N 18 '39 200w

FLICK, ALEXANDER CLARENCE, and LOBRANO, GUSTAV STUBBS. Samuel Jones Tilden: a study in political sagacity. 597p il $5 Dodd

B or 92 Tilden, Samuel Jones (W) 39-31244

Biography of the mid-nineteenth century Democratic leader, depicting his success in law, finance, and politics. His part in the breaking of the Tweed ring, and the story of the presidential election of 1876, when Tilden received more votes than Rutherford Hayes, is told in detail. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Flick has written what is undoubtedly destined to become the standard one-volume biography of Tilden. He has had access to all the manuscript materials known to exist and he has profited by all the monographic studies made to date in the field. The man Tilden emerges from his pages to be better understood than he possibly could have been to his own generation. It cannot be said that he 'lives and breathes' again, for the biography is informative rather than creative. Only a few additions are made to the knowledge already available on Tilden, but the portrait of the man in his own times is better drawn and better set in its background." Avery Craven
+ Books p1 D 17 '39 2450w
New Repub 102:125 Ja 22 '40 60w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
N Y Times p4 D 24 '39 2550w

"Absorbing, well-detailed biography, recommended to anyone interested in political origins, but especially to students of New York history."
+ New Yorker 15:118 D 2 '39 50w

"The solid merits of Mr. Flick's book will appeal primarily to those who appreciate honest, competent, and restrained scholarship." P. H. Buck
+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 N 25 '39 950w

FLINT, MARGARET (MRS LESTER WARNER JACOBS). Breakneck Brook. 270p $2.50 Dodd

39-22444

Story of Maine village life by the author of The Old Ashburn Place (Book Review Digest, 1936). The family at Breakneck Brook consisted of Deborah Parks, her young daughter Thurlow, and Aunt Frida, who tho eighty and crippled, was up on all the gossip in a ladylike way. Thurlow and her three suitors provide the interest of the story, and much of the village gossip besides.

Reviewed by George Conrad
Books p12 S 17 '39 300w

" 'Breakneck Brook' offers a quiet retreat to the reader who would escape for a time from news of this troublous world. It is relaxing to spend a couple of hours in its tranquil atmosphere with wholesome characters who follow their regular simple routine, oblivious to the social and political upheaval of the outside world. It is like pulling one's boat into a quiet inlet where one does not hear the dangerous rapids swirling by."
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 23 '39 90w

"Miss Flint writes here with the same sincerity and unmistakable fidelity to detail which distinguished 'The Old Ashburn Place.' Yet the result in 'Breakneck Brook' inevitably seems less important. It may be only because some of the Yankee twang is missing, but this more urbane group seems pale and featureless by comparison with the Ashburns." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Times p19 S 17 '39 550w

"It is a pleasant, thin little story and adds nothing at all to Miss Flint's promising beginning in 'The Old Ashburn Place.' "
Sat R of Lit 20:12 O 7 '39 120w

FLINTAN, DOUGLAS L. There really is a Father Christmas; il. by Mary Jane Hoene. 73p $1.25 Willett

38-12844

Story for young readers about St Nicholas, how he became the patron saint of children and why he lives forever.

"Its particular touch of whimsy is certain to bring joy to thousands." Irene Weise
+ Boston Transcript p1 D 3 '38 300w

"A new treatment of an old legend, done with imaginative realism."
+ Churchman 152:4 D 15 '38 20w

FLINTAN, D. L.—Continued
"Mr. Flintan has written a delightful and original story. . . The book is illustrated with drawings which carry out the ideas of the text." R. D. Miller
+ Crozer Q 16:77 Ja '39 60w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Make way for the mail. 200p il $2 Lippincott 383.4 Postal service—Juvenile literature
(W) 39-27980

Pictures the history, development, and activities of the mail service, with special reference to the United States. For grades six to eight. No index.

Booklist 36:136 D 1 '39

"Excellent if not thrilling."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

FLORINSKY, MICHAEL T. Toward an understanding of the U.S.S.R.; a study in government, politics and economic planning. 245p map $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan 947.084 Russia—Politics and government. Russia—Economic policy. Russia—Economic conditions. Communism—Russia 39-16415

Part one of this volume reviews the political history of Russia under the Czars and during the period of war and revolution. The second and longer part is an analysis of present conditions in Russia under the Soviet regime. For the most part the author is adversely critical of the Communists' achievements in economic and political fields. Index.

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich
Ann Am Acad 206:177 N '39 400w
Booklist 36:41 O 1 '39

"Amid the welter of prejudicial works pro and con on the U.S.S.R., any one who should write an objective handbook about its history and institutions, without personal comment, would deserve the thanks of humanity. A hasty glance might lead the reader to believe that that is exactly what Dr. Florinsky has done. . . Unfortunately, Dr. Florinsky had something much more ambitious in mind, namely 'to appraise the evolution of the Soviet State' and in doing so to make a significant contribution to political thinking. . . It soon becomes evident that Dr. Florinsky is out to damn the whole Communist system both in its theory and in its practice. . . What promised to be a very useful work thus turns out in the end to be only 'another book on Russia' in the *con*class." E. S. Bates
— + Books p13 S 3 '39 600w
Christian Century 56:1109 S 13 '39 170w
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 7 '39 500w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:4 O '39 150w
Foreign Affairs 18:378 Ja '40 40w
New Repub 100:111 Ag 30 '39 30w

"Dr. Florinsky's book is an exposition, not an argument. Most of its facts are carefully drawn from official, or from intimate and sympathetic sources. It is too soon for definitive judgments on the Russian experiment. But this comprehensive and dispassionate study offers a very useful introduction to the most interesting of the totalitarian States."
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 30 '39 500w

"One of the virtues of this exposition of the political and economic structure of the Soviet Union is that it sets its subject against the background of Tsarist Russia. . . In his picture of the Soviet Union, Mr. Florinsky does not always clearly distinguish between theory and practice. . . His analysis of the Constitution, first of the Russian Communist Party, and then of the Soviet State, is lucid and satisfying. . . But we are still not much nearer to discovering how things really happen in Soviet Russia, or where the vital decisions are taken. . . Mr. Florinsky's attempt to penetrate the realities of economic planning is perhaps more successful. But here, too, there are many obscurities." E. H. Carr
+ — Spec 163:333 S 1 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 850w

Reviewed by Alexander Kaun
Survey G 28:698 N '39 70w

"Hostile in spirit, the book is nevertheless judicial in manner, the work of a trained historian with a firm grasp of jurisprudence and of economics, who has based his study almost exclusively upon official Soviet sources. . . One may quarrel with him on two points, both important. First, he surely magnifies the probity and the capacity of the higher ranks of the bureaucracy. Secondly, like a good many others he overrates the promise of Stolypin's land reforms."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p446 Jl 29 '39 650w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely
Yale R n s 29:385 winter '40 300w

FODOR, MARCEL WILLIAM. South of Hitler; introd. by John Gunther. 347p il map $3.50 Houghton [2d ed 10s 6d Allen, G]
940.5 Europe—Politics. Balkan states
(W) [39-2963]

New and enlarged edition of Plot and Counterplot in Central Europe (Book Review Digest, 1937). Chapters added are: The fate of Abyssinia; Awaiting the German assault; Czechoslovakia reduced; Another German goes to the Balkans. Index.

Reviewed by M. W. Graham
Am Pol Sci R 33:897 O '39 450w
Booklist 35:235 Mr 15 '39
Books p17 F 5 '39 50w

"Treating his complicated subject in swift-running newspaper style, Fodor brings to the task not only a wide knowledge of current history but also a deep understanding of the economic problems that vitally affect Europe's future."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 150w
Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 9 '39 650w
Foreign Affairs 17:639 Ap '39 10w

Reviewed by Maurice Hindus
New Repub 98:136 Mr 8 '39 250w

"In scope and substance matter, 'South of Hitler' is excellent. There is, however, a certain lack of close coordination between the newly added matter and that of the earlier edition. The earlier material appears to have been left largely as originally published, though later events have, so to speak, thrown it into the historical past rather than the historical present tense. . . Places where the reader experiences this feeling are rather numerous. It must be conceded also that Mr Fodor is not always thoroughly adept in the management of exposition."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 2 '39 650w

FOERSTER, NORMAN. The future of the liberal college. 103p $1.25 Appleton-Century 378 Colleges and universities—U.S. Education, Higher—Addresses, essays, lectures 38-32838

Five essays on modern education which have previously appeared as magazine articles or were delivered as lectures. The author criticizes higher education in America as based on a "materialistic and humanitarian" philosophy and voices the plea for small colleges based on "liberal and humanistic" principles. Index.

"The book champions much which deserves championship, and many of its thrusts are fair; but it seems to me to lack full understanding of the nature, the necessity and the value of much of that which it attacks. It goes to extremes in its reaction against the substitution of a social for an individualistic philosophy of education. Like most writings on the college, it fails to reveal any broad consciousness of the educational process as a whole. And like most such books, it is more effective in its criticism of things as they are than in proposal of things as they ought to be." E. H. Wilkins

+ — Christian Century 55:1505 D 7 '38 500w

Reviewed by J. W. Nason
Survey 75:228 Jl '39 400w

FOLDES, JOLAN. Egyptian interlude; tr. by Alexander G. Kenedi and Irwin Shapiro [Eng title: Heads or tails?]. 302p $2.50 Farrar [7s 6d Hutchinson]

39-29835

This new novel by the author of The Street of the Fishing Cat (Book Review Digest, 1937), tells a story of expatriates living in Alexandria and, particularly, the story of Eve Martin, a young Hungarian woman. Eve has left her home and husband and is searching for a new way of life but after a love affair with a French professor, finds she must go back to take up old duties.

"The novel is alight with the author's bright satiric wit. She has a light touch which is also the touch of life and reality, and of a detachment which can maintain sympathy through poise. And she has the skill to show her characters not merely in a few salient outlines, but in a rounded completeness, sentient and convincing." John Patton

+ Books p10 O 8 '39 320w

"Miss Foldes' comments and conversations are extremely clever. Even the moral is presented with the lightest touch, and only her insight—almost psychic in its quick and accurate sting—suggests how keen a mind is motivating this story." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '39 170w

Reviewed by L. B. Salomon
Nation 149:532 N 11 '39 120w
New Repub 100:322 O 18 '39 30w

"The substance of this novel is slight enough and narrative values are virtually lacking. But there still is a fragrance and gentleness, a whimsical humor, a bitter-sweet resignation and a fine contempt for politics of all kinds that leaves one with some hope for humanity, even for refugees." Harold Strauss

+ — N Y Times p7 O 8 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:101 O 14 '39 50w

"This story of the European colony in Alexandria is very much in the vein of Miss Földes's prize winner, 'The Street of the Fishing Cat.' It is slight even while it is safely this side of trifling; it has the color of strange streets and skies, of costumes and characters drawn from every capital of Europe. And it has a kind of swift, easy charm, together with brisk, feverishly witty dialogue." N. L. R.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 O 21 '39 200w

"The charm and interest of this lively and clever novel comes very largely from its Central European point of view, as well as from its deft dialogues and its vivacious sketches of many different types."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 27 '39 360w.

FOLEY, HELEN. Poems. 146p $2 Macmillan [6s Dent]

821 39-16252

Posthumous volume of poetry, containing a biographical introduction, juvenile verses, collected poems, and extracts from letters. The author died in 1937 at Geneva, where for fifteen years she had worked as an indexer in the secretariat of the League of Nations.

Reviewed by H. G. Leach
Forum 102:48 Jl '39

Reviewed by John Hayward
Spec 161:1010 D 9 '38 140w

"In her later verse she had begun to develop her art more consciously, cultivating the pleasure she got from certain vowel or consonant combinations. But the artist in her was still the child, if more aware of its purpose as it listened for the music of that other place which was nearer the heart of being. Experience never destroyed her faith in the realm of innocence."

Times [London] Lit Sup p680 O 22 '38 500w

FOLEY, MARY C., and GENTLES, RUTH G. Post haste; a manual for modern letter writers; il. by Chichi Lasley. 275p $1.12 Harper

651.7 Commercial correspondence. Letter writing (W) 39-27315

"This volume is a discussion of the form, content, and tone of modern letters; sample letters have been included that are real and effective." (Foreword) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:285 My 1 '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

FOLLETT, MRS MURIEL. New England year; a journal of Vermont farm life; wood engravings by Herbert Waters. 222p $2.50 Daye

630.1 Farm life. Vermont—Social life and customs (W) 39-27981

Day-by-day record of life on a Vermont farm, thruout a whole year. It is a plain chronicle of simple every-day affairs, as seen by people who have lived on the same farm for generations.

Booklist 36:128 D 1 '39

"Between the covers of this one small book abides the authenticity that you are likely to find in a whole five-foot shelf of the most recent farm novels—and more simple felicity of narrative than in at least four feet nine inches thereof. . . This is a book of obvious longevity. It is one of the rare and fortunate whose value must wax with the years. It fixes, clear and truly colored, the life of a time and a place and a very special people." F. F. Van de Water

+ Books p1 D 17 '39 550w

"Mrs. Follett's is a highly satisfactory life, but her book is too honest to rouse a sentimental nostalgia for winter farming in urban bosoms. . . Three pounds of closely printed 'epic' could not give us more of the details of the life which Mrs. Follett knows nor be a tithe so convincing." Moses Hadas

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '39 220w

"Mrs. Follett's book makes one glad that there are such American farmers as she has described. With small attempt at adornment it offers an intelligent report of worthy living." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 3 '40 550w

"Somebody whose name deserves to be writ in letters of gold told this Vermont farm wife that she would probably interest a public of some amplitude if she presented readers with the simple and direct statement of what it is like to run a farmhouse for a year. This book is that simple and direct statement, with only a slight varnish of phrase before publication." F. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 30 '39 200w

FONSECA, ESTHER HAVEN. The affair at the Grotto. 278p $2 Doubleday

39-3179

Detective story.

"The best way to take this is to relax and gasp at the diabolical events when they happen, as happen they do. It's no great shakes as art, but exciting at times." Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ja 22 '39 170w

FONSECA, E. H.—Continued

"The author is good at weaving a mystery plot, but not so good at unraveling it." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 22 '39 120w

"Plenty of atmosphere, nice characterization and lots of action. Enough for you?"

+ New Yorker 14:60 Ja 28 '39 30w

"A bit top-heavy with plot, but people are odd and interesting winter scenery invigorating, and finish both surprising and logical. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 21 '39 40w

FONTENELLE, RENE. His Holiness Pope Pius XI; tr. by M. E. Fowler. 278p $3.50 Sherwood press [10s 6d; 5s Methuen]

B or 92 Pius XI (Achille Ratti) pope

[39-2788]

"[This] is in a fragmentary way an intimate biography with just enough incident from Achille Ratti's early life to limn the man, his talents, his temperament, his priestly zeal. The Pontificate itself is presented topically and the author discusses briefly the historic encyclicals, the concordats, the remarkable mission developments, the steps toward the reunion of Christendom, Catholic Action, the conflicts with Action Française, atheistic communism, Italian fascism and German nazism, and other developments crowded into the past seventeen years." (Commonweal) Index.

"Monsignor Fontenelle writes with a warm Gallic enthusiasm which is sure to enlist the reader of good-will. It is unfortunate, however, that he seems so preoccupied with the aims and efforts of the Holy Father that he neglects the apathy and opposition that Pius encountered in the world. . . Except for this inadequacy in dealing with a problem that apparently did not occur to him Monsignor Fontenelle bears eloquent witness to the virtues and accomplishments of Pius XI." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ — Commonweal 29:554 Mr 10 '39 300w

Foreign Affairs 17:816 Jl '39 20w

"Monsignor Fontenelle is a Canon of St. Peter's, and thus admirably placed for observing the purely ceremonial side of the Papacy; and readers whose interest is in knowing exactly what the Pope wore on this or that ritual occasion or in the catalogue of commemorative tablets that now mark the spots where Achille Ratti passed the various stages of his early life will find that he seldom fails them. But for an account of the work of the most exalted dignitary on earth, who has made efforts to justify his claim to guide the entire human race through some of the most critical years in history, the book is jejune and trivial in the extreme."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p328 My 14 '38 440w

FOOTE, ALVIN. Poems. 78p $1.50 Caxton printers

811 39-2556

Collection of poems by a Colorado post-office clerk.

"To say that Alvin Foote has set out honestly and accurately to present this world he sees, and that he has largely succeeded, is to say that any one interested in modern verse ought to read his book. His instinct for language and movement is sound; his verse is ominous as well as descriptive, and he is willing to compose. The sense of composition and technical responsibility in these poems constitutes their superiority to most of the recent proletarian verse in this country." John Craft

+ Books p10 My 28 '39 120w

"Economical, yes almost parsimonious with words is Mr. Foote, and in this lies his strength and his weakness. Pictures can be drawn with a few clear-cut lines, but social ideas require a more liberal use of language—and so as an etcher of pictures he succeeds, as a social reformer he is unconvincing." M. G. Cohen

— + Canadian Forum 18:387 Mr '39 240w

Forum 101:240 Ap '39 20w

"Obviously an intelligent writer, Foote often condenses so much that I cannot follow him. He is fond of a sort of nuance that seems to me flat, of the rhetorical question, of occasional startling statement." W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 110w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Charles' Gift; salute to a Maryland house of 1650. 290p il $3 Harper

975.244 Charles' Gift, Calvert county, Maryland. Maryland—Social life and customs

39-24717

Some thirty years ago the author, then a beginning novelist, wandered down into Maryland, found a place he liked, bought it, and still lives there. Charles' Gift is an old house, built in 1650, and it has been added to and made to fit requirements of modern living, but never "restored." The author's account of his years of residence is filled with amusing anecdotes about the natives, both black and white.

Booklist 36:212 F 1 '40

"A book like the house of 1939—nothing showy, nothing ostentatious, or startling, but characterized by an insidious beauty that creeps upon you softly and smoothly, and holds you in thrall before you realize that it is there." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p6 O 15 '39 800w

"The book is an uneven and straggling sort of miscellany. But it shows an old frequenter of The Players in Gramercy Park caught in the net of the Chesapeake Tidewater, and netting, in his turn, the Tidewater lot on the all's fish that gets into this net principle. A little while ago Mr. Footner made a good haul of New York stuff, by going after the city of his youth with the eyes that living among the Marylanders had given him. And this is a good haul, too." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p23 N 19 '39 1100w

"If you enjoy old houses, probably your book."

New Yorker 15:104 O 14 '39 30w

"The book has many good points, but to one mind its best is its unabashed sectionalism. Under the firm flesh of narrative and description, a heart is beating with local pride. And that makes a very good reason why 'Charles' Gift' is so thoroughly alive." H. A.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 O 7 '39 300w

"Mr. Footner writes with the conviction and apparently effortless fluency which only a great knowledge of and love for one's subject will give. He loves his house and writes for those who can appreciate it with him, and he has given to his book some of the spacious and comfortably settled feeling which Charles' Gift itself must possess."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 13 '40 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:214 D '39

FOOTNER, HULBERT. The murder that had everything. 307p $2 Harper

39-17236

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 Jl 23 '39 220w

"It was exciting while it lasted, and it certainly kept me on tenterhooks." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 130w

"It is not a pleasant story, nor a convincing one, but it has all the mystery and excitement one could desire." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p12 Ag 6 '39 180w

"Merits; humor and action. Fault: not too plausible."
+ — Time 34:63 Ag 7 '39 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 23 '39 130w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. The nation's missing guest. 270p $2 Harper
(W) 39-720
Detective story.

"A sinister and easily readable romance with plenty of challenges to the armchair sleuths." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Ja 8 '39 250w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 90w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Ja 15 '39 180w

"Palace intrigues of vengeful Orientals on American soil, vanishing jewels, pleasant romances, action to burn, acceptable sleuthing. Agreeable."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 21 '39 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p125 F 25 '39 60w

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS A. T. MCGRATH). These are real people. 316p $3 Dutton [15s Jenkins]
910 Voyages and travels. Adventure and adventurers (W) 39-2403

True stories of real people,most of them men, whom the author has met in her years of travel in distant lands. Some of the stories are: that of the French idealist in Sumatra who committed murder because he hated all things ugly; the story of the "Zebra man," a convict who escaped from Devil's Island; the Mexican priest who felt compelled to kill a man, and then delivered himself up to be crucified by the Penitentes; and the Northampton bootmaker whose love story began in Ecuador and ended in Central Asia.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 13:440 F '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p10 Ja 22 '39 300w
Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 320w
Reviewed by Christopher St John
New Statesman & Nation 14:sup752 N 6 '37 100w

"Rosita Forbes sees things that travelers cannot see easily and are not expected to see at all. She has an intense and imaginative curiosity about her fellow-humans, makes friends with them everywhere, shares the most appalling living conditions with a gay heart. And she writes of all this with cleverness and a vibrant personal quality of vividness and wit. By and large, this collection of far-flung adventure tales is exceedingly interesting. It is a book which probably no one but Rosita Forbes would have been able to write." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 29 '39 950w

"You scarcely need the assurance that these are real people, so clearly and credibly are they shown, despite their trappings of fiction. Nor need you doubt that the scenes are actual, for Miss Forbes is one of the most accurate, and incidentally most entertaining, of explorers." Hassoldt Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ja 21 '39 440w

"All the instances are in one way or another abnormal from the usual in psychology and experience, but it may happen that few readers will find them as incredibly strange as Miss Forbes assumes."
Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 17 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p855 N 6 '37 330w

FORBUSH, EDWARD HOWE. Natural history of the birds of eastern and central North America; rev. and abridged with the addition of more than one hundred species, by John Bichard May; il. in col. by Louis Agassiz Fuertes, Allan Brooks and Roger Tory Peterson. 554p $4.95 Houghton
598.2 Birds 39-28977

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts issued in 1925, and in subsequent years, Birds of Massachusetts and Other New England States, by Edward Howe Forbush, consisting of three volumes. Some of these volumes are now unobtainable. Portraits of New England Birds, published by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1932, is out of print. The Massachusetts Audubon Society promoted legislation making both these publications possible." (Pref) In 1936 the Massachusetts Audubon society initiated further legislation for the present abridgment. "Dr. John B. May, who assisted in the preparation of the original three-volume work, has included in the present book more than one hundred additional species, thus extending the range to cover North America east of the ninety-fifth meridian. There are four new color plates by Mr. Peterson." (Pref) Plates are grouped at end of book. Indexes of common and scientific names.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

"Dr. May has carried out the work admirably. The text is necessarily shortened and changed somewhat by cutting purely local observations to conform to the wider field now covered, but Dr. May has largely retained Mr. Forbush's material, written in his characteristic, quaint, earnest style which gives power and charm to his writing. All the colored plates of the former volumes are included, full-size, and are placed conveniently at the end of the book; they show no deterioration from re-use, and four new plates by Roger T. Peterson are added. The book is printed beautifully, in type far easier to read than that of the earlier volumes." W. M. Tyler
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 240w

"That bird artistry has gone far since the days of Audubon and Wilson could have no better proof than is found in these fascinating illustrations. The portraiture is nearly perfect and the color production is true to nature. The illustrations alone would insure great popularity for the volume." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 13 '40 450w
Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p23 Ja 14 '40 80w

"Rarely does a mere revision of an earlier book, however drastic, have as much importance in its own right as an entirely new publication. That is the case here, however, and to such an extent that it is doubtful whether anyone at all seriously interested in the birds of Eastern North America, even though he possessed the original volumes, would willingly be without a copy of this one." L. J. Halle, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ja 6 '40 600w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 360w
Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

FORD, BRYANT. Show business. 210p $2 Dodd 39-20771
Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 Ag 27 '39 200w

"A fast-moving case, with plenty of conversation, it is marked by a breezy romance and with a detective named Potts, who can dissemble with the best." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 2 '39 70w

"The author of this book appears to know his way about Broadway and the theatrical world, and he has turned out a story that has action and mystery enough for anybody's money." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 S 3 '39 200w

FORD, BRYANT—Continued

"One of the best mysteries of the hardboiled school."

+ New Yorker 15:64 S 2 '39 70w

"Starts well enough and background lugs in, for color, many 'main-stem' notables, but conclusion leaves much to be desired."

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 2 '39 40w

FORD, GUY STANTON, ed. Dictatorship in the modern world. 2d ed rev and enl 362p $3.50; text ed $2.75 Univ. of Minn. [15s Oxford]

321.6 Dictators. Fascism. Europe—Politics. Latin America—Politics. Democracy

(W) 39-27488

New edition of a symposium first published in 1935 (Book Review Digest, 1935). Several new articles have been added and old material has been extensively revised. Contents: The pattern of dictatorship, by Max Lerner; The Mussolini regime, by H. R. Spencer; The origins of dictatorship in Germany, by H. C. Deutsch; The national socialist dictatorship, by H. C. Deutsch; Between democracy and fascism, by Hans Kohn; The Soviet Union: a working class dictatorship, by J. N. Hazard; Kamalist Turkey, by T. K. Ford; Dictatorship in the Far East, by H. S. Quigley; Dictatorships in Latin America, by J. F. Rippy; The economics of fascism, by C. B. Hoover; Propaganda and dictatorship, by P. H. Odegard; Women under the dictatorships, by Mildred Adams; The political lieutenants in modern dictatorship, by Sigmund Neumann; The prospects for democracy, by D. W. Brogan; The chronology of dictatorship in post-War Europe, by J. R. Starr.

"The fact that so many books on particular dictatorships have appeared in the past few years makes this new edition the more valuable. Few new facts appear, but the striving toward dispassionate interpretation of extremely complex phenomena sets this book apart from the flood of literature on the subject. That the book is written by a group of convinced democrats is obvious; but it is equally obvious that the whole group regards a genuine and widespread understanding of the forces that destroy democracy as being the first essential for the maintenance of democratic values." J. D. Lewis

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:887 O '39 600w

Booklist 35:348 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by E. S. Bates

Books p22 N 5 '39 300w

Cath World 150:246 N '39 140w

"For a general handbook, it would be difficult to find a better book than this."

+ Christian Century 56:709 My 31 '39 90w

"This is a provocative and intelligent book; an unusual and dispassionate survey of the prime problem of modern history." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 30:301 Jl 14 '39 650w

Foreign Affairs 18:158 O '39 20w

New Repub 99:371 Ag 2 '39 50w

"The importance of such a book as this can scarcely be overestimated at the present time." K. W.

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 6 '39 350w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper

Sat R of Lit 20:16 Jl 8 '39 200w

"All in all, the book is a delightful success. The reviewer can think of no better introductory and readable work to this vast and complex subject." J. S. Roucek

+ Social Educ 3:508 O '39 550w

"The contributors maintain a high level of quality in their writing and do not indulge in unduly opinionative statements of their own likes and dislikes. As a result the book affords a convenient, readable and reliable survey of its subject. It would be difficult to find a better starting-place for readers who wish to know about the rise of dictator governments in the world today." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 650w

Wis Lib Bul 35:140 Jl '39

FORD, JAMES. Social deviation. 602p $3.50 Macmillan

309.173 Social problems 39-9812

"A handbook of social pathology and its social control. After introductory definitions, summaries of methods and findings of social surveys, and general consideration of social objectives and optimum standards, the author discusses personal handicaps, both physical and mental, poverty and economic hazards, the social pathology of family and group life, and the principles of social reorganization." (J Home Econ) Indexes.

Reviewed by S. A. Queen

Am J Soc 45:486 N '39 300w

"The book is equipped with such good pedagogical devices as questions for discussion or examination, problems for individual study and suggestions for supplementary readings at the end of each chapter. It is notably well indexed. Perhaps the briefest characterization of the work would call it safe, sane, objective, and rather colorless." A. J. Todd

+ — Am Soc R 4:763 O '39 420w

Reviewed by W. C. Reckless

Ann Am Acad 206:214 N '39 450w

J Home Econ 31:584 O '39 80w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Social Educ 4:144 F '40 250w

Reviewed by T. G. Standing

Social Studies 30:377 D '39 350w

FORD, JAMES W. The Negro and the democratic front; introd. by A. W. Berry. 222p $2 Int. pubs.

325.26 Negroes. Communism—U.S. 38-39079

Collection of articles and addresses by a Negro who was candidate for vice-president of the United States on the Communist ticket in 1932 and 1936. In them he states and analyzes some of the problems of his race and his party's suggestions for their solution. Index.

"There is little that is violently revolutionary in Ford's writings. He does not call for the seizure of power by force. However, in a subtle fashion he has reminded negro audiences that they have a revolutionary tradition—that of Cato, Gabriel, Denmark Vesey, and Nat Turner." H. F. Gosnell

Am Pol Sci R 33:334 Ap '39 300w

"It is unfortunate that many of the articles which appeared in Communist organs and many of the speeches made before Communist bodies are given without the reactions which either motivated or followed their presentation, for taken out of their context in this manner they lose their significance for the student interested in social movements." C. S. Johnson

Am Soc R 4:443 Je '39 200w

"Although the collection is necessarily heterogeneous and sometimes repetitious, the book has much value for those who are interested, from any point of view, in Communism, in the Negro, or in 'America's number one problem,' the South." Granville Hicks

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 180w

Foreign Affairs 17:634 Ap '39 30w

FORD, JANET. Romantic interlude. (Gramercy publication) 256p $2 Phoenix

39-11571

"Here is a [story] about a girl engaged to a dull young man and attached to a dull old job. She decides to get away from both and have a holiday in a seaside hotel all by herself. Mistaken for an heiress, she is ushered into the deluxe suite which the heiress has reserved and has an exciting time until she is found out." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 Je 4 '39 70w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 100w

FORD, LAUREN, il. The ageless story; with its antiphons. unp $2.50 Dodd

232.9 Jesus Christ—Art. Bible. New Testament—Selections

The book "consists of twelve paintings reproduced in four colors and gold, which tell the story of the Christ Child, set in a contemporary background of a farm (the author's own) in Connecticut. The text that follows is taken from the King James version of the Gospel of St. Luke. On the left-hand pages are illuminated Gregorian chants, the words in Latin, the English words being given beneath the corresponding picture." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p10 N 12 '39 350w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 100w
Cath World 150:373 D '39 50w
Christian Century 57:50 Ja 10 '40 210w

"Exquisite paintings in colors and gold."
+ Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 30w

"A book which will mightily please some and irritate others. Look before you leap. I like it fine, but I know that to a lot of people Bethlehem, Conn., is not Bethlehem, Palest." H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 31:132 D 1 '39 30w

"Only intimate association will prove whether children will take to their hearts completely, Lauren Ford's beautiful and arresting treatment of the boyhood of Jesus, but they will be the richer for knowing so lovely a book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:50 Ja '40 170w

"The distinctive feature of the book is the fact that the artist has pictured the story against a background of the Connecticut countryside, its farmhouses and churches. . . Whether or not the result is successful or confusing to a child already familiar with Biblical pictures, each reader will have to decide for himself. Recommended for large children's rooms and distinctive book collections." E. G. Mullan
Library J 65:78 Ja 15 '40 140w

"The Christmas story comes in a lovely book this year. . . The book is not modern; it is peculiarly medieval. And it must be said that some of the antiphons commemorate feasts found in no Anglican calendars except those of a few Anglo-Catholic parishes. Children will love the book."
+ Living Church 101:8 D 6 '39 130w

"No other theme out of which a book for children can be made is so bound to call forth conflicting opinions as any representation of the life of Christ, and when, as in this instance, the presentation is unusual and unconventional, the possibility of disagreement is, of course, enormously increased. . . To the adult it is interesting, and to some adults touching, to see the Bible projected against a modern background, but it is at least an open question whether boys and girls will not be confused by it, and whether they will not find the single-mindedness of pictures that are kept in one country, in one period and one spirit, infinitely more satisfying." A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p10 D 3 '39 750w

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FORD, RICHARD. Children in the cinema. 232p il $2 W. Salloch, 725 Greenwich st, N.Y. [7s 6d Allen, G]

791.4 Moving pictures. Child study. Moving pictures—Moral and religious aspects [39-31637]

"An English publication which uses the practical and not the academic approach. The results are interesting and might well apply in general to the existing state of the movies in this country. The author advocates organizing children's matinees and children's clubs for matinee attendance, analyzes children's film interests, and concludes that the movies are not directly responsible for juvenile delinquency. Contains a short bibliography of books and pamphlets published in the United States." Booklist

Booklist 36:172 Ja 1 '40

"Mr. Ford has provided a sane introduction to a vital subject. A more detailed study would be welcome." Philip Toynbee
+ Spec 163:384 S 15 '39 850w

"Unlike many of the anxious educationists who have written about the pernicious effects on children of visits to the cinema, the author of this book has had two years' experience of organizing children's performances, watching the behaviour and hearing the opinions of young audiences. He is a reliable and objective witness and admits that there are very few films for adults which children really enjoy. . . This book is full of interesting sidelights on the use made by children of their leisure, and the statistics given are full and reliable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p443 Jl 22 '39 240w

FOREMAN, GRANT. Marcy and the gold seekers; the journal of Captain R. B. Marcy, with an account of the gold rush over the southern route. 433p il map $3 Univ. of Okla. press

917.8 Overland journeys to the Pacific. Southwest—Description and travel. Marcy, Randolph Barnes. California—Gold discoveries 39-8465

"Popular conception usually sends the forty-niners to California by way of Salt Lake or over the Sante Fe Trail. In this profusely annotated edition of Captain Randolph B. Marcy's report concerning his experiences while conducting a party of emigrants from Fort Smith to Santa Fe, Grant Foreman shows that the southern route through present Oklahoma and Texas was also traveled by large parties of gold-seekers." (Boston Transcript) Bibliography. Index.

"With a couple of hundred books on my shelves dealing with the winning of the West, I find this one of the ablest, most interesting, most amusing and most excellently contrived which has been published for years." C. J. Finger
+ Books p3 Jl 9 '39 750w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 80w

"Captain Marcy was a gifted explorer, and he had a vivid and readable narrative and descriptive style. . . Mr. Foreman's editorial apparatus is, naturally, exhaustive and accurate. If the book has a fault, it is that too faithful attention is paid to details. It is an indispensable item for the student of southwestern history; and it should prove a gold mine for novelists, scenario writers and short story writers. There is even a full-blown, though tragic romance, ready made—that of the beautiful Mary Conway, of Little Rock, and young Lieutenant Harrison." K. C. K.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 20 '39 600w

"Source material, raw journals, and contemporary notices out of which history is built, can be made or ruined by its selection or handling; here the treatment heightens the inherent values, and makes for easy reading as well as information." O. LaF.

FOREMAN, GRANT—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Je 17 '39 220w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Captain Horatio Hornblower; with drawings by N. C. Wyeth. 3v in 1 662p $2.75 Little

(W) 39-27309

Omnibus volume which includes Beat to Quarters, Ship of the Line (Book Review Digest, 1937, 1938) and Flying Colours, all of which are also published separately.

Booklist 35:290 My 1 '39

"This is great stuff. Mr. Forester, allowing for the difference of the times, is of the school of Conan Doyle when he wrote his Napoleonic and other historical tales. Of the two Mr. Forester is the more skilled technically. He depicts finer shades of character. . . Mr. Forester's achievement, in making Hornblower, Bush and Brown really live, is due to his vigorous comprehension of the English character. He is not preoccupied with social theses. He writes as if nobody had ever written a tale before. . . Mr. Forester has made a rattling good finish for his three-volume novel. Nothing mawkish, mind you." William McFee
+ Books p4 Ap 30 '39 1000w

"Forester has a clear, rapid style, an unrivaled gift for portraying the excitement of sheer action, reasonable respect for historical accuracy, and by no means least, an unobtrusive but wholly reliable knowledge of ships and the sea." E. B. Schriftgiesser
+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

"Although some of Hornblower's mannerisms and obsessions are too insistently pointed up, he truly dominates the book and the reader's sympathies. But the bare bones of history often emerge to confuse fiction. . . Outside of these things and the rather stiff handling of romance in one or two spots, there is no fault to be found. The jingoism is only natural to the period, and the period is so naturally filled in that reading is not only a pleasure but a lesson in human history and an implicit statement of the inhumanity, hercism and criminal waste of nations at war." Otis Ferguson
+ — New Repub 99:78 My 24 '39 500w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:898 D 16 '39 220w

"As pure narrative, it's all tops. Mr. Forester has much more to offer than pure narrative. In the first place, aside from its conventional up-England-down-with-the-Corsican-tyrant imperialist overtones, this book offers as candid a picture of life in the British Navy one hundred and twenty-five years ago as the most avid realist could demand. . . In the second place, Forester seems to lay bare, as few other writers have done, the actual workings of a first-rate naval mind." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:120 Ap 29 '39 1050w

Reviewed by K. P. Kempton
Sat R of Lit 20:5 Ap 29 '39 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 120w

Time 33:87 My 1 '39 270w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Flying colours. 294p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Joseph, M]

(W) 38-29010

Third book in a series which includes Beat to Quarters and Ship of the Line (Book Review Digest, 1937, 1938). Captain Hornblower, his crippled first mate, Bush, and his servant, Brown, escape from their escort on the way to Paris to be tried for piracy. The story is of their recapture of an English vessel and return to England, where they are covered with honors.

Booklist 35:290 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p7 N 1 '38 180w

"These historical sea tales of Forester's are in a class by themselves. The fine forthright prose, the careful antiquarianism, the unusual character interpretation, the thoughtful study of the rottenness and the heroism, the agony and the glory, of naval warfare of the era, all lend maturity and significance to these three rousing novels. Thorough, painstaking and convincing though the tales are, these qualities serve only to enhance the drama and give wings to the exciting story." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 1 '39 700w

Pratt p28 autumn '39

"What compels the reader to keep reading is the cumulative impact on Hornblower of himself and of other men. And the grand climax is his emergence as a living man. One phase alone is disappointing. There is sex in the book, as by Forester's realistic creed there would have to be. . . It was the highest hurdle, apparently. Forester clears it, not cleanly or honestly, but looking all elbows and knees, by old-style cliché." K. P. Kempton
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 Ap 29 '39 550w

Reviewed by Forrest Reid
Spec 161:824 N 11 '38 210w

" 'Flying Colours' lacks some of the breathless pace of the two previous books, but it remains a worthy successor to them."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 650w

"Whatever the major pleasures of fiction may be, the minor pleasures rest largely upon the ability to visualize persons and places, and for this there are few storytellers who can be so confidently trusted to do the right thing as Mr. Forester. His is the purest and most satisfying gift of narrative, which is the visual gift. . . [This] is a brave and colourful performance."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p707 N 5 '38 800w

FORMAN, HENRY CHANDLEE. Jamestown and St Mary's, buried cities of romance. 355p il maps $4.50 Johns Hopkins [21s Oxford]

975.5425 Jamestown, Virginia. St Mary's City, Maryland 38-37533

"An archaeologist in this book tells the story of two historic New World settlements—the manner of living, architecture, tools, art; in short, their culture and civilization. All that remains of old Jamestown today are the ruins of a church tower; all that remains of St. Mary's are the frames of a few buildings. The other historic landmarks have settled into the soil. It is from these ruins that Mr. Forman has drawn his material." Current Hist

"This volume represents the careful investigation of an archaeologist and historian. It is profusely illustrated, attractively presented, and leaves, altogether, a fine impression." C. H. Karraker
+ Am Hist R 44:1008 Jl '39 170w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:9 Ap '39 200w

FORSYTHE, CHARLES EDWARD. The administration of high school athletics. 413p il $2 Prentice-Hall

371.732 School athletics 39-27245

"This book was prepared to aid two groups of people: first, those who expect to become teachers, supervisors, or directors of physical education and athletics; and, second, those who are already in the field of administering high school athletic programs. The reader will not find this a treatise on coaching procedures. It it assumed that the coach comes to his job with both technical knowledge and playing experience. The purpose, rather, is to offer practical suggestions and guides for managing the business affairs of an athletic program, thus allowing the coach to devote major attention to the boys whom he coaches. Items discussed deal with national, state, and local policies concerning athletic eligibility, contest management, equipment, awards, finances, budgets, safety, layout and maintenance of facilities, intramurals, girls' athletics, junior high school athletics, and current athletic trends." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This text has a great deal of practical information valuable to those who, either from the health viewpoint or from that of education, have to do with administration at the secondary school level. This is the sort of text that is badly needed in the field of secondary school physical education." C. H. Keene

+ Am J Pub Health 29:1355 D '39 320w

Booklist 35:264 Ap 15 '39

"Forsythe's book is sound in its viewpoint, clearly written, well organized, and thoroughly documented. It has, apparently, grown out of a wealth of personal experience. . . The book will take its place immediately among the best works in this field and should be in the hands of all who in any way share responsibility for the organization and the administration of the high-school athletic program." P. R. Brammell & L. A. Garrison

+ School R 47:791 D '39 650w

FOSDICK, DOROTHY. What is liberty? a study in political theory. 194p $2 Harper

323.44 Liberty 39-5860

"It is the purpose of this study to present the several meanings now attached to the term liberty and to analyze the effect of their acceptance on political thought and practice. On the basis of this discussion a concluding chapter offers, not indeed an attempted solution to the problem of liberty, but a restatement of its nature." (Introd) The author, daughter of Harry Emerson Fosdick, is an instructor of sociology at Smith college. Index.

"The book presents an amazing number of important problems, opens up new vistas, and even attempts a thoughtful restatement of the very nature of liberty today. The author's sound criticism of liberty in democracy, fascism, and national socialism, her right evaluation of Karl Marx's concept, the well-pointed analysis of the relations of liberty and law, the clear differentiation between cultural and economic liberties indicating their profound tensions in our modern world, to mention only a few of her valuable suggestions, show the many-sidedness of this study which reflects the open mind of a young scholar." Sigmund Neumann

+ Ann Am Acad 204:178 Jl '39 550w

"This little book ought to be in the library of every American. It is the clearest, simplest, most cogent analysis of the confused and confusing concept of liberty that I have ever seen. . . Miss Fosdick has distilled the essence of a thousand books in her lucid analysis which succeeds in isolating a central core of meaning in all the varied interpretations." E. S. Bates

+ Books p5 My 7 '39 1100w

Reviewed by C. W. Gilkey
Christian Century 56:949 Ag 2 '39 650w

"A thoughtful and scholarly book." C. L. Willard, Jr.

+ Churchman 153:15 My 15 '39 220w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 49:502 Jl '39 170w
Foreign Affairs 18:158 O '39 10w

Reviewed by Theodore Achtermann
N Y Times p3 Jl 9 '39 600w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 28:452 Jl '39 1100w

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. A guide to understanding the Bible. 348p $3; lea $5 Harper [10s 6d Student]

220 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. (W) 38-31237

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"Dr. Fosdick's introduction tells everything that the reader should know in preparation for this book. The job that he laid out for himself he has done superbly." A. C. Dieffenbach

+ Books p13 F 5 '39 750w

"It would be easy to apply to this book almost all the laudatory adjectives that are relevant to religious books. I will spare the adjectives and strongly recommend the book. A wide reading of it will give Christians and Jews a more intelligent understanding of their Scriptures and their religion." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:217 F 15 '39 800w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p14 My 6 '39 500w

Reviewed by B. S. Easton
Living Church 101:10 Ag 2 '39 600w

"Unlike his earlier books, this one is not popularly written. Nor does it make any attempt to preach or persuade. It is a serious and dispassionate historical study, thorough in method, solid in result. It is for the student rather than for the passer-by. It assumes that the student knows something about the Bible already and wants to know more about its dominant ideas, whence they came and whither they lead." Fred Eastman

+ Survey G 28:297 Ap '39 220w

Wis Lib Bul 35:60 Ap '39

FOSTER, BENNETT. Rider of the Rifle Rock. 279p $2 Morrow

39-23530

Western story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

"Mr. Foster as usual, has turned out a most agreeable Western, full of action, cows, and other natives." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 S 10 '39 90w

"This is the story of the comeback of a crippled cowboy and it is distinctly different from the ordinary run of Western cowboy yarns. . . It's a good story, expertly and excellently told—in fact, the best (and the best written) of the seven Western tales that Bennett Foster has published thus far." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p27 S 10 '39 200w

FOSTER, FRANK HUGH. The modern movement in American theology. 219p $1.75 Revell

230.0973 Theology. Modernism 39-14095

"Sketches in the history of American Protestant thought from the Civil war to the World war." (Subtitle) The book takes up the story about where the author's earlier volume, Genetic History of the New England Theology (Book Review Digest, 1907), left off, and is based on lectures delivered at Andover Newton Theological school in 1934. Index of authorities cited.

Am Hist R 45:480 Ja '40 40w

"This able and interesting volume . . . is a valuable contribution to the history of American theology. We are indebted to Dr. John Gardner Greene of Boston for securing Professor Foster's consent to the publication of the lectures and supervising their publication." J. W. Buckham

+ Christian Century 56:974 Ag 9 '39 600w

"Two regulative ideas determined, in the main, the organization of the materials and the selection of the writers whose works were analyzed. The first is the idea of evolution. . .

FOSTER, F. H.—Continued
The second regulative idea was [Foster's] belief that the Congregational church provided the leadership in the slow growth of cordial relationships between scientific and religious thinkers. With the first of these ideas, one may not wish to quarrel; with the second, the case is not so clear. Nevertheless, this is perhaps the best volume available for the subject discussed and the men involved." W. H. Bernhardt
+ — J Religion 20:99 Ja '40 130w

FOSTER, MRS HANNAH (WEBSTER). The coquette; or, The history of Eliza Wharton; reproduced from the original ed. of 1797; with an introd. by Herbert Ross Brown. (Facsimile text soc. Publication) 262p $2.60 Columbia univ. press
39-6806

"One of the earliest American novels—'The Coquette; or The History of Eliza Wharton' is made available in a facsimile edition. . . The novel was first published in Boston in 1797 and reprinted many times in the first half of the 19th century. The present edition, the first since 1874, makes the book available exactly as it originally appeared, and contains an introduction by Herbert Ross Brown of Bowdoin college." Springf'd Republican

"This is sentimental fiction at its most moralistic, unrealistic and weepy stage. But it has the virtues, as well as the defects, of its qualities. The stilted style makes even its most pathetic passages somewhat amusing, but it has a core of solid merit. And the fact that this forgotten classic is said to have rivaled the Waverley novels in popularity is something. This facsimile of the first edition . . . retains the antique flavor needed for its appreciation."
+ Christian Century 56:323 Mr 8 '39 230w

"It is good to have a convenient reprint of the best American novel before Charles Brockden Brown and the most important example of the epistolary fiction which followed in the wake of Richardson's sentimental tales of seduction, in this country. . . Its present emergence from security should call attention to its just merits in the portrayal of a real heroine and her seducer, the maintaining of the thread of story, and the comparatively deft handling of the letter form, Professor Brown's introduction excellently furnishes the desired minimum of external information." M. E.
+ New Eng Q 12:613 S '39 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 480w

FOSTER, MRS JOSEPHINE (CURTIS), and MATTSON, MARION LOUISE. Nursery-school education. 361p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton-Century
372.2412 Nursery schools (W) 39-5017
Survey of nursery school procedure, including study of the teaching of language and music, the place of story telling and picture books in the daily program, and necessity for free play. Parent education and relation of the nursery school to the community play a large part in the book. Bibliography. Index.

"For those who wish information themselves on the subject of the nursery school, or for persons such as doctors, nurses, social workers, or teachers who need to instruct others, scarcely a book could be found with more helpful specific information and suggestions. It is written from a scientific point of view, yet is most practical because backed by years of actual experience which the authors have spent working in the field of nursery school education." Ethel Gordon
+ Am J Pub Health 29:1359 D '39 200w
Booklist 35:343 Je 15 '39
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 1 '39 20w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39
J Home Econ 31:480 S '39 80w

FOSTER, WILLIAM ZEBULON. Pages from a worker's life. 314p $2.50 Int. pubs.
B or 92 Communism—U.S. Trade unions—U.S. 39-12596

"The chairman of the Communist Party of the United States in a reminiscent vein about his fifty years as a worker, labor leader and revolutionary. A simply written, penetrating story that epitomizes the hopes and illusions, the struggles and exploitation of the American working class." New Repub

"As a literary critic, I cannot help thinking how many proletarian novels might have come out of the experiences recorded in this book. Foster has seen so much, done so much, been so much. It is a modest book, characteristically impersonal, but you do feel the quality of the man. . . Foster's enforced retirement from the more active forms of service, depriving the Communist party of his great organizational talents, has not been an unmixed evil, for it has given us this book." Granville Hicks
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 500w
New Repub 98:388 My 3 '39 40w

"The book is readable for its humanness, for even communists—though some may doubt it—are that way." R. G. F.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 My 20 '39 210w

"One does not get from this objective record the stature of the man. The very selflessness of the story robs it of the quality of autobiography. It is a record that, save for Foster's leadership in the trade union movement and the Communist Party, could be duplicated by a thousand other American workers. But it is a story worth telling, just because it is rarely told." R. N. Baldwin
+ Survey G 28:503 Ag '39 260w

FOUGNER, SELMER. Dining out in New York and what to order. 120p $1 Kinsey 647.95 New York (city)—Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc. 39-10104
Lists and describes a selection of New York City restaurants, with a few outside of New York. Specialties, prices, and wines are included for each. The arrangement is by location. Indexed. Includes a list of dishes recommended by the author.

Books p8 Jl 9 '39 90w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"On a rather snooty plane the Fougner book is an efficient gastronomic guide, but neglects some of the less obvious delicacies." Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 20:16 Ap 29 '39 190w

"A little book that visitors to the metropolis can use to good advantage. . . Mr Fougner is editor of the daily column, 'Along the Wine Trail,' in the New York Sun and is an expert sampler of cuisines, as well as of wines. . . In one or two places the characterizations read slightly like blurbs. But this is the exception. The difficulties of a book of this kind are well surmounted, and Mr Fougner retains his discrimination without being too high-hat."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 20 '39 250w

FOWLER, GENE. Illusion in Java. 303p $2.50 Random house
39-30377
A romantic tale of Java fifty years ago. The hero is Ajoks, poet-musician, to the elders of the village a pernicious influence, to the young, a marvelous person. The story tells of Ajoks' love for the money-lender's daughter, of his wanderings in strange places, and finally how he saved his neighbors from destruction.

"The book has great charm, and in its vitality and robust story-telling it is a welcome variant from most works in this class." William Soskin
+ Books p8 D 10 '39 1150w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p1 N 4 '39 800w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 6 '40 650w
New Repub 101:241 D 13 '39 40w

"A delightful and very entertaining novel of a primitive, naïve but by no means stupid people." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p24 N 5 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:89 N 11 '39 50w

"It is difficult to avoid comparing this novel to 'The Good Earth,' just as it is difficult to read and forget that Gene Fowler has labored long in the script-rooms of Hollywood. Ajoks in his village, Ajoks on the road with his crooked bull, Ajoks ringing the great bell of Senang, Ajoks in the palace of Su . . . these evoke a picture of . . . well, Paul Muni, get ready." H. A. S.
Sat R of Lit 21:20 N 11 '39 350w

"An unusual story, embroidered with rich incident and detail, makes 'Illusion in Java' a delightful novelty."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 12 '39 480w

FOWLER, JOHN FRANCIS. Revenue bonds; the nature, uses and distribution of fully self-liquidating public loans; foreword by Robert Moses. 249p $3 Harper

332.63 Bonds 38-31210

"An explanation, for the layman, of the use of securities issued under government auspices and dependent for their repayment on the earnings of publicly owned improvements, such as toll bridges, electric plants, and water supply systems. Includes chapters on tax exemption, marketing, and economic aspects." (Booklist) Selected bibliography. Index.

"Chapters dealing with the nature, origins and growth, marketing, economic aspects, investment analysis, remedies in the event of default, and highlights of typical issues are so developed as to make the book a well balanced and useful volume." R. W. Coleman
+ Am Econ R 29:191 Mr '39 270w
Booklist 35:126 D 15 '38

Reviewed by O. W. Haussermann
Harvard Law R 52:719 F '39 900w
Special Libraries 30:66 F '39

FOWLER, SYDNEY, pseud. See Wright, S. F.

FOWLIE, WALLACE. Ernest Psichari; a study in religious conversion. 160p il $1.80 Longmans [3s 6d Clarke, J]

B or 92 Psichari, Ernest 40-2926

Short biography of this grandson of Ernest Renan. Ernest Psichari was brought up an agnostic; in 1913 he was received into the Catholic church; in 1914 he was killed in Belgium in the early days of the World war. The study includes an analysis of his writings. Bibliography. Index.

"It is regrettable that the author, towards the close of an otherwise excellent work, has endeavored to dispel the widely accepted concept that Psichari's new found Faith provided him with an opportunity of making reparation for his grandfather's errors." E. P. Burns
+ — America 62:80 O 28 '39 250w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon
Commonweal 30:462 S 8 '39 400w

"Mr. Wallace Fowlie has written a brief yet eloquent account of this short but inspired life and of the richness of a work so tragically cut short."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 29 '39 320w

FOX, FRANCES MARGARET. Little mossback Amelia; il. by Marion Downer. 86p map $1.50 Dutton

39-21666

True story of a little girl's pioneering days in Michigan sixty years ago. The pioneers, called Mossbacks, built their cabin home in the forest, learned much from the friendly neighboring Indians, planted fruit trees, and brave little Amelia took her full share in all the work.

Booklist 36:73 O 15 '39

"Perhaps because it all happened, once upon a time, Amelia seems an unusually lovable and appealing little settler." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:299 S '39 90w

"The value of this book lies in its historical pictures, the telling while good in spots, is often flat and lacks literary quality. Good illustrations in two colors by Marion Downer." Sonja Wennerblad
+ — Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 90w

"This book should not be overlooked, for it is genuine in every way." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:849 N 1 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 50w
Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

FOX, GENEVIEVE MAY. Border girl; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 272p $2 Little 39-23640

Debby Owens, the young heroine of this story for seventh and eighth grades, lived in northern Vermont, just before the outbreak of the War of 1812. Smugglers, Indian raids, and the suspicion that a beloved friend is a traitor enliven the tale.

Booklist 36:136 D 1 '39

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 64:1000 D 15 '39 180w

FOX, JESSIE DOUGLAS. The house on Lark street. 251p $2 Macrae Smith co.

39-11268

Pauline Stevenson worked in a decorators' shop and her aunt kept a rooming house, but Philip Brent, wealthy, good-looking and charming, wanted to marry her even tho his vacillating nature drove him to play fast and loose with Esther Bartow and Pauline at the same time. After some unhappy months and a tragic end for Esther, Pauline found happiness elsewhere.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p18 My 7 '39 100w

"There is more depth, and a touching quality to the story, than can be indicated in [a] bare outline. It is a nice little tale." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 23 '39 160w

FOX, UFFA. Beauty of sail. See Beken, F.

FOX, UFFA. The crest of the wave. 264p il $3.75 Scribner [8s 6d Davies]

797.124 Sailing

"In this the latest of his books on sailing Mr. Fox presents a selection of his experiences in yachts of many sorts and sizes. Beginning with memories of open-boat sailing as a boy, he continues with descriptions of Atlantic passages in Typhoon and Diablesse, following them with chapters on racing, the side of yachting in which he is most experienced and for which he is best known." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

FOX, UFFA—Continued

"Uffa's didactic manner of hurling his nautical and philosophical conclusions at you may be irritating at times, but without his 'So-we-learn-thats' it wouldn't be an Uffa Fox book. Also, since a man can only do about so many things in forty years of living, confirmed Uffa Fox readers may recognize some of the yarns as familiar and wonder at the author's ability to make them sound interesting again. It's salty stuff, buoyed up by the unquenchably romantic spirit of a modern Viking." W. H. Taylor

+ — Books p30 D 3 '39 500w

"Were Uffa Fox somewhat less exclusively concerned with the technical side of yachting, we imagine he would have been 'discovered' long ago by literateurs on the hunt for a fresh and unspoiled style. For this British yacht-designer and sailor expresses himself, frequently and at length, with an irrepressible enthusiasm and a naive breeziness that is rarely equalled among longshore essayists." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 270w

"He has something interesting and informative to say about many classes of racing boats, although it is the chapters on dinghy-sailing which perhaps will contribute most to the reader's instruction. Much of the present book has already appeared in the author's previous works. There must be many yachtsmen, however, who will wish to have such a selection as Mr. Fox now gives us."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 29 '39 120w

FOX, UFFA. Thoughts on yachts and yachting; design, construction, handling. 356p il $10 Scribner [35s Davies]

797.14 Yachts and yachting 39-17981

"The fifth of a series every yachtsman knows and respects. A beautiful bookful of authoritative information on sailboats, powerboats, and racing craft. Over 400 plans, photographs, diagrams." New Yorker

---

"The racing sections of the book deal almost wholly with British events, and save for the lines and descriptions of some new craft, are of secondary interest to American readers. But the chapters on rigging and gear, and a comparative study of construction, offer a wealth of technical material to the advanced yachtsman that is not to be found elsewhere. The illustrations, of which there are some 400, are almost without exception excellent." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 11 '39 410w

"The book is profusely illustrated with photographs and designs and is well worth its place in a series whose reputation is already assured." W. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 20 '38 280w

Reviewed by Richard Hughes

New Statesman & Nation 17:26 Ja 7 '39 240w

New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 21 '39 120w

FRAMPTON, MERLE ELBERT, and ROWELL, HUGH GRANT, eds. Education of the handicapped [2v] v 1, History. 260p $2.40 World bk. [7s 6d Harrap]

371.9 Children, Abnormal and backward. Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. (39-2371)

In this volume the authors outline historically the education, care and treatment of the blind; the hard of hearing; those handicapped in speech; the crippled; the undervitalized, tubercular and cardiac; the mentally handicapped; and the socially handicapped. Bibliography. Index.

"Such a compilation fulfils a long felt need and this volume will be welcomed by teachers and lecturers in several fields." Leona Baumgartner

+ Am J Pub Health 29:1167 O '39 380w

Reviewed by Harry Best

Am Soc R 4:760 O '39 500w

"The book on the whole is well written. It includes a bibliography arranged under two headings, 'Books' and 'Magazines,' with separate lists for each handicap. An excellent index combines references to all types of handicaps. The editors have entered undeveloped fields where others have feared to tread, and they have produced results which will be a contribution to any library but particularly to libraries in colleges of medical science, social science, and teacher training." A. A. Donaldson

+ El School J 40:231 N '39 450w

"The book with the attached bibliography is a constructive contribution to the general literature on the subject, and should prove valuable to workers in the field who are responsible for promoting the cause of the handicapped." Edyth Knox

+ Survey 75:324 O '39 200w

FRANCES DE CHANTAL, SISTER. Julie Billiart and her Institute. 280p il $2.40 (7s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Billiart, Julie. Institute of Notre Dame

Biography of the foundress of the Institute of Notre Dame de Namur. Born a poor peasant of Picardy in 1751, she was over fifty when she founded her Institute. For many years there was desperate struggle to keep it going, but today it numbers 160 houses, with over 4000 sisters, and 115,000 pupils. The foundress was beatified in 1906. Index.

Reviewed by J. D. Boyd

America 60:454 F 11 '39 150w

"Sister de Chantal has written an excellent biography of a lovable saint."

+ Cath World 149:125 Ap '39 170w

FRANCESCO, GRETE DE. The power of the charlatan; tr. from the German by Miriam Beard. 288p il $3.75 Yale univ. press

133.7 Quacks and quackery. Alchemy 39-14355

Study of quackery and the charlatans, alchemists, healers, and other pretenders who preyed upon the credulity of the gullible from the sixteenth to early nineteenth centuries. The author is a Swiss journalist who wrote the book originally in German. Bibliography. Index.

"A most interesting and soundly instructive work."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 60w

"The natural history of quackery in all its forms is a fascinating theme. . . The author of this entertaining and instructive book is not content to recount the fantastic adventures of great and small charlatans, but gives also a penetrating analysis of gullibility and trickery. Considering how much of both there is in the world, in the realm of ideas as well as of commodities, it is worth while to understand them." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:676 My 24 '39 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

Reviewed by Norbert Guterman

New Repub 101:177 N 29 '39 700w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p6 Ag 6 '39 500w

"Heavily written but nevertheless interesting account of some of the great Cagliostros of history."

+ New Yorker 15:102 My 13 '39 20w

Pratt p4 winter '40

"Whether the generalizations be accurate or not, the supporting stories are highly entertaining. There are many illustrations from quaint old plates, not very well reproduced." G. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 My 27 '39 270w

"The book is by no means only generalization and speculation. It includes many accounts of specific charlatans, some of them excellent stories, rich with the pathos of human imbecility. Miss Beard's translation has every merit and no defect, and she reinforces it with some useful additions of her own." H. L. Mencken

+ Yale R n s 29:181 autumn '39 650w

FRANCK, HARRY ALVERSON. The lure of Alaska. 306p map $3.50 Stokes

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel

(W) 39-27489

Account of the author's trip, with his eighteen-year-old son as companion, around Alaska from mining town to Eskimo village, by ship, train, and airplane.

Booklist 35:346 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by H. M. Shaw

Books p10 Jl 30 '39 70w

"His story, as usual, is accurate in its observation, detached in its approach, readable in style."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 17 '39 300w

Reviewed by Anthony Fiala

Living Age 357:199 O '39 70w

"It has not often been this reviewer's luck and privilege to deal with a travel book so entirely delightful as this. The subject fascinates both because Alaska is one of the very few habitable stretches of the earth's surface that is yet in the pioneer stage and because it is different from any of the pioneer regions of the past in being so intimately in contact with the latest resources of today's civilization. . . It is a sturdily masculine, stimulating book. But one would have liked an index, and photographs could have been arranged in much closer proximity to the particular text they illustrate." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p5 Je 11 '39 1200w

"Mr. Franck's 'The Lure of Alaska' is far below his 'Roaming in Hawaii,' which with some success conveyed the atmosphere of those lovely isles to the reader. That is the essential requirement of a travel book. Mr. Franck has done and can do a lot better." Ernest Gruening

— Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 15 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

FRANCK, RACHEL (LATTA) (MRS HARRY ALVERSON FRANCK). I married a vagabond. 241p il map $2.50 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Voyages and travels (W) 39-27184

In 1919 the author married Harry Franck, writer of many "vagabonding" travel books. This is the wife's account of vagabonding with her husband in many countries, the birth of several children in outlandish places, and the charm which journeying in Asia, Europe, and the South seas holds for them all.

Booklist 35:251 Ap 1 '39

"Anyone who has read Harry A. Franck's accounts of his wanderings on foot around the world knows a little about Rachel Latta Franck, his wife. Mrs. Franck has picked up a pen and the result is delightful, for Mrs. Franck has plenty to tell on her own account, an intimate friendly story of countries and people from which there emerges the picture of a family, two adults and five children, whose characters are revealed only in the play upon them and about them of different nationalities." M. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 1 '39 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"The Franck babies, and the Francks' taste for wayfaring . . . strike the keynote of what is most unusual and interesting in Mrs. Franck's book. For all its pleasant glimpses of the West Indies and the Orient, and the lively chapters on their Chinese experiences, this book is to be read and enjoyed, not for what it says about foreign countries themselves, but as a moving picture of an American family, roaming over the face of the globe in more or less unconventional fashion and having a happy and high-spirited—though not always a comfortable or serene—time."

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 5 '39 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 110w

Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

FRANCOISE, pseud. See Seignobosc, F.

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. The bridegroom cometh. 628p $2.75 Doubleday [10s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 39-13360

This long full novel follows the experiences, religious, social and amorous, of Mary Donald. Mary and her twin sister have been brought up in a strict New England Puritanism from which they both escape in young womanhood. Mary's career includes years working her way thru college, marriage into a wealthy Jewish family from which she escapes thru divorce, and finally identification with the working classes and the Communist party.

" 'The Bridegroom Cometh' is an ambitious novel in that it endeavors to give a third dimension, so to speak, penetrating beneath what passes as 'plot' or 'story' and beneath what the characters 'think.' The result is sometimes not clear, yet out of that attempt the book gains the more important virtues of vitality, provocativeness and often of beauty." Mary Ross

+ — Books p5 My 21 '39 1150w

"The deeply moving story is integrated with the history, and on the history level, 'The Bridegroom Cometh' presents as sharp a picture of America as has been presented by any of its major writers. This picture mercilessly lays bare the social, political and economic factors that prevent the forces of love from shaping a human society in which free human beings can develop both materially and spiritually. . . Some parts of the story are treated with such clinical directness that unless the reader is well initiated in the modern novel of a D. H. Lawrence, Marcel Proust or James Joyce, he may be scandalized." Emmanuel Chapman

+ — Commonweal 30:107 My 19 '39 800w

"Because Mr. Frank is a great craftsman, the pattern stays subordinate to his characters. Mary, her family, her husband, her expanding world have extraordinary vitality." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 102:iv Jl '39 100w

"Frank's new novel is his most objective, mature, and interesting one so far. To be sure, it displays, though to a reduced degree, his chief defects as a novelist." Paul Rosenfeld

+ — Nation 148:590 My 20 '39 800w

"This novel is a sequel to 'The Death and Birth of David Markand,' published in 1935. Unlike most sequels, it is richer and more important than its predecessor, which had too many brilliant expository passages, too few memorable characters and a little too much mystical feeling that never got rooted solidly in the action. In 'The Bridegroom Cometh' these faults are very largely pruned away; the book is a three-dimensional structure of action and perception, a vivid picture of American life in the years between 1914 and 1924. . . One may regret that a writer with such insight and a message so vital to our time is not more concerned with the refinements of technique, with problems of rhythm, pace, and the terse and perfect phrase. But the book stands, solidly." Rebecca Pitts

+ — New Repub 99:193 Je 21 '39 1000w

" 'The Bridegroom Cometh' is long enough to be wearisome. It is so involved in symbolism, mysticism and psychological contradictions as to be, in the end, quite unclear. It is not at all

FRANK, W. D.—Continued
alive with the life that Mr. Frank is always talking about. I am sure it does not show Mr. Frank's skill as a writer, or his purpose as a writer. . . We can say, of course, that this is no novel at all but merely part of Mr. Frank's research into his creative consciousness which may be resolved in three or more further novels. David Markand, for instance, comes in at the end without adding much more than a further earnestness and vagueness. In this sense it is a continuation of his previous work. But in this same sense Mary Donald is no real character, simply a further extension of Mr. Frank's philosophic feeling." P. M. Jack
— N Y Times p6 My 21 '39 1050w

"Though I have considerable admiration for Mr. Frank, I regret that I can't quite see 'The Bridegroom Cometh' as the great work of art good judges have already called it. It has moving passages, not to mention a good many torrid ones, but it seems to me talky and well worn in its from-religion-through-love-to-Communism theme." Clifton Fadiman
— + New Yorker 15:90 My 20 '39 310w

"Most books may be easily dismissed as negligible or competent, or hailed with equal facility as splendid jobs. 'The Bridegroom Cometh' belongs in neither of these categories. It is not, I surmise, a book to be judged in a day or a month. Whatever its true stature, it has been greatly planned, and, whatever its true worth, it is vastly interesting." B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 20:6 My 20 '39 1000w

"Mr. Frank has many talents, and a vast cross-section knowledge of America. But his book is nevertheless mainly absurd. It has more mystical-sensual sex-drivel to the page—and there are seven hundred and two pages!—than it has ever been my experience to read. Mary is, let it be admitted, an interesting enough conception, especially when contrasted, as she very skilfully is, against her more simple twin sister, Martha." Kate O'Brien
— Spec 161:784 N 4 '38 360w
Time 33:84 Je 5 '39 250w

"This is an intense and heavily charged book, in which individualism of method runs to a striving for newness of phrase and a trick of retrospection that is not always gain. There is something of everything in the book, and perhaps that helps to explain why it seems a little frantic. But nobody can read it and fail to be moved by its integrity of feeling or to be impressed by its narrative force and variety."
Times [London] Lit Sup p675 O 22 '38 800w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. Royal regiment. 532p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Hutchinson]
(W) 38-29011

Story of a British army officer whose love affair with his commanding officer's wife reached its climax the day Edward VIII abdicated.

Booklist 35:158 Ja 1 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Ja 8 '39 350w

Reviewed by Sarah Chokla
Boston Transcript p1 Ja 14 '39 220w

"A long and absorbingly interesting romance." Drake De Kay
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 1 '39 850w
Pratt p31 spring '39

"Apart from its moral implications, the novel commands respect for its skillful construction, the work of a highly practised hand. Its style, though overburdened with clichés and tiresomely reiterative of set phrases, is easy and effective." C. D. Abbott
Sat R of Lit 19:15 D 31 '38 400w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 8 '39 600w
Time 33:63 Ja 16 '39 80w

"From the opening chapters we are allowed to realize that Rockingham was to have two object-lessons before his eyes. The first was the behaviour of one of his sergeants in somewhat similar conditions. The second was that provided for the world at large in November, 1936—a reference that seems to us in extremely bad taste and from all points of view regrettable. . . The whole flows on with the regularity and neatness that only a finished literary technique can give to a narrative of this kind. . . In its own genre 'Royal Regiment' is as nearly perfect as a novel can be."
Times [London] Lit Sup p571 S 3 '38 330w

FRANKAU, PAMELA. The devil we know. 495p $2.50 Dutton [8s Heinemann]
39-8914

The scene is England, and the greater part of the story takes place in 1931. Philip Meyer is a young Jewish scenario writer, working for Jupiter Pictures. The character study of Philip, of his feeling of inferiority, and of his struggles with his own sensitive nature, forms the central theme of the book.

"Miss Frankau's book is challenging: she touches upon lively but seldom discussed problems, probably without intending to answer them. Her drawing of the boy, Laurence, is inimitable. The manner in which her characters converse is oddly natural, occasional scenes and phrases have an eerie flashlight reality. . . 'The Devil We Know' is, however, so entirely sincere and by fits and starts so illuminating that all who are on the side of the angels will esteem it for qualities other than these." Iris Barry
+ — Books p18 Ap 2 '39 800w

"The book isn't convincing. It drags. And yet Philip Meyer is oddly real. His over practical love-lady comes alive. So do other people. Bits of action ring true. The theme is confused, but pages are spotted with vitality." E. A.
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 180w

"A vivid, active book written with the fine craftsmanship that distinguishes all Miss Frankau's novels." J. D. Beresford
+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ja 6 '39 280w
New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 40w

"After his disappointment [in love], Philip disappears from the scene. When years later he reappears he is a bit of a maniac. Miss Frankau does not play fair with the reader, for she does not tell what precisely had happened to Philip to bring about his extraordinary transformation. What she has previously told us is not enough. Her story is pleasantly told up to this point in an easy readable style, but the last part makes rather painful reading, even if in the end the author makes due amends." John Cournos
+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 9 '39 500w

"The picture Miss Frankau draws is a devastating one. She makes Philip Meyer live and makes his suffering real: makes the waste of his potentialities tragic; but she obscures the point she wishes to establish by failing ever to show clearly how much of Philip's disintegration comes from actual persecution and how much from his subjective sense of it. She has really incorporated two different ideas into one story with a confusing result." G. G.
Sat R of Lit 19:18 Ap 15 '39 400w

"Miss Frankau's conception of 'the devil we know,' alias the Jew, is simple, unlabored, unpartizan, and persuasively plausible." R. W. N.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 9 '39 900w

"Miss Frankau, as we should expect, makes an admirable story. . . Her clever dialogue and graphic power of narrative are those of an unusually capable novelist. But can it be said that she has made good the thesis which is so deliberately posed as, it might almost be said, a casus belli? She has handicapped herself in the earlier part by her presentation of Philip as a rather slick young Jew, whose blue black, 'lacquered' (her word) hair produces the rather unfortunate suggestion, from a fictional point of view, of the typical gigolo. From this earlier impression it is not easy to convert us to the later picture."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 7 '39 380w

FRANKEL, SALLY HERBERT. Capital investment in Africa; its course and effects (issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs). 506p maps $4 (10s 6d) Oxford

330.96 Africa—Economic conditions. Finance—Africa

"This work is issued by the Committee of the African Research Survey under the auspices of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. The author is Professor of Economics and Economic History at the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg. Lord Hailey, in a foreword, states the objects of Dr. Frankel's research as being to prepare an informative picture, based on readily available material, of the form which the investment of capital from Europe has from time to time taken in Africa; of the function which it has performed in the development of the countries with which the Survey is concerned; and of the factors which may be expected in the future to influence the further supply of capital in Africa." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by L. H. Jenks
Am Econ R 29:826 D '39 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Mills
Ann Am Acad 207:239 Ja '40 500w

"A thorough piece of scholarship."
+ Foreign Affairs 17:643 Ap '39 40w

"This is an important study. . . Professor Frankel has supplied his readers with an enormous quantity of data, much not obtainable elsewhere in convenient form, and covering not only capital investment but trade and even public finance. Owing to the manner in which the text is broken by tables and material relegated to footnotes, some of the chapters are not easy to read. As may be expected in view of its scope, the study is more thorough in certain portions than in others. . . At times brevity seems to be carried too far. . . Condensation is unavoidable in a broad survey, however, and the book is quite essential to those interested in its subject." Edmund Whittaker
+ — J Pol Econ 47:906 D '39 700w
Nature 144:686 O 21 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 18 '39 130w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Claudia. 305p $2.50 Farrar

39-27921

Episodes in the first years of the married life of David and Claudia, two young people so much in love that differences of opinion—as to Claudia's health, living in the country, handsome actresses, etc.—seemed very minor and unimportant, except as source material for the story of their lives.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

"If you have been a husband or wife for more than five years—which is as far as Miss Franken carries her history of Claudia and David in matrimony—so much the better. The more intensive your researches have been, the more wisdom will you discern beneath the sparkling comedy of this novel and the more moving will be its brief interludes of shadow. But by thus cataloguing readers for 'Claudia' no arbitrary restriction is intended; it is a story that many sorts of people will like, and will do the unmarried no harm." Lisle Bell
+ Books p7 S 24 '39 600w

"The conversation is wonderfully real—Miss Franken is too skilled a dramatist not to know the value of dialogue—and always in character. And the relationships are built up with such completeness, yet with such economy, you never have the slightest doubt about how any of the persons in the book stands with respect to any other." Ann Springer
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 23 '39 600w
New Repub 100:280 O 11 '39 50w

"Mrs. Franken does an excellent job in her portrayal of the Naughtons and those who touch their lives. Her faults, minor indeed, lie in dialogue which is so consistently bright that it verges on the monotonous. The craftsmanship of the playwright sometimes gets in the way of the novelist and the line good for a laugh on the stage occasionally seems a little too pat and glib in the story." Rose Feld
+ — N Y Times p7 O 1 '39 500w

"Pleasant, readable tale. . . A welcome change from 'problem' novels."
+ New Yorker 15:77 O 7 '39 40w

"The book is sentimental and amusing, silly and very good fun. Settle down and have some laughs and a couple of good long cries over it. Miss Franken writes so lightly and pleasantly that you'll scarcely be ashamed at all of the emotions in which you are wallowing; and anyhow, it doesn't pay to be rational all the time." K. S.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 9 '39 150w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY), and MELONEY, WILLIAM BROWN (FRANKEN MELONEY, pseud). Strange victory. 281p $2 Farrar

39-16850

When Paige Griswold got the job as companion-governess to Michael Herron's neurotic young ward, she had a run in her stocking, a Patou gown in her suitcase, and less than a dollar in her purse. If she had told Michael her real name some of the obstacles in the course of true love would have been eliminated, but in the end all things work out for the best.

Booklist 36:45 O 1 '39

"In the working out of this problem 'Strange Victory' achieves dramatic tension and psychological value." Lisle Bell
+ Books p9 Jl 9 '39 270w

"The story is briskly told and its rapid pace adds to its entertaining quality, leaving the reader no opportunity—or inclination—to question its credibility." B. S.
+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 9 '39 310w
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 8 '39 90w

FRANKENBERG, LLOYD. The red kite. 95p $1.75 Farrar

811 39-33674

First book of poems by a young American. The subjects are nature, particularly the sea, philosophic problems, and modern questions.

Booklist 36:196 Ja 15 '40

"Mr. Frankenberg brings to an old theme much that is fresh and new; and his lyric variations are admirable. Though basically traditional, his poems on the whole are refreshingly firm and unmannered." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Books p16 N 26 '39 750w

" 'The Red Kite' . . . has great distinction, and an individual talent concerned with general aspects of life, and the enduring theme of poetry. Frankenberg is a singer of many voices, all the way from whimsical to philosophical. He exhibits a great variety of rhythm and form, always with certainty in performance; his subject-matter is likely to seem abstract." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p13 N 29 '39 350w

Reviewed by H. N. Frye
Canadian Forum 19:295 D '39 250w

"Poems that show an encouraging range of subject and technique, with a gift for sustained inspiration."
+ New Repub 100:377 N 1 '39 40w

"Lloyd Frankenberg, I think, is going to be a big poet: this, his first book, already shows many of the qualities which go to the making of major poetry. . . These poems have fine, unforced technique: they deal with more than the three dimensions; there is strength fused with the feeling, and fresh beauty. All of which is one more way of saying that Lloyd Frankenberg's poetry matters now, and is bound to matter much more as time goes on." Margaret Widdemer

FRANKENBERG, LLOYD—Continued
+ N Y Times p5 N 5 '39 500w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:16 N 25 '39 250w

FRANKFORT, HENRI. Cylinder seals; a documentary essay on the art and religion of the ancient Near East. 328p il 47pl $14 (42s) Macmillan

736 Seals (numismatics). Art, Assyro-Babylonian. Assyro-Babylonian religion [39-12714]

"This book is intimately related to the field work of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago carried out in Iraq and directed for seven years by Dr. H. Frankfort, work which has unearthed the largest collection of seals ever brought to light and has solved many of the general problems presented by such material. . . Dr. Frankfort deals first with seals of the prehistoric age, and then discusses products of the glyptic art ranging from about 3000 to 1000 B.C. The discussions fall under the headings Early Dynastic Cylinders; Seals of the Sargonid Age; Mesopotamian Glyptic from the end of the Akkadian to the Kassite Dynasty; Seals from the Kassite to the Persian Period; and, finally, the Derivative Styles of the Ancient Near East. Many illustrations are given in the text of the book, and many more in excellent plates at the end." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 3 '39 120w

"The author and the publisher are to be congratulated on producing a work which is not only full of the latest information on the subject but also provides a really fascinating study." M. A. Canney
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 28 '39 390w

"The classification of such a quantity of material, for there are many thousands of these seals in European and American museums, has been the subject of large catalogues of public and private collections. Much still remains to be done in this essential ground-work. What Prof. Frankfort supplies in this book is a brilliant, comprehensive aperçu which serves as a most readable introduction to the subject and will also give the necessary background for the cataloguing which has still to be done."
+ Nature 143:999 Je 17 '39 1100w

New Statesman & Nation 17:836 My 27 '39 310w

"Professor Frankfort has produced an excellent book, and one which can hardly be praised too highly."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p286 My 13 '39 160w

FRANKFURTER, FELIX. Law and politics; occasional papers, 1913-1938; ed. by Archibald MacLeish and E. F. Prichard, jr; with a foreword by Mr MacLeish. 352p $3 Harcourt

340 Law—Addresses, essays, lectures
(W) 39-27861

"This book is made up of the articles and occasional papers of Mr. Justice Frankfurter from the beginning of his career at the Harvard Law School to the time of his appointment to the Supreme Court. These are papers of general interest, none of them technical, and their nature is indicated by the headings of the eight divisions into which the papers naturally fall: The Supreme court; The elements of judicial greatness; The liberties of a free people; Labor and the courts; Government and administration; Business and the courts; Law and science; A political autobiography." Publisher's note

Booklist 36:82 N 1 '39

"The English prose of this Austrian immigrant, who heard English for the first time at the age of twelve, is not the ordinary style of the lawyer or philosopher. Readable, clear, penetrating, at times dramatic, these essays set a high standard of prose writing." S. I. Rosenman
+ Books p1 N 5 '39 2100w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone
Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '39 750w

"In so good a book, it is perhaps supererogatory to point out defects. The very inclusiveness of the ideas and concerns here arrayed deserve an index. And it would not have detracted from the readability of the volume to have included sometimes longer excerpts from the essays, and more references to the literature cited by the author." Phillips Bradley
+ — Christian Century 56:1505 D 6 '39 550w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson
Churchman 153:20 D 1 '39 150w

"The thoughtful American must go far before he finds more appropriate and pertinent reading than the editorials, reviews and articles that together make up 'Law and Politics.' The selected writings of Mr. Justice Frankfurter in this book are more than mere models of clear, lucid and auriloquent prose. They give an insight into the mind of a Supreme Court justice, are a valuable contribution to America's political literature and perhaps adumbrate the trend of the Supreme Court." Joseph Calderon
+ Commonweal 31:289 Ja 19 '40 420w

"Introduced by Archibald MacLeish, this is a civilized, illuminating, and (rare these days) perceptibly optimistic volume. All these fugitive pieces may well be samples of future history—straws in the wind indicating possible lines of struggle within the Supreme Court that will develop in the quarter-century or more during which Justice Frankfurter may reasonably be expected to serve." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 102:iv N '39 160w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 149:443 O 21 '39 1700w

Reviewed by F. S. Cohen
New Repub 101:145 N 22 '39 1600w

Reviewed by J. P. Pollard
N Y Times p2 N 19 '39 1350w
New Yorker 15:95 O 21 '39 30w
Pratt p6 winter '40

Reviewed by J. M. Proskauer
Sat R of Lit 21:5 D 30 '39 1000w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 240w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Survey G 28:755 D '39 500w

FRANKFURTER, FELIX. Mr Justice Holmes and the Supreme court. 139p $1.50 Harvard univ. press [6s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1841-1935. U.S. Supreme court (W) 38-33174

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher
Am Hist R 45:175 O '39 60w

Reviewed by E. P. Allen
Am Pol Sci R 33:125 F '39 350w

"As the lectures were prepared for laymen, the members of the legal profession need not look for, and if they do will not find, acute analysis of specific constitutional problems or new light upon the Supreme Court's influence upon our economic, social, and governmental institutions. To say this is merely to emphasize the character of the book: it is an attempt to sketch in bold general outline and in language which laymen can understand, the influence of Mr. Justice Holmes upon the decisions of the Supreme Court." W. W. Cook
Ann Am Acad 203:228 My '39 600w

"Profound humility, quiet restraint, honesty of mind, zest for life, and greatness of utterance characterized Mr. Justice Holmes. The beauty of his homely and sententious style will surely preclude the loss of his wisdom from the American memory. The keen penetrating prose, the subtle charm, the clear and easy presentation of Holmesian thought in this Mr. Justice Frankfurter's latest book ought to assure it widespread reading." Joseph Calderon

+ Commonweal 29:474 F 17 '39 460w

"It would be hard to overestimate the importance of this small book, both for its timeliness and for its timelessness. . . As Professor Frankfurter, he has long been one of America's most distinguished legal philosophers, a modern representative of the old liberal tradition, This book, unpretentious as it is, represents the distillation of his wisdom." F. I. Carpenter

+ New Eng Q 12:130 Mr '39 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 21 '39 80w

Reviewed by C. C. Burlingham

Yale R n s 28:605 spring '39 1150w

FRANKLIN, JAY, pseud. See Carter, J. F.

FRASER, IAN FORBES. The spirit of French Canada; a study of the literature. 219p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

840.9 French-Canadian literature—History and criticism 39-13847

A study of the influences which have caused the French Canadians to retain their characteristic traits and the expression of them in a distinctive literature. The study, in general, goes back to about the middle of the nineteenth century. Bibliography. Index.

Foreign Affairs 18:171 O '39 10w

New Repub 102:93 Ja 15 '40 20w

"If Mr. Ian Forbes Fraser had written his account of French Canadian literature in the stereotyped form of a historical account of authors and books, it would have worn the familiar and pathetic aspect of trying to make much out of little, and to exalt honorable mediocrity into genius. This he has not done. His title, 'The Spirit of French Canada,' indicates what he set out to do and has admirably succeeded in doing. He is not answering the question, what does French Canadian literature amount to—in the detached sense of literary value. He is answering the question, what part has literature played in the development of the life and spirit of French Canada." Stephen Leacock

+ Sat R of Lit 20:10 Je 3 '39 1150w

FRAZER, ROBERT ALEXANDER; DUNCAN, WILLIAM JOLLY, and COLLAR, ARTHUR RODERICH. Elementary matrices and some applications to dynamics and differential equations. 416p $8.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

512.8 Matrices. Differential equations, Linear. Dynamics [39-12789]

"One of the serious limitations to scientific development is the amount of labour involved in computation, and the authors of this book on matrices have put on record processes which they have found of value in dealing with certain difficult problems arising in aeronautics. The general class of research in which progress has been made by the authors is that in which elastic deformation of the structure of an aircraft under aerodynamic reactions leads to forced vibrations known technically as 'flutter'. The prevention of flutter in aircraft is obviously important, and the later chapters of the present volume deal with the most recent aspects of flutter research." Nature

---

Nature 144:650 O 14 '39 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:41 Jl '39

FRAZIER, EDWARD FRANKLIN. The Negro family in the United States. 686p il maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press [20s Cambridge]

325.26 Negroes—Moral and social conditions. Family 39-20651

History of the Negro family group from the days of slavery to the present. Contains case histories and statistical tables. Classified bibliography. Index.

"Few studies have done as much to illuminate the obscure processes of social change as this thoroughgoing treatment of the Negro family in the United States. For some time, Dr. Frazier's researches have contributed facts so pertinent and hypotheses so penetrating as to command the attention of all interested in the processes of family adjustment and change. . . Because the author has combined a rare ability for framing significant hypotheses with a willingness to put his propositions to thorough empirical tests, the study is a most important contribution to the literature on the family." T. L. Smith

+ Ann Am Acad 207:256 Ja '40 800w

Booklist 36:61 O 15 '39

"The book is both extremely well organized and engagingly written; not the least ingredient of its charm is the almost Biblical terminology of the titles given its parts and chapters." M. J. Herskovits

+ Nation 150:104 Ja 27 '40 1000w

Reviewed by C. S. Johnson

Survey 75:389 D '39 500w

"This book should help to check the too frequent tendency to assume that it is possible to generalize about the Negro, for it reveals wide variations in the standards of different social classes among the coloured population, as well as the still wider variations in the behaviour of different individuals. Though the main object of the book is never obscured, it incidentally throws much light on such specific subjects as Negro education, the Negro in business and industry, Negro housing, &c. It is abundantly furnished with statistical tables."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 N 11 '39 240w

FREEMAN, ALWYN VERNON. International responsibility of states for denial of justice. 758p $12.50 (36s) Longmans

341 Aliens. Justice, Administration of. Legal responsibility. International law and relations 39-17013

"Part I is devoted to the theory of state responsibility for denial of justice. Mr. Freeman examines various definitions offered by other writers, supplying a historical background as well. . . A comprehensive and invaluable study of the forms of denial of justice in practice constitutes Part II. The third and final portion deals with the control of responsibility for inadequate judicial protection, with chapters on attempts to restrain diplomatic interposition, the international standard of justice, and the measure of reparation for denial of justice." Ann Am Acad

---

"This extensive work is a solid contribution to the theory of state responsibility. It analyzes more fully than has heretofore been done, in the light of scientific discussion and arbitral decision, the somewhat vague concept of international 'denial of justice.' . . Minor criticisms, and even differences in theory on certain points, should not obscure the fact that Freeman's book is a major contribution and a genuine credit to American scholarship." E. M. Borchard

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:900 O '39 1300w

"Authorities may disagree with or desire to quibble over particular interpretations throughout such a vast and thorough book as this, but certainly all should concur upon the point that here is a work which manifestly is a classic." P. S. Wild, Jr.

+ Ann Am Acad 204:186 Jl '39 440w

Foreign Affairs 17:630 Ap '39 10w

FREEMAN, DOUGLAS SOUTHALL. The South to posterity; an introduction to the writing of Confederate history. 235p $2.50 Scribner

973.7 Confederate States of America. U.S.—History—Civil war 39-28978

Series of essays on the literature in which Southerners, either soldiers or civilians, told their own stories of the Confederacy and the war era. The author has made use of unpublished letters, as well as quoted excerpts from published works. The book incorporates three lectures which Mr Freeman delivered at Alabama college. Contains a reading list of books on Confederate history. Index.

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

"'The South to Posterity' is largely, but not entirely, a bibliography. There are critical notes of high value, both warning the student what to avoid and calling his attention to things he must not miss. Dr. Freeman is a stickler for accuracy, but he has also the good biographer's appreciation of any thing with the authentic stir of life in it. . . For any one who wishes to know what the Confederacy really was like, he has furnished unquestionably the most reliable road map extant." G. W. Johnson

+ — Books p20 D 3 '39 480w

Living Age 357:497 Ja '40 70w

"Dr. Freeman has added such grace to his scholarship that what might be the dreariest bibliography is instead one of the clearest and most moving descriptions of the very human Confederacy which we possess." Jonathan Daniels

+ Nation 150:78 Ja 20 '40 700w

"The book is not, nor does it pretend to be, a complete history of Confederate literature—but, for either layman or scholar who is interested in the subject, it offers a remarkably engaging and readable introduction to the field." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 N 25 '39 750w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 N 18 '39 1200w

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. The stoneware monkey. 312p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder] (W) 39-5404

Detective story.

Booklist 35:272 Ap 15 '39

"A top-notch tale." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 F. 26 '39 210w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 50w

"Few, very few, of living writers can match the seemingly inexhaustible ingenuity Mr. Austin Freeman displays. True, one does not expect from him subtlety of characterisation or brilliance of style, but once again in his new book, 'The Stoneware Monkey,' he shows an untired vigour of invention, an ingenuity as remarkable as ever, constructive skill, all that interest in and knowledge of technical subjects for which his books have always been noticeable." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 13 '39 330w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 17:140 Ja 28 '39 240w

"It will not surprise any mystery fan to learn that the latest Dr. Thorndike story is a model of detective fiction: that is what one expects. But what may well be greeted with some surprise as well as pleasure is the element of satiric humor in this tale. . . If there are no wisecracks, there is nevertheless wit. The author must have had many a quiet chuckle over his modernists. So, undoubtedly, will you." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 5 '39 220w

"Masterly handling by G.O.M. of mystery writers of not entirely opaque problem made specially enjoyable by sly jabs at modern art. Perfection."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 F 25 '39 40w

"Mr. Austin Freeman's leisurely narrative . . . is a pleasant contrast with some of the higher-powered but more carelessly written stories which are being offered nowadays as detective novels. . . As usual [he] supplies some really interesting information of a technical nature, in this case with regard to the manufacture of pottery, and his readers may rest assured that his hand has not lost its cunning.

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 7 '39 330w

FREEMAN, MRS RUTH (ST JOHN), and FREEMAN, HARROP ARTHUR. Chips and Little Chips; pictures by Eldred M. Smith. 32p 75c Whitman, A.

39-27536

Picture-story book for very young readers, showing how a little boy learned to build a playhouse by watching a carpenter build a real house.

Booklist 35:366 Jl 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Jl 16 '39 200w

FREUD, SIGMUND. Moses and monotheism [tr. from the German by Katherine Jones]. 219p $3 Knopf [8s 6d Hogarth]

221.92 Moses. Jews—Religion. Monotheism. Psychology, Religious (W) 39-27591

"'Moses and Monotheism' uses as the foundation of its thesis an account of Moses which contains some surprising features. The Moses of Freud's portrait was not a Jew at all but a high-born Egyptian, some Thutmose or Rameses, whose name was changed in the Jewish tongue to Moses. His end was not that of the Biblical account but that described by the historian, Ernst Sellin, who maintains that the Jews revolted against Moses and killed him. From these and various other facts, along the path of motivation established by the technique of psycho-analysis, Dr. Freud traces the rise of Moses and monotheistic religion. In the second part of the book he integrates the origin of Christianity and the religion of Moses, as in the first part he integrates the religion of Moses and the teachings of the Egyptian, Ikhnaton." (Books) Glossary. Index.

"For one who professes so much devotion to Science and Reason (he capitalizes the words in one place), his procedure is shockingly unscientific and irrational. Indeed, Dr. Freud's whole procedure makes one feel that there is none more conservative than the 'liberal,' none more credulous than the unbeliever, none more dogmatic than the skeptic. Dr. Freud intrudes his Ego to tell us that he feared to publish his ideas while in Catholic Austria. His explanation smacks of the persecution complex. But who would dare to psychoanalyze Dr. Freud!" J. E. Coleran

— America 61:335 Jl 15 '39 270w

Reviewed by S. W. Baron

Am J Soc 45:471 N '39 2300w

Reviewed by Gregory Zilboorg

Atlantic S '39 380w

Booklist 35:373 Jl 15 '39

Reviewed by Katharine Anthony

Books p3 Je 18 '39 1500w

Reviewed by M. Arnold

Canadian Forum 19:197 S '39 600w

"The book is poorly written, full of repetitions, replete with borrowings from unbelievers like Breasted, Sellin, Atkinson, Robertson Smith; and spoiled by the author's atheistic bias and his flimsy psycho-analytic fancies." B. L. C.

— Cath World 149:756 S '39 240w

"The frog of legend, in an attempt to puff itself larger than an elephant, succeeded only in bursting. Freudianism, within the limits of its proper efficacy, as a method of exploration within the psychological field and as a therapeutic approach, is worthy of serious consideration; but as an attempted all-inclusive principle of interpretation, may very likely, as this book bears witness, bring upon itself discredit and neglect." N. F. S. Ferré

— Christian Century 56:950 Ag 2 '39 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

Reviewed by G. B. Phelan
Commonweal 30:382 Ag 11 '39 400w

"An epoch-making work. Professor Freud here ventures into fields hitherto unexplored. The assumptions and theories contained in this remarkable book are sufficiently counterbalanced by historical facts to warrant its validity. Besides, it must be remembered that everything new must begin with speculation." A. A. Brill

+ Living Age 356:589 Ag '39 1000w

Reviewed by John Murphy
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 11 '39 1350w

Reviewed by A. B. Kuttner
Nation 149:19 Jl 1 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Karl Menninger
New Repub 100:23 Ag 9 '39 3050w

"On the whole, while Biblical students will find much that is novel and thought-provoking in this book, the tares must be diligently separated from the wheat; for example although there is evidence for a certain duality in the history of Israel, there is none whatever for the view that there were two founders of religion each called Moses." Stanley Cook

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:900 Je 10 '39 1400w

"Parts I and II of the book were published in German in Imago in 1937. Part III, which has not previously appeared in print, is divided into two sections. . . When [Freud] arrived in England he found 'the temptation of making withheld knowledge accessible to the world irresistible.' Hence, he rewrote Section I of Part III but published the original as well on account of some of the material being omitted in the last draft. Despite the author's apologies there seems to be no justification for such repetition, which makes one quarter of the book unnecessary. Furthermore, his flimsy theories, which in part involve an interweaving of those that he admits borrowing from others, are not the type of 'knowledge' that is worth the misunderstanding and ill will that it is more than likely to breed at this time." Livingston Welch

N Y Times p5 Je 18 '39 1150w

Discussion by Katharine Anthony & Livingston Welch

N Y Times p10 Ag 6 '39 800w

"His insights, deriving from psychoanalysis, are brilliant; the style is, as usual, grave and scientific."

+ New Yorker 15:87 Je 24 '39 100w

"Even those who disagree with Dr. Freud's premises and conclusions will find his ideas fruitful and stimulating. In 'Moses and Monotheism' we find again evidence of the powerful creative mind which has exerted such a profound influence on the thought of our generation." Louis Finkelstein

Sat R of Lit 20:11 Je 24 '39 850w

"Freud himself is not blind to the uncertain base on which his hypothesis is built, but he does not seem to realise that his foundations are so insecure as to discredit any theory erected on them. He has rendered invaluable service to Old Testament scholarship in many ways, but we must regretfully admit that this latest book can give us no real light on the story of Israel's early religion." Theodore Robinson

— Spec 162:965 Je 2 '39 700w

Reviewed by F. G. Bratton
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 480w

"Freud apologizes for the repetitions [the book] contains. They offend his sense of form. Nevertheless, in the case of a writer who practises such severe economy of statement and whose interpretation of the history of religion is so revolutionary, the three-fold recapitulation of his theme is by no means excessive. Moreover, his book contains the meditations of one of the most distinguished of living Jews on the destiny and significance of his race at a crucial moment in its history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p312 My 27 '39 2000w

Reviewed by C. M. Campbell
Yale R n s 29:178 autumn '39 1200w

FRIEDMAN, JACOB ALEXIS. The impeachment of Governor William Sulzer. 284p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [14s King]

353.9747 Sulzer, William 39-12451

William Sulzer was elected governor of New York on the Democratic ticket in 1912, was impeached in 1913, and removed from office. "The purpose of this study is to reconstruct, through the medium of public documents, official investigations, memoirs, and contemporary newspapers and periodicals, the events that culminated in Sulzer's impeachment by the Legislature, to analyze the evidence against the accused governor and the testimony adduced at the trial, and to trace the repercussions of his conviction. The author has attempted to assemble all the available records, organize the material into a logical sequence, and subject it to a critical appraisal." (Introd) Selective bibliography. Index.

"Although Dr. Friedman presents a graphic picture of Sulzer's abbreviated but hectic term as governor, he contributes little to our understanding of either the law or the procedure of impeachment. . . In presenting this fragment of local history, the author draws freely from many sources, but leans heavily—almost too heavily—upon contemporary newspaper accounts. Although the subject has excited the sympathies and prejudices of earlier writers, Dr. Friedman refuses to become a special pleader in the case and injects few conclusions of his own. . . The book is well documented, carries an adequate index, and is on the whole a valuable addition to our rapidly growing collection of studies of 'boss rule' and machine politics." H. M. Dorr

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:922 O '39 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 14 '39 160w

FRIEDRICH, CARL JOACHIM. Foreign policy in the making; the search for a new balance of power. 296p il maps $3 Norton

940.5 Europe—Politics. International law and relations 38-31655

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"The publication of this volume is exceedingly timely. Never before has the American press devoted so much space to the problem of foreign policy. The people of the United States, hitherto loath to regard any political problem as serious unless it pertained to party or pocketbook, is at last world conscious. Isolation is no longer a synonym for peace, nor has the world been made safe for democracy. . . Dr. Friedrich's study is an effort to consider this problem by outlining the pattern of democratic foreign policy in post-war Europe. . . Perhaps the most valuable part of the book is the incisive analysis of the foreign policies of the powers from Versailles to Munich." G. H. Stuart

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:322 Ap '39 650w

"It is high time that books such as this one are beginning to appear—that is, intelligent, readable, popular treatments of the problems of foreign policy. Professor Friedrich's book is excellent, and it is pleasant reading throughout." H. N. Howard

+ Ann Am Acad 202:247 Mr '39 550w

Foreign Affairs 17:629 Ap '39 20w

FRISBIE, ROBERT DEAN. Mr Moonlight's island; line-drawings by the author. 363p maps $2.50 Farrar

39-20957

Story of life and love on a South Sea island, with three beautiful Polynesian maidens as heroines—Miss Red-Jones, Miss Tern, and Miss Tears.

Booklist 36:44 O 1 '39

"The tale is delightful, but not without its more serious elements. Passions break out here as elsewhere; and the people here are not absolved from the common lot of mankind—suffering and death and strife and unhappiness. Mr. Frisbie is not writing a pretty story, an escape story. He's writing of life in the altogether." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p6 Ag 20 '39 650w

"Mr. Frisbie's attempt to vary the formula by making Mr. Moonlight, the trader in question, a philosopher with a taste for Marcel Proust, is not itself very convincing; and the perpetual drinking of beer is old stuff. . . 'Mr. Moonlight's Island' is, I fear, just another novel about the South Seas." H. M. Jones

— Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 380w

"It is Chaucer, it is Boccaccio, but without the sin and the snickering. It is the story of a more gregarious Garden of Eden in a modern world." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 20 '39 800w

"A wise and pleasing book."

+ New Yorker 15:61 S 2 '39 70w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 2 '39 270w

FRISCH, VICTOR, and SHIPLEY, JOSEPH TWADELL. Auguste Rodin; a biography. 453p il $3.50 Stokes

E or 92 Rodin, Auguste (W) 39-29492

Intimate sketch of the life and work of Rodin, based upon the notes of Victor Frisch, a Viennese sculptor, who for twenty years served as Rodin's assistant and confidant. The notes and verbal memories have been organized and translated by Professor Joseph T. Shipley. Contains a chronological list of Rodin's sculpture and an index.

Booklist 36:197 Ja 15 '40

"The sympathetic understanding of an admiring follower gives the biography vitality and authenticity, though it may preclude a completely objective appraisal of the artist's work. . . The volume is fully illustrated with photographs and Frisch's pen-and-ink sketches of the sculpture, and a chronological, annotated list of Rodin's works is appended. From all this and the vivid descriptions of the sculptor's friends and enemies, models and assistants, the tale takes on that quality which he himself valued when he said, 'Sculpture need not be original; it must be alive.'" Wilhelmina van Ingen

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 300w

"An uncommonly good and coherent book. One is mostly in the studio with work going on. The worker is a strange apparition, varying from moral titan to neurotic sensitive; now a sage, now a satyr. Yet this baffling Proteus never fails to be an indefatigable craftsman whose reasonable pride in his own work is tempered by a real humility in the face of nature. . . The illustration is inadequate. Too much dependence is placed on Mr. Frisch's pen sketches, which, while spirited, have small documentary value." F. J. M., Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 16 '39 350w

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Pot luck with lobsters; il. by Lucia Patton. 61p $1.50 Oxford

Children in Brittany 39-27650

Two small Breton children who wanted to go to the fête at Concarneau were Anne and Yvon. But they had no suitable clothes. A mischievous goose, a lobster-pot, and a rich man from the city settled that difficulty, and the children went to the fête.

Booklist 36:17 S '39

"The book is attractively printed and illustrated by Lucia Patton. It is not an essential purchase, but it does give something of the feeling of Brittany and its people." M. F. Potter

Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 90w

"There is more of suspense and action in this story than in many tales of foreign lands for younger children. The customs and life of Brittany are well portrayed and Lucia Patton's merry drawings are full of the festive spirit of holiday." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 4 '40 200w

Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

FROME, DAVID, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FROST, MRS ELIZABETH (HOLLISTER). The wedding ring; with drawings by Pierre Daura. 209p $2.50 Coward-McCann

39-27795

Ten short stories about the primitive people of the ancient French village of St Cirq-la-Popie, perched upon the rocks high up above the river Lot.

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39

"These are delicious, small, unimportant stories, told with considerable distinction and charm. Now and then a repetition grows a little tedious and something should be done about the overuse of the word 'lovely,' but there is color and grace and strangeness enough to take you into another world, and the physical details are delightful." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p3 S 17 '39 550w

"Let me say it at once: here is a rare and surprising book. Let me add immediately: it is the first I have picked up in a long time which, except for its claim to be a 'novel in the form of ten tales,' really lives up to the statements made on the jacket. . . From the first sentence to the last, the book has style and flavor one rarely encounters." Ann Springer

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 500w

"A novel of vibrant force and echoing beauty [which] blends a realist's courage with a poet's sensitiveness. . . 'The Wedding Ring' as a novel grows hardily from its local soil and is rich in its local pungency and fragrance; it holds also the beauty and strength and terror that belong to universal humanity." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 S 17 '39 800w

"Miss Frost describes the lives of her French peasants with a rare beauty of language and with deep feeling for the traditions of an ancient people."

+ New Yorker 15:82 S 16 '39 40w

"Miss Frost has captured the flavor of the peasant dialect, the mood and mind of simple people, so that they walk through her pages in the directness of their relationships with one another and with life. . . It is good, earthy stuff, sturdy and simple in its dialogue, with cruelty and ugliness cropping up in it but with a quality of poetic emotion that gives it impact and beauty. It moves with simplicity and dignity." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 O 28 '39 250w

FROST, FRANCES M. Yoke of stars. 368p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 38-29095

Shows the successive steps in the character development of Judith York: as a child; schoolgirl; artist; divorced woman, with children to support; the mature woman almost at point of breakdown; the woman of forty-two happy in a new love; and the completely fulfilled individual.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic Ap '39 420w
Booklist 35:190 F 1 '39

"Best of all in this novel is Miss Frost's development of Judith's relationship to her children; weakest her portraits of the three men who play an important part in her life. The language with which her story is told possesses the same ardent spirit of youth as the character it describes." R. C. Feld
+ — Books p3 Ja 29 '39 700w

"Portions of [the book] have appeared in the Yale Review; and the entire book measures up to the high standard of literary excellence demanded by that enlightened periodical. For Miss Frost writes prose as a poet is trained to use words—with an ear for sound, and with precision and delicacy of meaning. Her writing possesses, also, a restrained emotional power." E. R. Curtis
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 28 '39 550w

Reviewed by Dorothy Van Doren
Nation 148:242 F 25 '39 170w

"The writing is sometimes beautiful, sometimes too breathless—but in either case is marked by a fresh intensity."
+ New Repub 97:380 F 1 '39 50w

"To claim, as I do, that 'Yoke of Stars' is nowhere near so good a book as 'Innocent Summer' is to set oneself a task in explanation. For there is no question that this new novel of Miss Frost's has much that is likable and romantically appealing about it. Her prose is sensitive, discriminating; her humor has a gay lift; her sense of New England atmosphere is, as always, keen and sure. Furthermore, there are passages in the story that are genuinely exquisite. . . What disturbs one, however, about 'Yoke of Stars' is that it is so deeply, if subtly, sentimental that its characterizations slide off into easy and irritating formulas, that it leaves so much unexplained." E. H. Walton
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 22 '39 850w

"Although the writing is a little too staccato in spots, Miss Frost is both earnest and intelligent, and the result is more convincing than stories about artists are likely to be."
+ — New Yorker 14:71 Ja 21 '39 60w

"It is an attractive pattern and one which Miss Frost's lyric style is admirably able to embellish with many touches of compassionate understanding and gay humor. If the quality of the writing is uneven, that fault is artfully corrected by a steady improvement toward the close." James Gray
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:12 Ja 21 '39 550w
Wis Lib Bul 35:50 Mr '39

FROST, GEORGE EDWIN. Planets, stars, and atoms. 287p il maps $3 Caxton printers

523 Astronomy (W) 39-15690

"Presents in concept and terminology understandable to the layman a summary of the important rudiments of astronomy and related sciences. The text is illustrated with photographic reproductions, charts and six sky maps." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Booklist 36:38 O 1 '39
Boston Transcript p2 O 14 '39 50w

"In spite of its occasional errors of fact, its poor organization, and its literary limitations, the book is filled with excellent material, contains a fine series of star maps, an excellent glossary of astronomical terms, and is well illustrated and indexed." G. R. Harrison
— + Sat R of Lit 20:16 Jl 15 '39 240w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 16 '39 220w

FROST, JACK (JOHN EDWARD FROST). A Cape Cod sketch book (a fancy this book) [introd. by Joseph C. Lincoln]. unp $1.50 Coward-McCann

917.449 Cape Cod—Views 39-32210

Pencil sketches of Cape Cod scenes and houses, with descriptive text. The author has sought out historical and out-of-the-way places, but has also included some well-known sights.

"It still seems to us that the best part of Jack Frost's books are not the sketches, which are fuzzy and sentimental, but the odd bits of historical information in the notes beneath the pictures. They are the real meat of the book and must be the result of a considerable amount of wandering about the countryside and questioning of townspeople. . . We imagine Jack Frost's readers will spend many pleasant Sunday afternoons driving about the Cape searching for the quaint places he has described in his 'Cape Cod Sketch Book.'" M. C.
+ — Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 240w

"Mr Frost's handling of details is not always perfect, but his pictures reflect an easy and pleasant assimilation of a scene in its essence and individuality. It is his alert and inquiring eye that gives special merit to his work, however. He finds quaint places and searches out lore or other interesting information that lends curiosity to buildings and objects not striking in themselves. His notes are likewise breezy and suggestive, though occasionally transferring to the printed page some local claim or legend that requires further inquiry."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 26 '39 230w

FROST, LESLEY. Not really! eleven jolly stories; with an introd. by Louis Untermeyer, and il. by James Reid. 126p $1.75 Coward-McCann

39-31797

Eleven nonsense stories for young readers. The author is the daughter of Robert Frost.

"Read the book aloud, so not more than one story is read at one time. Thus spaced, the book will serve for eleven occasions when gayety is needed in the family circle. Gayety and the power to let one's self go are good traits in a story-teller for children." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ja 7 '40 250w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 30w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 40w

FROST, ROBERT. Collected poems, 1939. 436p $5 Holt

811 (W) 39-4925

This collection brings together six of the poet's books: A Boy's Will; North of Boston; Mountain Interval; New Hampshire; West-Running Brook; A Further Range.

"The new prose preface, called The Figure a Poem Makes, to Robert Frost's Collected Poems has as much form and precision, as much intensity and clarity as any poem in the volume."
+ Books p17 My 14 '39 600w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 1050w

"What Frost is surest of and what the reader is surest to get is the theme of freshness, a fresh way of looking at an old world so as to make it seem new. A poem, he says, should run from delight to wisdom. Most of his poems do more than that: they run both ways. He remains a poet to measure against poets." John Ritchey
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 22 '39 900w
Forum 101:240 Ap '39 20w

Reviewed by Vrest Orton
New Eng Q 12:563 S '39 1500w

"One feels on every page, in every line, the healthy, earth-tang soundness of the man—like a ripe Baldwin apple, plucked in its prime—the power of his simplicity, the amplitude of his mellow, all-embracing kindliness, his pantheistic attitude toward nature, his sensitive appreciation of the beauty inherent in emotions and things of everyday life." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 2 '39 550w

FROST, ROBERT—Continued
Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 15:76 Mr 4 '39 650w

"Frost cultivates his own garden, grouping with art so that everything there may be discussed in the same tone of voice. Meet him on these his own terms, and there is fine work, rewarding place-love, folk-love, solemn or gay recognitions. They are the recognitions of a man desperately determined that this is really all there is, and that this will be enough. It is not all, and it is not enough." Muriel Rukeyser

+ — Poetry 54:218 Jl '39 1750w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup sup vi N 18 '39 200w

FRY, ROGER ELIOT. Last lectures; with an introd. by Kenneth Clark. 370p il $5 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

701 Art

"This volume contains part of an unfinished series of lectures which Roger Fry had been preparing for some years before his death. He had given most of these lectures at Cambridge in his capacity as Slade Professor, and some, with variations, in London at the Courtauld Institute." (Pref) Contents: Art-history as an academic study; Sensibility; Vitality; Egyptian art; Mesopotamian and Aegean art; Negro art; American art; Chinese art; Indian art; Greek art; Index.

"After reading, we feel, not that we have acquired a lot of information but that we have gained skill in judging and understanding art, that the troubled field of art criticism is strangely cleared. Thus did Fry train his students when he was Slade professor of art at Cambridge, England. Because the book is from Fry's notes, it is not as easy reading as are most of his writings. But then it has more to it. It is meant to study, not read; to own, not get from the library. There are 320 illustrations, splendidly chosen." M. A. Ryerson

+ Books p25 O 29 '39 500w

"One had learned to expect of Roger Fry's criticism elegance, wit, and a delicate, developed sensitivity. His last lectures in each of these respects are no disappointment. Though they occasionally betray a roughness which would have been removed had their author been alive to supervise the publication, they have the compensating charm of direct and sometimes colloquial address." Roberta Morgan

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 18 '39 500w

"Roger Fry's . . . exploration of the great art periods of the past is a stimulating experience. Our heritages from these periods have often been catalogued, often described. Fry tries to carry us one step further, to help us to see them." David Burnham

+ Commonweal 31:139 D 1 '39 550w
Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '39 300w

Reviewed by Clive Bell
New Statesman & Nation 18:564 O 21 '39 1300w

"How extensively the critic might have revised the lectures, had he lived, we cannot know. But in their present form they reveal to the full the authority and breadth of Roger Fry's scholarship, indicating, too, on every page, the taste of a man of great sensitiveness, whose appreciation, reinforced by vast knowledge, had been evolved in accordance with the esthetic principles for which he stood." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p6 D 17 '39 1000w
New Yorker 15:71 S 30 '39 50w

Reviewed by D. S. MacColl
Spec 164:21 Ja 5 '40 1400w
Springf'd Republican p8 D 27 '39 420w

"Nowhere is Fry's complete freedom from artistic snobbishness more evident than in his lecture on Greek art. Not only does he disregard all the fashions in period, but he expresses enthusiastic appreciation of that popular work the Nike of Samothrace and even finds a good word for the much despised Laocoon. As a contribution towards clearing the visual arts from the obscurities caused as much by the wrong sort of scholarship as by ignorance these lectures are invaluable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p608 O 21 '39 2500w

FRYXELL, FRITIOF MELVIN. The Tetons; interpretations of a mountain landscape. 77p il maps $1.50 Univ. of Calif. [7s Cambridge]

917.87 Grand Teton national park, Wyoming. Teton mountains, Wyoming 38-27588

This small book pictures the mountain landscape of Grand Teton National park in Wyoming and sketches in its geological features. Index.

Booklist 35:6 S 1 '38

"Nearly every page breathes the splendid enthusiasm of its author for the geologic story and the spirit of the Tetons. Even the layman can thoroughly appreciate the interesting general geology of the region, the structural building of the dominating range, and its later remarkable sculpturing, through the fascinating form in which the material is presented. Dr. Fryxell's chaste literary style has brought out the aesthetic side of scholarly science with rare success. This little volume properly belongs in the field of literature as well as of science." R. T. C.

+ J Geol 47:210 F '39 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:56 O '38

FUCHS, MARTIN. Showdown in Vienna; the death of Austria; tr. from the German by Charles Hope Lumley [Eng title: Pact with Hitler]. 311p $3 Putnam [12s 6d Gollancz]

943.6 Austria—Annexation by Germany 39-8229

An "inside" account of the last three years of Austria's existence as a separate nation. The author is a former personal aide to ex-chancellor Schuschnigg.

Booklist 35:304 My 15 '39

"Herr Fuchs has written an engrossing book which in many respects comes closer to being an inside story of Austria's death struggle than anything which has yet reached print in English. Its most serious defect lies in the author's tendency to use direct quotations about conversations. . . This is the more regrettable since Herr Fuchs has amply authenticated, first-hand material of his own and had no need to resort to occasional overdramatization. Despite which, his book is a genuine contribution to the slowly growing library on Vienna's doom and those who were her doomsmen." Leland Stowe

+ — Books p3 Ap 2 '39 1500w
Cath World 149:762 S '39 140w
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 15 '39 500w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39

"Martin Fuchs's book is distinguished by a high amount of the Viennese light vein and formal art of writing. But like what other recent books on Austria we have seen, this is not an impartial historical study, but a book of resentment and propaganda. It consists of conversations between the more important figures of the story, conversations which are partly documented and partly fictitious. This colorful and impressive book should therefore not be taken as a serious source of information. There is no clean demarcation between matter of fact and conjecture, between history and fiction. It is a book abundant with bias and one-sideness." C. O. Cleveland

— + Commonweal 30:52 My 5 '39 480w
Foreign Affairs 17:815 Jl '39 40w

"The value of Herr Fuchs's narrative is in its circumstantial detail—the author was Press Attaché at the Austrian Legation in Paris in the final phase—and, above all, in his reproduction of hitherto unpublished documents of historical importance." W. H. C.

Manchester Guardian p5 Ap 11 '39 600w

Reviewed by Franz Hoellering

Nation 148:446 Ap 15 '39 600w

New Repub 98:387 My 3 '39 50w

"There are many illuminating sidelights in Herr Fuchs's pages on Central European politics between 1936 and 1938, and in particular the role of the vain, ambitious Austrian Foreign Minister, Guido Schmidt, recently rewarded by the Nazis with a big industrial directorship, becomes grimly clear. In describing so vividly scenes such as those in which Schmidt reveals his hand or Mussolini promises unfailing aid to his 'Viennese friends,' Herr Fuchs is writing from intimate knowledge and puts us all in his debt. It is a pity, therefore, that he lets himself describe with equally graphic detail scenes obviously outside his experience, such as Hitler pacing up and down his study in lonely indecision, and so on." John Lehmann

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:657 Ap 29 '39 700w

"This is a Legitimist chronicle, based upon information to which only a few have had access, and allowance must be made for natural bias. There are a number of minor errors, which a later edition should amend. The translation is likewise open to serious criticism and needs revision. Yet, for all that, the book is absorbing, important and convincing." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 2 '39 1300w

"Some of this is in Gedye's recent book, but there's plenty more to make your hair stand on end and clinch the indictment of Nazi Germany."

New Yorker 15:80 Ap 1 '39 60w

"This excellent volume adds to our large collection of informative, colorfully written, and one-sided literature concerning Hitlerian diplomacy. Because it deals with the interplay of European relations and Austrian politics between 1936 and 1938 and represents the views of people close to the center of power, this narrative contains the most complete and truthful story of the subject now available." J. F. Green

+ Sat R of Lit 19:4 Ap 8 '39 320w

"Nothing in this record alters the broad facts of Austria's downfall which are already known to the world. But there is a mass of diplomatic detail, much of it of considerable interest; and the critical reader will seek some assurance of its authenticity. Unfortunately, M. Fuchs gives us little help on this point. He rarely indicates the nature of his authority for the statements he makes; and internal evidence suggests that they are not all of equal value."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Mr 25 '39 800w

FUESS, CLAUDE MOORE. Creed of a schoolmaster. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 195p $2 Little

370.4 Education—Addresses, essays, lectures 39-27185

Nine essays on various aspects of education and the teaching profession. Contents: Creed of a schoolmaster; What can we do for the bright boy? The contribution of American private schools to American life; What should schoolmasters really teach? The transition from secondary school to college; The development of the New England academy; The promise of progressive education; English public schools; The American scene. The author is headmaster of Phillips Andover academy.

Booklist 35:245 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

Books p23 Ap 30 '39 450w

"Here is a much-needed, authoritative voice of a man who believes that a system is not much worse than the teacher who is using it; and that the success of a school is not measured by marks on college entrance examinations, but by service to the boy, or man, and through him to the community. Dr. Fuess has written a book which is heartening to schoolmasters and parents, or to anybody who believes in progressive education, lower case." Louis Zahner

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 18 '39 250w

Reviewed by M. E. Wence

New Eng Q 12:785 D '39 700w

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 11 '39 280w

Wis Lib Bul 35:98 My '39

FULLERTON, KEMPER. Essays and sketches; Oberlin, 1904-1934; pub. for Oberlin college. 284p $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

814 Theology—Addresses, essays, lectures. Oberlin college 39-1969

A collection of essays, for the most part first delivered as chapel talks at Oberlin, by the professor of Old Testament language and literature in the Graduate school of theology.

Reviewed by R. J. Bartlett

Boston Transcript p13 Ag 10 '39 600w

Christian Century 55:1578 D 21 '38 50w

FUNK & Wagnalls new Standard dictionary of the English language . . . also a standard history of the world. 2v buck $33; to libraries and schools $26 1938 Funk

423 English language—Dictionaries

"According to the Funk & Wagnalls company, this two-volume edition now being sold by the P. F. Collier & son corporation is printed from the same plates as their 'regular subscription edition.' The plates have been revised to bring them up to date, changes including the addition of new words, notation in the biographical entries of deaths which occurred during the past year, and revision of the color plate on signal flags. The Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary with the 'Standard History of the World' has been reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for October 1934 and April 1937 [Book Review Digest, 1934, 1937]." Subscription Bks Bul

Subscription Bks Bul 10:3 Ja '39 100w

FUNK & Wagnalls standard high school dictionary of the English language; ed. by Frank H. Vizetelly and Charles Earle Funk. 1008, xvii-xxxiip il $2.08; 25 per cent discount to libraries and schools 1939 Row

423 English language—Dictionaries 39-9683

"This dictionary differs little from the New Comprehensive Standard Dictionary of the English Language, published by Funk & Wagnalls in 1938 and reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1938 [under title in Book Review Digest, 1938]. The main text and illustrations are the same, but binding and preface are different and an appendix has been added." Subscription Bks Bul

Booklist 36:105 N 15 '39

"The large type and simply stated definitions make this dictionary attractive to many adults as well as to high school students, and it should be especially useful to adults with limited reading background. It is recommended for the home, school or public library, though it would not be needed by those already having the New Comprehensive Standard Dictionary."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:40 Jl '39 320w

FURFEY, PAUL HANLY. This way to heaven. 209p $2 Preservation press, Silver Spring, Md.

248 Christian life. Roman Catholic church 40-128

"A guide to the religious life for Roman Catholic laymen. . . Much space is devoted to the specialized Roman techniques of piety—how to behave at mass . . . the use of liturgical literature, and the sacrament of penance." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

FURFEY, P. H.—Continued

Reviewed by J. L. Burke
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 90w
Christian Century 56:1476 N 29 '39 100w

"'This Way to Heaven' is more of a guide book than a dynamic: it portrays the need and the means, and it urges to action. Moderate Catholics might conceivably be shaken by it from their lethargy of mind and will, but I fancy that the spectacle of heroic charity at work would shock them into a keener realization of their plight than any exposition of duress and duty." Richard Flower, O.S.B.
+ Commonweal 31:247 Ja 5 '40 300w

FURNAS, CLIFFORD COOK. The storehouse of civilization. (Science in modern living ser) 562p il maps $3.25 Teachers college

660 Natural resources. Technology. Civilization 39-20484

This volume, written primarily for teachers, is devoted largely to the raw materials of industry—minerals, the use and development of metals, non-metals, energy supply, and the synthetic materials developed from mineral deposits and from agricultural raw materials. The author is associate professor of chemical engineering at Yale university. Index.

"In these days of readjustment and of apparently insoluble social problems, a competent review of the facts and the detached verdict of the engineering professor are peculiarly valuable—especially for teachers." Gerald Wendt
+ Books p8 S 24 '39 750w
Chem & Met Eng 47:51 Ja '40 400w

"The book is a treasure house of information, definitely stated in words that command attention. . . The book is interesting and valuable." Harrison Hale
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:759 D 10 '39 330w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:60 O '39

"Evaluation of this book is difficult. Certainly it includes much interesting and challenging data presented in an attractive manner. Does it cover too much territory and thus give an impression of superficiality when one would desire greater concentration? Does it include source material for the teacher which is unobtainable elsewhere? Is not its appeal more striking to the layman who is largely unacquainted with school work, particularly in science? These questions may be answered by the degree of the acceptance of the book by teachers, students in science, and the lay public. The publication will repay consideration and examination by all these groups." A. W. Hurd
School R 48:72 Ja '40 420w

FURNAS, JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN. So you're going to stop smoking! 97p $1.25 Simon & Schuster

178.7 Smoking (W) 39-27490

Humorous brief discussion on the good and bad effects of smoking, how to give it up, and how not to go about relinquishing the habit. Contents: See the funny smoker; How to quit—if you want to; Dope from doctors.

Booklist 35:341 Je 15 '39
Pratt p11 autumn '39

FURNAS, MARTHEDITH (MRS S. E. STAUFFER). The night is coming. 319p $2.50 Harper

39-6473

This is the story of big, red-haired Stella Buchanan, daughter of an Illinois storekeeper, who died leaving his children much land but no money. Stella, taking over the management of the family's inheritance, in the course of the next forty years proved herself true sister of the clan of Robber Barons.

"A strikingly excellent book: unsparing and mordant in its etching of a society on the make, absorbingly interesting in its story; most of all incisive, brilliant, and alive in its portrait of a remarkable character." John Patton
+ Books p10 Mr 26 '39 750w

"A good first novel, written squarely and without frills."
+ New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 40w

"'The Night is Coming' is an unusually pithy first novel. It has humor, force, clarity. It projects an arresting character against a queer, arresting age. Though there are mistakes in construction and emphasis . . . it wins one by its ironic sharpness." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 26 '39 750w

FURST, BRUNO. Use your head. 289p $3 Funk

154.12 Mnemonics. Memory. Suggestion 39-16845

This book on how to cultivate and use memory is in four parts. Part one offers suggestions and exercises for improving memory, part two shows how the improved memory can be of use in public speaking, part three deals with the power of suggestion, and part four with hypnosis.

"The first thoroughgoing 'system' for memory training offered the American public for a long while, this one is based on principles that can be used by every-day citizens for business or social purposes, while in the upper ranges mathematical tables, long numbers, codes and other genuine twisters are carefully untwisted for the more ambitious rememberer."
+ Books p14 Jl 9 '39 200w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 17 '39 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39
N Y Times p24 Ag 20 '39 360w

G

GAGGIN, MRS EVA (ROE). An ear for Uncle Emil; with 83 drawings by Kate Seredy. 239p $2 Viking

(W) 39-27441

Jolly story of a little Swiss girl, who belongs to the Marching Mountain Maids Accordian Unit, and owns a herdsman doll of delightful personality.

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

"The Accordian Unit is a joy. The author enjoys everything so heartily it increases the reader's enjoyment. It is not in the least like 'Heidi' with which all stories about little Swiss girls are automatically compared. The pictures are Kate Seredy at what seems to me her best: charming in composition, they have unforced, exhilarating good humor and infectious good health." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 My 7 '39 450w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 28 '39 310w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

"A book like An Ear for Uncle Emil is a heartening substitute for a slow spring and absent sunshine. This book's pages are filled with the flowers and sunshine of Middlemeadow in the mountains of Switzerland. And next best to having a child like Resi Witt in the house is to meet her in the pages of a book."
+ Horn Bk M 15:159 My '39 360w

"Lovely pictures by Kate Seredy add to the value and enjoyment of the book. Highly recommended for all schools and children's rooms." A. L. Shea
+ Library J 64:518 Je 15 '39 160w

"The book's genuine fun makes it very appealing to 9 and 10 year olds and because of its freshness and originality one hopes that the author will write more stories about children as real and entertaining as Resi. Miss Seredy's pictures are notable. Against a background of Swiss peasant life, accurate and charming in its details, she has created characters with so much individuality, humor and human nature that the drawings alone make us feel that we have met Resi, her family and all the neighbors in their mountain village." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 My 28 '39 900w
New Yorker 15:105 My 13 '39 10w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 30w
Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

GAINES, AUDREY. The old must die. 310p $2 Crowell

39-22342

Detective story.

"In our opinion, 'The Old Must Die' is a credit to the business and is hereby recommended to all and sundry." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 S 17 '39 220w

"This background and general theme offers little novelty, and there is little expertness in its handling. But the story is not without interest, and it keeps its suspense." Kay Irvin
— + N Y Times p20 S 17 '39 140w

"Nicely written and presented with great fairness."
+ New Yorker 15:84 S 16 '39 50w

"Answer to problem telegraphed pretty early in story. Good characterizations and epic villainy of major murderee keep it going strong. Agreeable."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 23 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 240w

GALE, ARTHUR LORAN; KING, ELEANOR, and PESSELS, WELLMER. Make your own movies, for fun and profit. 230p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

778 Moving picture photography
(W) 39-27442

Information and suggestions for the amateur motion picture photographer; which includes hints on handling the camera, how to do simple tricks, use of the exposure meter, editing etc. Chapters are included on taking movies of the family, filming indoors and outdoors, filming your job, etc. Index.

Booklist 35:326 Je 1 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 24:26 Ap '39

"This is a big book and all of it worth reading, largely because the authors have managed to deal with matters essentially subjective without letting their thoughts get fuzzy."
+ N Y Times p26 S 10 '39 140w

GALE, MARTIN, pseud. A pony named Nubbin; with pictures by Margaret Van Doren. 74p $2 Viking

39-29725

A spoiled, sickly little Shetland pony is secretly trained by a six-year-old girl. For grades four to five.

Booklist 36:136 D 1 '39

"One baby teaching another is curiously touching; so many babies have Nubbin's attitude to obedience, and so few of them meet so early with just the right treatment for it! This is a 'different' pony story." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 8 '39 350w

"An appealing story for children from eight to ten who like horses." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 64:999 D 15 '39 80w

GALE, ZONA (MRS W. L. BREESE). Magna; introd. by Charles Hanson Towne. 119p $1.50 Appleton-Century

(W) 39-20167

The scene is a small midwestern town. It is the story of the dramatic conflict in the life of Magna Pethner; recently engaged to a fine young doctor, when she is suddenly confronted with a handsome, magnetic cousin, who immediately sweeps her off her feet.

Booklist 36:8 S '39

"For readers who know Miss Lulu Bett, Mister Pitt, Papa La Fleur and the rest, this picture of Magna will be a fitting addition to the line of portraits of which, unhappily, there will not be more. If any should come upon it without having known the novels that preceded it, the story of Magna will be an inviting introduction to one of the most distinctive and individual of American novelists." Mary Ross
+ Books p3 Ag 27 '39 600w

"This is a story that could belong only to Zona Gale. It is a tale of sterling character, and another snap-shot of Portage." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 650w

"Economy of style, clarity of thought and expression, and a sensitive understanding of humanity raise the narrative beyond a conventional love story to an artistic achievement."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '39 400w

"Essentially a smaller piece, not destined by itself to add many cubits to the stature of the woman who wrote 'Miss Lulu Bett' and 'Faint Perfume,' it is nevertheless as finely conceived and scrupulously polished as anything Zona Gale herself ever sent to press. Whatever the actual case may have been, no unfinished strokes or wavering lines suggest that it was something she had laid aside meaning to return." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p6 Ag 27 '39 800w
New Yorker 15:79 S 9 '39 40w

"This posthumous book has Zona Gale's accustomed midwestern small-town setting, but attempts a wider range of emotion than was usual with her. . . It is only at the beginning and the end of the story, the delicate portrayal of first love and the tranquil conclusion, that Zona Gale's art glows with a flame that is faint but very clear." Basil Davenport
Sat R of Lit 20:13 Ag 26 '39 270w
Times [London] Lit Sup p591 O 14 '39 190w
Wis Lib Bul 35:186 N '39

GALL, MRS ALICE (CREW), and CREW, FLEMING H. The top of the world; il. by Nils Hogner. 110p map $1.50 Oxford

[39-25150]

Greenland is the top of the world in this series of stories for the fourth and fifth grades. Beginning with the story of Eric the Red, it continues with stories of Eskimo life and custom, and the search for the North Pole by Peary.

"The style is rounded, as one expects from this team of writers; the pictures are black and white, clear-cut upon the page. It may be added to any geographical collection for children, for it will not duplicate anything else." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 D 31 '39 250w

"The best part of the book is its feeling of the North, and the vast spaces still unexplored. Otherwise, it does not seem especially distinguished. There is nothing just like this, however, and it will probably be useful and interesting to children of ten to twelve. The illustrations by Nils Hogner, and the map on the end papers, help give the book its Arctic atmosphere." Josephine Smith

GALL, A., and CREW, F. H.—Continued
+ — Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 120w
Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

GALLAGHER, BUELL GORDON. American caste and the Negro college; with a foreword by William H. Kilpatrick. 463p map $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

325.26 Negroes. U.S.—Race question. Negroes—Education. Colleges and universities—U.S. 38-37904

The author believes that tho slavery has been abolished, the United States still faces a serious problem in the sense of caste which rules the relationships between white and black. "The first eight chapters [of this study] carry through an analysis of caste and the social forces which work through the caste system. Chapters IX and X analyze the educational structure in the light of its social task. The remaining chapters work out details of principle and practice for the college which seeks to discharge its social function." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. S. Johnson
Am Soc R 4:443 Je '39 160w

"The title of this book does not do it exact justice, for it is much more than a discussion of the Negro college. It is an interesting and intelligent estimate of the American caste system, with historical and psychological insight." W. E. B. Du Bois
+ Ann Am Acad 205:202 S '39 410w

"The treatise will repay careful study for its valuable suggestions. Possibly the major contribution of the book is its explanation in a clear and scholarly way of the development of the American caste system and its basis as a social setting for the Negro college. That a president of a segregated college can see the task of his college as the transforming as well as the transcending of caste, is significant." C. S. Johnson
+ Christian Century 56:449 Ap 5 '39 1000w

"For a complete anatomy and physiology of the race problem, a description of its form and structure, and what makes it live and grow, this is one of the best books written by anybody in our time." Theophilus Lewis
+ Commonweal 29:696 Ap 14 '39 550w

"It is not an exaggeration to say that American Caste and the Negro College by [the] President of Talladega College, is not only the the book of the year, but also the book of this decade on the so-called 'race problem' in America. . . The book is prophetic in its vision and depth. It is a masterpiece of scholarship in the field. It is written in a lucid style and is engrossing even to the reader who has lived through most of the experiences on either side of the barrier of caste." John Dillingham
+ Crozer Q 16:153 Ap '39 500w

"The soundest work in this field to date."
+ New Repub 97:324 Ja 18 '39 50w

"The treatise of Dr. Gallagher is a study in social attitudes and social problems, and as such is of value to persons interested in the study of human behavior as well as to those whose specific interests may be in the field of education and minority group problems." R. N. Davis
Social Forces 18:133 O '39 700w
Spec 162:140 Ja 27 '39 750w
Reviewed by Alain Locke
Survey 75:91 Mr '39 550w

GALLICO, PAUL WILLIAM. Adventures of Hiram Holliday. 295p $2 Knopf

39-30542

Adventures of a proof reader on a New York newspaper who went to Europe on a vacation and was plunged into a whirlpool of romance and international intrigue.

Booklist 36:151 D 15 '39

"If the author has slain plausibility to make a romantic Hiram Holliday, why quibble? He has produced a rich chronicle of adventure, a swift panorama of events in half a dozen capitals of Europe in the months when the Continent was edging toward the war that makes today's black headlines. It is as crisp as an eyewitness report, and covers more of the map than any one eye could witness." Lisle Bell
+ Books p15 O 15 '39 400w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 28 '39 90w
Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '39 200w

"A bang-up, blistering adventure story." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 O 22 '39 360w
Pratt p23 winter '40
Reviewed by John Marks
Spec 163:842 D 8 '39 250w

"The novel is an altogether unusual one, with a plot that flaunts realism in the grand romantic manner."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p715 D 9 '39 270w

GALLINGER, MRS OSMA (PALMER) COUCH. Game of weaving. 110p il $1.34 Int. textbook

677 Weaving—Juvenile literature
(W) 38-25286

"Hand-loom weaving is described in this attractively illustrated little book intended for boys and girls in home or school. The first few chapters are devoted to the stories of animal, vegetable, mineral, and synthetic fibers and of their manufacture into threads. The instruction is based on the long experience of the author as a teacher." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 35:209 F 15 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 23:62 O '38
Schools Arts 38:13a O '38 20w

GALT, JOHN. The gathering of the West; ed. with an introductory essay and a glossary by Bradford Allen Booth. 109p $1.50 Johns Hopkins [7s Oxford]

39-11751

"Mr. Booth in his introduction surveys the history of the Scottish vernacular before Galt, examines his methods with it, and gives some account of its later history down to the twentieth century. 'The Gathering of the West' is a short novel which first appeared as a serial in 'Blackwood's' and separately in 1823. It is a companion piece to the 'Ayrshire Legatees,' which describes the funeral of George III, and the 'Steamboat,' which describes the coronation of George IV. In the 'Gathering' the subject is the new king's first visit to Edinburgh." Books

"There is much broad humor and historical accuracy."
+ Books p13 Je 11 '39 300w

"It is not a great story, but has a quiet charm and a 'braw Scots' atmosphere. He has made fine use of the petty jealousies, heartburnings, and rivalries between the families and shows genius in his delineation of character." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p18 Je 4 '39 700w

GANN, THOMAS WILLIAM FRANCIS. Glories of the Maya. 279p il maps $5 Scribner [18s Duckworth]

913.72 Mayas. Central America—Antiquities
[39-15948]

"This posthumous book . . . is a collection of reminiscences, some dating back many years; and the ground covered includes a large part of Guatemala, where Gann visited sites of pre-Spanish culture in the more northerly country. Gann was neither a trained archaeologist nor a scientific excavator. He was a medical officer of British Honduras who had a flair for fine specimens of Maya art." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"From beginning to end this rambling and unsystematic narrative holds the reader's attention with only a minimum of vacillation in the degree of his interest. It does so because of the simple charm of the style and because of the extraordinary variety of information, of excitement and of humor contained in the book. . . The book is crammed with vividly presented anecdotes and descriptions illustrative of life as lived today by the Indians who descend from the anciently civilized inhabitants of Yucatan, British Honduras and Guatemala." P. A. Means

+ — N Y Times p15 Ap 23 '39 1050w

Reviewed by L. J. Halle, Jr.
Sat R of Lit 20:14 My 6 '39 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Ap 15 '39 200w

GANNETT, FRANK ERNEST, and CATHERWOOD, BENJAMIN F., eds. Industrial and labour relations in Great Britain; a symposium. 364p il $2.50 America's future, inc, 205 E. 42d st, N.Y. [12s 6d King]

331.0942 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Great Britain—Industries and resources. Trade unions—Great Britain
39-11994

A symposium in which a number of prominent Englishmen write on various phases of the relationship between capital and labor in Great Britain. The book, edited by the publisher of the Gannett newspapers, is avowedly intended to serve as an object lesson to American legislators, industrialists, and union leaders.

Reviewed by Michael Mayer
Boston Transcript p1 Je 10 '39 450w

"An exceedingly worthwhile treatment. . . Any student of this problem as it exists in the United States will do well to study this volume thoroughly. . . A thorough study of this book, however, leaves one with the conviction that, although trade-union and government attitudes are thoroughly covered, the complete picture of management employee relations has not been presented. . . It is apparent that the editors limited their survey to contracts with government officials, trade-union representatives and others closely associated with the trade-union movement. It is only natural that such a sampling of opinion would result in a one-sided view of the problem."

+ — Management R 28:249 Jl '39 600w

Reviewed by W. H. Davis
Survey G 28:695 N '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p555 S 23 '39 80w

GARBEDIAN, HAIG GORDON. Albert Einstein, maker of universes. 328p il $3.75 Funk

B or 92 Einstein, Albert (W) 39-27186

Popular, sympathetic biography of the great German-Jewish scientist now living in exile in America. The book is largely personal and anecdotal in tone, but two chapters are devoted to explanation of Einstein's theories.

Booklist 35:251 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt
Books p6 Ap 9 '39 1100w

"Wherever the subtle line between the popularization and vulgarization may run, this book remains far on the wrong side of it. In a florid and patronizing style, the author tries to give simple explanations of many of Einstein's ideas, but they are not always literally intelligible. The super-piety with which Einstein is treated will sicken anyone with a realistic mind, while prejudice and grave historical errors will make a critical reader skeptical of the reliability of the book as a whole." R. C. Stauffer

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 25 '39 270w

"No appraisal of Garbedian's amassed Einstein legends and historical facts would be complete without a word of praise for the manner in which he has interpreted for lay readers the general and specialized theories of relativity, curved space, fourth dimension, and allied abstruse ideas. No longer need any reader feel ignorant of what Einstein's theories are all about, after reading chapters two and four." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 15 '39 650w

"A curious production, on a low level of culture; nevertheless it will have many readers, for Einstein, too, is a sort of hero and savior." M. M. Colum

Forum 101:270 My '39 850w

Reviewed by J. G. Crowther
Manchester Guardian p3 N 24 '39 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:21 Ap '39

"It is fortunate that the anniversary biography is such a good one. H. Gordon Garbedian has written with skill and with an enthusiasm for his subject which he succeeds in passing on to the reader. The volume is very well organized." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 19 '39 1350w
New Yorker 15:87 Mr 18 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 14 '39 1200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p728 D 16 '39 900w

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO. Poems; with English tr. by Stephen Spender and J. L. Gili; sel. and introd. by R. M. Nadal. 143p il $2 Oxford [7s 6d Dolphin bookshop, 5 Cecil ct, London, W.C. 2]

861

Poems of the young Andalusian poet who was killed, supposedly by Fascists, in 1936 in Granada. The Spanish and English versions are printed on opposite pages.

"Here is a delicate and a sorrowful book, which carries, along with its lament for the Spain that bore it, a cry to the America that will receive it." Babette Deutsch

+ Books p5 O 1 '39 700w

"Positively a poet, he brings a sharp new note to Spanish verse; but at times his lines are spotty with strained recherché effects, obscure, and frequently of surrealist imagery, indicative of audacity and youth. As the present anthology reveals, his morality is occasionally crude; nevertheless, he has written poems obviously Catholic in tone and background." J. A. Magner

Commonweal 31:54 N 3 '39 300w

"Much of this poetry, certainly all that is governed by the oral tradition, takes the simple Spanish verse-form, an eight-syllable line, easy to carry in the mind and easy to sing, and the translators have followed it very closely indeed, but their accuracy has not given a lame, tame English, rather an English which, though inevitably lacking the Spanish sonority, yet preserves much of the vivid charm and lyric movement of the original." C. P.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 23 '39 330w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
New Repub 100:276 O 11 '39 800w

"The present selection is admirably made to illustrate the phases of Lorca's development and English readers owe Messrs. Spender, Gili and Nadal a debt for this first really catholic introduction to his work." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:192 Jl 29 '39 600w

"The only criticism that can be made of this Oxford edition is that it is much too meager. Lorca's poems grow in the reader's mind by leaps and bounds; each adds to the other; they are all of a piece, and it is especially bad that the poem written for Mr. Nadal himself (the 'Martyrdom of St. Olalla,' already translated by Thomas McGreery, from the Gypsy Romances) is not included. But the present translators are as meticulous as they are ingenious, and they give us a very great Spanish poet in the best of English words." P. M. Jack

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO—Continued

+ N Y Times p2 S 3 '39 1250w

"Rather stiffly literal renderings, which tone down the brilliance and harden the poignant simplicity of the originals. Selected by the poet's friend R. M. Nadal, who writes an informative preface."

New Yorker 15:63 S 2 '39 50w

"In their translations from Garcia Lorca, Spender and Gili have apparently tried to combine a literal rendering of the text with an English prosody based upon the principles of Spanish versification. The result is, to be mild about it, unhappy. It could hardly have been otherwise. . . It is easy enough to point out the failures of a book so long expected and so well-meaning. Now that the job has been done, it seems probable that many of the failures would not have occurred if the translators had been less ambitious." Dudley Fitts

Sat R of Lit 20:12 Ag 26 '39 800w

"The poetry of Federico Garcia Lorca is very various and he has been variously judged, but every one probably now agrees that he was one of the greatest poets of this century. Much of his poetry was, one might say, collective; it belonged to the great tradition of racial song which keeps welling up in the Spanish drama and on the lips of the people throughout the ages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p315 My 27 '39 600w

GARDINER, DOROTHY. Snow-water. 360p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 39-4901

The scene of the story is Bartorville, Colorado, midway between Denver and Cheyenne. It chronicles the career of the town's founder, Daniel Bartor, from the year 1868, when he first saw the possibilities of the site while scouting for Indians, to 1934, when due to his irrigation projects the town has become prosperous, and Daniel himself, surrounded by his numerous descendants is celebrating his sixty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Booklist 35:290 My 1 '39

"One wonders a little at Miss Gardiner's tentativeness in implying that a new pioneering spirit is needed to solve the new problems of human need created by post-depression conditions among the people of Bartorville, 1934. But neither such criticisms nor a prose that tends to be overchatty can obscure Miss Gardiner's accomplishment. In 'Snow-Water' she has added a lively and readable chapter to the fictionalized history of the American West." J. H. Friend

+ — Books p10 Mr 5 '39 600w

"It is a lusty, gusty story of achievement on the epic scale. Miss Gardiner has a rare gift of picturesque metaphor, and she is an unusual storyteller." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 25 '39 450w

"The theme is a new one for prairie novels, and Miss Gardiner's lively treatment gives it a first-rate send-off. Even the love accompaniment comes through agreeably without making you wonder where you'd met it before."

+ New Repub 98:147 Mr 8 '39 50w

"Miss Gardiner writes in a feminine manner, for all her cussing, without special distinction but with popular magazine competence. She has a real story here which she got at second-hand from family background, apparently. It is a pleasing addition to the growing library of tales about our American past." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 5 '39 450w

"Miss Gardiner makes water seem really exciting. Her hero, a profane, indomitable old curmudgeon, should be added to the full-length portraits of American pioneers."

+ New Yorker 15:82 F 18 '39 40w

"Miss Gardiner means to present [Daniel Bartor] as the best type of rugged individualist. In dramatizing his incorruptible integrity and his singleness of purpose she has a considerable success. It is a misfortune, therefore, that she has allowed her attention to be diverted from Daniel far too frequently. . . Much the best of the book is to be found in the long opening section dealing with the period of struggle between 1868 and 1871." J. G.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 4 '39 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 27 '39 220w

Wis Lib Bul 35:65 Ap '39

GARDINER, GORDON. Notes of a prison visitor. 254p $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

365 Prisons—Great Britain 39-11013

"For a number of years prior to 1923 it was the practice of the prison commissioners of the English prisons to invite men of 'goodwill' to pay weekly visits to the prisoners in their cells. . . This book consists entirely of the personal notes of one of these visitors—Major Gordon Gardiner. From August, 1922, through October, 1923, Mr. Gardiner had informal weekly visits with many different prisoners of varying ages incarcerated for burglary, robbery, larceny, sex crimes, counterfeiting, manslaughter, fraud, bigamy, assault, perjury, etc." Am J Soc

"Such notes might have some value if they gave an impartial and unprejudiced account by a trained observer of life in prison. About all that can be said, however, is that the book is a record of a series of biased, emotional impressions of an egotistical layman, revealing the superordinate 'holier than thou' attitude of the so-called conventional citizen toward the lawbreaker in a subordinate position." Nathan Bodin

— Am J Soc 44:771 Mr '39 300w

Manchester Guardian p7 N 11 '38 220w

"Notes of a Prison Visitor reveals the writer as a man of charm and kindliness, with a sense of humour and capacity for friendship. It is to be hoped that it will not reveal to those who knew them the identity of the prisoners and the troubles they confided to Major Gardiner. But as there should be an Unofficial Secrets Act for unofficial prison visitors, this book should not have been published, and it is perhaps just as well that its form makes it very tedious reading despite the attraction of the writer's personality and style."

New Statesman & Nation 16:932 D 3 '38 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p771 D 3 '38 60w

GARDNER, EMELYN ELIZABETH, and CHICKERING, GERALDINE JENCKS, eds. Ballads and songs of southern Michigan. 501p il $3.50 Univ. of Mich. [15s Oxford]

784.49774 Folk songs, American. Ballads, American 39-28434

"Here are some two hundred songs and ballads, among them a considerable sequence of 'the aristocrats of folk song,' the Child ballads, with many of the others commonly associated with them. For full measure Miss Gardner presents large groups of songs of the lumber camps and other home-made ballads and songs. . . Miss Gardner groups the pieces according to their general themes, under such headings as Disasters, Crime, Happy Love, or Unhappy Love, Occupations, and so on." Books

"Miss Gardner has produced an exceptionally interesting volume, sound in its scholarship, broadly suggestive in its human implications.

We are willing to let the case for Michigan rest with it for a considerable time." Constance Rourke
+ Books p10 S 24 '39 800w

"The editing has been faithful but timid and the book is not much more than a well-arranged miscellany. Yet there is something instructive to the student of folk-song in seeing, at any rate as far as the texts are concerned, the raw material in all its various stages of rawness and over-ripeness."
Times [London] Lit Sup p528 S 9 '39 350w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the perjured parrot. 280p $2 Morrow 39-27150

Detective story.

Booklist 35:232 Mr 15 '39

"A speedy yarn, one of Perry Mason's best cases." Will Cuppy
+ Books p20 F 26 '39 210w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 150w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:728 N 18 '39 60w

"Another hit for Erle Stanley Gardner." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p28 F 26 '39 110w

"Lighter in vein—though not in weight—than Mason chroniques. Otherwise has all w.k. virtues of this brand. Grade A."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:24 Mr 4 '39 40w

Time 33:63 Mr 6 '39 30w

"A good plot whose weakest point is the parrot which provides its title."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p741 D 23 '39 70w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the rolling bones. 279p $2 Morrow 39-23294

Detective story.

Booklist 36:89 N 1 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p12 S 10 '39 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 70w

"In this tale of the somewhat mysterious Alden Leeds and his connections with the gold fields and the underworld, Erle Stanley Gardner is as brisk and resourceful as ever, and Perry Mason skates with all his aplomb and vivacity along the edges of, to say the least, contempt of court. But the story itself falls somewhat below the high point of the best Perry Mason books. It is perhaps a little more involved; it is certainly a little less interesting." Kay Irvin
+ — N Y Times p22 S 10 '39 200w

"Routine story made complicated by too many mixed identities and sordid pasts that began in the Klondike. The trick ending won't quite compensate for some pretty dull characters."
— + New Yorker 15:80 S 9 '39 50w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 9 '39 30w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The D.A. draws a circle. 315p $2 Morrow 39-32381

Detective story.

Booklist 36:215 F 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p26 N 26 '39 300w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 40w

"When it comes to describing a legal fencing bout in such a way that the reader follows it with unabated interest, Erle Stanley Gardner can give cards and spades to other mystery writers." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 N 26 '39 150w

"Smooth, easy-to-read story, with a political angle."
+ New Yorker 15:120 D 2 '39 30w

"To customarily snappy Gardner dialogue, tricky situations, add legal quirks, machine-gun action, and extra-surprising climax. Top drawer."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 25 '39 40w

GARDNER, MONA. The menacing sun [phot. by the author]. 338p map $2.50 Harcourt
915 East (Far East)—Description and travel (W) 39-27443

After twelve years in Japan, the author, an American journalist, traveled south thru Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, the East Indies, and India, visiting countries and viewing civilizations, which she fears, are consciously feeling the menacing threat of Japan's imperialistic ambitions. Much of her book is devoted to the experiences and observations of the ordinary traveler, but the political note frequently slips in.

Booklist 35:329 Je 1 '39

"The major value of Miss Gardner's story is not in its contribution to our knowledge but in her power as an entertainer. It meets what is to me the most important test of all books on all subjects: it is most decidedly readable. With Miss Gardner as guide you go to some extremely interesting places with a very pleasant companion who will discuss with you, in what is often a bright and original idiom of her own, all that is worth looking at but let you doze in golden silence wherever the scenery is monotonous or the people stupid." Rodney Gilbert
+ Books p4 My 14 '39 1150w

"Miss Gardner writes as an observer, not as an authority, and that is why her book is interesting. It is graphic rather than pedantic. Her account of the lands and the peoples has a freshness and color that is admirable. As a travel book it is excellent; as a survey of possible battlefields it is unique." F. S. Ambrose
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 500w
Cath World 149:506 Jl '39 390w

"This is rather more than a travel book, but rates at least three stars in that class."
+ Christian Century 56:611 My 10 '39 50w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '39 200w
Foreign Affairs 18:174 O '39 20w
New Repub 99:112 My 31 '39 50w
New Statesman & Nation 19:82 Ja 20 '40 380w
N Y Times p8 My 7 '39 700w

"Not remarkable as a political commentator, Miss Gardner has accurate eyes and ears, and a good deal of the East seems caught in her pages."
+ — New Yorker 15:123 Ap 29 '39 40w
No Am 247:394 summer '39 300w

"Had Miss Gardner been willing to let her book go for what it is—random jottings from a traveler's notebook—there would be no cause for complaint. Unfortunately, she has chosen to describe it as a politico-economic study, and this it most assuredly is not. When she confines her attentions to fellow-passengers in a railway compartment in French Indochina, or when she expatiates on the beauties of a rum omelet as prepared in a Cingalese jungle, she is pleasant company. But when, as occasionally happens, she fills the page with reflections on the state of the nation, any nation, she offers the reader a sorry rehash of bazaar rumor and club gossip." Philip Lilienthal
— + Pacific Affairs 12:329 S '39 350w

GARDNER, MONA—Continued

"Miss Gardner writes well and is more than usually observant. She is able to create many pictures which will remain vivid in the reader's mind and, like most traveling journalists, appears quietly impressed with her own perspicacity. Her record of adventures makes entertaining reading, although it will be impossible for some readers to escape the conclusion that her final judgments are based not so much on what she saw as upon what she wished to believe. The book will be of more interest to those who are unfamiliar with the countries the author describes than to those who have any knowledge of them." R. H.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 6 '39 350w

Reviewed by Evelyn Waugh
Spec 163:300 Ag 25 '39 140w

"The book is entertaining and informative, and contributes to the reader's knowledge of these generally little known parts of the world. Yet the reader has the sensation of being taken on a breathless trip through the jungle, without pausing long enough to weigh and assimilate the information gained. The dominant impression that remains, however, is that if Japan once starts seizing those lands to the south and west of her, effective opposition will have to come not from the countries themselves but from their protector states of England, France and Holland."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 28 '39 700w

Time 33:91 My 1 '39 310w

"A thoughtful and well-written book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p487 Ag 19 '39 650w

Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

GARDNER-SMITH, PERCIVAL. Saint John and the synoptic Gospels. 100p $1.25 Macmillan [5s Cambridge]

226.5 Bible. New Testament—St John. Bible. New Testament—Gospels [39-12134]

"This book reopens a question generally held to have been settled: the sources from which St John derived the material for his gospel. The accepted view, that he was familiar with the narratives of Mark and Luke and made use of these as sources, Mr. Gardner-Smith finds not proved, and he examines the whole gospel afresh in order to test this theory and to find out if there is any evidence that tells against it. He finally proposes a new possibility, which may have an important influence on the study of the beginnings of Christianity." Publisher's note

Reviewed by S. V. McCasland
Christian Century 56:855 Jl 5 '39 350w

Reviewed by S. A. Cartledge
J Religion 19:298 Jl '39 400w

"A book which, if it does not always carry complete conviction, certainly deserves to be read and pondered with more than usual care."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p36 Ja 21 '39 1000w

GARLAND, HAMLIN. The mystery of the buried crosses; a narrative of psychic exploration. 352p il map $3.75 Dutton

133.9 Psychical research 39-15054

"In this book Mr. Garland relates a series of psychical experiments which he was led to perform with the assistance of a medium. He received communications from a number of voices, of which the principal one represented itself to be Father Junipero Serra, the great mission priest of California, and by following their directions he found a number of metal crosses, baked into adobe blocks which would be mistaken for ordinary rocks; according to Father Serra, these were pre-Christian Indian relics, which had been thus concealed from the white men." Sat R of Lit

"The intention of this amazing record of psychic phenomena is scientific, and it may be that the evidence so carefully gathered and so convincingly presented by Mr. Garland is of value in the field of parapsychology. But no reader will be concerned with that after the first few pages. He will find himself absorbed in a walloping good story, and he won't care a fig whether it proves anything." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p9 Ag 6 '39 850w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 10 '39 270w

"A frank, direct and interesting narrative."

+ N Y Times p11 S 10 '39 440w

"Mr. Garland tells his story with evident sincerity, but ramblingly, with all the repetitions and the intrusions of irrelevant voices which always occur in investigations of this kind; and like too many amateur psychicists, he draws no clear distinction between clairvoyance and telepathy, and between these powers and indications of the survival of the personality after death." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 10 '39 490w

Discussion by the author
Sat R of Lit 20:9 Jl 29 '39 320w
Time 33:95 My 22 '39 400w

GARNER, MRS ELVIRA. Sarah Faith Anderson: her book; il. by [the author]. [106p] $2 Messner

39-34159

In 1838 Sarah Faith Anderson, daughter of a missionary to the Seminole Indians, kept a diary for a time and then forgot it. A hundred years later her great-granddaughter visited St Augustine and found the diary. The story is illustrated with small colored pictures on almost every page.

"It is a panorama of yesterday, dissolving views of childhood, the same though many years apart. The pictures tell the story even to children who cannot read easily, but it is really for eight-year-old girls." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 N 12 '39 250w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
Library J 64:842 N 1 '39 40w

"With an incredibly light touch the author has written a happy, gay little story that manages also to convey a sense of the continuity of life and the intangible joy of home-coming. In format it is equally pleasing, with dainty water color sketches on every page. Definitely superior to the Ezekiel books." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 65:123 F 1 '40 100w

"The coincidence which children love is brought into play here, plausibly enough, but the link which brought her closest to the child of long ago remains the reader's secret. . . The story element is so slight as to be almost negligible, but with the same warmth and the same pleasure in little things which characterized 'Ezekiel' Mrs. Garner has evoked a fragrant memory of life when Florida was sleepier and wilder than it is now." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p22 N 12 '39 280w

"Slender but attractive."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 50w

GARNETT, CHRISTOPHER BROWNE. The Kantian philosophy of space. 287p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

114 Kant, Immanuel. Space and time 39-12949

"The purpose of [this] study is to contribute to the discussion of the character of time and the character of space by a critical examination of Kant's views of space as he developed them between 1747 and 1787. We propose to consider those views in relation to the theories of space of two of his main predecessors, Newton and Leibniz and also in relation to the ideas of three important thinkers of the present day, namely, S. Alexander, Whitehead, and C. D.

GARNETT (gär'nĕt)

Broad. Our aim is to contribute to the determination of the meaning of nature, chiefly from the historical angle." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Nature 144:587 S '30 100w

"Professor Garnett is none too lenient to Kant; and even if one is convinced by him that the doctrine of the 'Dissertation' was formulated quite in this piecemeal and somewhat blind manner, it would seem that the admittedly prophetic character of much of Kant's speculation, even in its very inconsistencies, might appropriately be taken as a tribute to his insight rather than as evincing a determination to 'have it both ways.' But the book none the less represents a fine treatment of a recondite theme."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Ag 12 '39 420w

GARNETT, EVE. The family from One End street, and some of their adventures; il. by [the author]. 212p $2 Vanguard [3d ed 5s Muller]

[38-29096]

The adventures of a happy but impecunious English family. Mr Ruggles was a dustman, Mrs Ruggles a washerwoman, and they managed to feed and clothe their seven children. The climax of the story is a happy day spent in London by the whole family.

Booklist 35:192 F 1 '39

Booklist 36:118 N 15 '39

"We should have more stories about such English children as these, who never saw the inside of a nursery, to balance the Christopher Robins. . . The book, whose pictures are funny as Phil May's, won last year's Carnegie Medal in England. Perhaps it has taken so long to reach us because we feared our children would not understand some of its words. We often underestimate the intelligence of our children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 12 '39 230w

"Let it not be supposed that the adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Ruggles, Lily Rose and Kate, the twins, Jo and Peg, and the baby that won a prize at the baby show are prosaic or uneventful. They are rich in unexpected events and entertaining detail, strongly characterised, and infinitely endearing." Mary Stocks

+ Manchester Guardian sup x D 3 '37 300w

"The incidents are credible and often amusing and there is something endearing about the Ruggleses. . . The style, however, has a tendency to become wordy and the story would move more quickly and the characters would be still more interesting if the author, instead of saying so much about them, would allow the reader to become acquainted with them through their actions and conversations. The drawings are humorous and expressive." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p12 O 22 '39 400w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 10w

GARRATT, GEOFFREY THEODORE. Gibraltar and the Mediterranean. 351p maps $2.50 Coward-McCann [10s 6d Cape, J]

946.8 Gibraltar. Mediterranean sea. World politics. Great Britain—Foreign relations

39-18337

"This book falls into two equal and opposite parts: a clear, painstaking, cautious and unsensational history of Gibraltar from its earliest times to 1914, and a highly coloured and frankly partisan review, in which fact, conjecture and fiction are inextricably blended, of the problems of policy relating to Gibraltar and the Mediterranean in the past few years. Mr. Garratt remarks that no history of Gibraltar has been written for some seventy years." (Spec) Index.

Booklist 36:5 S '39

Reviewed by J. B. Phillips
Books p4 Jl 30 '39 850w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p13 S 22 '39 180w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 19:193 S '39 700w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p12 My 6 '39 550w

Foreign Affairs 18:377 Ja '40 100w

Reviewed by J. L. Hammond
Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 21 '39 850w

New Repub 100:28 Ag 9 '39 50w

New Statesman & Nation 17:596 Ap 22 '39 70w

"Admirably written and informative book." D. W.

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:658 Ap 29 '39 900w

"This is a timely, interesting, well-documented and well-written study. . . [However] Mr. Garratt sees history with some astigmatism; he cannot be called an objective writer; some of his observations are obviously partisan; a few are dated (the book was written before the Spanish war had ended) and some time already seems to have refuted." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 13 '39 1450w

"Though lacking clear-cut aims, this book is steadily informative and frequently challenging."

+ — New Yorker 15:76 Jl 22 '39 60w

"There are still a few British journalists carrying on the great tradition of the days when British journalism was not merely literate and urbane but also the most enlightened and outspoken in the world. There are fewer still whose chief work in recent years has not been more for the American than the British public. Among these few, G. T. Garratt is a man to watch." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 Jl 15 '39 900w

"Mr. Garratt's general method of approach is typical enough to be interesting and instructive. In dealing with the fifteen years before the War, he takes what may be called an extreme anti-imperialist attitude, quoting several times the writing of E. D. Morel. On the other hand, when he reaches the present day, his attitude is that of a whole-hearted imperialist." E. H. Carr

Spec 162:639 Ap 14 '39 1250w

"The impartial reader will find some difficulty in understanding exactly what is the policy or action which the author, profoundly dissatisfied with those of successive British Governments is now recommending for adoption; but he will find much food for thought in the historical part of the book. . . The author seems to have certain defects as a historian. One of them is a tendency to judge persons and conditions of a past age by the standards of to-day."

Times [London] Lit Sup p210 Ap 15 '39 700w

GARRETT, ALFRED COPE. The man from heaven. 465p $2.50 Friends bk. store, 302 Arch st, Philadelphia

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography

"Here is still another Life of Christ. . . The aim and course of Dr. Garrett is literary rather than scholarly. Though giving due regard to scholarship, he explains that where he does not utilize it, it is because he dissents from it." Churchman

"I do not recall another life of Jesus written by a member of the Friends Society. The approach is unusual and the volume is well written. The reader is in no doubt as to the deep Christian spirit of the author. The outstanding features are a distinct literary charm and the development of incidents beyond the Gospel story." A. F. Gilmore

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '39 500w

GARRETT, A. C.—Continued

"Exceptionally good. Superior by far to the verbose Life of Hall Caine's, it is also free of the sentimental assumptions of the famous Life of Jesus by Renan, which gave us a sublime character, but with all divinity squeezed out. . . While there are some new and novel interpretations of the acts and teachings of the Saviour, they are rational and acceptable. While he accepts points in the Gospel narratives rejected by scholars who regard them as interpolations, the author fits them into the life of Christ as a whole and makes the scholars seem rather silly and presumptuous. His own literary style is splendid." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

+ Churchman 153:17 Je 15 '39 280w

GARRIGOU-LAGRANGE, REGINALDO. Three ways of the spiritual life. 124p $1.25 Benziger [3s 6d Burns]

248 Spiritual life

"The well-known Dominican theologian in six chapters gives us a synopsis of his larger works, treating the problem and characteristics of the three stages of the spiritual life according to ascetical and mystical theology; of their happy leading to the peace of the earthly Kingdom of God, which is a prelude to the life of Heaven." America

Reviewed by D. M. O'Connell

America 60:382 Ja 21 '39 100w

Cath World 149:125 Ap '39 130w

"For jaded, tepid, static Catholics—those who lament that they seem to get nowhere—this wisp of a book contains the sweet wisdom of spiritual life." Richard Flower

+ Commonweal 29:389 Ja 27 '39 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p603 S 17 '38 20w

GARSIDE, ALSTON HILL. Wool and the wool trade. 331p il $2.50 Stokes

338.1 Wool. Woolen and worsted manufacture. Wool trade 39-9811

"The purpose of this book is to describe the apparel wool trade of the United States, particularly from the standpoint of how the trade uses the New York Wool Top Exchange. The opening chapter covers both apparel wools and carpet wools, but the remaining chapters are devoted entirely to apparel wools, since the Wool Top Exchange serves chiefly the apparel wool trade." (Pref) Index.

"Even to those who may be experts in their particular branches of the wool industry and related banking, importing and packing, the book offers useful information. If the numerous examples were all tabulated—as they are in only a few instances—the book might serve as a reference book to better advantage. The study, however, is exceedingly well put together." Walter Humphreys

+ Am Econ R 29:835 D '39 550w

Booklist 35:343 Je 15 '39

GARTH, DAVID. Eastward in Eden. 314p $2 Kinsey

39-9400

Combined international-mystery-spy story and love story. The chief character is a young Boston society girl whose sheltered existence is suddenly broken into when a woman spy, dying on her doorstep, mutters a few cryptic sentences, including the words Eastward in Eden.

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

"David Garth has adopted what you might call the jigsaw approach in this ingenious narrative. At first glance the pieces are so apparently unrelated that you can't believe they belong together. But they do, and the process of linking them up is first-rate entertainment, fairly divided between New England and ancient Egypt." Lisle Bell

+ Books p16 Ap 16 '39 200w

"The plot is brought to a conclusion more satisfying than most in the case of spy stories. The characters are attractive and the tale is full of action and excitement." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 23 '39 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 23 '39 210w

GASKELL, MRS AUGUSTA. Whence? whither? why? a new philosophy based on the physical sciences; introd. by F. K. Richtmyer. 312p $2.50 Putnam

215 Life. Religion and science 39-10352

"Here is a venture in metaphysics which attempts to reconcile what Mrs. Gaskell conceived to be the essential claims of present-day science and our historic Christian faith. . . The first section of the book is composed of seven chapters which introduce the average reader to the philosophical background necessary for an understanding of the more constructive portions of the work. . . The major portion of Mrs. Gaskell's work is devoted to a statement of her own metaphysical positions. . . In the final portion of the book she attempts to establish the essential congruity of her philosophy with the teachings of the Bible. This is done by a comparison of the main tenets of her philosophy with selected texts from the Old and New Testaments." (Christian Century) Index.

"As a production addressing itself to the basic problems of philosophy and human existence, this volume leaves much to be desired. Many sources are quoted but there is too little synthesis. Too much is claimed for science. . . The book may stimulate thought in those who never attempt to hew out their own ideas concerning God and life." R. K. M.

— + Boston Transcript p7 My 20 '39 180w

"Whence? Whither? Why? will probably not appeal to very many of the professional philosophers whose analyses are so refined and whose vocabularies are so technical that even their own small academic reading public have difficulty in understanding them. They will regard Mrs. Gaskell's work as that of an amateur. Nevertheless her work is to be commended even though it lacks profound philosophical originality and the rigor of refined logical analysis." G. L. Abernethy

+ — Christian Century 56:1510 D 6 '39 900w

"Here are science and religion, impounded, compacted and amalgamated in a manner seldom if ever before achieved. Although it may not convince the materialistic scientist, it certainly cheers the ardent religionist." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 153:18 Ap 15 '39 170w

GATHORNE-HARDY, GEOFFREY MALCOLM. A short history of international affairs 1920-1938 [issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. 487p il map $3.50 (8s 6d) Oxford

909.82 International law and relations. World politics 39-27128

"[This work] first published in 1934 [Book Review Digest, 1935] has now been reissued in a revised and enlarged form to cover the history of the years between 1934 and [1938]. The earlier part of the book, beginning with 1920, is largely unchanged, but the final part, from 1930, has been recast and enlarged. The account of the 'momentous and crowded events of the last four years' is new." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The treatment of so vast a field in one volume is necessarily superficial. But what is lacking in depth is more than made up in breadth and perspective." F. L. Schuman

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:513 Je '39 200w

Booklist 35:235 Mr 15 '39

"The value of A Short History of International Affairs is that it sews together into one coherent pattern the many divergent strands of recent history." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 50:5 Ap '39 270w

"Even among the dust and heat of current issues the book loses none of the insight, clarity and fairness which marked the first edition."

+ Economist 133:660 D 24 '38 100w
Foreign Affairs 17:805 Jl '39 10w
Times [London] Lit Sup p794 D 17 '38 90w

GATTI, ATTILIO. Saranga, the Pygmy; il. by Kurt Wiese. 226p map $2 Scribner

(W) 39-27651

Saranga, a pygmy boy old enough to be initiated into his tribe, slips away on a secret mission of his own. On the expedition he performs a service for his tribe, discovers a sick elephant which he cures, and then trails it home to his own people.

Booklist 36:17 S '39

"This book is here to stay, and I hope it stays as long as Paul du Chaillu's. . . It would be hard to read this without a thrill; the emotion will be remembered, for there is fire in the style and sympathy in the spirit." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Jl 30 '39 400w

"It should interest any child, for it is a well told story." M. P. Johnson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 110w

"Not since Mowgli made his appearance has there been so warm and living a jungle tale as this." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:301 S '39 200w

"It is a fascinating book and an enlightening one." Irene Smith

+ Library J 64:844 N 1 '39 20w

Reviewed by J. L. Sauer
Library J 64:952 D 1 '39 150w
N Y Times p22 N 12 '39 200w

"A real find for boys anywhere from eight to thirteen is this engrossing book by an explorer who is, it seems, also a good writer. He can make the jungle live for readers of any age, and his pygmy child comes to be as familiar as the small boy next door."

+ New Yorker 15:89 N 25 '39 40w

"Good but a trifle stodgy."

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 30w

Reviewed by Amabel Williams-Ellis
Spec 163:840 D 8 '39 70w

GATTY, OLIVER, and SPOONER, EDGAR CLYNTON ROSS. Electrode potential behaviour of corroding metals in aqueous solutions. 515p $8 (25s) Oxford

541.39 Corrosion and anti-corrosives. Electrolytic corrosion [Agr 39-133]

"The book is written in the language of the electrochemist, with emphasis on the explanation of corrosion phenomena, rather than on the solution of practical corrosion problems. It presupposes a knowledge of electrochemical methods and calculations. The first chapter is a general discussion of surface films, circulating currents, and potential behavior. . . The chapters following are applications of the general theory to specific metals; Chapter 2 is on mercury; 3 on lead and silver; 4 and 5 on copper; 6 on iron; 7 on antimony, arsenic, and tungsten; 8 and 9 on cadmium; and 10 on magnesium." Ind & Eng Chem

---

"An applied electrochemistry for the sophisticated only. . . While the validity of the method of attack is stoutly upheld, the speculative nature of various detailed interpretations is readily admitted." G. S. Forbes
Am Chem Soc J 61:757 Mr '39 370w

"A full account of the subject of electrode potentials of corroding metals was needed, and this book will be welcomed by those concerned with corrosion problems." Scott Ewing

+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:675 D 20 '38 800w

"This book is of very definite utility to electrochemists and corrosion chemists, and should be of considerable interest to many others." A. J. G.

+ Nature 143:315 F 25 '39 310w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:6 Ja '39

GAUGUIN, PAUL. Gauguin [paintings; introd] by John Rewald [ed. by André Gloeckner]. 167p $3 French & European publications [10s 6d Heinemann]

759.4 (W) S39-1

"Collection of the paintings and drawings of Paul Gauguin. . . There are 127 plates, of which over a dozen are in colour. . . The illustrations are more or less in chronological order, with some adjustment to allow similar subjects to be reproduced together. . . Mr. Rewald's introduction is mainly biographical and gives many quotations from Gauguin's letters." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Booklist 35:233 Mr 15 '39

"Mr. Rewald's biographical introduction to his book of reproductions of Gauguin's pictures is as impartial a piece of writing as one could hope for. No biographer has any right to be completely impartial. . . Gauguin can be defended but he cannot be whitewashed. He was an understandable but hardly a lovable character. Mr. Rewald understands him and consequently pardons the arrogance, the bitterness, and the sudden alternations between self-praise and self-pity which his friends must have found more than a little trying. The reproductions are good." Eric Newton
Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 18 '39 190w

"No doubt it is owing to the comparative simplicity of Gauguin's colour that these reproductions seem unusually good—and additional reproductions of drawings in the text. . . At the end of the book there is a valuable bibliography."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p151 Mr 11 '39 120w

GAVIAN, MRS RUTH (WOOD). Society faces the future; drawings by Alien Lewis. 656p maps $1.96 Heath

301 Sociology 38-24898

"This is a textbook for a high school course in the 'principles' of sociology approached from a scientific point of view. It begins with a treatment of the fundamental principles concerning culture ('the social heritage') and human social behavior." (Social Educ) Contains questions on the text, lists of readings, and an index.

Am J Soc 45:641 Ja '40 80w
Am Soc R 4:461 Je '39 80w

"In this treatment of a much needed approach in sociology textbook writing the author has achieved an unusually sound and thoroughly scientific handling of the chief points upon which virtually all sociologists are agreed, wisely omitting less fundamental principles which are as yet either controversial or of uncertain standing." J. F. Cuber

+ Social Educ 3:69 Ja '39 430w

"The book should be attractive to the high school student both from the standpoint of material, and from the method used in presenting the problems. It does not preach a sermon to accomplish the end. The text carries the student to the point where individual problems come to the surface. From that point, there seems to be no limit to the possibilities of social problem activity." W. E. Martz

+ Social Studies 30:189 Ap '39 380w

GAVIAN, MRS RUTH (WOOD); GRAY, ARTHUR AMOS, and GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. Our changing social order; drawings by James Daugherty. rev ed 692p maps $1.80 Heath

301 Sociology 39-5859

This new edition of a book first published in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1935) "embodies changes resulting from its use by teachers. New chapters on public opinion, democracy versus dictatorship, the farm problem, and alcohol as a cause of maladjustment." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:275 Ap 15 '39

"It is this reviewer's conviction that problems of democracy and related subjects cannot be successfully taught by using only one book as a text. If a basal text is to be used, however, as a starting point, this is one of the best available." J. E. Downes

Social Educ 3:514 O '39 600w

Social Studies 30:240 My '39 20w

GAY, FREDERICK PARKER. The open mind: Elmer Ernest Southard, 1876-1920. 324p il $5 Black Cat

B or 92 Southard, Elmer Ernest 39-10069

"Elmer Ernest Southard (1876-1920) had a mind which was open, but was also brilliant, clear, sympathizing, fertile. This book opens the mind of Southard to the reader not through a psychological study but rather by putting on display what Southard said and wrote to his friends and what he did. What he began and what he accomplished in the nineteen years of his professional life is indeed a marvel. He became pathologist, neuropathologist, etymologist, philologist, philosopher, psychiatrist, poet, chess player, and in all he excelled. Integrator and organizer, he initiated and headed Harvard's department of neuropathology, Massachusetts' Psychopathic Hospital, and Smith College's training for psychiatric social workers." Books

"Professor Gay's book brings Ernest Southard to life. To be sure, another friend may expostulate: 'This is Gay's Southard, not mine,' but that it is a Southard none of them can gainsay. The more reasonable contemporaries of this great Harvard neuropathologist and social psychiatrist will be grateful to Gay for his interesting biography, even though the portrayal would be different from their own unwritten lives of Southard. Those who never knew Southard—others who have not heard of him—will enjoy this volume, which presents a man unique in spirit and accomplishment. . . This biography of Southard is a moving story which none should miss and all will enjoy." Norman Fenton

\+ Am Soc R 4:450 Je '39 550w

"This biography though worshipful is restrained and scientifically objective. The sequence of the story is at times jumbled, but the style is clear and succinct, the evidence is conscientiously balanced, the presentation that of an able laboratory worker. If he had lived, Southard might have been another Osler; the biography of Gay compares not unfavorably with that of Cushing." W. G. Lennox, M.D.

\+ Books p19 Mr 19 '39 340w

GAY, ZHENYA, and CRESPI, PACHITA. Happy birthday [il. in black and red by the authors]. [35p] $1 Viking

39-11570

Story-picture book for young children. All the children in the village had useful pets, but their teacher owned only a useless French poodle. On the teacher's birthday the children decided to give a circus. To their chagrin their superior pets fell down as circus performers, but the French poodle saved the day.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ap 23 '39 300w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack

Boston Transcript p13 Je 29 '39 30w

"A gay, amusing picture book."

\+ Horn Bk M 15:163 My '39 50w

"An amusing picture book for children from four to seven. [The] price is not prohibitive for library buying." E. G. Mullan

\+ Library J 64:469 Je 1 '39 130w

GAY, ZHENYA, and CRESPI, PACHITA. 170 cats [il. by Zhenya Gay]. [27p] $1 Random house

(W) 39-27652

Picture-story book for very young readers about the eighty-five cats which some woodsmen took with them into the forest, and what happened when all those cats became thirsty.

Booklist 36:17 S '39

"More an anecdote than a story, the pictures tell it. They are lively and funny, without the decorative design of 'Millions of Cats,' which a first glance suggests, but with charm, candor and unforced fun. Little children who have not yet learned that if you like dogs you are expected not to like cats, and who like plenty of cats, will find every page a pleasure." M. L. Becker

\+ Books p20 N 12 '39 180w

"Grown-ups as well as children will enjoy counting the active pussies."

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 90w

GAYER, ARTHUR DAVID; HOMAN, PAUL THOMAS, and JAMES, EARLE KENNETH. The sugar economy of Puerto Rico. 326p $3.75 Columbia univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

338.1 Sugar industry and trade. Puerto Rico—Economic conditions 38-39333

"The study does not attempt an examination of all of Puerto Rico's varied and complex problems. It is concerned with the structure and operation of the sugar industry, the most important in the Island, and with the place of that industry in the general Puerto Rico economy. . . The study is based on data available in 1936 except for some insertions and footnotes based on more recent events." (Foreword) Index.

"Readers will soon discover that through no fault of the authors the book is not definitive. But it is the best study of the subject that has yet been made and should be of great service in clarifying thought upon problems fundamental for the Island." V. S. Clark

\+ Am Econ R 29:136 Mr '39 1150w

"This comprehensive and documented book fills an imperative need."

\+ Foreign Affairs 17:644 Ap '39 20w

GAYLE, NEWTON, pseud. Sinister crag. 288p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Gollancz]

38-38828

Detective story.

"This isn't high pressure, especially, but it keeps you reading and the outdoor scene is a novelty." Will Cuppy

\+ Books p18 F 19 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 70w

" 'Sinister Crag' is noteworthy not so much for its somewhat improbable plot and more than improbable motive, not for any unusual ingenuity in development, but for its vivid and exciting, indeed enthralling, descriptions of rock-climbing in the Lake District." E. R. Punshon

\+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 1 '38 160w

"The pith of Sinister Crag is the climbing, which Mr. Gayle makes one believe is a wildly exciting but not at all enviable way of risking one's life. The detection also has its excitements, but the solution, especially the motive, is weak; and I trust future climbers will not go tampering with Jug Handles on such insufficient excuse." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 15:1078 Je 25 '38 190w

"The story is skillfully told and should appeal particularly to readers who know something about the dangerous sport of mountain climbing, although such knowledge is not essential to the enjoyment of the tale." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 F 19 '39 130w

Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 18 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '39 240w

"The unity of the book is admirable and the solution fair. Rock climbing and detection are mingled in proper proportions, and altogether the novel reaches the top flights of detective fiction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p419 Je 18 '38 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:104 My '39

GEDO, LEOPOLD. Who is Johnny? il. by [the author] tr. from the Hungarian by Kate Seredy. 243p $2 Viking

Children in Hungary 39-30543

Gay story of three boys: Jani, a fourteen-year-old colored youth from Hungary; Rudi, who could play the harmonica; and Sandro, the Italian boy they met in Venice. The book tells of their loyal friendship during the time when they were trying to locate Jani's father.

"This qualifies as a mystery because it lives up to the title: a question of identity is involved. But it is also a picaresque tale, humorous, lifelike and recognizably true to its foreign scene." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 31 '39 400w

Reviewed by Ruth Page

Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 30w

"A vigorous human story, fresh and original in conception, with plenty of action, excellent characterization and a touch of poetry. . . Kate Seredy has translated the story into an easy, natural, English. The author's drawings are spirited and are suggestive of the action and atmosphere of the story rather than literal representations. A book that will catch and hold the interest of boys and girls from 12 to 15." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 14 '40 550w

GEDYE, GEORGE ERIC ROWE. Betrayal in central Europe; Austria and Czechoslovakia: the fallen bastions [Eng title: Fallen bastions]. 499p $3.50 Harper [16s Gollancz]

940.5 Europe—Politics—Crisis, 1938. Austria—History. Czechoslovakia—History (W) 39-27129

A résumé of the events which led up to Hitler's successful diplomatic maneuvers of 1938, set forth by an English journalist who bitterly condemns his own country and France for their parts in the "betrayal." Index.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Library Bulletin 14:108 O '39

Reviewed by M. W. Graham

Am Pol Sci R 33:898 O '39 300w

Booklist 35:228 Mr 15 '39

"It is poured out in haste, in fluency and in fury. It reads as if it were all written under pressure, like one long—much too long—series of newspaper dispatches, tumbling over each other to catch the deadline, with the good, bad and indifferent—the humorous anecdote, the judgments, the 'color' patches, and the politics—thrown in with no time for editing or elision. It also reads as if it were written out of a genuine passion." Walter Millis

+ — Books p3 F 19 '39 1900w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube

Canadian Forum 19:93 Je '39 280w

Christian Science Monitor p18 F 21 '39 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39

Current Hist 50:3 Mr '39 320w

Economist 134:395 F 25 '39 480w

"The last chapters deal with the Czecho-Slovak crisis as seen from Prague. Mr. Gedye's own militantly democratic point of view sometimes obtrudes, and one feels that he is not so scrupulously accurate in describing events where he was not present as he is in his eye-witness accounts. Nevertheless this engrossing book is a reportorial masterpiece."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:635 Ap '39 150w

Reviewed by W. C. Langsam

Living Age 356:199 Ap '39 400w

"One would like to say of so fine a book that it was finely written, but, unfortunately, this is not altogether true. Part seems to have been written too hastily; the narrative and even separate sentences are frequently turgid and confused. In spite of these defects, however, the last half, written with such splendid fury, is a remarkable feat of sustained moral indignation in literature. One would like to think that 'Fallen Bastions' expresses the true feelings of democratic Britain." J. M. D. P.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 My 23 '39 440w

" 'Betrayal in Central Europe' is not a rehash of newspaper articles. It is a remarkably homogeneous account of vast experiences, written under the sway of the terrific emotions which swept Central Europe last summer and fall when history was being enacted with all the suspense of a grandiose and cruel melodrama. This suspense is felt almost in spite of the writer, who simply tells all he knows, all he sees—always speaking straight from his heart. . . I know that world, and I have never read a better journalistic account of it." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 148:324 Mr 18 '39 800w

"Murder is the word, and Gedye's book, packed to the brim with facts, is one of the first by a British eyewitness to tell the story of the event. Written in an easy and lucid style, with a sometimes biting presentation and analysis of incidents, situations and personalities, and with an intuitive feeling for drama, it is an engrossing book to read. But it offers the reader neither cheer nor comfort, for it tells a story of moral collapse, of insidiously planned treachery and sometimes unmitigated horror." Maurice Hindus

+ New Repub 98:136 Mr 8 '39 470w

"Mr. Gedye excels in the dramatic reporting of historic scenes, such as the February fighting in Vienna, the last hours before the Reichswehr crossed the Austro-Bavarian border, and the crowds gathering in Prague as danger reached its culmination; but none of his chapters have a more terrible quality than those where he describes the unleashing of antisemitic and anti-Marxist violence upon the helpless populations of Vienna and the Sudeten districts. Their effect is so overwhelming, that one is inclined to regret the frequent rhetorical passages in which he tries to reinforce the damningly conclusive moral of his narrative." John Lehmann

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:252 F 18 '39 1200w

"This reviewer is unashamed to admit that reading of the book kept him awake two nights. Other great journalists have told about their adventures with Lenin and Abd-el-Krim. Still others have achieved fame by letting their imaginations color dull events. But here is the record of yesterday from the heart of Europe, made fantastically exciting by intimate knowledge, brilliant writing and a deep sympathy with the underdog." Emil Lengyel

+ N Y Times p3 F 26 '39 1250w

GEDYE, G. E. R.—Continued

"There's much secret history here, apparently unimpeachable. On the whole the most revealing and factual of the many books on the Central European crisis."

+ New Yorker 15:84 F 18 '39 50w

"Gedye has produced a document which will be well known no matter what course the future may take. If future historians try to justify the German aggressions, all that Gedye says will have to be disproved. And if objectivity is still possible, then Betrayal in Central Europe will be a major source for the study of the world order of 1938." Francis Williamson

+ — Pol Sci Q 54:450 S '39 550w

Pratt p25 summer '39

"This unhappy story of 'the fallen bastions' will be told many times again, but never with greater sympathy for the victims and greater contempt for the betrayers. Mr. Gedye takes sides, and compels his reader to take sides." J. F. Green

+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 25 '39 600w

"The question of why the Czechs never fought in the end is not very well dealt with; there are dark hints that Mr. Chamberlain threatened to fight with the Germans against them, but no consideration of Syrovy's weakness when it came to political decisions, none of the doubt which many Czechs, like many Englishmen or Frenchmen, felt about Russia's true strength. Here is the weakness of Mr. Gedye's book. It has a colloquial way with it and therefore tends to ramble and describe the same incident twice. But what matters is that it presents masses of immensely important material together with judgements which, since they sometimes ignore the arguments they are intended to destroy, have a partisan appearance." Elizabeth Wiskemann

+ — Spec 162:270 F 17 '39 750w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 140w

Time 34:78 S 18 '39 20w

"An arguable case can be made out against British policy last September, particularly if every factor but one in the problem be ignored. But this case cannot be built on wild hearsay statements, extravagant innuendoes, crude vituperation of the Prime Minister and savage attacks on Lord Runciman. In two or three years, when Mr. Gedye has had time to discover that Lord Baldwin was not driven from office because he was too democratic for Mr. Chamberlain, and that Great Britain is not passing through a 'pre-Fascist' epoch, he may perhaps be induced to give us a fresh edition, revised in the light of calmer reflection, of his Austrian chapters. These, despite some shortcomings, will be indispensable to any future historian of post-War Austria."

Times [London] Lit Sup p99 F 18 '39 950w

Wis Lib Bul 35:101 My '39

"Written in the Sheean-Gunther-Farson tradition, full of direct quotes, packed with emotion, 'Betrayal in Central Europe' is the impressionistic memoir of a man who lived in Vienna and saw what it was like." A. W. Griswold

Yale R n s 28:826 summer '39 240w

GEIJERSTAM, GOSTA AF. Iva; tr. from the Norwegian by Joran Birkeland. 236p $2 Dutton

(W) 39-6483

A tragic story of a Norwegian who loses his farm to a money lender, then wanders off into the mountains to live by hunting and fishing. He makes one or two attempts to return to normal living, falls in love and marries, but the story ends with his return to defeat and solitude.

"Here is no sprawling epic devoted to the quantitative view of experience. A small novel, limiting itself rather than attempting to catch infinity or match it with its pages, 'Iva' has more life in it than many a larger one. Gosta af Geijerstam reminds us that an author should weigh his words, not his manuscript." Maxwell Geismar

+ Books p11 Mr 19 '39 550w

"Gösta af Geijerstam's 'Iva' is as bleak as his 'Northern Summer' and 'Storevik' were sunny and gay. It is written with equal skill in achieving the right word and sustaining a mood, but a mood that is grim and words that are bitter to express it. . . This book is also, as were his others, by the evidence of realism and the unquestionable sincerity of its tone, heart and marrow of Geijerstam's northern land."

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '39 440w

"Iva Storgaarden . . . is too muted and ineffectual a personality, too little acquainted with himself, to give meaningful center to even so short a novel as this: the study of so toneless a character belongs to briefer fiction. This disparity is a pity, for the separate episodes of the story have often genuine distinction and the world through which the people move is more memorable than they." O. B. White

— + Commonweal 30:111 My 19 '39 300w

"The humor and sunniness for which Geijerstam is known in this country are conspicuously absent and he has studiously avoided a story that he always seems about to tell. When he gets to nature descriptions the writing takes on an emotional coloring. One can smell, feel, hear the voices of the land and the woods. But so far as characterization and story-telling go, 'Iva' confuses restraint with the extreme naturalistic school of writers who often come dangerously close to saying nothing." Stanley Young

— + N Y Times p24 Mr 26 '39 500w

New Yorker 15:86 Mr 25 '39 90w

"Iva is subtly drawn; but so great is his apathy that he is a distant and unsatisfactory central character. The reader is left puzzled by his strengths and his weaknesses, unable to understand what it was that bent him to this shape. Therefore it is Norway and not Iva which is again Gøsta af Geijerstam's hero." K. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:18 Ap 1 '39 340w

Wis Lib Bul 35:104 My '39

GEISEL, THEODOR SEUSS (DR SEUSS, pseud). The king's stilts; written and il. by Dr Seuss. [48p] $1.50 Random house

(W) 39-25149

Nonsense picture book about the hard-working King of Binn, whose only recreation was walking on stilts, and about the dire results to the kingdom when someone stole the stilts.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Library Bulletin 14:250 N '39

"This is the best Dr. Seuss so far, and that's no small praise." M. L. Becker

+ Books p22 N 12 '39 200w

Cath World 150:374 D '39 20w

"A thoroughly amusing yarn." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 64:870 N 1 '39 180w

"Following on the heels of 'The Five Hundred Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins' and 'And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street,' this is just a little anticlimactic. There is the same suspense, the same breath-taking pace, and, although no one can gainsay its originality, the fantasy does not seem quite so spontaneous nor absurd. Yet Dr. Seuss at his second-best is much better and funnier than no Dr. Seuss." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p12 O 15 '39 280w

"Children seem to like it, but the story somehow fails to achieve the taste and fun and fairy-tale rightness of last year's book, 'The Five Hundred Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins.'"

New Yorker 15:87 N 25 '39 50w

GERARD, FRANCIS. Red rope. 282p $2 Dutton
39-22736

Detective story.

"Some of Francis Gerard's pipe dreams are wild enough to provide a kind of left-handed entertainment for grownups. This one struck us as rather blurry in general effect—the result, perhaps, of excessive complication." Will Cuppy
— Books p8 S 3 '39 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 S 23 '39 70w

"Fraud, imposture and international schemings add further complications to an already too complicated story. But something happens on every page." Kay Irvin
N Y Times p22 S 10 '39 120w

"Loose ends are finally tied up very cleverly in this exciting story. Substantial plot and good dialogue, too."
+ New Yorker 15:84 S 16 '39 50w

"Penny dreadful."
— Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 16 '39 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 160w

GERARD, FRANCIS. The return of Sanders of the River; from the immortal characters created by Edgar Wallace. 336p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Rich] 39-9649

Twelve short stories carrying on the adventures of Edgar Wallace's character, Sanders of the River.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p13 Ap 9 '39 200w

"We found that the longer we read these short-stories the more tiresome they became. The first few were quite enjoyable." Marian Wiggin
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 70w

"These Wallace figures are not at all exciting; nor is the humor, either of situation or of language, ever really funny. In short, here is not the real thing, but only an imitation—although a rather clever one." G. W. Harris
— + N Y Times p24 Ap 16 '39 130w

"None of the twelve stories quite recaptures the old credibility; most, however, will find familiar pleasure in many echoes, and will congratulate Mr. Gérard upon the closeness of his approach to success."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p482 Jl 16 '38 110w

GERARD, FRANCIS. Secret sceptre. 286p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Rich] 39-5773

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 Mr 5 '39 160w

"Mr. Gerard has woven one of the most outlandish yarns we have ever read around the story of the Grail. He has brought it up-to-date, proven that it exists in England and surrounded it with a guard of men who will protect it, even to the extent of beheading traitors within their group. . . And while his story moves on through its mazes, the Grail myth becomes more and more laughable. Even the rituals of the Knights—which should be beautiful—are simple absurdity." Marian Wiggin
— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 11 '39 180w

"This is a wild one. It is wild in the sense of romantic fantasy pushed to the verge of delirium. If you like that sort of thing you will probably enjoy it, for the tale is not badly told. But this is not for readers who like some faint approach to everyday reality in their mystery novels." Kay Irvin
N Y Times p28 Mr 5 '39 120w

"The Holy Grail, a wild Irishman, an American villain who talks cockney, medieval mumbo-jumbo, and plentiful excitement. Thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Mr 11 '39 40w

GERHARDI, WILLIAM ALEXANDER. The Romanovs; evocation of the past as a mirror for the present. 484p $5 Putnam
947 Romanov family. Russia—History. Russia—Kings and rulers (W) 40-89

History of the Russian imperial family, the Romanovs, describing in familiar fashion the three hundred years when this famliy ruled Russia. Index.

" 'The Romanovs' is a book keyed to an era—the era of the Munich pact of 1938. The reader of 'The Romanovs' needs to be warned at the outset that the chronology is perplexing. . . One of the chief items in Mr. Gerhardi's portrait of Catherine the Great is the legend that she was the daughter of Frederick of Prussia. . . His acquaintance with the memoirs should have prevented his making this mistake; but his determination to depict a strong union between the Russia and the Germany of that time leads him to employ incredible and erroneous data as props for his theory." Katharine Anthony
Books p4 D 10 '39 1150w

"Often Mr. Gerhardi writes amusingly, sometimes wisely, but usually he needs both more history and more art." R. H. Phelps
+ — Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 370w

"Since Mr. Gerhardi does not believe that history is a science it would probably be unfair to reproach him for his unfamiliarity with the sources. Yet the fact that his brilliant narrative is unfortunately marred by numerous factual errors and by broad generalizations unsupported by historical evidence cannot be passed over in silence. Acceptance of the theory that history belongs to the exalted realm of art surely does not free the 'artistic' historian from the primary duty of checking his statements with the documents laboriously collected by academic scholars in the bulky tomes that Mr. Gerhardi finds so uninspiring." M. T. Florinsky
— + N Y Times p10 Ja 14 '40 1100w

"Serious but highly entertaining. The Romanovs went in for lurid love, and Mr. Gerhardi makes the most of it."
New Yorker 15:119 D 2 '39 30w

"Glittering, malicious, at times staggeringly funny history of the Romanov dynasty."
Time 34:86 N 27 '39 500w

GERMAN Reich and Americans of German origin [sponsored by Charles C. Burlingham and others]. 45p map $1.50 Oxford
943.085 Propaganda, German. Germans in the U.S. Germany—Nazi movement 38-29097

"This is a collection of source materials, drawn from official German documents or from writings and speeches by responsible nazi leaders, showing the purpose to win the allegiance of American Germans to the reich and the methods by which it is to be done." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. K. Pollock
Am Pol Sci R 33:349 Ap '39 170w

"The sponsors are to be congratulated for bringing together such a concise list of revealing quotations. It merits careful study even by those well versed in the ideology and practices of the Third Reich. So far as the United States is concerned, it focuses attention upon a basic problem. . . The sponsors of this volume undoubtedly intend to follow this 'exposure' with a positive program. Liberals cannot afford to remain on the defensive." H. L. Childs
+ Ann Am Acad 203:215 My '39 450w
Booklist 35:184 F 1 '39

"No doubt a less scholarly and dignified presentation of these facts would have a more popular appeal, but to those persons who sincerely wish to inform themselves about 'un-American activities,' a careful perusal of this book is recommended." Pauline Ehrlich

GERMAN Reich and Americans of German origin—Continued

Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 310w

Christian Century 56:124 Ja 25 '39 100w

"The sponsors of the volume recognize that the likelihood that this form of foreign propaganda will become a danger is remote." Yet in their preface they point out the importance of an informed public opinion in the United States to resist the setting apart of a large group of inhabitants whose duty it would be to render primary allegiance to the ruler of a foreign power." G. M. T.

Christian Science Monitor p18 F 24 '39 310w

Foreign Affairs 17:634 Ap '39 50w

N Y Times p20 Ag 20 '39 440w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper

Sat R of Lit 19:11 D 31 '38 380w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 28:161 F '39 280w

GHEON, HENRI. St Vincent Ferrer; tr. by F. J. Sheed. 190p $2 (6s) Sheed

B or 92 Vincent Ferrer, Saint

Biography of St Vincent Ferrer, who was born in Valencia in 1350, and died in the year 1420 in Brittany, where he was regarded as "the Saint."

"M. Gheon is very French, and he loves to use in his sketches of the canonized that sly, semi-ironic attitude which lends a proper pungency to his text. Then his translator adds a dash of Chestertonian Englishry and the result is a tart, but perfectly canonical, hagiography." David Gordon

+ America 62:416 Ja 20 '40 150w

"Such a study of St. Vincent and his times has long been needed. But this book has a way of becoming tedious. The apparently carefully planned divisions are not followed too closely and incidents that would be clearer if united, are discussed separately. Mr. Gheon has not quite lived up to his reputation as a skilled biographer of saintliness." Rev. J. La Burke, S.J.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 210w

"It is a good book about a great Spanish Saint who deserves to be better known and loved in Spain and elsewhere." L. F. Whelan

+ Commonweal 31:230 D 29 '39 240w

"A delightfully simple and winning telling of a strange tale." B. I. Bell

+ Living Church 101:12 D 27 '39 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 6 '40 40w

GHEON, HENRI. Secret of the Curé d'Ars; tr. by F. J. Sheed. 256p $1; pa 50c (Unicorn bks pa 1s) Sheed

B or 92 Vianney, Jean Baptiste Marie, Saint

"Life of Jean-Marie Vianney, French priest in the early years of the nineteenth century, who transformed his village, gained wide fame for sanctity, was visited and tormented by the devil in person over a period of thirty-five years . . . and died full of good work in 1859 and was beatified in 1905 and canonized in 1925." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by F. J. L. Burke

Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 80w

"An extraordinary portrait of one of the most extraordinary of modern saints."

+ Cath World 148:761 Mr '39 60w

Christian Century 55:1511 D 7 '38 100w

Christian Century 55:1606 D 28 '38 310w

GIBBON, SIR IOAN GWILYM, and BELL, REGINALD W. History of the London County council, 1889-1939. 696p il maps $7 (21s) Macmillan

352.042 London. County council. London—Politics and government [39-22871]

"Sir Gwilym Gibbon, the former Director of the Local Government Division at the Ministry of Health, with the help of Mr. Reginald Bell, has written this survey in order to commemorate the jubilee of the London County Council, celebrated on March 21, 1939. It is not an official history, and the authors alone take responsibility not only for the facts but for the comments. . . . Part I, on London government before 1889, proves how this field has so far been little tilled by students. Part II contains a description of how the council works, how its policy is settled, and how its committees are organized. Part III of the book gives an account of the several executive services, and Part IV an account of the council's relations with Parliament and with other local authorities inside and outside London." Manchester Guardian

---

Reviewed by J. A. Fairlie

Am Pol Sci R 33:1095 D '39 850w

Reviewed by William Anderson

Ann Am Acad 207:222 Ja '40 410w

Economist 135:550 Je 3 '39 180w

"In spite of the speed at which the book has been written, so as to be ready for the jubilee, the writers have maintained a wise sense of proportion and have selected the most salient facts. They have relieved the inevitable heaviness of parish-pump politics by reproducing cartoons from 'Punch' and other comic papers, which add both humour and the human touch." B. S. Townroe

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 4 '39 550w

Nature 143:657 Ap 22 '39 1000w

"The authors are not afraid to point out weaknesses or make suggestions and they have performed the difficult task of making a record of municipal administration and achievement intensely interesting and in parts even exciting; not without a touch of humour here and there. . . . The Authors are to be complimented upon a very fine achievement excellently illustrated by the way, with a quite extraordinary map showing the growth of Greater London) which is likely to be the standard work of its kind until the next Jubilee celebration." A. E. Davies

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:552 Ap 8 '39 1100w

Reviewed by R. C. K. Ensor

Spec 162:540 Mr 31 '39 450w

"The merits of this book are indeed in its history and its description rather than in constructive criticism. And the history and the description are very good. Perhaps it is unreasonable to ask more of a volume written in celebration of a jubilee. This book does help us to see the greatness of the London County Council's achievements—achievements made in handicapping circumstances and in respect of urban problems of almost unparalleled scale."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Mr 25 '39 800w

GIBBON, JOHN MURRAY. Canadian mosaic; the making of a northern nation. 455p il maps $5 Dodd [21s Dent]

325.71 Canada—Foreign population. Canada—History [39-8111]

A popular account of the various European peoples who have migrated to Canada, giving something of their background as well as a survey of their cultural contributions to their new country. Index.

"With patience and skill Mr. Gibbon has separated the interwoven strands that form the Canadian pattern and held them up for our inspection, that we may see the solid strength and colour of each. . . The result is a book distinctly worth reading, for it throws into sharp focus many facts of importance that are too often overlooked by patriotic historians. . . Mr. Gibbon's book has something of the radio commentator's hurried technique and nervous insistence about it. There is too much eagerness to get a point across, too much disjointed and disconnected material, too little smooth and flowing transition. And, above all, there is far too much cajoling of 'public taste,' some of which results occasionally in curious jingoism and snobbery." Regina Shoolman

+ — Books p11 Jl 2 '39 900w

Foreign Affairs 18:380 Ja '40 20w

"Parts of his book retell history already written, but on other pages it has the quality of a personal record by a good observer. It is admirably illustrated by portraits in colour of the Canadian 'types' described in the text and by photographs." J. B. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 24 '39 330w

"Mr. Gibbon's first-hand acquaintance with contemporary Europe and Canada is backed not only by an encyclopedic knowledge of the history that lies behind the events of today but by the philosophic temper that enables him to see that history in just perspective." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p3 My 21 '39 1600w

"Each section is composed in the same way—historical detail and modern references jumbled together in a pleasant and mildly flattering hotch-potch, but the discerning reader will probably feel that seventy per cent. of the material is relatively unimportant."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p286 My 13 '39 120w

GIBBS, ARTHUR HAMILTON. A half inch of candle. 315p $2.50 Little

(W)

The French Riviera in 1939 is the scene. An English artist, wounded physically and spiritually by the World war, after years of wandering, settles down in a little villa in the hills overlooking Nice, and at last finds peace. Here his rascal brother finds him and leaves in his charge his beautiful Russian wife. The story is of their idyllic love and what came of it.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 D 10 '39 400w

"Striking in contrasts, rich in sensuous beauty, Major Gibbs's book is primarily a sermon against war." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 2 '39 800w

Churchman 154:35 F 1 '40 60w

"Major Gibbs knows his French people from long residence among them and he has used his knowledge to rich creative effect. . . [He] knows more than his job as novelist; which includes a knowledge of life. He knows war. Four years of it, with gassing and a Military Cross to remind him, give him the right to speak for peace; as he does now, in no uncertain voice." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 D 3 '39 750w

New Yorker 15:117 D 2 '39 50w

"The suggestion that a French commune could declare itself neutral is wholly impractical, like every other peace scheme so far devised. In every other respect the book has considerable merits. The style is easy, rapid, and extremely readable. The love affair strikes one as genuine—they really are in love—and the dilemma of conscience is real also. Major Gibbs evidently knows the French language and people remarkably well. Outside French literature I have never read a more accurate presentation of the life, characters, and talk in a French village." Richard Aldington

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:15 D 2 '39 500w

GIBBS, GEORGE FORT. The silver death. 270p $2 Appleton-Century

39-20689

An Englishman and an American girl, both spies, attempt to steal a German aviation secret. The action takes place in Bavaria, before the start of the present war.

Booklist 36:178 Ja 1 '40

"This is a thinnish story containing many of the essential ingredients of its type and leaving no doubt about which characters are natural born fiends." Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 29 '39 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p37 N 12 '39 120w

GIBBS, GEORGE FORT. The triangle man. 270p $2 Appleton-Century

39-17098

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 Jl 16 '39 120w

" 'The Triangle Man' has about it the flavor of a story for older girls, say from 12 to 16. And at the same time it is exciting enough and just silly enough to make good summer reading for most anyone." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 130w

"It is not a top flight mystery yarn, but it will do for hammock reading—if people still read in hammocks." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p12 Jl 23 '39 140w

GIBBS, LEWIS, pseud. See Cove, J. W.

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. This nettle, danger. 410p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson]

39-27187

A young American journalist is sent by his newspaper to England just before the abdication of Edward VIII. The events of the next two years are thus reviewed in the story of his experiences as they might have appeared to an interested and sympathetic observer from a country outside the dark circle.

Booklist 35:252 Ap 1 '39

"It is best read as a personal reflection of a stirring and portentous time; a well written novel which mirrors the problems of 1938, for England and the world, and which suggests the difficulty of their solution." John Patton

+ Books p10 Mr 12 '39 600w

"As a novel, Sir Philip's work is of a routine order of craftsmanship; as a picture of English public opinion during a period of intense crisis, it is somewhat limited in its field of observation; as propaganda for appeasement it is singularly forgetful of certain miscalculations that have compelled its proponents to alter their course. But Sir Philip is nothing if not sincere and the views of the author and those who think with him could not be more honestly or more effectively presented than in this thinly veiled apologia for peace at any price." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 10 '39 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 30:25 Ap 28 '39 120w

"Sir Philip Gibbs for all his experience in the art of fiction, is still essentially the journalist, recording his impressions in the simple prose of the daily press. His character-drawing, too, betrays a too-ready acceptance of ready-made conventions. All the personages in his tale are out of stock. . . Yet, in spite of clichés and of a lack of creative insight, 'This Nettle, Danger' is very readable." Wilfrid Gibson

GIBBS, P. H.—Continued
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 27 '39 390w
Reviewed by Drake de Kay
N Y Times p24 Mr 19 '39 800w
Sat R of Lit 19:21 Mr 25 '39 190w
Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 162:190 F 3 '39 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 28 '39 430w
Wis Lib Bul 35:167 O '39

GIBBS, SALLY. Not all your laughter. 237p $2 Appleton-Century
39-15794

New York café society forms the background for this story of three young advertising men, Vicki who ran a bookshop, and Nadine, a siren type of woman who was doomed to bring unhappiness wherever she went.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 Je 25 '39 200w

"This is a first novel which is unusual and arresting. . . Its style is crisp and cryptic, combining casual cafe talk with flights of poetic metaphor. It is a tough assignment for a novel—a heroine akin to Iris March, if you remember 'The Green Hat,' and the story told in a style stemming from Hemingway. Miss Gibbs's version doesn't quite come off, but it is an interesting attempt." Beatrice Sherman
+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 2 '39 320w

"A book about people completely removed from the exigencies of eating and working and raising children is not likely to be popular in an age which demands an excess of social consciousness from its authors. To make up for writing about rich and parasitic characters, the author must give his readers either adventure, or humor, or real character. 'Not All Your Laughter' falls far short of these demands." K. W. S.
— Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 1 '39 280w

"Reading this first novel with its sense of atmosphere and its groping after a deeper issue, one feels confident in predicting that Miss Gibbs will soon be writing much better stuff and that when she has something more definite to say she will be less taken up with how she says it."
Times [London] Lit Sup p505 Ag 26 '39 120w

GIBSON, HUGH. Belgium; il. with photographs. 347p map $3.50 Doubleday 914.93 Belgium—Description and travel (W)
39-27653

"This introduction to a small but great country contains almost everything that the ordinary traveller requires, except hotel and transport information. There are chapters on Flemish painting, and on Belgian history, architecture, carillons, food, and lace. After extensive discussion of each of the chief tourist centers—Bruges, Ghent, Brussels, and Antwerp—even more interesting sections are devoted to lesser known towns and villages. With an eye for picturesque survivals of the Middle Ages, Mr. Gibson lists many of the religious processions and ceremonies that the visitor can find in odd corners of the country." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:5 S '39

"Like 'Rio,' its delightful predecessor, 'Belgium' is essentially a guide not to hurried sightseeing but to genuine and happy acquaintance. It is the best guide to acquaintance with Belgium that the present reviewer has ever seen; and the author's rooted personal knowledge joins with taste and erudition to make it so." H. M. Shaw
+ Books p3 Ag 13 '39 600w
Reviewed by E. B. Schriftgiesser
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 250w
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '39 360w

"An outstanding book of its kind." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 27 '39 440w

"The ideal volume for the traveller."
+ New Yorker 15:67 Ag 5 '39 40w
Pratt p18 winter '40

" 'Belgium' is a credit to both its author and its subject. It is the sort of book that can be used as an adjunct to Baedeker while the traveller is on tour, and that, when he wishes to relive his experiences in memory, will be just the stimulant to recollection that he needs." J. F. Green
+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Ag 26 '39 360w
Wis Lib Bul 35:164 O '39

GIBSON, KATHARINE. Cinders; with il. by Vera Bock. 133p $1.50 Longmans
(W) 39-27654

Whimsical story of what happened to Cinderella's coachman when the fairy godmother forgot to turn him into a mouse again. The little man chooses the name of Cinders, cures the king's horse of an obscure illness, carries a message in time of war, and has for reward the position as coachman for the queen.

Booklist 36:17 S '39

"Children young enough to have Cinderella by heart will be happy in these adventures, which are altogether within their range of vocabulary and experience. Not till they are much older will they discover how closely the tale follows the outlines of a case-history. It is a new departure in children's literature: I have read nothing like it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 S 24 '39 400w

"Highly imaginative and whimsical juvenile, cleverly written and well illustrated."
+ Christian Century 56:1078 S 6 '39 10w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 29 '40 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:296 S '39 60w

"This is not a story of tremendous importance, but it has a light touch which is fitting, and a format which is pleasing. The illustrations by Vera Bock match the spirit of the story; the print is bold, harmonizing with the decorations. For children eight to ten years old." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 100w

"So right in every detail, in its beautiful use of color, in its portrait of the wistful little mouseman and the lovely, spirited horse, this story is a perfect thing. Fragile as the dream on which it is based, it is also friendly and warm. Vera Bock's black and white illustrations, droll, fanciful and extremely decorative, enhance these qualities and add the final touch of rightness with a border of mice running across the top of the pages." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 S 17 '39 350w
Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 140w
Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

GIDDENS, PAUL HENRY. Birth of the oil industry; introd. by Ida M. Tarbell. 255p il maps $3 (14s) Macmillan
665.5 Petroleum industry and trade
38-37455
For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by G. W. Stocking
Am Econ R 29:585 S '39 500w
Reviewed by H. U. Faulkner
Am Hist R 44:938 Jl '39 420w

"This is a well-written book, and a volume of just the right proportions for a monograph on economic history. Its length is sufficient to permit the inclusion of detail and color, and yet short enough that the narrative never becomes wearisome. The specialist will find all the essential facts, the general reader a good story, and both, a book which maintains a proper balance between economic and human factors." C. F. Strong

+ Ann Am Acad 204:215 Jl '39 450w
Christian Century 56:483 Ap 12 '39 360w
Current Hist 50:4 Mr '39 550w

"In this volume Professor Giddens presents a well-integrated and graphic narrative of the origin and development of the petroleum industry in western Pennsylvania up to 1870. His description of the drilling of Colonel Drake's famous well in 1859 and the mad rush for land that followed is an extraordinary blend of dramatic detail. The book has particular value as a working model of the American industrial system in the middle period of our national life."

+ Management R 28:71 F '39 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:10 Ja '39
Reviewed by A. R. Foley
Pol Sci Q 54:464 S '39 480w

"There is a great deal of information in this story of the first ten years of the American oil industry, but from the standpoint of the general reader documentation has had too much the better of selection. . . It should be added that the limitations of the book were set by the author. . . A professor of history at Allegheny College, he finds in the early days of the Pennsylvania oil fields a subject of special interest. The general reader, however, is likely to find the succession of names, dates, dimensions, and distances a little wearying, and the romantic aspects of the pioneer period hardly emerge from Professor Gidden's recital. The scope of the study also precludes any treatment of the subject from an economic point of view." E. D. Kennedy

— + Sat R of Lit 19:17 F 4 '39 330w
Reviewed by Dale Yoder
Social Studies 31:41 Ja '40 700w

"'The Birth of the Oil Industry,' complemented by Miss Tarbell's survey and commentary, is a fascinating story. Written 'on location,' with the full cooperation of all those in a position to give authoritative information, it is excellent history as well."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 1150w

GIELGUD, JOHN. Early stages. 322p il $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-17762

Reminiscences of the young English actor, whose great-aunt was Ellen Terry. Mr Gielgud describes his childhood and youth in the midst of his theatrical relatives, and gives a full account of his experiences on the stage up to date. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 36:6 S '39

"As an intelligent, eager, sensitive actor he stands high. As an autobiographer he hasn't reached his majority." W. P. Eaton

Books p7 Jl 16 '39 700w
Christian Century 56:880 Jl 12 '39 40w
Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 1 '39 180w

"Mr. Gielgud, though he confesses to egotism, has written a careful chronicle of his career, a chronicle which is, in fact, a feat of self-effacement. He gladly records a critical thrust and never parades the flow of critical praise. . . Mr. Gielgud seems to write with his pen held severely in check, but there are two subjects concerning which he opens his heart: one is that fine actor Leslie Faber, whose sudden death (before he had found his true place and rank) came to his many friends as a very bitter loss, and the other is Mr. Gielgud's grand-aunt, Ellen Terry, of whom in her last years at the Smallhythe Cottage he leaves a most exquisite picture." Ivor Brown

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 19 '39 550w

"The book is written in a lively and unaffected style, and should give pleasure to many theatre-goers."

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:1008 Je 24 '39 110w

"His book has an essential modesty and a clear quality of unaffected dramatic recital. It may well be read more than once by any one who is interested in the theatre."

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 30 '39 360w
New Yorker 15:64 Jl 15 '39 30w

"Though he is now thirty-five, Mr. Gielgud doubtless has his maturity and his best work before him. If his life, until now, seems rather uneventful, he has obviously had as good a time living it as he has had writing about it, which should make Gielgud worshippers happy too." John Anderson

Sat R of Lit 20:13 Ag 5 '39 480w
Reviewed by Moray McLaren
Spec 162:1050 Je 16 '39 750w

"Mr. Gielgud's writing about his relatives and his youth make the reader feel that he is among real persons in a real environment. The narrative of Mr. Gielgud's adult experience in the theater has exceptional vitality and verve, with spirited personal sketches and anecdotes, but in the nature of the case it is mainly the record of an actor's engagements, parts, plays and producing activities."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 850w

"His narrative is pleasant, informal, modest. He has a keen eye, a natural gift of expression and a saving sense of the absurd. The book is frankly a story of external events, not a psychological study or treatise on acting." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:761 O '39 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p299 My 20 '39 550w
Wis Lib Bul 35:163 O '39

GIERKE, OTTO FRIEDRICH VON. The development of political theory; tr. by Bernard Freyd. 364p $4 Norton [18s Allen, G]

320.9 Political science—History. Althusius, Johannes 39-7750

"A translation, carefully executed by Bernard Freyd, of Gierke's famous monograph, Johannes Althusius und die Entwickelung der naturrechtlichen Staatstheorien [published 1880]. As is known, the first part of the monograph is concerned with the life and doctrine of Althusius, especially in those aspects having to do with the doctrine of popular sovereignty and the 'Nature-Right' conception of the state. In the second part, the writer traces 'the historical development of those ideas which are characteristic features in the politics of Johannes Althusius,' thus assigning to Althusius his due place in the history of political thought, and at the same time presenting an important chapter in that history." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by H. E. Cohen
Am J Soc 45:143 Jl '39 280w
Reviewed by E. D. Ellis
Am Pol Sci R 33:546 Je '39 210w

"One is struck by Gierke's solidity of learning, by the mass of material that he has worked over and drawn upon. The notes occupy more than half the book. They attest to an astonishing range of research. Unfortunately, they are defective in form." E. M. Sait

+ — Ann Am Acad 205:165 S '39 600w

"Gierke's book may fail us here and there; but its place among scientific works in the field of political thought is an assured one." M. R. Konvitz

Columbia Law R 39:1456 D '39 1450w

GIERKE, O. F. VON—Continued
Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin
Commonweal 30:162 Je 2 '39 430w

"As in the case of other works by Gierke, one of the most valuable features of the book is the elaborate and suggestive material found in the notes at the end of each brief chapter. The translation is unusually well done. At the present time, when the theory of the absolute and totalitarian state is being revived, this book has a special value in tracing the ways in which this doctrine was attacked in its earlier appearance, when the modern national state was being created." R. G. Gettell
+ Pol Sci Q 54:476 S '39 420w

"Until he was submitted to an intellectual exhumation by Von Gierke, Althusius was to all intents and purposes a forgotten philosopher. This translation of the exposition of the importance of his ideas in the development of those theories of the social contract and of sovereignty, which so profoundly affected men's minds and European history in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, tardy though it is, deserves a sincere welcome." W. T. Wells
+ Spec 163:334 S 1 '39 420w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p337 Je 10 '39 440w

GILBERT, ALLAN H. Machiavelli's Prince and its forerunners; The prince as a typical book de regimine principum. 266p $3 Duke univ. [13s 6d Cambridge]

320.1 Machiavelli, Niccolò. Political science—History 38-17792

"The avowed purpose of the author is 'to make Machiavelli somewhat more useful to the present age by showing what he meant in his own day'. This he proceeds to do by analyzing The Prince, chapter by chapter. In connection with each such analysis Dr. Gilbert quotes extensively from parallel or contrasting passages in other writings of Machiavelli to show the development of his thought. Even more important for the student of political theory are the quotations from medieval or Renaissance scholars who had composed orthodox essays belonging to the type de regimine principum. In fact, without them the author could not prove his point, which the reviewer feels is amply substantiated throughout, that The Prince, far from being an isolated phenomenon, is an integral part of a long chain of writings clearly defined by type." Am Hist R

"The author's proofreading of the hundreds of quotations merits praise, though some errors in typography, spacing, and alignment have been noted. The composition of the book, the ten-page bibliography, which is provided with annotations on dates of composition and first printing of original sources, and the eighteen-page index bespeak the scholarship of the author and his wide acquaintanceship with the literature pertinent to his subject." L. K. Born
+ Am Hist R 45:116 O '39 420w
Reviewed by E. D. Ellis
Am Pol Sci R 32:1211 D '38 450w

GILBERT, HARRY, comp. Manual for choir-loft and pulpit; foreword by John Sutherland Bonnell. 197p $2.75 Scribner

783 Church music—Indexes

A list of anthems, duets and solos suitable for use on special occasions, or as illustrative or suggestive of special sermon themes.

"An experience of nineteen years as organist and choirmaster in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, has given Mr. Gilbert a wide knowledge of the resources of sacred music and a sense of the requirements of specific occasions."
+ Christian Century 56:1475 N 29 '39 80w

"The most complete guide the reviewer has seen." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 153:23 D 15 '39 100w

GILBERT, HELEN EARLE. Mrs Mallaby's birthday; pictures by Winifred Bromhall. unp $1 Rand McNally

39-27537

Story of a kindly old lady whose hundreth birthday was made quite perfect for her when a small kitten came to her little house. For young children.

Booklist 35:366 Jl 1 '39
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p5 My 21 '39 250w
Horn Bk M 15:221 Jl '39 120w

"A comfortable, homey story. . . A good picture-book story for the pre-school age or a book to attract second and third grade readers." M. F. Potter
+ Library J 64:613 Ag '39 100w
Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 Je 18 '39 210w

GILBERT, MARGARET SHEA. Biography of the unborn. 132p il $1.75 Wood

611.013 Embryology, Human 38-29386

"This story of the first 9 months of human life traces the development of the human embryo from conception to birth and gives a wholesome discussion of twins, variations, and malformations. The style is simple, and the subject is treated frankly yet with beauty of expression." J Home Econ

J Home Econ 31:258 Ap '39 100w
+ Scientific Bk Club R 9:2 S '38 450w

GILBERT, MILTON. Currency depreciation and monetary policy. 167p $2 Univ. of Pa. press [9s Oxford]

332.4 Currency question 39-10621

"[An] exposition . . . of what resulted from the depreciation of currencies the world over. The writer has selected as examples countries with diverse economic developments, in order to make clear how depreciation worked in those producing primarily raw materials, in those depending largely upon manufactured and semimanufactured goods for export trade, and in those with a fairly well balanced economy. The countries selected are Australia, Great Britain, Sweden, and the United States." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The booklet itself is so compact and concise that it is really impossible to summarize it. It deserves to be read and studied by all those interested in monetary affairs of recent years. There is a good index accompanying the booklet." Walter Lichtenstein
+ Ann Am Acad 205:186 S '39 600w

"Mr Gilbert has no suit to plead. He simply seeks truth amid obscurity; and, by his skilful marshalling of facts and his lucid exposition, he enables the reader to reach something like confident conclusions."
+ Economist 136:268 Ag 5 '39 180w
Foreign Affairs 18:160 O '39 10w

GILBERT, RICHARD VINCENT, and others. See Economic program for American democracy

GILL, CORRINGTON. Wasted manpower; the challenge of unemployment. 312p $2.75 Norton

331.137 Unemployment—U.S. U.S.—Economic conditions 39-22870

A study of the seriousness of the unemployment problem, of its causes, and of some of the ways in which it has been proposed to solve it. The author has worked with the FERA and the CWA, as well as with the WPA, as Assistant Commissioner in charge of research, statistics, finance, and economic analysis. Index.

Booklist 36:83 N 1 '39

"One need not agree with all of Mr. Gill's views to find his book of great interest and value. 'Wasted Manpower' could be called 'A Handbook on Unemployment' but for the danger of suggesting dullness to an extremely interesting and worthwhile publication." Russ Nixon

+ — Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 450w

"The book's value lies particularly in the examination of what is still the nation's number one economic and social problem, by a man who is Assistant Commissioner of the Work Projects Administration. He knows the problem in all its ramifications. . . He speaks with authority and information of the inside of a program about which those on the outside have never hesitated to express an opinion. Like many social workers, however, he discusses social and economic issues as if they existed in a vacuum. If they would give greater recognition to such shabby parts of the picture as have been represented by political interferences with WPA, people generally would feel happier about the realism of their reformers." R. M. B.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p20 O 12 '39 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

"A thoroughly readable, up-to-date study."

+ New Repub 100:223 S 27 '39 50w

" 'Wasted Manpower' is not only a comprehensive and penetrating account of unemployment but a very readable one as well." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p26 N 5 '39 900w

"In addition to its timely qualities, 'Wasted Manpower' has considerable value as a work of reference because of its synthesis into one succinct and informative document of the record of New Deal action and thinking with respect to unemployment and relief." R. H. Kurtz

+ Survey 75:388 D '39 650w

GILL, TOM. Firebrand. 309p $2 Farrar 39-27289

Western story.

Booklist 35:272 Ap 15 '39

"This is required reading for lovers of outdoor fiction—and most of our Western authors ought to read it, too, for the good it might do them." Will Cuppy

+ Books p21 Mr 12 '39 130w

"The tale is the best of the seven he has published thus far. . . From the vivid description of the heartbreaking fight against a raging forest fire with which it opens to its last page the tale holds the reader with a sure grip. . . This is an unusual and altogether a superior Western." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '39 180w

GILLIGAN, EDMUND. White sails crowding. 360p $2.50 Scribner 39-28979

The story of a wild winter trip to the Grand Banks for halibut in the 1880s. The hero is the son of a wealthy Boston family, who decides to take the trip before settling down to a comfortable life.

Booklist 36:150 D 15 '39

"The writing is highly stylized, over-played and imitative, but it has its delightful echoes of the masters of this order of tale since Defoe, resembling more nearly, however, the dithyrambs of a 'Lorna Doone' set in desperate seas." F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p18 N 26 '39 350w

Reviewed by E. B. Schriftgiesser

Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 600w

"The book has too much of everything, and leaves one effect for another too readily to build its own effect. What you have left is the adventure and its background—both done in about as noble prose as you will find, hearty, vivid and free running on the level." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 101:175 N 29 '39 550w

"In 'White Sails Crowding' soundness of touch and fidelity and purity of imagination are combined with a compositional style of highest excellence. Mr. Gilligan either is a born storyteller or he sat a long time at the feet of Daniel Defoe. And over every page hovers the spirit of Coleridge's Mariner; above the crowding white sails the reader ever hears the beat of the albatross's wing." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 N 12 '39 490w

"Wherein the author falls below the level of the sound sea story is in the purely figurative character of the personages of his drama. Not a soul in the book appears like a living man. . . Without suggesting that matters of detail can nullify the grandiloquent but impressive unreality of such a tale, this particular reader must admit that he was somewhat appalled by the presence of certain incongruous elements in the author's portrait of the North Atlantic in winter." R. H.

Sat R of Lit 21:43 D 2 '39 350w

"An epic of the sea that bids fair to rank as a classic."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 19 '39 420w

Time 34:88 N 27 '39 250w

GILMAN, STEPHEN. Accounting concepts of profit. 635p $5 Ronald

657 Accounting. Profit 39-12150

"This book attempts to present in an organized pattern the more important conventions, doctrines and rules which influence the determination of accounting profits, while at the same time it avoids certain areas which have been discussed adequately and voluminously elsewhere and in which coercive legal influence is most marked. A substantial number of chapters have been devoted to net profit problems arising from inventories and fixed assets, these two categories representing vehicles for the discussion of profit determination and profit distortion." Management R

Reviewed by Charles Reitell

Ann Am Acad 206:198 N '39 1000w

Management R 28:251 Jl '39 70w

GILMER, MRS ELIZABETH MERIWETHER. See Dix, D., pseud.

GILMORE, ALBERT FIELD. Links in Christianity's chain. 340p il $3 for sale by Associated authors

270 Church history 39-2882

"Outstanding incidents in the history and development of Christianity." Foreword

"The volume is a good working manual for the student, pastor, or general reader." R. K. Mott

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 22 '39 30w

"How long and how tortuous the way, as we have been accustomed to think of it, from ancient Bethlehem and the Manger to the present. . . In [this book] the indelible markings along the way have been revealed and made plain. And all this has been accomplished so adroitly, so convincingly and so conclusively that one marvels that there should ever have existed even a shadow of apprehension that the record as we have always read it and accepted it, might have lacked that authority which seems now to have been established by actual proof." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 21 '39 460w

GILPATRIC, GUY. The gentleman with the walrus mustache. 275p $2 Dodd

39-7081

"In which Mr. Gilpatric celebrates further adventures of his tough tramp-steamer engineer, Colin Glencannon, now chief on the S. S. Inchcliffe Castle." N Y Times

---

Booklist 35:307 My 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 F 19 '39 300w

"There are ten stories in this collection, all on the same theme, none in the slightest degree credible, but all filled with raucous haw-haws. Three or four are rather neatly resolved, the rest keep the pot a-boiling." F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p22 F 5 '39 400w

"The admirers of this musty old sea-dog who pops up at regular and frequent intervals throughout the year in the Saturday Evening Post must easily run into the millions. You find him in this new group of adventures at peak form. His spirit was never more valiant, his chicanery never more astute, and his humor never more exhilarating." R. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 4 '39 150w

" 'Muster Glencannon' in his best form."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 210w

GILSON, ETIENNE HENRY. Christianity and philosophy; tr. by Ralph MacDonald. (Institute of mediaeval studies. Publications) 134p $2 Sheed

201 Philosophy and religion

"The chapters of this interesting book consist of a series of lectures delivered before a group of Protestant theologians in Paris. The purpose of the lectures was to discuss certain conceptions of the relations of faith and reason, which, were they accepted, would preclude the very possibility of a Christian philosophy by making it a contradiction in terms. The point of view of M. Gilson, who is a devout Roman Catholic, is that Catholic truth is consistent with Christian philosophy. This is an important book. It is designed for the clergy and those of the laity who are in the habit of reading theology and philosophy." (Living Church) Index.

"Among all modern teachers of Catholic thought none is more persuasive than the French neo-Thomist Etienne Gilson. That is not his only claim to eminence. There is probably no teacher of philosophy of any school who writes with such lucidity and spices his thought with such a fine sense of humor as Gilson. It is a delight to read anything from his pen. . . Gilson's book is written too completely from inside the Christian position to be persuasive to moderns, who are stopped by their own prejudices and the literalistic versions of the Christian position in both the Catholic and Protestant thought, to have any appreciation for the real essence of the Christian doctrine of original sin, as applied to reason. A 'modern' reader of Gilson's book might, however, learn something. He might, at least, appreciate that a man of Gilson's intelligence is dealing with doctrines which are relevant to human experience and is not merely spending his time refurbishing ancient dogmas which have no meaning in modern life." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books p26 D 3 '39 1050w

Cath World 150:626 F '40 400w

"The book is magnificently done, and merits the most careful study." David Dalrymple

+ Commonweal 31:100 N 17 '39 490w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken

Living Church 101:5 D 6 '39 70w

Reviewed by W. N. Pittenger

Living Church 102:12 Ja 17 '40 150w

GINGERICH, MELVIN. The Mennonites in Iowa; marking the one hundredth anniversary of the coming of the Mennonites to Iowa. 419p $3 Iowa state hist. soc.

289.7 Mennonites in Iowa 39-28364

"This is a carefully documented history of the Mennonites and Amish Mennonites in the state of Iowa, with some reference to settlements in other states. The first three chapters give a very brief but accurate account of the origin of the Mennonite sect in Europe, the Amish schism, and the migrations of these people. Following a detailed account of the various settlements in Iowa, the author presents a series of chapters concerning the customs, beliefs, and practices which tend to set this people 'apart from the world.' " (Am Soc R) Index.

"After recognizing at the outset that he is dealing with a series of 'culture islands,' the author makes no attempt to analyze the varying degrees of acculturation which have taken place in the different communities. The account would be much more valuable to the sociologists if we knew what factors caused some communities to become quite accessible and 'secularized' while others, in spite of the impact of the predominant American culture upon them, remain as isolated as they were a hundred years ago."

Am Soc R 4:768 O '39 120w

"Thorough and scholarly study. . . This book is no less interesting as a sociological study of cultural changes in a separative group than as a record of the thought and life of a sincere and earnest body of courageous Christians."

+ Christian Century 56:1077 S 6 '39 200w

"The book, written in a clear and readable style, has valuable notes and citations, and a very useful index. Maps and photographs would have added to the value of the book." Quintus Leatherman

+ Social Studies 31:89 F '40 250w

GINZBERG, ELI. The illusion of economic stability [prepared under the auspices of the Columbia univ. Council for research in the social sciences]. 275p $3 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Economic policy. Business cycles 39-11798

Study of depressions and of the present one in particular. The author, who is a Columbia university economist, asserts that stabilization cannot be achieved unless the rate of growth of new industries is regulated, business expectations are moderated, the monetary system rationalized, and price mechanics made more certain.

"There may be some persons, given to nostalgia or faith, who still like to think that self-starting-continuous-automatic prosperity, in the manner of the twenties, can easily be recaptured and will next time really turn into the perpetual motion which it failed to become ten years ago. For them this book is required reading. . . Dr. Ginzberg has skillfully woven the results of much of the best recent work of economists into a careful, well-grounded account of recent economic changes which will be interesting to all who want to know why the prosperity of the twenties flourished, ended, and failed to reappear. Often sprightly in style, the book is written so as to be readily understood by the general reader who has never suffered any formal instruction in economics." Donald Wallace

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 800w

"The sophisticated in business-cycle analysis will read this book because of its emphasis on expectation, a fashionable characteristic in recent years. We are affected both by what happens and by what we expect to happen. The book should go far in dispelling false beliefs in the attainment of stability. Reading will be hindered to some extent by the massing of facts in textual material and by the complicated outline used at some points." E. C. Bratt

Management R 28:410 N '39 650w

"Mr. Ginzberg presents his case in a simple and convincing way although he bases his presentation on extensive statistical research." Adolf Sturmthal

+ Nation 149:251 S 2 '39 750w

New Repub 98:203 Mr 22 '39 50w

Reviewed by Arthur Feiler

Sat R of Lit 20:15 Je 3 '39 380w

Reviewed by Isaiah Finkelstein

Survey G 28:456 Jl '39 390w

GIONO, JEAN. Harvest; tr. by Henri Fluchère and Geoffrey Myers. 192p il $2.50 Viking

(W) 39-27444

Another story of the French Basses-Alpes, by the author of The Song of the World (Book Review Digest, 1937). An elemental peasant living in a deserted village has grown weary of eating only the flesh of trapped animals; he longs for bread. On the heels of his longing a woman enters his mountain village and the two mate. By almost imperceptible degrees the woman succeeds in bringing a measure of civilization to this man; another family joins them; and the village stands a chance of rehabilitation.

Booklist 35:332 Je 1 '39

"Jean Giono's short novel, which is now published in English under the name of 'Harvest,' was written before 'The Song of the World'—brought out here in 1937—and has been much read and loved in France for almost a decade. It is a simpler book than 'Chant du Monde,' easier, perhaps, to read, no less beautiful. As a story it is remarkable for its exquisite economy and sureness in the telling of a tender human tale; and as writing it flows with the clear and tonic beauty of mountain water and is warm with the scent of the damp rich earth." John Patton

+ Books p3 My 28 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

Boston Transcript p2 Je 10 '39 180w

"Beside the overwhelming simplicity of Jean Giono's tales of peasant life all similar novels that come from France are frankly negligible. In the high-perched village of Manosque in the French Basses-Alpes, Giono writes of the life which he sees about him and which he himself has led. He is one of those rare 'naturals' like our own Steinbeck, to whom no effort is required to reproduce the direct accents of a primitive life. When his novels run to any length, the reader, surfeited with simplicity, is likely to lay them down unfinished. But when, as in the case of 'Harvest,' they do not exceed 200 pages, they are as refreshing as a Cézanne still-life after a gallery full of surrealism." Justin O'Brien

+ Nation 148:652 Je 3 '39 440w

New Repub 99:196 Je 21 '39 50w

"I do not think Giono's work is to be damned as escapist; he redirects attention to fundamentals, and there issues from his pages a healing quality, a sound, deep-seated vitality that restores and invigorates." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p7 My 28 '39 550w

"The appeal of Giono does not lie in his plots, of course, but in the wild poetry of his language and in his uncompromising unity with primeval nature. If you're looking for a novelist who has never heard of the radio or the newspaper and is perfectly willing to let civilization have its crisis and go hang, Giono's your man." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:92 My 20 '39 170w

Pratt p28 autumn '39

"The scene is vividly convincing in color and sound, but the people suffer not only from their exaggerated role but from the fact that their lives actually represent such a small portion of the problem of modern man. For this reason, it is Giono's sincerity alone which prevents the book from being just a skillful dish of artistic tourisme. . . The scope and material of 'Harvest' are disappointing because the author has a vigorous talent, agreeably free of aridity and self-consciousness, equipped with a command of imagery which is really individual, practical like the farmers of whom he writes, and based on the rhythm and idiom of spoken not literary speech. These things make one regret that, at the point of development of 'Harvest,' Giono seems to remain too much of a 'natural,' and to require the discipline of a background less rich in picturesque values, of material which has greater social variety, if he is to become more important than the object of a special enthusiasm." I. W. A.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 20 '39 370w

Time 33:80 My 29 '39 220w

GIRVAN, MRS HELEN. Phantom on skis; il. by Alan Haemer. 275p $2 Farrar

39-4494

Mystery story for girls.

"There comes a time when many girls read, by preference, only stories of this sort; it rests with those who produce them to give such girls something that will not stultify their intelligences, dull their ears to good English, or stir up distaste for real life by providing such an unbroken succession of thrills as real life seldom provides. If they can also give these girls something likely to be remembered at least a little while after the book is read, so much the better. This is one of the stories that fulfils these modest, but necessary demands; its author's name is one to be kept in mind by people looking for such stories." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 5 '39 600w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 160w

"There is a full measure of excitement and pleasant mystery. . . An unknown figure on skis, watched by Wendy in the moonlight, aided in unravelling some of the surprising knots and it is all good fun to read—to the very last word." M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Mr 30 '39 130w

"A story that moves rapidly from one excitement to another in a fashion that 12 to 14 year olds will find gratifying. There is an outdoor atmosphere of snowy hills and forests, and the music box collection, which is described in detail, adds a novel and charming touch to the tale." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 16 '39 340w

GITTINGER, ROY. The formation of the state of Oklahoma, 1803-1906. [new ed] 309p maps $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press

976.6 Oklahoma—History 39-32214

"The formation of the State of Oklahoma as it is now constituted is the subject of this study. The story was first presented as Volume VI of the University of California Publications in History, at Berkeley in 1917. The original edition has been out of print for some time and this new edition is presented, appropriately enough, in the year which marks the fiftieth anniversary of the first white settlement in the Indian Territory. . . The sources of the present work are chiefly the official reports published by the Government of the United States. . . The bibliography lists not only works that were used in the preparation of the study, but also includes a supplementary list of important publications issued in the last twenty years." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 18 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 80w

GIVENS, CHARLES G. The devil takes a hill town. 306p $2.50 Bobbs

39-31051

"The struggle between capital and labor in a Tennessee hill town. God and the Devil, in the persons of mountain men, are the chief characters." New Yorker

GIVENS, C. G.—Continued

"'The Devil Takes a Hill Town' is a rich mixture of folk comedy and farce, a kind of Tennessee hillbilly 'Green Pastures.' God and the Devil speak in the sprawling colorful dialect of the region, play the harmonica, whittle as they converse, and even have a drink of corn together. If they are unconvincing when they discuss the problems of capitalism and the class struggle it is probably because Mr. Givens hasn't made up his own mind on the subject." W. J. Gould

Books p10 N 19 '39 650w

"This is a breezy, entertaining, easy-come-easy-go yarn that delighted me. It gets off to a nice start and keeps on going. It's first-rate and intelligent fun; all the more so because the humor is responsible and the story and the people are not lightly taken." F. T. Marsh

\+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '39 750w

New Yorker 15:89 N 11 '39 100w

GIZYCKA, FELICIA. Flower of smoke. 250p $2.50 Scribner

39-8725

"Rather touching light novel with a background of Vienna before and after the war. A little Viennese girl with an American mother samples the new world of the United States and finds Europe, broken-down as it is, more to her taste." New Yorker

"Countess Gizycka's new book is extremely well written, smartly paced, pitched on a sound emotional plane and furnishes excellent adult reading. It might well be recommended, in particular, to any blossoming young ladies who dream ecstatically about that first meeting with their ideal man. . . The author writes in a charmingly simple, entertaining style within a well constructed framework. This second novel stamps Countess Gizycka as a writer who deserves a place several notches above 'promising.'" F. J. Feldkamp

\+ Books p14 Ap 9 '39 600w

New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 40w

"Countess Gizycka still lacks maturity in broad vision and sympathy, without which a novelist, no matter how brilliant, must always be limited in scope. Her style is first rate, and in this, her second novel, she well manages a thoughtful and revealing story." M. L. Rossbach

\+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 9 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:86 Ap 8 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 240w

GLASER, SAMUEL. Designs for 60 small homes from $2,000 to $10,000; showing how to buy, build, and finance a small home. unp il $2.50; spiral binding pa $2 Coward-McCann

728 Architecture, Domestic 39-14957

Outline sketches of exteriors, plans, brief descriptions, and costs of construction for sixty small houses designed by the architect-author. Blue prints and specifications obtainable from the author.

Booklist 35:376 Jl 15 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

GLOCKLER, GEORGE, and LIND, SAMUEL COVILLE. The electrochemistry of gases and other dielectrics. 469p il $6 Wiley [30s Chapman]

541.37 Ionization of gases. Electric discharges. Electrochemistry 39-3021

"The authors, who are professors of physical chemistry in the University of Minnesota, have collected and digested the widely scattered and voluminous material on the physical and chemical behavior of gases in the electric field, adding the generally accepted elements of theory. There are numerous references at the chapter endings." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Am Chem Soc J 61:1936 Jl '39 400w

"The authors themselves have contributed to the literature of the subject in a very large measure. There is no difficulty for this reviewer in agreeing with the foreword by Professor Karapetoff, that 'the book should prove invaluable to those who need the factual material on the chemical behavior of gases in an electric field.'" C. L. Mantell

\+ Chem & Met Eng 46:374 Je '39 320w

"This book is attractive, easily read, has clear type, and is well illustrated with 82 clear-cut figures. It is invaluable as a reference book to those interested in this or closely related fields, as reference is made to 1363 published articles. . . The authors are to be congratulated on their painstaking and thorough presentation and their efforts to establish so much order and system, out of what may have had the appearance largely of separate unrelated experiments and researches." C. H. Kunsman

\+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:174 Mr 10 '39 430w

"This is the first comprehensive treatise published on the general subject of chemical action in the electric discharge. It cannot be too highly recommended to both old and new workers in this field of science, since it represents a painstaking survey of the literature presented as growing rather than as a completed study. The text is replete with suggestions for further research. The print and binding are excellent, and errors are few." A. K. Brewer

\+ J Phys Chem 43:812 Je '39 500w

"Considered as a whole, the great value of this book derives from the fulfillment of the authors' aim to compile the vast mass of experimental data so as to facilitate the comparison of the various forms of discharge reaction, both amongst themselves, and with reaction initiated in the same systems by other agencies. This will be invaluable to all investigators of discharge phenomena, whether chemists, physicists or engineers. It should be a powerful stimulant to further exploration of the field, both experimentally and theoretically. . . It is, however, difficult not to feel a slight and perhaps ungracious sense of regret that, having such familiarity with this enormous collection of information, the authors have not essayed a more critical commentary on the relative value of their material." R. W. Lunt

\+ — Nature 144:93 Jl 15 '39 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:22 Ap '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum

Special Libraries 30:317 N '39

GLOVER, KATHERINE. America begins again; the conquest of waste in our natural resources; foreword by Stuart Chase. 382p il maps $1.76 (Whittlesey house publication $2.75) McGraw

333.0973 Conservation of resources. U. S.—Economic conditions. U. S.—Economic policy (W) 39-1961

"The story of the shameful waste of our natural resources, especially of land and timber, has often been told, but it is scarcely yet well enough known to arouse a fierce determination to adopt remedial measures commensurate with the magnitude of the need. Miss Glover's copiously illustrated book goes over again the unhappy record—the scalping of the prairies, the slaughter of the forests, the extinction of wild life, the denuding of watersheds—and tells of what is being done and what must be done to salvage the remnant of our heritage and even win back some of our lost national wealth. There are laudatory chapters on the TVA and the Columbia river projects." (Christian Century) Many photographs. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:218 Mr 1 '39

"Viewing the present book with a reasonably cold eye, I think it is quite fair in its statement of what is being done. I should certainly not call it partisan in any sense." P. B. Sears

\+ Books p16 F 26 '39 500w

Christian Century 56:187 F 8 '39 100w

"'America Begins Again,' written in textbook style and lavishly illustrated with government photographs, is a convenient source from which the layman may begin acquisition of the knowledge vital to the future of conservation." M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 25 '39 380w

Reviewed by R. B. Weaver
El School J 40:232 N '39 500w

"Katherine Glover's America Begins Again is the story of our natural resources, their waste and possible conservation; and everyone over the age of twelve should be argued or cajoled into reading it. That's no chore, either, for Miss Glover writes with an unhurried confidence and with a charm that serve to make her material as engrossing as it is vital." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 101:vi Ap '39 260w

J Home Econ 31:331 My '39 80w

New Repub 98:112 Mr 1 '39 60w

"The book would be better if it had been subjected to the test of reading aloud, and treated as the commentary to an unmade film, and as such vetted by the script editor; for with such a huge scope as this book presents, with so many facts to draw upon, Miss Glover has resorted to impression by comparative figures, which are so frequent that they soon cease to mean very much. The subject has a great many facets, and though they are not always clearly sorted out, the effect is that of a school text book. But the tale of reconstruction and new hope is heartening in this period of fatalistic waiting, and it has a spirit instilled into it that the factual enthusiasm of Miss Glover does not spoil."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:290 Ag 19 '39 300w

"Throughout her book [the author] uses the stirring metaphor of battle. The 'mending of the soil,' for example, constitutes 'the biggest battle America has ever had to wage.' This constructive emphasis is one of the important features of 'America Begins Again.' Another is the book's comprehensiveness."

+ N Y Times p8 F 19 '39 470w

Pratt p8 autumn '39

"Perhaps the outstanding quality of this book lies in the close relationship of each illustration to the immediate printed page. There has seldom been such a graphic group of photographs included in any book to emphasize the text. And surely such emphasis is needed to help us meet the problem which confronts each of us—to restore America, to 'revise the pattern which was and is unique, and remains a world hope.'"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Mr '39 270w

"To those interested in this new field in social studies Miss Glover's book comes in answer to a real need. It should enjoy a wide and favorable reception throughout the schools of the nation." W. B. Merriam

+ Social Educ 3:664 D '39 500w

"Young people will welcome this book—their teachers should acclaim it. It is a reference book of the highest value." Louise Sigmund

+ Social Studies 30:184 Ap '39 500w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger
Survey G 28:455 Jl '39 280w

GODDARD, FREDERICK WALTER, and JAMES, ERIC JOHN FRANCIS. The elements of physical chemistry. 251p il $1.80 (5s) Longmans

541.3 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 39-18850

Textbook on physical chemistry which presupposes a knowledge of elementary physics and chemistry. Contains tables of logarithms and antilogarithms. Author and subject indexes.

Reviewed by Edward Mack, Jr.
Am Chem Soc J 60:2832 N '38 250w

Reviewed by George Glockler
J Phys Chem 43:815 Je '39 120w

"The text is clearly written and on the whole very suitable in standard for the aim of the book. The section on atomic structure requires correction since it assumes that the atomic nucleus contains electrons, and it is doubtful whether the circular diagrams of atoms are the most suitable for explanations of valency. It is questionable whether adsorption should be introduced into the section on solutions. The sections on solutions and electrolysis are very good, and give an adequate account of the subjects. . . A good feature of the book is the emphasis laid on numerical calculations, and the excellent series of problems given at the ends of the chapters will be very helpful on this side. The book is one which should prove useful both to junior students and to teachers."

+ Nature 143:421 Mr 11 '39 150w

GODDEN, RUMER (MRS LAURENCE FOSTER). Black narcissus. 294p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Davies]

(W) 39-16410

A small group of Anglican nuns are sent by their Order to establish a school and hospital on a remote estate overshadowed by the Himalayas. The "Palace" had been given by the native owner first to a group of monks and when they, for some reason, abandoned it, the Sisters were given the opportunity. The Sisters struggle for a year, but at last they, too, are defeated, the end being brought swiftly when a tragedy overcomes one of them, and the rest retreat to Darjeeling.

"Black Narcissus is small and clear and fine, like a Dürer etching. And, like a Dürer etching, it will not be put aside and forgotten; you will come back again to look at the figures walking in the bright high wind, eternally alien and mysterious against the alien and mysterious Mountain." Frances Woodward

+ Atlantic S '39 280w

Booklist 36:44 O 1 '39

"It should be [said] that 'Black Narcissus' reminds one of some of Somerset Maugham's more amiable stories. There is smooth writing, amused, yet tolerant, understanding of motives and an underplay of psychoanalytic interpretations. If it is added that the depth of penetration does not equal that of the best of Maugham's work, Miss Godden ought not to be offended." J. H. Friend

+ — Books p2 Jl 9 '39 600w

Books p14 Jl 23 '39 450w (Discussion)

"The characterization is clear and exquisite, the plot and action both sad and funny. Experienced novelists may well envy this girl her narrative ability, her amazing contrasts, and her fine sense of values. To us 'Black Narcissus' is the fiction event of the summer." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 850w

"If you like the taste of slightly over-ripe fruit, you may very well like this book. You may use your intellect in reading it, but for the full enjoyment of it you must suspend your critical judgment, for Miss Godden is not above deliberately warping facts to make her point. . . Miss Godden writes well enough, but the book is nudging and sly rather than subtle and Miss Godden's prejudices show through so strongly that little of the book except the scenery is convincing." Harry Sylvester

— + Commonweal 30:342 Jl 28 '39 420w

"The story is told with both a sense of beauty and a sense of humour and the intangible influences that defeat the sisters are felt with remarkable intensity." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 7 '39 270w

"The writing is smooth and cool, the locale exotic. I need hardly say that it is reminiscent of 'The Bridge of San Luis Rey.' It is an attractive book and it is obviously designed as something more than 'light reading.' It has far more substance than 'The Brandons' but for me its irony is too obvious, its pattern too pat." Margaret Marshall

GODDEN, RUMER Continued

+ — Nation 149:74 Jl 15 '39 100w

New Repub 100:56 Ag 16 '39 40w

"The psychological changes in the Sisters are not perhaps very profoundly delineated; but Miss Godden has a sense of form and a feeling for the beauty of things and of words which never betray her into gush. Black Narcissus is in no sense a memorable book but it has a flavour of its own and that is much." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:212 F 11 '39 150w

" 'Black Narcissus' is a real discovery. Not only has it charm, humor, subtlety, and a shining kind of freshness, but it is actually almost without flaw. It would be hard to say how Miss Godden could have improved upon this bizarre and exquisite little novel. If I seem effusive, I am so deliberately. This is not a book to miss." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 9 '39 1200w

" 'Black Narcissus' is not a particularly impressive book, but its cool distinction of style and the refinement of the author's feeling for her characters lift it considerably above the average level of the season's fiction. It's not apt, perhaps, to appeal much to male readers." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:63 Jl 15 '39 550w

Pratt p28 autumn '39

"From time to time a novel appears which is definitely off the beaten path, which depends for its interest as much upon its atmosphere and its intended spell as upon its narrative. Such a novel must be very dexterously managed to bring about a complete effect, since an uncertainty in any part shakes the whole structure. 'Black Narcissus' is a novel of this kind, and it is a very successful one." Gladys Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Jl 15 '39 460w

"One of the year's freshest and most original novels."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 220w

Time 34:70 Jl 17 '39 190w

"A fine story well told and full of the unforgettable scents and sounds of the Himalayas."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 4 '39 220w

"Black Narcissus [is] subtle, original, and in almost every respect beautifully done. . . In other hands, this material might have been turned into candied fruit or dissolved in tears. Here it is treated with fairness, irony, sympathy, and quiet humor." Ralph Thompson

+ Yale R n s 29:x autumn '39 330w

GODLEY, SIR ALEXANDER JOHN. Life of an Irish soldier; reminiscences; foreword by Lord Baden-Powell. 363p il maps $3.75 Dutton [12s 6d Murray, J]

B or 92 39-25138

Reminiscences of an Irish soldier and sportsman, who has spent over fifty years in the army, and seen service at Mafeking, New Zealand, and in the World war. Index.

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson

— Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 600w

"His book of reminiscences shows him as the type of the Happy Warrior, and, without any personal discontent, the record may well fill anyone with envy." H. W. Nevinson

Spec 162:776 My 5 '39 750w

"Of all [his army] posts, as well as of travel, sport, friendships and public affairs, he writes agreeably and genially."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p267 My 6 '39 650w

GOERRES-COUDENHOVE, IDA FRIEDERICKE. See Coudenhove, I. F.

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Tumbling in the hay. 330p $2.50 Reynal [10s Constable]

39-16779

Autobiographical novel picturing the life of a medical student in Dublin some thirty years ago.

"It is a tumbling, rambling, formless book, crammed with the stuff and nonsense of legendary Dublin, teeming with its jokes, its puns, its gossip, its farce, its malice and its wit. The book opens with the word 'crazily' and proceeds in that way. There is no plot, no story. . . At times the book is incoherent, as though the author had got drunk 'on good company alone.' At times it rises to passages of supreme ribaldry and farce." Michael Sayers

Books p4 Je 25 '39 1050w

Reviewed by John Holmes

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 22 '39 600w

"Although Gogarty calls his latest book a novel, it defies all known laws of this literary form, just as Gogarty himself defies every convention of decency and reticence. Had he eliminated the coarseness and vulgarity of both his prose and verse—had he left out his all too vivid sketch of a slum brothel and confined himself to sketches of Dublin theaters, hospitals, courts, prisons, and taverns, we might have enjoyed his reminiscences the more."

— Cath World 149:763 S '39 180w

Reviewed by Ivor Brown

Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '39 600w

New Repub 99:260 Jl 5 '39 30w

"As a picture of an epoch Tumbling in the Hay is probably accurate, though it owes some of its matter, though not its manner, to Joyce. But as a picture of an individual young man it is fantastic: for Dr. Gogarty's character as shown is mature and self-confident. The values and opinions are those of Dr. Gogarty to-day." David Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:286 F 25 '39 1200w

"It all makes grand reading. Wit and verbal surprise caper on every page." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 Je 18 '39 1050w

"I fear I cannot, despite its many brilliant passages, wholly recommend 'Tumbling in the Hay.' . . The episodic narrative is superficially novelized but should be read as a memoir. There are remarkable scenes in which the magnificent dons of Trinity College—Mahaffy and Tyrell—play their conversational parts, and others, even better, in which low life and medical humor combine, somewhat in the Joyce manner. Unfortunately, Gogarty, who is an uncompromising sort of fellow, assumes that you and I were also medical students in Dublin about 1905." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:90 Je 17 '39 220w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Sat R of Lit 20:13 Je 17 '39 750w

"Dr. Gogarty includes in his picture, in addition to those who come within his professional province, all the arts and professions, but neglects the destitute except when they impinge on his own world. As a picture of a period in Dublin's history his book is nevertheless valuable, and it is written with the same spirit and freshness that made his earlier book a joy." D. H. V.

+ — Spec 162:362 Mr 3 '39 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 600w

Time 33:78 Je 19 '39 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 25 '39 600w

GOGH, VINCENT VAN. Letters to Émile Bernard; ed, tr. and with a foreword by Douglas Lord. 124p il $2.50 Museum of modern art [15s Cresset]

B or 92 Painters—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [39-2549]

"Van Gogh left Paris for Arles in the spring of 1887. From that time until May, 1889, he lived there, painting furiously and writing when his day's work was done the letters to his brother which were published in an English translation over ten years ago. Since then a set of early letters from Van Gogh to his friend Rappard has appeared in English, and now a set of twenty-one, written during the Arles period, to his great friend Emile Bernard has appeared in English. . . Being addressed to a fellow-painter and written during the most creative years of Van Gogh's life as an artist, they are of great importance in revealing his aims and ambitions both as a technician and as an interpreter of nature." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"It may well happen, in the eventual disposition of his fame, that Van Gogh will take his place in the department of letters rather than in painting. For in the field of writing, or more precisely, in the limited province of confessional literature, Van Gogh's star is steadily rising. The profound spiritual agonies which he rendered so imperfectly in his paintings, the essential rightness of his philosophy of art, his overflowing humanity, and his religious faith in the world and in art—these are expressed in words with remarkable lucidity and with a candor and freshness which are almost without parallel." Thomas Craven

+ Books p11 My 14 '39 260w

Reviewed by Alice Maginnis
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 15 '39 220w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p10 D 28 '38 430w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 30:81 My 12 '39 90w

Reviewed by Eric Newton
Manchester Guardian p6 N 18 '38 300w

"After the sensationalism, melodrama and slush that have been served up to us in the name of Van Gogh during the last few years, an honest, intelligently produced translation of Van Gogh's letters to his young friend, the painter Emile Bernard, comes as a very much needed corrective. . . As commentaries on Van Gogh's painting and the general evolution of European art in his period these letters to Emile Bernard are full of meat. And in Mr. Lord's presentation of them, the only point that one might be tempted to question is the somewhat unnecessary severity with which he treats Gauguin in his introduction." J. J. Sweeney

+ New Repub 98:356 Ap 26 '39 700w

"These letters, so well annotated and translated by Mr. Lord, are pure gold." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:798 N 12 '38 800w

"These letters to Bernard enrich our prior knowledge and serve once more to bring us into intimate contact with one of the most baffling and fascinating personalities in the whole range of art. The text has been prepared by Mr. Lord with fastidious care and is fully annotated. Many pages that contain swift little pen sketches are reproduced in facsimile, along with paintings to which the sketches refer." E. A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 30 '39 1000w
New Yorker 15:79 Ap 22 '39 110w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 My 6 '39 300w

"A valuable addition to Van Gogh's published correspondence." Goronwy Rees

+ Spec 161:918 N 25 '38 450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p781 D 10 '38 550w

GOHMANN, SISTER MARY DE LOURDES. Political nativism in Tennessee to 1860. 192p pa $2 Catholic univ. of Am.

976.8 Tennessee—Politics and government. Roman Catholics in Tennessee 38-39413

"Sister Mary de Lourdes Gohmann studies the characteristics of the people of Tennessee as revealed in their legislative dealings with foreigners and Catholics in the period preceding the Civil War." Cath World

"Both of these authors [Father Noonan and Sister Mary de Lourdes] have done a valuable service by preparing their readable, well-documented studies. When the definitive history of Know-Nothingism is written, it will be based on such works as these." R. A. Billington

+ Am Hist R 44:999 Jl '39 120w
Cath World 148:763 Mr '39 30w

GOLDBERG, DAVID. Perish the Jew! a clinical treatment of anti-Semitism. 282p $2.50 Bloch

296 Jewish question. Jews—Persecutions 39-9670

"The age-old suffering of the Jews, like the prolonged suffering of Job, is only a prelude to a future triumph. This is the thesis of David Goldberg's optimistic treatment of the history and future of the Jewish people. The author, an American Rabbi, rejects the 'absorption' solution of the Jewish problem as lacking in realism and regards the Zionist movement as equally ineffective. He suggests instead a solution by 'integration,' which would permit the Jews to maintain their identity in a Gentile culture from which the causes of racial discrimination had been somehow removed." Ethics

"Mr. Goldberg's thoughtful, scholarly and dispassionate study of the Jews . . . is perhaps a diagnosis, rather than a 'clinical treatment,' of anti-Semitism. But one need not quarrel with the subtitle of such an excellent book. The first step toward the treatment of any disease is to understand it, and the author makes a notable contribution to understanding."

+ Christian Century 56:708 My 31 '39 400w

Reviewed by Martin Gardner
Ethics 49:508 Jl '39 150w

GOLDBERG, ISAAC. The wonder of words; an introduction to language for everyman [foreword by J. D. M. Ford]. 485p il $3.75 (15s) Appleton-Century

412 Language and languages. Words (W) 38-28953

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"Dr. Goldberg loved words and read them as another might read the earth's history in rock strata. He pursues a word from one language to another, showing how it has changed, even accounting for some of the vulgarisms of mispronunciation. His book is for the intelligent layman, exact, scientific and not too simple." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p9 Ag 20 '39 400w

"Philologists will find no great pioneering in theory here, and perhaps too close a dependence upon Otto Jespersen, but they will recognize its value as a concentrated, clear and careful survey of what is known today about speech, letters, sounds, and meanings. It gives what its subtitle promises, 'an introduction to language for everyman.'. . Readers, plain or otherwise, here is a book." Earle Birney

+ Canadian Forum 19:30 Ap '39 600w
Christian Science Monitor p11 F 1 '39 650w
Pratt p11 spring '39
Times [London] Lit Sup p108 F 18 '39 280w
Wis Lib Bul 35:47 Mr '39

"Written in a journalistic style, 'The Wonder of Words' makes interesting and convincing reading. Parts of its contents will be a revelation to most people. Based on the research of men like Oertel, Sapir, and Jespersen, it avoids hasty conclusions, and it reproduces the linguistic theories of men who have spent a lifetime on language specialties." A. B. Benson

+ Yale R n s 28:642 spring '39 600w

GOLDEN hour. rainbow ed 20v moisture proof cloth $39.80, introductory price $31.80; waterproof aircraft $49.80, introductory price $39.80
c1910-38 Wise

808.8 Children's literature—Collections

"Most of the books in this series, designed for the recreational reading of children under ten, were originally published separately by the Volland company between the years 1910 and 1931. The volumes were brought together into the present series by the Wise book company, which has acquired the publishing rights." (Subscription Bks Bul) Contents: Kimo the whistling boy, by A. C. Bailey; The skating gander, by A. C. Bailey; Water people, by W. S. Bronson; The cat whose whiskers slipped, by Ruth Campbell; Rhymes for kindly children, by Ethel Fairmont; Little Peachling and other tales of old Japan, by Georgene Faulkner; The white elephant and other tales from old India, by Georgene Faulkner; Buddy Jim, by Elizabeth Gordon; Flower children, the little cousins of the field and garden, by Elizabeth Gordon; Mother Earth's children, by Elizabeth Gordon; The turned-into's, by Elizabeth Gordon; More really-so stories, by Elizabeth Gordon and Jane Priest; Really-so stories, by Elizabeth Gordon and Jane Priest; Runaway rhymes, by Alice Higgins, and Tom Lamb; Adventures in geography, by G. A. Kay; The friends of Jimmy, by G. A. Kay; The Red Eagle, by Alexander Key; American Indian fairy tales, by W. T. Larned; The Chatterlings in wordland, by Michael Lipman; Adventures in the open, by N. W. Putnam and Norman Jacobsen.

"Although different writers are responsible for the volumes there is a sameness of style throughout the series, due largely to an old-fashioned and sentimental approach. Exceptions, however, may be found in Larned's American Indian Fairy Tales and Bronson's Water People. Since much of the material in the set is trivial or mediocre, and since the factual information contained in the stories may be found in simple direct form in most libraries, the series as a whole is not recommended. Individual exceptions are noted above."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 10:55 O '39 340w

GOLDING, LOUIS. In the steps of Moses the conqueror. 426p il map $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Rich]

221.92 Moses. Sinai—Description. Levant—Description and travel [38-20746]

Sequel to In the Steps of Moses the Lawgiver (Book Review Digest, 1938). The author takes up the tale at Mount Sinai and traces the journeys of the Israelites thru the lands of Edom and Moab. As in the first book Mr Golding weaves into the story the account of his own pilgrimage thru Transjordan. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 56:953 Ag 2 '39 220w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 26 '38 30w

Reviewed by L. W. Batten
Churchman 153:17 F 15 '39 270w

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 29 '38 490w

"Louis Golding has written a lively book, and has found the scene in which he can display varied qualities, his humour and his eloquence, his sympathy with all manner of men and his Hebraic tradition imbibed in his father's home. He leaves us sorry that the pilgrimage comes to an end at the mountain where Moses died. His skill as a photographer is comparable with his skill as a word-painter. The pictures of the desert, the marches and the villages of Transjordan, and of the Bedou and Fellah Arab add to the vividness of the book." Norman Bentwich

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:388 S 10 '38 650w

"A book which is often beautiful, and as often exciting, which frequently becomes the story of an effort to identify ancient names and modern places and which sometimes is touched with humor either in some incident itself or in the author's way of telling it. . . It is a book whose interest ranges from nobility of conception and response to entertainment in the chronicle of travel."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 29 '39 550w

Reviewed by Archibald Lyall
Spec 161:456 S 16 '38 110w

"Although it is doubtful if many travellers would wish to undertake so difficult and grim a journey as Mr. Golding's, this book would serve as a guide if any such valiant souls could be found; and for armchair reading it can be strongly recommended."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p547 Ag 20 '38 170w

GOLDING, LOUIS. Mr Emmanuel. 444p $2.50 Viking [7s 6d Rich]

(W) 39-19544

Mr Emmanuel, an elderly English Jew, attempts to help a young refugee from Nazi Germany. The boy, at school in England, is eating his heart out because he no longer hears from his idolized mother in Germany. Mr Emmanuel goes to Germany, walks into a Nazi trap, is rescued, learns about the boy's mother, and comes back to England with a kindly story to cover the deadly facts.

Booklist 36:8 S '39

Reviewed by Rose Feld
Books p3 Jl 23 '39 1050w

Reviewed by C. A. Hamilton, Jr.
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 800w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 17 '39 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

"Louis Golding's new book will make him some money but it is no addition to the literature on fascism." Harry Sylvester

— Commonweal 30:401 Ag 18 '39 490w

"While the quixotic Mr. Emmanuel is the character on which Mr. Golding has concentrated his considerable faculty of sympathetic creation, even the minor characters are touched in with all his zestful and vivid sense of personality." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 5 '39 550w

"Even though Mr. Emmanuel himself puts away all thoughts of hatred or revenge, the reader is likely to finish the book in a somewhat less generous mood, wondering whether forgiveness itself is not a fault in dealing with men who recognize only the gun, the lead pipe, the rubber truncheon, the gospel of hate. 'Mr. Emmanuel' is, of course, only a work of fiction, but unfortunately the resemblance of many of the characters to actual persons, both living and dead, is far from coincidental." L. B. Salomon

Nation 149:128 Jl 29 '39 600w

"If all this doesn't hold much weight as an anti-Nazi indictment, that doesn't make it a failure. Mr. Emmanuel has neither the dignity nor stature to play the lead in an imposing angry novel. He can carry off a readable one, though, far better than you'd expect from a mild little gentleman nearing seventy. The point that readers will get here is not the need for getting Hitler out of the way, but the advisability of keeping the Mr. Emmanuels out of Hitler's way. Mr. Golding's hero was never meant to save the world. He's doing plenty if he saves his own peculiar brand of wistful, impractical sweetness." Miriam Borgenicht

New Repub 100:83 Ag 23 '39 330w

"If the Nazis are too mechanically monstrous to retain our interest, Mr. Emmanuel is almost too virtuous and pathetic to hold our sympathy. The strength of Magnolia Street was its humorous detachment; we were invited to criticise even as we wept or admired. In Mr. Emmanuel good and evil are very nearly absolute, and Mr. Golding ignores the deplorable truth that it is possible to be both an anti-Semite and a human being." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:786 My 20 '39 370w

"In his new novel, 'Mr. Emmanuel,' Louis Golding has attained three of a novelist's principal objectives; he has created a character, told an interesting story and vividly pictured a situation. . . . Mr. Golding's picture of Nazi Germany, where the people 'look frightened,' is well and clearly drawn, but it is a picture others have done as well. What makes his book notable is that one individuality which will not quickly slip out of the reader's mind, loyal, strong-hearted 'Mr. Emmanuel.'" L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 23 '39 550w

"Mr. Golding's greatest propagandist weapon is his ability to tell a thoroughly interesting story. 'Mr. Emmanuel,' with its plot that would seem trashy were it not so apt to be true, with its villains that would seem grotesque were they are not in this morning's headlines, is alive with action and suspense. . . . His story is too sentimentally developed and too fictionally resolved. The trouble with such touching heroes as Mr. Emmanuel is that we shed tears over them in any unfortunate situation, so that when they figure in really significant drama, it is not they who are enlarged but the drama that is diminished. What 'Mr. Emmanuel' needs is less pathos and more punch." Louis Kronenberger

+ — New Yorker 15:73 Jl 22 '39 650w

Pratt p28 autumn '39

"I have, I must confess, no great love for topical fiction; I am, in fact, all against it, and Mr. Emmanuel is no doubt a topical novel. Yet it conquered my prejudices; I found it an original, powerful, and moving book, alarming at times, grimly outspoken, but with a light shining through, a sense of moral values, a tenderness and compassion. . . . I cannot say whether the picture Mr. Golding draws is accurate or exaggerated. I believe it to be accurate, though such cruelty and wickedness seem insane. Perhaps in this may lie a certain hope, for human nature turns instinctively to happiness, and in such conditions one imagines, there can be no happiness even for the aggressor. It is a mere chance that saves Mr. Emmanuel, but we believe in the chance, we believe in the whole story." Forrest Reid

+ Spec 162:780 My 5 '39 600w

"Mr. Golding gives a touch here and there to show the innate kindness of many of the German people, but the grimness of living in that country overshadows everything. There is no attempt to do more than picture the helplessness of anyone caught in the Nazi net. The success and value of this book, however, lie in the character of Mr. Emmanuel—a gentle old man, naive, talkative, a little lonely and bewildered, but confident and hopeful. When he faces his torturers in prison he shows iron strength of character beneath his gentleness. It is an unusual character well done."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 800w

Time 34:62 Jl 24 '39 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p263 My 6 '39 330w

Wis Lib Bul 35:186 N '39

GOLDMAN, RAYMOND LESLIE. Death plays solitaire. 250p $2 Coward-McCann 39-2157

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p8 Ja 29 '39 100w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '39 50w

"Although the reader will, after a few chapters, have little difficulty in grasping the general significance of the information held by Reed, there are still several surprises in store for him and some exciting adventures as well. The story ends as it has begun—in the death house." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 29 '39 160w

"Ranks high in mobster class of mysteries. Tough talk and action restrained and convincing. Capital puzzle with smash finish. Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:17 Ja 28 '39 40w

Time 33:27 F 6 '39 20w

GOLDMAN, SOLOMON. Crisis and decision. 206p $2 Harper

296 Jews—Political and social conditions

38-33706

Sermons and essays on the Jewish problem past and present, by the president of the Zionist organization of America.

"To the Jewish reader this volume will undoubtedly prove stimulating. To the social scientists it is interesting as an illustrative document rather than in any sense as a dispassionate treatise. The author reveals something of his own passionate attitudes in his polemic attacks upon those who disagree with his Zionistic views." Hornell Hart

+ Ann Am Acad 206:217 N '39 430w

"Crisis and Decision is a well written, well conceived book, but still not the final book on subjects which are again the core of a world in turmoil. In it, Dr. Goldman induces thinking and fair appraisal, and for that we owe him thanks. (An index would have greatly aided the student of Jewish affairs)." B. E. Nelson

+ — Christian Century 56:1168 S 27 '39 850w

GOLDSMITH, MARTIN M. Detour; an extraordinary tale. 248p $2 Macaulay

39-2158

"A well-meaning young man thumbs a ride to Los Angeles and gets into all sorts of trouble, including murder." New Yorker

---

"Here's a red hot, fast stepping little number, recommended as a minor item to collectors of James M. Cainiana. . . . Mr. Goldsmith has got together a lot of ingredients—innocence on the spot, blackmail, murder, attempted suicide, fast cars, marihuana cigarettes, women of varying degrees of pulchritude and looseness, movie actors, big dough in the offing, mistaken identity." F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p7 Ja 29 '39 380w

"A tough, swift yarn."

New Yorker 14:75 Ja 14 '39 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 180w

GOLDWATER, ROBERT JOHN. Primitivism in modern painting. 210p 32pl $5 Harper

759.9 Painting 39-350

Analysis of the effect of primitivism on the works of Gauguin, Rousseau, Klee, Matisse, Picasso, and other modern painters. Illustrated with reproductions of their paintings. "Before taking up the various categories of primitivism as evidenced in the development of modern art, Professor Goldwater discusses the immediate sources of material and the accessibility of this material in museums of ethnology, the change from 'documentary' to 'aesthetic' installation, the attitude of anthropological and ethnological writers toward the primitive art that was destined to be 'discovered,' with such important and widespread consequences, by modern artists." (N Y Times) Bibliographies.

"This book is admirably thorough. Professor Goldwater's approach to the problems involved remains consistently historical, analytical and descriptive. He does not emphasize evaluation of primitivistic modern art viewed purely as art; to do so would mean going outside the field he has here undertaken to survey. But the investigation, held strictly within bounds drawn, is of lively interest and real importance. It contributes toward the laying of a base upon which students of the complex period may eventually build a full criticism of what modern art, more broadly considered, has achieved and failed to achieve." E. A. Jewell

GOLDWATER, R. J. Continued
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 15 '39 850w
Pratt p18 autumn '39

"Distinguished for the general survey of the literature of the field, the comprehensive footnotes and the fine bibliography."
+ Special Libraries 30:66 F '39

GOLENPAUL, DAN, ed. Information please! 258p $1.60 Simon & Schuster
793.7 Information tests (W) 39-27445

"A game book based on the famous radio program starring Clifton Fadiman, Franklin P. Adams, John Kieran, Oscar Levant, and the other celebrated 'Information, Please!' experts." (Subtitle) Some of the 350 questions included have been given on the air programs, others are new. Answers are given at the end of the book.

Booklist 35:327 Je 1 '39
Sat R of Lit 20:21 My 20 '39 80w

"Though not of uniform interest and merit, the questions sometimes invite amusing answers and at times are genuine tests of knowledge or even of culture. . . The book is offered as material for a game. Although the original questions of the 'Information, Please!' program are not in all cases identified as such, some readers may be glad to have a souvenir of the quizzes that have so agreeably disclosed John Kieran's wide range of information and Franklin P. Adams's quickness of wit."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 250w

GOLLOMB, JOSEPH. Armies of spies. 213p $2.50 Macmillan
351.74 Spies. Secret service (W) 39-17513

Stories of modern espionage which outstrip the spy stories of the World war period in subtlety. These tales have been collected from Central Europe, Spain, Russia, Japan, and the Panama canal region.

Booklist 36:2 S '39
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p8 Jl 16 '39 600w
Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 490w
Christian Century 56:826 Je 28 '39 150w
Foreign Affairs 18:370 Ja '40 10w

"Mr. Gollomb is the only American journalist ever to get past certain doors in Scotland Yard, in the French Sûreté and detective schools, and a lot of other undercover agencies. All his amazing information is assembled with confidence and dramatic emphasis; and his chapter on the Cagoulards episode in France, which he reconstructs in detail, is alone worth the price of admission." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 102:vii Ag '39 180w
Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
N Y Times p5 Ag 6 '39 600w
New Yorker 15:88 Jl 8 '39 30w

"With one major exception, Joseph Gollomb's 'Armies of Spies' forms quite a thorough study in up-to-date fashions in spydom, to say nothing of the gentle arts of mayhem and murder, seemingly as necessary to counter-espionage as it is to every other cut-throat activity. And, if one can forget the somewhat palpable omissions, it is thoroughly exciting and informative reading." C. R. Cooper
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:7 Jl 8 '39 900w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 15 '39 800w

GOOCH, ROBERT KENT. Manual of government in the United States. 791p $3.75 Van Nostrand
342.73 U.S.—Politics and government 39-3895

Manual for introductory courses in colleges and universities, composed of source material on national, state, and local government in the United States, with running comment and discussion. Index.

Am J Soc 45:503 N '39 60w

"Carefully selecting his materials, skilfully arranging them, and unifying them by discriminating expository treatment throughout each of the chapters, Professor Gooch has prepared a volume which, although it will remind one of a book of readings, can be used as a text in the traditional sense of the word. Some will object because of the radical departure from traditional ways which this book frankly represents. Others, with more reason, will question the advisability of this approach in so far as freshman courses are concerned. The arrangement of the materials is noteworthy." A. N. Christensen
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:531 Je '39 310w
Reviewed by Edgar Dawson
Social Educ 3:366 My '39 380w

GOODIS, DAVID. Retreat from oblivion. 269p $2.50 Dutton
39-20247

Story of a group of young New Yorkers, their tangled love affairs further complicated by the fighting in Spain and China.

"The opening sentence in 'Retreat From Oblivion' is as follows: 'After a while it gets so bad that you want to stop the whole business.' It refers to Herb's state of mind, but it's not an inaccurate summary of what one is inclined to say about David Goodis's novel." Lisle Bell
— Books p9 Jl 30 '39 310w
New Repub 100:112 Ag 30 '39 40w
Reviewed by Rose Feld
N Y Times p7 Jl 16 '39 380w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 210w

GOODMAN, BENNY DAVID, and KOLODIN, IRVING. The kingdom of swing [with analysis and description of swing]. 265p il $2 Stackpole sons
B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Jazz music (W) 39-27446

An autobiography of "the king of swing" which is a short history of swing music itself as well. Two chapters by Irving Kolodin giving a historical and critical outline of the art are included.

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"Since Benny Goodman's 'The Kingdom of Swing' is highly personal and almost bafflingly idiomatic at times, it is suggested that one read it only after having thoroughly absorbed Hobson's book [American Jazz Music]. Mr. Goodman writes in a rather naive manner. All his sentences are short, and a sort of piquancy results from placing Irving Kolodin's two carefully written chapters on Chicago and swing more or less casually in the middle of Goodman's less polished prose. Practically every famous jazz artist is mentioned at least once, and many personal anecdotes are related in some of which Mr. Goodman indicates that he has a healthy sense of humor." Tom Parshley
Books p26 Ap 30 '39 550w

"A narrative of names, places, events, much better done than the type in general and the best one about a musician, but still hardly a good book." Otis Ferguson
New Repub 99:363 Ag 2 '39 750w

"One of the best chapters in the book is a discussion of the nature of swing. This chapter, 'Swing Is Here,' is credited to Mr. Kolodin. It is a penetrating summary of the ingredients and character of swing, one of the best short essays on the subject that has appeared in print." H. H. Taubman

+ N Y Times p15 Je 18 '39 550w

"Mr. Kolodin's function, apart from his own chapters, is that of the writing partner in the enterprise. He has transcribed admirably the talk which Mr. Goodman would supply if you were able to catch up with him and sit him down long enough. Technically this is ghost writing, but Mr. Kolodin is a skillful, tactful ghost, who never reckons without his host. For swing lovers and students, 'The Kingdom of Swing' is terrific value for maybe a couple of bucks. And, leaving the chirps to fall where they may, it's often fascinating Americana." R. A. Simon
+ Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 22 '39 420w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 25 '39 700w

Reviewed by L. M. Isaacs
Theatre Arts Mo 23:762 O '39 490w

GOODRICH, LAURENCE B. Living with others; a book on social conduct. 294p il $1 Am. bk.

395 Etiquet (W) 39-5564

Textbook on etiquet and good manners for all occasions, written for upper grade and high school use. It deals also with a variety of subjects not usually found in books of etiquet: matters of voice and vocabulary; starting and keeping up a conversation; behavior at clubs and societies; etc. Index.

Booklist 35:343 Je 15 '39

"This book should be a most pleasant surprise for those of us who are extremely weary of the 'goody-goody,' 'sweetness and light,' 'starry-eyed' books written to reform the younger generation, for it does not preach and avoids moralizing. . . Spiced with a fine sense of humor, and well balanced, the book is very readable and very teachable; a well qualified teacher should accomplish much by its use. . . In my opinion this book is worth reading, owning, and using." Milton Hahn
+ Social Educ 3:367 My '39 330w

"The style is attractive. The book is not preachy, or arbitrary, but simply tries to aid those who, without overdoing it, want to do what is right. Such a volume should appeal particularly to young people who are just beginning their broader social contacts and want to find out what is proper procedure under the circumstances they will meet."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 22 '39 270w

GOODSPEED, CHARLES ELIOT. Angling in America; its early history and literature. ltd autog ed 381p il $15 Houghton

799.12 Fishing 39-20033

"Beginning with crude fishing, as practiced by the Indians at the time of the arrival of the first white men, Goodspeed traces the taking of fish (for sport) through the pioneer period, through Colonial history, and up to the end of the nineteenth century. The history is amazingly complete, and the literary references are scholarly and painstakingly accurate." Books

"It is apparent at once to the reader that the author is no armchair fisherman. He puts a sound knowledge of the sport and a genuine love for it into every line of his work. Although Goodspeed the Angler retires into the shadows of the study to let Goodspeed the Scholar do his work, the reader feels that he is always present, the better man of the two. He peers over the Scholar's shoulder on every page, just to make sure that the writer doesn't stray from the subject, and sometimes to grasp the pen himself and underline certain of the passages." Cy Coggins
+ Books p23 O 8 '39 360w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 12 '39 700w

"This book is not only valuable as history, important for the bibliophile, but also very good reading." H. S. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 9 '39 270w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. The story of the Apocrypha. 150p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

229 Bible. Old Testament—Apocrypha (W) 39-31175

In his introduction Dr Goodspeed says: "For the full understanding of the New Testament, it is not too much to say that the Apocrypha are indispensable. As a part too of the complete Bible, as a source book for the cultural study of art and literature and religion, the Apocrypha demand attention. . . This book is intended to bring the main facts as to the origin of the collection and of the several books concisely before the student and the general reader, to enable him more readily to gain from them what they have to contribute for literature, history, and religion." Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:143 D 15 '39

"Accurate knowledge is matched with simple human interest—a fine combination." J. H. Holmes
+ Books p13 F 4 '40 150w

"Now that Goodspeed has made his new translation of the Apocrypha and it has been incorporated into the forthcoming edition of the 'American Translation' of the Bible, it is fitting that he should give the public the facilities here supplied for an intelligent reading of those books with a reasonable understanding of the facts concerning their origin, purpose, contents and history. This small volume meets the need exactly."
+ Christian Century 56:1307 O 25 '39 140w

"The volume is particularly valuable because of the comparatively condensed form in which it presents the salient story of the origin of the writings which make up the Apocrypha. The author's gift for making biblical studies exciting is revealed throughout." James van Zant
+ Churchman 153:21 D 1 '39 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

"There can be no question of the excellence of the work as a whole, or of the service which it renders to the student of the Bible. Everyone who has any critical interest either in the Old Testament or in the New should take care to possess it. Although the Apocrypha are excluded from most of our modern copies of the scriptures, they form the necessary bridge for passing from the one Testament to the other. There could be no more attractive introduction to them than this volume of Professor Goodspeed's." E. F. Scott
+ J Religion 20:100 Ja '40 220w
Pratt p5 winter '40

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON, tr. See Bible. Old Testament. Apocrypha

GOODYEAR, SUSAN, pseud. See Matthews, M.

GORDON, DOROTHY. Come to France; with a foreword by John J. Loftus; il. by Veronica Reed. 155p map $1; school ed 72c Am. bk.

914.4 France—Description and travel (W)' 39-2090

Two little Americans, Dotty and Jimmy, visit France with their parents and learn about things to do and see while in Normandy, Brittany, Touraine, and Paris. Contains words and music of some French songs and a glossary of French words and phrases.

Booklist 35:237 Mr 15 '39

"John J. Loftus in a foreword commends the book to parents and to teachers of elementary grades who seek to 'bring the world to the child.' It is brought in high spirits and with good luck in being on hand when a holiday was in progress, and if the result, to an older reader, is faintly reminiscent of the classic description of 'a frivolous nation fond of light wines and dancing,' it must not be forgotten that little children, happy and in a hurry, may get a lasting memory of France as a friendly place from meeting it thus in a series of gayeties." M. L. Becker

GORDON, DOROTHY—Continued

+ Books p6 Ap 16 '39 190w

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 20w

"Told delightfully and informatively. . . It is a gay book for school or home use."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 300w

GORDON, DOROTHY. Treasure bag of game songs; il. by Veronica Reed; musical arrangements by Adele Buchman. 93p $1.50 Dutton

796.13 Singing games (W) 39-27216

Compilation of twenty-two singing games for use in the home, school, or day nursery. The selections are from American, English, German, French, and other sources. Simple piano accompaniments are included for each game. The compiler is advisory consultant on children's programs for the National Broadcasting company.

Booklist 35:277 Ap 15 '39

"This has been done before, but every time it is done again it seems new if the group leader has been able to project her personality through the print and seem to be present among the singing children. Miss Gordon can do this; she has done it again. Many pictures, in sepia like the type, add to the action." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 16 '39 150w

Horn Bk M 15:173 My '39 40w

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 170w

GORDON, LELAND JAMES. Economics for consumers. 638p $3 Am. bk.

339.4 Consumption (economics) 39-12825

"According to the preface, this college textbook 'works through established economic principles' from the point of view of the consumer and his welfare, and hence throws emphasis on the 'prevalence of waste in current consuming practices' and on the attempt to discover and promote ways of improving them. The first few chapters give a negative answer to the question, 'Do consumers control production?'; some 200 pages are devoted to restrictions on consumer control and the forces back of consumer demand; the remaining half of the book develops a 'technology of consumption' by which consumer control may be made more effective and which includes planned spending, intelligent buying of various goods and services, co-operative buying, standards, and government aids." (J Home Econ) Index.

"What appears to the reviewer the greatest omission of the book occurs [in what] the author has to say about purchasing power as a factor in choice. . . He does, however, adequately recognize the importance of custom and emulation. He discusses producers' actions in directing and creating wants for their own profit and he takes up the authoritarian control of choice. In his discussion of wants the author is confining his attention directly to the American scene. Wants are, of course, very largely cultural products and so can be finally understood only on relation to the philosophy of peoples and their integrated standards of living. The questions for discussion and problems at the end of each chapter do a good job in relating the subject matter of the book to the student's own interests and experience." E. E. Hoyt

+ — Am Econ R 29:599 S '39 450w

Reviewed by Frank Harris

Am Soc R 4:899 D '39 100w

"The book throughout is factual rather than analytical. It is written in a simple, pleasing style." M. G. Reid

+ Ann Am Acad 206:189 N '39 450w

"The teacher of a college course in consumption economics will find here a stimulating, useful textbook, and a large group of readers will find it no less interesting and important. . . The reviewer feels that there is one lack which should be mentioned. The author does not describe the functions and contributions of producers in our economy. In other words, there is no attempt to explain the actual workings of our economic system in order to demonstrate the roles of the various members of society except in their functions as consumers." M. H. Benson

+ — Christian Century 56:1343 N 1 '39 650w

J Home Econ 31:586 O '39 150w

GORDON, PAUL HERMAN. The new archery; hobby, sport, and craft. 423p il $3.50 (15s) Appleton-Century

799.32 Archery (W) 39-27491

Manual on the technique and rules of archery, the making of equipment, and the direction of archery in a camp. Includes a glossary of archery terms and an annotated bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:345 Je 15 '39

"Technical enough to contribute vast amounts to the store of enthusiasm and knowledge already possessed by the expert, and yet having through it an undercurrent of geniality and good humor that eases the layman and novice over the technicalities, one can scarcely read the book without having brightened the smoldering spark of interest which lies within all of us." E. W. Dexter

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 17 '39 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39

GORELL, RONALD GORELL BARNES, 3d baron. Last of the English, and other new poems. 148p $2 Dutton [6s Murray, J]

821 [39-30575]

Collection of short poems, and a dramatic trilogy, which last is planned to demonstrate the continuity of courage in English history. The three episodes are woven about Harold in 1066; Sir Thomas More in 1530; and Mrs Brown of Bermondsey in 1937.

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 30 '39 170w

"Lord Gorell's verse is seldom original in form or diction. It is graceful and unexacting as is its reflective sentiment. . . The dialogue in each of [the final] dramatic sketches is skilfully handled and the character of More in particular is sympathetically suggested. The volume as a whole is rich in the human and companionable qualities characteristic of its author."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p331 Je 3 '39 120w

GORHAM, HARRY M. My memories of the Comstock; il. by John and Marie Gorham. 222p map $2.50 Suttonhouse

917.93 Virginia City, Nevada

"An account of the everyday life of the rich and the poor of this region from 1877 to 1903." Social Studies

Reviewed by H. N. Smith

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 1 '39 470w

"Mr. Gorham himself is 80 years old now, but the memories of his twenty-six years on the Comstock Lode are as racy and vigorous as they are tender in his heart. . . His book is disarmingly enthusiastic, and full of the sturdy push of life as he looks back on a vital episode in our Western history."

+ N Y Times p12 F 5 '39 460w

Social Studies 30:240 My '39 20w

GORITZINA, KYRA. Service entrance. 315p $2.50 Carrick

B or 92 (W) 39-27538

Reminiscences of an upper-class Russian refugee and her husband, who for fifteen years worked together as butler and cook in the homes of well-to-do Americans. The book is based on their experiences in this country only.

Booklist 35:363 Jl 1 '39

"Naive, honest and courageous, Mrs. Goritzina tells of their fifteen years work just as it seems to her to have happened—and tells it with a limpid stylelessness that is impressive." F. H. Britten

+ Books p7 Je 18 '39 750w

Commonweal 30:381 Ag 11 '39 120w

New Repub 99:196 Je 21 '39 40w

"The author makes no attempt to point up her story with outrages inflicted on defenseless servants, nor does she expose any more corruption behind Park Avenue's gilded facades than appears in the society columns of daily papers. She contrives rather to hold the reader's interest by her shrewd but invariably temperate observations on the idiosyncrasies of her various employers, for some of whom she felt a deep attachment." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p2 Je 11 '39 700w

"This tale is lightly amusing, pathetic, and charmingly naïve."

+ New Yorker 15:95 Je 10 '39 30w

Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 8 '39 200w

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 7 '39 290w

Time 33:80 Je 19 '39 310w

Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). A book of short stories; ed. by Avrahm Yarmolinsky and Baroness Moura Budberg [foreword by Aldous Huxley]. 403p $3 Holt [10s 6d Cape, J]

(W) 39-11401

Fifteen short stories, six of them here translated into English for the first time. They are arranged chronologically, and range in time from 1894 to 1924. Contents: Chelkash; One autumn evening; The affair of the clasps; Creatures that once were men; Notch; Chums; Twenty-six men and a girl; Cain and Artyom; Red; Evil-doers; Birth of a man; Going home; Lullaby; The hermit; Karamora.

"Unlike Zola, Gorki had no literary theories, no literary edifice to build up; he wrote simply of what he knew. He was naive and he was brutal; and he was not always good. But what comes out of these stories is an almost classic irony. . . The volume that Mr. Yarmolinsky and Baroness Budberg have so admirably edited is the most representative and useful collection of Gorki's stories in English." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p3 My 14 '39 900w

"Though each story has its own merits, the greatest, to my mind, are the two last: 'The Hermit' and 'Karamora,' which show a marked philosophic advance over the sometimes painful realism of the earlier pieces. A muddling foreword by Aldous Huxley may make the book valuable to Huxley collectors, but contributes nothing to an understanding of Gorki."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 100w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '39 200w

Reviewed by Thomas Moult

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 25 '39 470w

"You will enjoy these stories most if you read them one or two at a sitting, then put the book away for a while. Taken as a group, they strike the same minor chord with a regularity that is apt to detract from the effect of the individual stories. Gorki at his best is always deeply moving, lyrical even in his vignettes of squalid and misshapen lives, and his people, however repulsive, are living, suffering people; but they are cut from a pattern that does not allow a great deal of variation." L. B. Salomon

+ — Nation 148:704 Je 17 '39 440w

Reviewed by Michael Sayers

New Repub 99:81 My 24 '39 500w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bowen

New Statesman & Nation 18:220 Ag 5 '39 1200w

"Putting all controversial elements aside, this is a fine collection of tales." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 16 '39 850w

"Gorki is much more at home with the short story than with the novel. There is, in fact, nobody quite like him. Must be read."

+ New Yorker 15:106 Ap 15 '39 50w

"Old enthusiasm for Gorki's work will be revived by this volume and fresh ones kindled by it. Together with certain tales and stories like 'Chelkash,' 'Creatures That Once Were Men,' and 'Twenty-Six Men and a Girl,' which won Gorki his first renown, this fine collection includes six masterly later stories never hitherto translated into English; and the entire fifteen exhibit the distinct artistic and spiritual evolution of this fundamentally simple-hearted and deeply emotional man." Paul Rosenfeld

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 Ap 15 '39 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 17 '39 500w

GORRES-COUDENHOVE, IDA FRIEDERICKE. See Coudenhove, I. F.

GOSLIN, OMAR PANCOAST, and ALEXANDER, RYLLIS CLAIR (MRS OMAR PANCOAST GOSLIN). Our town's business. 355p il maps $3.50 Funk

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. Cities and towns—U.S. (W) 39-27594

In this book "the authors try to interpret the intricate business of our economic life in terms of those things which we do day by day. Technical phrases are omitted, theories are passed by, and attention is focused upon Main Street, on the marketplace, on factories, on farmers, on stores, on services, on customers, on groups of workers, on those experiences which all of us have in our attempts to make a living." (Foreword)

"The material . . . is reasonable in tone and liberal in outlook. The authors have a gift for enlivening the discussion with local color, realistic illustration, and picturesque phrase. The crying shame is that this 75,000-word primer was blown up into a heavy, case-bound book of 355 pages to sell for $3.50. If it had been issued as a paper-bound pamphlet in any one of several current series, I am sure that it would reach a larger number of people in discussion groups, forums, civic clubs, and schools." C. S. Ascher

+ — Ann Am Acad 207:232 Ja '40 350w

Booklist 35:375 Jl 15 '39

"This is a reasonable, persuasive book and a brilliant example of sound popularization." Daniel Aaron

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 19 '39 360w

"The text is for the runner-reader, or the juvenile. For the latter, say at the junior high school level, it is an excellent piece of work. There are many useful hints for the adult reader. But if the level of writing and of analysis which the authors have adopted is a valid indication of the present intellectual plane of adult America, then the prospects of achieving substantial improvement in our economic and social structure are not very bright."

+ — Christian Century 56:1547 D 13 '39 180w

"The simplicity of style, the many little picture charts and the big, broadly spaced type all serve to belie the wallop that is packed in Our Town's Business. Before the reader is fully on guard, Omar Pancoast Goslin and Ryllis Alexander Goslin have come right out and urged planning." R. M. B.

GOSLIN, O. P., and ALEXANDER, R. C.—Continued

Christian Science Monitor p17 Jl 13 '39 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '39

"The book makes no claim to novelty on the one hand, and on the other hand it is quite possible that some readers will disagree with some of the opinions here expressed. But it covers its subject clearly and well and has definite educational usefulness."

+ — N Y Times p24 Ag 20 '39 450w

" 'Our Town's Business' is written so that every American can understand it, young as well as old. It is a simple and dramatic story. The many pictorial charts are an excellent aid. The fact that the book has no index is one of its two most serious drawbacks. The other is its price. . . The authors tell us . . . 'In a budget that must stretch a good deal to cover even necessary items, we cannot expect [the typical American family's] expenditure for reading matter to be large.' It can hardly be said that a $3.50 book attempts to meet this problem." Leo Huberman

+ — Survey G 28:503 Ag '39 250w

GOSLIN, MRS RYLLIS CLAIR (ALEXANDER). See Alexander, R. C.

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. The middle window. 302p $2.50 Coward-McCann [7s 6d; 3s 6d Duckworth]

(W) 39-9205

A modern English girl on a vacation in Scotland feels unaccountably at home with her surroundings: the mountains, the old house which her father has rented, the people, and especially the young laird. In a dream Judy Cameron learns the story of an earlier Judith who lived and loved and lost her husband in the '45. To her family's consternation the modern Judy breaks her engagement to her correct English fiancé, and chooses to live out her destiny with the young laird.

" 'The Middle Window' has charm and humor and moments of romantic beauty. It has the lightness of a novel that is buoyant rather than frothy. Obviously you cannot play Miss Goudge's game unless you are willing to grant her the romantic premises on which this story of the Highlands is skillfully erected. Once that is granted, it moves gracefully to its appointed end." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 Mr 26 '39 500w

"Many readers will be disappointed by the lack of that acute characterization which distinguished the author's 'A City of Bells.' While 'The Middle Window' seems to belong to an earlier and less developed period of Miss Goudge's work, it is well written and will please all those who revel in romance." W. G. Roelker

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 180w

"Those to whom Elizabeth Goudge's earlier novels gave such delight through their quality of deep-hearted joyousness might well fear so ambitious and daring a fictional venture as we have here. Let them be at once reassured. Nothing has been sacrificed. . . It is a book that you will read a second time—and again and again—as you would explore a beloved countryside, each time finding new beauties." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 19 '39 800w

Pratt p29 summer '39

"Miss Goudge writes with smoothness but the bones of the novel creak. It is stereotyped sentimental romance." A. L.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 8 '39 160w

Wis Lib Bul 35:104 My '39

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. The sister of the angels; with il. by C. Walter Hodges. 155p $1.50 Coward-McCann

(W) 39-27983

When a walled up chapel in the crypt of Torminster cathedral was opened, three walls were found to be covered with beautiful frescoes, reputed to have been painted by a medieval monk. The work of restoration and of finishing the fourth wall was entrusted to a young painter, who had to leave the work again unfinished. This story of the Christmas season in the '90s when the work was finally completed has as central characters a charming child of eleven, her father, and an artist with a sense of obligation.

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39

"Ever since 'Island Magic,' Miss Goudge has been showing childhood to adults with a special understanding of gifted children. Here she shows a gifted child completely happy and at home in a town full of people gifted with nothing but 'the sense to be very interested in everything in Torminster.' This trait may be one of the reasons for her popularity with a trans-Atlantic public grown a little tired of tales in which small-town life is shown through the eyes of some one impassioned to escape from it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 5 '39 350w

"The characters are perfectly charming—altruistic, selfless, attractive, even a little 'quaint'; but Miss Goudge tells her story without a single cloying note, and with considerable grace." Ruth Page

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '39 400w

"It is a romantic, rather sentimental story, not entirely without a hint of medieval mysticism; slight but shot through with a certain delicate beauty. A pleasant little tale for the holiday season."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 D 30 '39 200w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 31:133 D 1 '39 20w

Living Church 101:12 D 20 '39 100w

"One of the greatest rewarding pleasures connected with reviewing books of the creative kind is watching a talent of high order come to full flower. The work of the author of 'A City of Bells' and 'The Middle Window' has always been distinguished by integrity. . . Miss Goudge's integrity has kept her invariably true to her own vision, the vision of beauty and the joy inseparable from it. Her stories are sung from the heart. This latest one is flawlessly lovely. . . To read this book after a war bulletin is to slip from Hades into a happy garden." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p22 O 29 '39 650w

Pratt p23 winter '40

Times [London] Lit Sup p733 D 16 '39 320w

Wis Lib Bul 35:215 D '39

GOULD, DOROTHY WHEATON (FAY) (MRS CARL FRELINGHUYSEN GOULD). Beyond the shining mountains. 206p il maps $2.25 Binfords

979 Northwest, Pacific 38-23985

Collection of accounts of adventures in the Northwest during nearly four hundred years of discovery, exploration, commercial enterprise, and settlement. The narratives have been chosen from unpublished documents, first editions of rare books, and other original sources.

"This little volume . . . is both interesting and tantalizing. Interesting because, in a good many instances, she has worked from source material and presented circumstances little known or not known at all to the general reader. Tantalizing because she has handled very briefly persons and incidents which seem to merit much fuller treatment. . . One of the most interesting features of the present volume is its illustrations, excellent reproductions of contemporary maps and prints, many of them drawn from private collections. Undoubtedly its most disappointing feature is the absence of a bibliography, which would have added enormously to its usefulness." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p9 F 5 '39 400w
Social Studies 30:238 My '39 110w

GOULDEN, CYRIL HAROLD. Methods of statistical analysis. 277p il $3.50 Wiley [17s 6d Chapman]

311.2 Statistics 39-7612

"[This] is a testbook designed for workers in the biological sciences who have passed the elementary stage and 'who have studied a fair amount of theory and principles and now wish to equip themselves for actual statistical work in their own field of research activities.' The emphasis, therefore, is on actual full-size problem of the type which agronomists, cereal chemists, plant breeders, and economic entomologists are likely to encounter. . . Following a good summary of elementary subjects in the first three chapters, this text continues with chapters on the tests of significance of small samples, the design of simple experiments in the fields mentioned above, linear and non-linear regression, correlation, multiple and partial regression and correlation, the Chi-square test, tests of goodness of fit and independence with small samples, the analysis of variance and covariance, and some tests of special interest to agronomers. The methods set forth are chiefly those developed by R. A. Fisher." Am Soc R

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg
Am Soc R 4:880 D '39 240w

Reviewed by M. S. Bartlett
Nature 144:800 N 11 '39 420w

GOVAN, MRS CHRISTINE NOBLE (J. N. DARBY, pseud). Murder in the house with the blue eyes. 302p $2 Bobbs

39-20166

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 120w

"The story is both exciting and mystifying, but the author has yet something to learn about the art of bringing a mystery to a logical and satisfactory conclusion." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p15 Ag 27 '39 210w

"Freshly told story with a too all's-well-that-ends-well solution."

+ — New Yorker 15:67 Ag 19 '39 50w

"Pleasantly talkative yarn with authentic small-town color and abundant action—but solution is pretty much agin the rules. Adequate."

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 19 '39 40w

GOVAN, MRS CHRISTINE NOBLE (J. N. DARBY, pseud). String and the no-tail cat; il. by Susanne Suba. 39p $1.25 Houghton

39-31193

String, a little colored boy, found a Siamese kitten by the roadside and took it home for a pet. Shortly after a fifty dollar reward was offered and the no-tail cat went home to its owner. But String and his mother had a beautiful time spending the money.

"This [is an] affectionate, laughable little story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 12 '39 200w

"Illustrated with restraint and charm by Susanne Suba. You may be glad to learn that Honey, the tailless Siamese kitten of this story, is not plagued by curiosity, and that the little negro boy who finds the kitten is a sweet chap who will surely endear himself at once to the children who read about him." Ruth Page

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 50w

"If String seems disappointingly fickle in his affections, this is such a light-hearted little story, setting forth the most ingratiating qualities of Negroes and cats, that it doesn't really matter much. The feathery lines of Susanne Suba's drawings are well suited to the exotic charm of a Siamese cat, and her Negroes are portrayed with grace and character." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 24 '39 280w
New Yorker 15:87 N 25 '39 10w

GRAEME, BRUCE, pseud. (GRAHAM MONTAGUE JEFFRIES). The mystery of the stolen hats [Eng title: Man from Michigan]. 314p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Hutchinson]

39-8021

Detective story.

Booklist 35:333 Je 1 '39

"Mr. Graeme's story may be a trifle thin, but you get plenty of Parisian atmosphere and what passes for joviality there. Inspector Allain may not be as funny as Hercule Poirot, say, but he works hard and will do for entertainment in a pinch." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Ap 16 '39 140w

"Sometimes confusing, sometimes fun and sometimes exceedingly tiresome. Mr. Graeme has not one but three detectives working on the case; one French, one English and one American. They mix their work liberally with Parisian pleasure and manage an air of great international friendliness. Best is the description of the French police reconstruction of the crime." Marian Wiggin

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 80w

"In addition to its merits as a baffler, this story has good comedy, with Pierre Allain as the chief comedian." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 16 '39 150w

"Triple-barreled detective yarn done with considerable 'Gallic humor' and finesse. French sleuth comes off with deductive and amatory honors. Très bien."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 22 '39 40w

GRAGG, MABEL TAYLOR, and BORDEN, NEIL HOPPER. Merchandise testing as a guide to consumer buying. 84p pa $1 Harvard univ. Bur. of business research

339.4 Buying. Commercial products

39-16493

"A comprehensive study on problems of merchandise testing. The use made of tests and evaluating procedures in industrial and governmental buying is described, and the applicability of experience in those fields to problems of merchandise evaluation for consumers is studied. The issues presented by use of grade notations, brands, informative labels, and other evaluating devices are examined. The study seeks to determine, not what constitutes sound methods for product-testing in specific instances, but rather what represents a valid goal for programs of merchandise evaluation." Management R

"The general impression one gets from the report is that of a layman worried and bewildered at finding himself for the first time in the maze of technical problems involved in the development of specifications for consumer goods. The authors have, very humanly, become so preoccupied with these technological difficulties, which seem to them overwhelming, that it has prevented them from coming fully to grips with the fundamentals of the problem. Most of the report has to do with these technological difficulties." P. G. Agnew

J Home Econ 31:115 F '39 950w

Reviewed by Hazel Kyrk
J Pol Econ 47:598 Ag '39 270w
Management R 28:143 Ap '39 80w

GRAHAM, ELEANOR. For these moments [with an introd. by Arthur Guiterman]. 103p $1.25 Daye

811 39-29756

A first book of poems, which includes love poems, poems of home life and children, poems of humorous comment on characteristics of friends and neighbors. Some of the poems have been previously published in the New Yorker, Good Housekeeping, Ladies' Home Journal, etc.

"Simple and graceful, pleasing for their touches of wit and candor, Eleanor Graham's verses have as a whole that 'genuine feeling and lyric charm' of which Arthur Guiterman speaks in his introduction to them. . . The love poems are slight; the nature poems motivated more by personal moods than by objective observation. Miss Graham's most original bent is in her portraits. Her gift for shrewd analysis, coupled with sympathetic insight, should encourage her to write further in this direction."

\+ — Books p13 Ja 7 '40 110w

"A book of minor verse at its best." J. R.

\+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 21 '39 170w

GRAHAM, HARVEY, pseud. See Flack, I. H.

GRAHAM, JAMES STEVENSON. A Scotch-Irish Canadian Yankee. 269p il $3 (12s 6d) Putnam

B or 92 39-8742

The life story of a man who in his youth pioneered in Ottawa and Manitoba, later coming to the United States for his education. After college he became a United States citizen, worked at various jobs in many parts of the country and finally became interested in real estate in New York. His story, based on a diary kept for many years, has been written for his grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Books p15 Ja 7 '40 260w

N Y Times p20 O 1 '39 360w

GRAHAM, MALBONE WATSON. The diplomatic recognition of the border states; pt. 2, Estonia. 231-398p pa $1.50 Univ. of Calif.

341 Recognition (international law). Estonia—Foreign relations (36-27836)

"The diplomatic activities of Estonia aimed at securing recognition comprise the main theme of [this work]. The narrative runs parallel to Part I of the same study [Book Review Digest, 1936] in which Finland's struggle for recognition was related. . . Professor Graham describes the efforts of Estonian leaders to secure the recognition of the Powers within the Supreme Council, the Council of Foreign Ministers, the League of Nations, and of the foreign offices of the several countries. Success came soon after the favorable action of the Supreme Council early in 1921. The texts of many relevant documents are appended to the volume." Am Pol Sci R

"Presented as a study in diplomatic history rather than international law, the work should prove of genuine interest to students of the former subject." N. L. Hill

\+ Am Pol Sci R 33:726 Ag '39 200w

Foreign Affairs 18:169 O '39 10w

GRAHAM, STEPHEN. Alexander of Yugoslavia; the story of the king who was murdered at Marseilles. 329p il $3 Yale univ. press [12s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Alexander I, king of Yugoslavia. Yugoslavia—Politics and government (W) 39-8527

An account of the assassination of Alexander at Marseilles in 1934 is followed by chapters on the immediate events which led up to it, a sketch of Alexander's life and his political achievements, and finally the story of what followed the crime—the political repercussions and the effects on international relations. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is commendably clear and entertainingly written, but it glides over some periods too hurriedly." E. C. Helmreich

\+ — Ann Am Acad 204:192 Jl '39 380w

Reviewed by Julian Bach, Jr.

Books p11 Ap 23 '39 700w

Christian Century 56:483 Ap 12 '39 260w

Foreign Affairs 17:818 Jl '39 80w

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 21 '39 380w

New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 40w

"If it had been properly documented this would be a startling book. . . As it is it tells at least an exciting story: particularly that portion of it devoted to the tracking down of the doomed ruler by his murderers to the supreme moment on the Canebière. In his study of Alexander's statecraft and the conditions prevailing in the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes—etc., down the list of minorities—the author is less stirring but reasonably informative."

\+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:716 My 6 '39 360w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p18 Ap 16 '39 1000w

New Yorker 15:87 Mr 18 '39 30w

"Even if there are questions of balance, proportion and treatment on which one must regretfully join issue with Mr Graham, he is still to be congratulated on producing in a very easy and readable form the first life of a gallant and often scandalously maligned and misjudged monarch to be made available to the English reading public, and one which in its details of the Ustaši conspiracies will be of permanent value even to the specialist." Archibald Lyall

\+ Spec 162:26 Ja 6 '39 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p778 D 10 '38 700w

"In ignoring the economic, cultural, and political problems which divide the Serbs and the Croats Mr. Graham reduces their conflict to a question of persons and a struggle for spoils; if those were the only sources of their rivalry, it would probably have been settled by now. With the exception of this one blind spot Mr. Graham has looked at the Yugoslav scene with sharp insight, and he has written an arresting and vital account of one of the most dramatic figures in recent European history." P. E. Mosely

\+ — Yale R n s 28:841 summer '39 650w

GRAHAME, KENNETH. The reluctant dragon; il. by Ernest H. Shepard. [57p] 50c Holiday

(W) 38-28954

Witty story of the small English lad who knew all about dragons, and who arranged things to everybody's satisfaction when a real dragon appeared on the Downs. Formerly a chapter in Dream Days.

Booklist 35:143 D 15 '38

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '39 220w

Horn Bk M 15:29 Ja '39 230w

"On first glance, this small book which reprints a chapter from Dream Days might seem an expensive item for many collections. But when considered for its excellent bookmaking and for its enduring humor and charm heightened by the Ernest Shepard illustrations, it is a title for every child's library. And a good many adults, if they do not already know him, will be delighted with this delectable dragon who had a kind heart." M. F. Potter

\+ Library J 64:118 F 1 '39 100w

Wis Lib Bul 35:34 F '39

GRAMATKY, HARDIE. Little Toot; pictures by [the author]. [93p] $1.50 Putnam

(W) 39-24222

Story and pictures describe the early career of a saucy little tugboat too pleased with himself to do any real work until one day when he found himself out on the ocean in a storm. Then Little Toot earned the right to be called a hero.

Booklist 36:91 N 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 O 1 '39 380w

"Little Toot has the real spark of originality. It is a good tall tale that will provide amusement for the very young. Hardie Gramatky, the author-illustrator, has created a real personality in Little Toot." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 13 '39 100w

"Mr. Gramatky tells his story with humor and enjoyment, giving too, a genuine sense of the water front in both pictures and story. For small boys and their fathers who love the bustle and stir of a harbor and for all others who rejoice in fresh ideas in children's books." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:296 S '39 100w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith

Library J 64:849 N 1 '39 50w

"Small boys (and their fathers) are enjoying this picture story-book. Both illustrations and text have humor and a refreshing originality." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 65:78 Ja 15 '40 100w

New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 30w

"Here is as daft a little tale as ever set an imaginative child to chuckling and since the author is primarily an artist he has instilled that same comedy into his pictures, mobile, exciting affairs in nautical blues and greens and stormy blacks, painted in a dashing off-hand manner which exactly matches the bravado of Little Toot." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 20 '39 360w

New Yorker 15:87 N 25 '39 40w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 40w

GRANT, ELIHU, ed. Haverford symposium on archaeology and the Bible, by William F. Albright, George A. Barton, Henry J. Cadbury [and others]. 245p $2 Haverford college, President's sec, Roberts hall, Haverford, Pa; Am. schools of oriental research, 409 Prospect st, New Haven, Conn.

220.93 Excavations (archeology). Bible. Whole—Antiquities. Oriental philology

38-5348

"The aim of this symposium, to which nine scholars contribute, is to present the present state of study in archæological and biblical research. The present state of Syro-palestinian archæology, by Professor W. F. Albright, opens the volume. Swiftly there is chronicled the contributions in archæology in Palestine and its environs to date. This discloses the amazing progress that has been made in historical knowledge during the last century. With the growing light many important problems, such as the antiquity of Palestinian civilization, the early origin of the alphabet, the interrelation of ancient races, the cross-fertilization of cultures, the return of the Jewish captives, are at least partially solved." Crozer Q

"The articles, though of unequal merit, are all important for the general student who wishes to keep abreast of what the learned world has to say on matters Biblical and archaeological. . . The several authors have maintained a high degree of objectivity and fairness in summarizing trends of investigation and opinion. These essays are worthwhile compendia of recent contributions to our knowledge of Biblical criticism and Near East cultures." B. M. Metzger

+ Am Hist R 44:321 Ja '39 470w

"These essays are all so informative and so excellently done that there would be no point in singling out any one of them for individual appreciation. Inevitably the personal theories of some writers obtrude themselves here and there in statements and suggested implications which might be challenged. This however, is unavoidable and, on the whole, the material has been summarized with commendable objectivity and conspicuous fairness." W. C. Graham

+ Christian Century 55:760 Je 15 '38 480w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews

Crozer Q 15:303 O '38 320w

"In criticism, one might easily point out the repetitions inevitable in such a composite work or the occasional needless introduction of technical jargon into a book meant for general enlightenment. Nevertheless, the volume is a genuine and important contribution in its field. This is guaranteed by the standing of the contributors and by the quality of their articles. Especially commendable is the constant footnote references throughout to the best and most recent literature." George Dahl

+ J Religion 19:254 Jl '39 600w

GRANT, GORDON. Ships under sail; il. by [the author]. 25p $1 Garden City pub. co.

623.8 Ships 39-27905

"An outline of the development of the sailing vessel." (Subtitle) The book is composed of twenty-three colored illustrations of sailing ships from earliest times to 1900, with brief descriptive text.

Booklist 36:116 N 15 '39

"It is an informative and romantic book, for readers of all ages."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 6 '39 160w

Wis Lib Bul 35:217 D '39

GRANT, MARGARET. Old-age security; social and financial trends; a report prepared for the Com. on social security [Social science research council]. 261p $2.50 Social science research council

331.2544 Old age pensions

"This book reports the results of a careful and scientific study of the old age insurance systems of Germany, Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, and Sweden, and of the non-contributory assistance or pension plans of Denmark, Great Britain, New Zealand, and Australia. It consists, on the one hand, of a detailed discussion of the major features of these plans; and, on the other, of an adequate statement of the relation of the costs to the national economics, and the effect on the systems of such basic social trends as changes in the age distribution of the population." (Survey) Index.

Booklist 36:127 D 1 '39

"Miss Grant's book, reporting as it does the long time experience of older countries, needs to be carefully studied by both the administrators and the students of the American system." C. G. Charkerian

+ Survey 76:28 Ja '40 250w

GRANT, WILLIAM JOHN. The spirit of India. 128p il $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

915.4 India [39-14044]

"Mr. Grant writes of India's cities, which are important, and her villages and agricultural life, which are more important; of the caste system, which he believes in, but whose abuses he says must be reformed; of the religions of India, with a somewhat detailed examination of Hinduism and its modern aspects, and a much briefer treatment of other faiths; of scenery, of economic problems, of education; of Gandhi." N Y Times

---

Books p14 Mr 19 '39 160w

GRANT, W. J.—Continued

"This reviewer has read scores of books on India. He has been stirred by this latest of them to an ambition to read still more. Because this is so vigorous and suggestive a book, so well and truly compounded, and so stimulating to memory, imagination, and sympathy, he likes this book best of them all." R. H. Stafford

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 1 '39 450w

Foreign Affairs 18:171 O '39 10w

"W. J. Grant has spent twelve years in the East. He loves India. He has his own quite definite point of view about India and Indian problems. He has written a book which is both informative and provocative, and which is very interesting alike in its text and in its large selection of beautiful photographs."

+ N Y Times p18 F 12 '39 350w

"Any part of the earth's surface is liable, nowadays, to fall victim to the type of enthusiastic journalist to which Mr. Grant evidently belongs. His book is easy to read and amusing to those who enjoy pictures of sunsets and snowcapped peaks with awful messages, &c., but of small value as a consideration of India. It is written with torrents of gush on whose waves float weak weightless generalisations." Christopher Sykes

— Spec 161:822 N 11 '38 190w

"The main feature of this book is its illustrations—a frontispiece in colour and 141 photographs, most of which are good. . . Mr. Grant can scarcely be said to have revealed the spirit of India, but his book is evidence of a thoughtful inquiry and some originality."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p775 D 3 '38 160w

GRANTHAM, ALEXANDRA ETHELDRED (VON HERDER) (MRS J. W. N. MUNTHE). Rococo; the life and times of Prince Henry of Prussia, 1726-1802. 255p il $3 Appleton-Century [10s 6d Lane]

B or 92 Henry, prince of Prussia. Prussia—Court and courtiers [39-4999]

Prince Henry of Prussia was the younger brother of Frederick the Great and shared his military genius. This biography pictures the rococo court of the period and the people surrounding Prince Henry in his palace of Rheinsberg near Berlin where he cultivated the arts. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Am Hist R 45:224 O '39 180w

"On the whole this is a pleasantly chatty volume, but it does not penetrate deeply into the life of the times." C. L.

+ — Canadian Forum 19:33 Ap '39 170w

"A few well-worn clichés apart, this book is a very agreeable evocation of the time." V. S. Pritchett

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 N 9 '38 180w

"To stretch this halfpenny-worth of bread into a book one needs airs and graces, phrases, polish, and background. Somehow the trick is done; the atmosphere of periwigs and affectation is achieved; an artificial, complicated (and very unchronological) eighteenth century is recreated." A. J. P. Taylor

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 7 '38 160w

New Repub 98:147 Mr 8 '39 70w

"Mrs. Grantham is a Royalist, a passionate admirer of Rococo, a picker-up of unconsidered trifles. She loves the period of which she writes, perhaps even regrets it. Yet, despite all her efforts, it remains the same sad story of unalleviated brutality and inhumanity." Flora Grierson

New Statesman & Nation 16:536 O 8 '38 260w

"This book is a little flowery, a little overadorned; its structure is sometimes hidden under the mass of its decoration. And its minutiae in regard to the Prussian ruling family are sometimes confusing in their very detail. Yet, it is an interesting book for those who are interested in its general subject. Mrs. Grantham has too much sense of humor to lose herself in sentimentality; now and then she shows a flashing wit."

+ — N Y Times p26 F 26 '39 450w

"A discursive book in which the sorry hero is often eclipsed by the 'tasteless ornamentation' which is one dictionary's definition of the title. . . Mrs. Grantham, having little to say about Prince Henry, describes the very unattractive Court of the great Frederick and the extremely scandalous Court of his son. It is true that Frederick was genuinely interested in the arts and crafts, and his own home at Sans-Souci shows the rococo style informed by good taste. But for rococo at its best one would not look in Prussia at all, and to this extent the title is ill chosen."

— Spec 161:826 N 11 '38 140w

"Mrs. Grantham is at her best in interpreting the social significance of the arts and capturing in words both her visual impressions and the dreams and musings to which they have prompted her. She has steeped herself in the memoirs and letters of the period. . . Her style, though prone at times to bombast and a modernistic blend of colloquialism and pretentiousness, is as a rule admirably suited to her subject, and many of her pages contain extremely happy phrases and passages of excellent writing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 1 '38 430w

GRAS, NORMAN SCOTT BRIEN. Business and capitalism; an introduction to business history. 408p il $3.50 Crofts

650.9 Business. Capitalism 39-16191

Defining capitalism as "a system of getting a living through the use of capital," the author presents this synthesis of business history and genesis as a study of the types of private capitalism. The book is divided into several main sections: pre-business capitalism; petty capitalism (the birth of private business); mercantile capitalism; industrial capitalism; financial capitalism; and national capitalism. The author is Straus professor of business history in the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University. Readings, suggested studies, and index.

Reviewed by J. R. Commons

Am Econ R 29:814 D '39 650w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 90w

"Any book which traces the development of business enterprise over the centuries cannot help but be interesting—especially when it presents dozens of thumbnail sketches of individual business men performing at various times and in various places. And when it is written by such a distinguished historian as N. S. B. Gras . . . one can expect the subject matter to be further enhanced by enlightened comment." W. L. Thorp

+ Management R 28:282 Ag '39 450w

Reviewed by Joseph Carwell

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 12 '39 420w

"While some of Prof Gras's historical classifications, or incidental opinions, may be combatted by experts, the book brings method into the reader's thinking. If this is a textbook, it may be said that the textbook approach to many problems is essential."

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 1150w

GRAS, NORMAN SCOTT BRIEN, and LARSON, HENRIETTA MELIA. Casebook in American business history. 765p $5 Crofts

650.973 Business. U.S.—Economic conditions. Capitalism 39-31004

"This volume of cases in business history, apparently the first to be published, is made up of 43 cases or problems which have been chiefly taken from American experience. Of these, five cases from European business history have been selected for their unique contributions—Sir Thomas Smythe, Boulton and Watt, Josiah Wedgewood, John Law, and Hugo Stinnes. The general emphasis in the cases is on business administration, that is, business policy, management, and control." (Management R) No index.

"The material is most interesting, instructive and is certain to suggest specific studies by those concentrating their interests in this field. Considered as a whole, the anthology represents a source of instruction."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 70w
Management R 28:455 D '39 80w
Pratt p6 winter '40

"It is a cooperative undertaking and utilizes material condensed or contributed from numerous sources. But, if it represents a combination of efforts, it also combines objective research, clear narration and considerable understanding of business principles. As a casual illumination of American economic evolution it is more valuable than many a more pretentious work and basically more interesting than many books which dispense emotion and rhetoric. Moreover, there is a background of biography in a number of the chapters."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 750w

GRATTAN, CLINTON HARTLEY. The deadly parallel. 210p $2 Stackpole sons

327.73 U.S.—Neutrality. U.S.—Foreign relations 39-29735

The author, drawing a "deadly parallel" between the present war in Europe and the World war, argues against our involvement in it. Partial contents: The fake issue in Europe; Hitlerism: what is it? Continental Americans—not isolationists; British propagandists are clever; Neutrality: its friends, its enemies; A program for neutrality; When peace breaks out.

"Mr. Grattan would have the government establish 'close control over capital investments' and 'require' newspapers to publish material promoting peace—which, as a method of avoiding Fascism, strikes one like curing a cold in the head by decapitation." Fletcher Pratt
Atlantic Ja '40 70w

"There is a good case for isolationism, but this book does not make it. Isolationism cannot be served by attacking as warmongers and propagandists those who see behind the present struggle in Europe a social revolution which may spread to America particularly if Germany or Russia wins. . . Until the school of isolationism to which Mr. Grattan belongs confronts such questions, it will not get the hearing that it otherwise might deserve." R. L. Buell
— Books p16 N 5 '39 600w

Reviewed by R. M. Blagden
Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 360w

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor
Commonweal 31:143 D 1 '39 240w
Foreign Affairs 18:373 Ja '40 80w

"Mr. Grattan turned out his book at a gallop. This may account for some of its breathless reasoning and conclusion-jumping, which make it difficult at times to distinguish between a statement of fact and the drawing of a Grattan conclusion. . . One searches Mr. Grattan's book in vain to find mention of another deadly parallel between now and 1914: A German Government whose acts outrage American opinion." S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p16 N 19 '39 1100w
New Yorker 15:95 O 21 '39 40w

Reviewed by S. B. Fay
Sat R of Lit 21:3 N 4 '39 2500w

"Mr Grattan's book contains pertinent counsel against emotional thinking and against the use of epithets to silence disagreement. But his own style is emotional and excited, and there is too much rhetoric, and too many references to the past. His neutrality arguments hardly conceal a bias against the British empire as such and against conservatives as such. Mr Grattan is, however, a writer of ability, and he would probably have made a stronger case if he had paid more attention to the issues of 1939."

— + Springf'd Republican p12 O 19 '39 500w
Wis Lib Bul 36:12 Ja '40

GRAVES, ROBERT. Collected poems. definitive ed 190p $2.50 Random house [10s 6d Cassell]

821 (W) [39-27316]

Selection of poems previously presented in twenty-two volumes published between 1916 and 1937, together with fifty more poems that have not appeared in book form.

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Books p12 Jl 2 '39 600w

Reviewed by H. G. Leach
Forum 102:48 Jl '39

"Graves is a real and original poet, and in all his phases, has had considerable influence on younger poets."
New Yorker 15:80 Ap 22 '39 40w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren
Poetry 55:157 D '39 600w
Time 33:87 My 15 '39 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p742 N 19 '38 500w

GRAVES, ROBERT, ed. See Lawrence, T. E. T. E. Lawrence to his biographer

GRAYSON, RUPERT. Gunston Cotton, secret airman [Eng title: Gun Cotton—secret airman]. 287p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Grayson]

39-32379

Further adventures of a British secret service man, this time foiling a plot to bomb certain European capitals from the air.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p24 N 19 '39 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p37 N 12 '39 240w
Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 11 '39 40w

GRAYSON, RUPERT. Secret agent in Africa. 299p $2 Dutton

39-12108

Gunston Cotton and his wife, Toni, have adventures in Africa fighting an anti-British conspiracy.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 My 7 '39 110w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 130w

"It is a pity that the man with the blue pencil did not go to work on the manuscript before it went to the printer. He could easily have cut it down by half without leaving out anything really worth while. Then the story might have stood a good chance of holding the reader's attention." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p17 My 7 '39 100w

"Long-winded but occasionally exciting thriller of nasty, sneering Huns, true-blue Britishers, and a sultry lass named Carnation. Rather tough trekking."
Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 13 '39 40w

GREAT BRITAIN. FOREIGN OFFICE. British war blue book; presented by the secretary of state for foreign affairs to Parliament by command of His Majesty. 251p $1.50 Farrar

940.5322 European war, 1939—Diplomatic history (W) 39-29448

"Documents concerning German-Polish relations and the outbreak of hostilities between GREAT BRITAIN. FOREIGN OFFICE—Cont. Great Britain and Germany on September 3, 1939." (Subtitle) Contents: German-Polish agreement; Statements made by Herr Hitler since the German-Polish agreement recording his satisfaction at the improvement in German-Polish relations; Deterioration in European situation resulting from German action against Czecho-Slovakia on March 15, 1939; German-Polish discussions; Anglo-Polish agreement; Developments in Anglo-German relations; Deterioration in the local situation at Danzig; British attitude towards developments in Danzig; Temporary easing in the Danzig situation; Further deterioration in the situation at Danzig; Treatment of German minority in Poland; Developments leading immediately to the outbreak of hostilities between Great Britain and Germany on September 3, 1939; Attempted mediation by other states; The Prime Minister's broadcast talk to the German people on September 4, 1939.

Booklist 36:174 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by R. G. Swing
Books p7 N 5 '39 1100w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '39 700w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 149:500 N 4 '39 1600w
New Repub 101:149 N 22 '39 40w

"It is most unusual, perhaps unprecedented, for a British state paper to be published commercially in the United States. The importance of this document, containing the diplomatic correspondence and outstanding speeches that resulted in war, makes publication desirable, even necessary. . . An elaborate table of contents and brief summary of the documents enhance the value of this book as a reference work. . . The volume embraces almost every diplomatic item that is available at present." J. F. G.
Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 11 '39 250w

GREEF, ALBERT OTTO. Commercial paper house in the United States. 459p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

332.7 Negotiable instruments 38-25645

"This volume by Dr. Greef provides students of banking with a definitive study of a unique American institution, the commercial paper market. The treatise is divided into three main parts, in which the historical development of the market, the organization and operation of commercial paper houses and the economic contributions and significances of the market are set forth in detail. . . Complete statistics of the market are included, and interest is added by the insertion of various exhibits that serve to vitalize the presentation. An extensive bibliography is appended." Am Econ R

"In its breadth and scope, in its analyses and interpretations, the study reflects a vast amount of preparatory research work of a library and field character." B. H. Beckhart
+ Am Econ R 29:402 Je '39 900w

"The Bibliography is excellent. As a research project Dr. Greef has presented a very worth-while contribution as the result of his field investigation as well as his historical presentation of this elusive division of the money market." Ivan Wright
+ J Pol Econ 47:590 Ag '39 750w

Reviewed by W. E. Sachs
Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 11 '39 470w

GREEN, ANNE. The silent duchess. 356p $2.50 Harper

(W) 39-29722

Historical novel which tells, in the first person, the life story of a member of the French aristocracy during the last half-century before the Revolution, ending with an account of the trials and tribulations of the Duchess under the Terror.

"The fact that one instinctively writes of the Duchess de Champlutin as if this composite character were real, is itself the measure of the author's creative scholarship. 'The Silent Duchess' is not merely cast in the form of eighteenth-century memoirs; it is a distillation of them. . . Precisely there, indeed, must lie its weakness as a story: Its formal measures are a little stiff; its action moves slowly sometimes, like the heavy ornamented coaches on the ill-kept roads; etiquette and tradition must have their part in its atmosphere's veracity. But it is a well knit and spirited story none the less." Katherine Woods
+ Books p10 O 29 '39 600w

"From a historical standpoint, one can hardly quarrel with Miss Green. The amount of material which she must have digested, the deft, charming use which she has made of it, her success in aping the tone of the eighteenth-century memoirs—all this is wholly admirable. Where she falls down is in welding fiction and fact, in devising a story which can even begin to hold its own against the fascination of its dramatic background." E. H. Walton
+ — N Y Times p7 O 22 '39 600w
New Yorker 15:82 O 28 '39 60w

"This is unlike any of Anne Green's previous work. It is an interesting attempt in the historical field instead of a gay, light modern novel. . . The duchess is an amusing character, and the attempt to re-create the period a good one." R. C. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 N 11 '39 550w
Time 34:88 O 23 '39 40w
Wis Lib Bul 36:17 Ja '40

GREEN, MRS CHARLOTTE (HILTON). Trees of the South [foreword by J. S. Holmes]. 551p il $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

582.16 Trees—South 39-27595

Description and photographs of the important trees of the southern section of the United States, with emphasis on the eastern part of that locality. Text gives description of trees, some of their commercial uses, their occurrence, and unusual information about them. The photographs give a full page to the tree itself, with smaller illustrations of leaf, bark, bud and blossom. Some of the material has appeared in the Raleigh News and Observer. Index.

Booklist 35:375 Jl 15 '39

"Mrs. Green's presentation is entirely easy and engaging and her science is above reproach. The book should appeal highly to the progressive new schools of North Carolina and to all who go there for their delight. The title, 'Trees of the South,' is certainly overambitious, however. Florida, with the richest tree flora in the United States, is quite dropped. The trans-Mississippian sylva fares little better, despite the splendid and unique forests of Texas." D. C. Peattie
+ — Books p7 Ag 6 '39 320w

"A delightful book on trees, botanically correct. . . A full index which lists trees under both their scientific and their common names is invaluable for library use. There is need for a book on trees and although the title limits the trees to those of the South, the contents far outdistances this limitation." Bertine Weston
+ Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 180w

GREEN, MRS CONSTANCE WINSOR (MCLAUGHLIN). Holyoke, Massachusetts; a case history of the industrial revolution in America. 425p il maps $4 Yale univ. press [18s Oxford]

974.42 Holyoke, Massachusetts 39-15355

History of this industrial city, founded in the nineteenth century by capitalists intent upon utilizing the water power generated by South Hadley Falls. It is a study of a gradual growth of prosperity, followed by chapters on city government, education, social life, and religion. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Amy Hewes
Am Econ R 29:823 D '39 1350w

"The industrial history is more successfully told than that of the concomitant aspects of community development. Much excellent material has been dug out of varied sources and is presented in the chapters on community problems, labor, schools, religion, social life, and the growth of civic consciousness. But a dynamic picture of the evolving community, integral with the story of industrial development, fails to emerge." C. F. Ware

+ — Am Hist R 45:413 Ja '40 230w

Reviewed by Howard Woolston
Am Soc R 4:863 D '39 150w

"Although the work does try to interpret the development of this industrial city, in the end it remains fundamentally a well-documented and smoothly written industrial 'history.' . . This book ought to be studied carefully in every course dealing with the rise of modern America. The author may be criticized for [her] failure to go more thoroughly into the detail of the demographic aspects of the problem." C. C. Zimmerman

+ — Ann Am Acad 205:192 S '39 500w

Reviewed by Mina Curtiss
Books p11 S 3 '39 650w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 120w

"There was an absence of clear, hard-headed thinking on remedies that seemed to weaken in some measure this generally admirable book. Of course some other writer might bring away a different picture of Holyoke. But if the history of this town is ever set forth in different terms and colors, it is to be hoped that such a book will be as well documented and dispassionately written as this one of Miss Green's." R. M. B.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 S 19 '39 700w

"Unlike most such profound and scholarly studies, this volume is readable. The author's rare freedom from bias and willingness to leave conclusions to the reader inspire confidence. As the outgrowth of a doctoral dissertation, the book is a credit to the Yale graduate school." C. K. Shipton

+ New Eng Q 12:798 D '39 1000w

"One of the most valuable contributions made in a long while to recent American history. That is a large statement, but there is justification. . . Dr. Green should be proud of her work. She has set an example that others would do well, if not to follow, at least to imitate." Francis Brown

+ N Y Times p16 O 22 '39 1050w
Pratt p21 winter '40

" 'Holyoke' is a valuable addition to the growing body of knowledge about America. Its faults do not obscure its worth—its tragic story overshadows the manner of its telling." Ruth McKenney

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:11 Je 10 '39 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p459 Jl 29 '39 110w

GREEN, FREDERICK CHARLES. Stendhal. 336p $3.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Beyle, Marie Henri (De Stendhal, pseud) [39-16355]

Biography of a French novelist and man of letters of the early nineteenth century. In his preface the author describes his work as follows: "This book is not a biographie romancée but an attempt to relate the events of Stendhal's life as they probably occurred. In the rare places where it has been necessary to resort to conjecture, the reader is plainly told so. And, in seeking to interpret the art and personality of Stendhal I have deemed it inadvisable to separate biography from literary appreciation. Therefore, in this account of Stendhal's life, his works are discussed at the point where he composed them, for only by such a method, it seems, can one really observe the processes of an author's creative genius." Index.

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p6 Je 4 '39 1200w

"This is obviously a book no one with the slightest interest in the mind, the society, and the method of Stendhal can afford to miss reading. It is a fine thing for us that lack of money forced the minor public servant Henri Beyle to make out of his ironical existence the novels of Stendhal." John Walcott

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 500w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '39 800w

"The whole is done with taste; the temptation to call in Freud is happily resisted. The author's fine English disdain for plethoric footnotes sometimes leaves us wishing for a bit more specific information. But this is academic carping at a work which is scholarly without being depressingly erudite; sober, intelligent and altogether worth reading." W. M. Frohock

+ Commonweal 30:81 My 12 '39 300w

"Mr. Green is the ideal biographer, imperturbable and indefatigable. A reviewer is bound to mention that his delightful, lucid pages assume familiarity with French, their frequent quotations being all in the original." Basil de Sélincourt

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 21 '39 380w

"Mr. Green's provocative and, at times, brilliant book is probably as satisfactory a biography of Stendhal as is to be found in any language. This does not mean, however, that it will meet with the unquestioned approval of all Stendhalians. Since the bulk of Stendhal's work amounts to one great spiritual autobiography, Mr. Green's task consisted largely in sifting, evaluating and bringing order into the cryptic jumble of autobiographical material found in Stendhal's novels, memoirs, notes and letters. . . A knowledge of Stendhal's life is vital to an understanding of his work; though, as Mr. Green points out, 'facts are not of immediate importance' to reality as Stendhal sees it. Therefore any biography of Stendhal must be in the nature of an interpretative essay." Ramon Guthrie

+ — New Repub 99:258 Jl 5 '39 600w

"[An] intelligent and readable book. . . Stendhalians may dissent from some things, among others the conviction that Beyle was 'industrious' in the various jobs which were given him and which he took every opportunity of leaving. But no one, I think, will question the justice and perspicacity of Professor Green's main conclusions, or fail to enjoy a remarkably well-balanced piece of criticism." Edward Sackville-West

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:500 Ap 1 '39 1850w

"Mr. F. C. Green, Fellow of Magdalen College and Drapers Professor of French at the University of Cambridge, has essayed and eminently achieved a task that has frightened away more than one Anglo-Saxon writer. His 'Stendhal' is a critical, expository and appreciatory biography that fills a vacancy that has existed for more than half a century in English letters." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 2 '39 2350w

"Professor Green's study possesses intelligence, sympathy, and, of course, erudition of the first water. There are many passages of the most illuminating kind of critical analysis. He has a gift for entertaining obiter dicta and a nice turn of phrase. His only defect as a critic is the same which is noticeable in his earlier writings on the French novel, a sudden failure of insight on account of personal prejudices against certain well established modern writers and modern points of view. A discursive quality leads also to tedium from time to time and to repetition." James Orrick

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ap 1 '39 470w

GREEN, F. C.—Continued
Reviewed by Goronwy Rees
Spec 162:456 Mr 17 '39 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p120 F 25 '39 2250w
Reviewed by P. M. Jack
Yale R n s 29:196 autumn '39 550w

GREEN, FREDERICK LAWRENCE. On the night of the fire. 318p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Joseph, M] 39-14805

A psychological study of a criminal, a barber in an English city, who begins his career almost by accident with a robbery, and ends with murder.

Reviewed by George Conrad
Books p10 Je 25 '39 450w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 190w

"If Mr. Green writes more stories of this kind he would be well advised to depend less on coincidence, to avoid such banalities as that clue, conveniently but improbably left on the scene of the crime, which is the stand-by of every fifth-rate detective novel and try to get his police procedure more accurate. Surely everyone knows that if the police trace stolen property they do not content themselves with asking a few questions and then drifting away." E. R. Punshon
— Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 28 '39 220w
New Repub 99:287 Jl 12 '39 30w

"It's not a heavy story and moves along rapidly enough for anybody, not at all too heavy for that hypothetical reader. . . 'On the Night of the Fire' should hold him for a Summer afternoon's entertainment if he likes its kind, of which it is rather better than average example, both in its suspense and in its character study." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p7 Je 25 '39 480w
New Yorker 15:88 Je 24 '39 30w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 24 '39 40w

"The plot has its coincidences—all possible, yet not sufficiently probable to make us forget that it is a plot. The book, however, holds one's interest, and that, I expect, was Mr. Green's primary aim." Forrest Reid
+ — Spec 162:418 Mr 10 '39 550w

"The story is tense, consistent and dramatic. As a study of character it is keen and sincere. Its thrills inhere in the mental distress of its characters rather than in a chase after a criminal. It leaves the reader feeling that he has been through a harrowing experience, and he longs, with Kobling himself, for the final capture, that the strain may be released." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 600w

"Walter Kobling, the central figure, 'affable, handsome, vain and proud in his soul, crafty and envious by nature,' is plainly and simply not a remarkable man. . . The only extraordinary thing about this egotistic, spiteful, mean-spirited barber is in fact his total lack of any quality able to attract the reader's liking for an instant. Then, too, the subtlety of the characterization has been slightly overdone, or, rather, wrongly done. There is among these people too much psychological self-awareness; they seem at times to watch their thoughts with the intentness of a cat watching a mouse."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p221 Ap 15 '39 200w

GREEN, JULIAN. Personal record, 1928-1939; tr. from the French by Jocelyn Godefroi. 342p $3 Harper
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 39-31902

This book contains excerpts from a diary covering the years 1928-1939. The author, Paris-born but of American descent, has spent most of his life in France and writes in French. The subject of many of these daily jottings is the progress of the writer's work, but there are also included comments on friends, on art and music, and occasionally on politics and world affairs.

Booklist 36:213 F 1 '40

"This is a fascinating book because it is the real self-portrait of a man and a novelist: unexpected and paradoxical, both reticent and candid, vivid and probably—as Jaloux says—unique. Its many sidedness cannot be compassed in a review; but it is certainly one of the most interesting modern memoirs which this reviewer has read." John Patton
+ Books p7 N 12 '39 1300w
Reviewed by E. B. Garside
Boston Transcript p13 N 3 '39 700w
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 23 '39 600w

"Avoiding the political scene and its unsettling influence, Green takes his reader on a penetrating voyage through the anxious 'thirties. For one who can appreciate them, these fragments of what was once a lengthier journal represent the sum of acute sensory experience in the fields of art, music, and literature—in fact, in all the purely cultural activities of an evanescent civilization." H. G. Thomas + Forum 103:iv F '40 350w

"The fact that art in all its forms offers him a constant refuge from life gives a semblance of outer serenity to a mind which one feels to be tormented within. Unfortunately, in the present form of the diary, one only senses this, since Green has suppressed all the intimate passages, leaving the reader to stumble hungrily over suspension points." Justin O'Brien
Nation 149:738 D 30 '39 550w
Reviewed by Hamilton Basso
New Repub 102:91 Ja 15 '40 700w
Reviewed by Herbert Gorman
N Y Times p9 D 3 '39 1500w
New Yorker 15:86 N 4 '39 30w

"As for his style, which is indeed the man himself, it loses considerably in a translation not always accurate. . . At its best, the English conveys that intense pointillism which is familiar to readers of the novels. It is far from Proust's complexity or Anatole France's lucid void, and yet it is both clear and full—the style of a man for whom concrete things and inner thoughts are equally meaningful, and who has no precious or systematic bias in favor of either." Jacques Barzun
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:10 N 11 '39 600w
Time 34:88 N 13 '39 310w

GREEN, PAUL. Out of the South; the life of a people in dramatic form. 577p $3 Harper
812 (W) 39-27317

Fifteen plays all with southern backgrounds, selected by the author to present "the life of a people in dramatic form." Contents: The house of Connelly: The no 'count boy; Saturday night; The field god; Quare medicine; The hot iron; In Abraham's bosom; Unto such glory; Supper for the dead; Potter's field; The man who died at twelve o'clock; White dresses; Johnny Johnson; Hymn to the rising sun; The lost colony.

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p11 Jl 23 '39 150w
New Statesman & Nation 18:872 D 9 '39 230w

"Paul Green is in the middle of his life. It is scarcely time to attempt to make an estimate of his work or to prophesy. But the impression one takes away from this collection is that the man who writes so quietly and conscientiously at Chapel Hill, N. C., has the stature of greatness. Aristocrat, sharecropper, Negro—it would be hard to say which one he loves best and which least, or which is the truest portraiture, for there is a deep, unending sympathy for all men on all levels of experience in Paul Green's plays." Stanley Young

+ N Y Times p15 Je 11 '39 800w
New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 20w
Pratt p22 summer '39

"In sum the volume deserves every tribute as a most impressive body of work, bearing everywhere the clear stamp of artistic integrity, authenticity and power. These plays are of their place and time and yet rise above it by virtue of their inherent poetry and humanity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p756 D 30 '39 800w
Wis Lib Bul 35:111 Je '39

GREEN, PETER. The devotional use of the Bible. 86p 60c Macmillan [1s 9d; pa 1s S.P.C.K.]

220 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc.

Believing that the Bible is not read enough by modern people, Canon Green, in this small book, gives definite, specific advice on how to read the Bible, not only for devotional purposes but also for its historical and literary values.

"The style and contents should appeal to any intelligent layman who has even the minimum of interest required to induce him to start reading it."

+ Christian Century 56:743 Je 7 '39 60w

"Offers to earnest students an outline of Bible study well worth undertaking." G. F. T.

+ Churchman 153:34 S 1 '39 50w
Living Church 101:11 Jl 19 '39 160w
Manchester Guardian p6 My 30 '39 1050w

GREEN, PETER. The Gospel story; a short life of Christ. 126p $1 (2s 6d) Longmans

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 39-24418

A short, simply written life of Christ, intended for use in mission schools abroad.

Christian Century 56:419 Mr 29 '39 60w
— Living Church 102:12 Ja 17 '40 100w

"One cannot help thinking that the book would be better if the critical parts were omitted and the saved space given to the practical and spiritual exposition in which the author's gifts can be used to the best advantage." T. W. M.

Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 18 '39 310w
Times [London] Lit Sup p271 My 6 '39 60w

GREEN, PETER. Our great High Priest. 110p $1.25 (3s 6d) Longmans

226.5 Bible. New Testament—St John. Devotional exercises 39-30116

A book of meditations based on the verses and phrases of the seventeenth chapter of the Gospel of St John.

"When Canon Green attempts to interpret the words theologically, as he does more than once in seeking to support and clarify the doctrine of the Trinity, the result is not wholly satisfactory; but as a stimulus and guide in devotional meditation, what he writes is always helpful."

+ — Christian Century 56:187 F 8 '39 70w

"A book that can be of use to rectors, curates and mission priests for many years." A. L. B-C.

+ Churchman 153:34 Ap 15 '39 90w

"A book like this belongs to the library of devotional literature and appraisement is both impossible and impertinent. But there would be few readers who would not find at least some of these meditations suffused with a light which shines from them."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 10 '39 140w

"There is in it a real depth of spiritual insight and evidence of a faith that has never shirked any problem. But there is more than that, for the book draws on a wide experience of pastoral life, and constantly the texts bring to his mind incidents that illuminate them and connect them closely with the everyday world."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 4 '39 120w

GREEN, STANLEY LAWSON. The theory and use of the complex variable; an introduction. 136p $3 (10s 6d) Pitman

517.8 Numbers, Complex

"This book is intended to give an introductory account of the fascinating subject of the complex variable and conformal transformation, with some indication of applications to problems of mathematical physics, aeronautics, and electrical engineering. It demands from the reader little more in the way of preliminary equipment than some knowledge of the calculus (including partial differentiation) and analytical plane geometry." Pref.

+ Nature 144:741 O 28 '39 150w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:41 Jl '39

GREEN, WILLIAM. Labor and democracy. 194p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

331.88 Trade unions. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. (W) 39-29449

"An authoritative statement of the philosophy and principles of conservative trade unionism in these days of turmoil. Mr. Green, who has been president of the American Federation of Labor since Samuel Gompers' death in 1924, has long owed the public this full declaration of his position on today's controversies and problems. . . The volume is partly autobiographical, partly a history of the A. F. of L., and withal a statement of ideals and an interpretation of events and policy." Boston Transcript

Booklist 36:169 Ja 1 '40

"Coming from the dominant leader of some 4,000,000 A. F. of L. members Mr. Green's first book cannot fail to be a public document of significance. . . William Green's book would not claim significance as an objective analysis, for that it certainly is not. The reviewer thinks of many objections to be raised to the author's interpretations, of many embarrassing questions that might be asked, and many convenient omissions are noted in the contents. The book deals in generalities and rarely comes to grips with the more specific aspects of problems. The importance of 'Labor and Democracy' is that it gives in full the basic premises of one of the major forces in American society." Russ Nixon

+ — Boston Transcript p13 N 16 '39 600w

"Mr. Green's book is a running comment on the professions of the labor movement, curiously empty of factual data. It reveals what the movement's sincere leaders are thinking and planning and it ignores what many of its organizers and business agents are actually doing." M. T. Quigg

N Y Times p18 Ja 14 '40 950w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 60w

GREEN, WILLIAM RAYMOND. The theory and practice of modern taxation. 2d ed rev and enl 364p $3.50 Commerce clearing house

336.2 Taxation 39-318

"Although less than five years have elapsed since the last edition was published, changes in rates of taxation not only in the United States but in other countries have made obsolete most of the tables of rates given in the book as originally published. . . While there has been little change in theory, there has been so much change in methods and practice of taxation that it has become necessary to rewrite a large portion of the book." (Pref. to the 2d ed) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Index.

GREEN, W. R.—Continued

"This revision of Judge Green's former volume will be welcome to all who are interested in recent developments in taxation. His clear and concise treatment of the balance between the theory and practice as found in our many forms of taxation is retained in the present volume. Emphasis is laid upon the development of the last few years, especially in the treatment of many of the taxes used by the states. Two new chapters, 'Taxation in Germany' and 'Public expenditures compared with national income,' have been added." M. H. Hunter

+ Am Econ R 29:411 Je '39 100w

Reviewed by J. W. Manning
Am Pol Sci R 33:529 Je '39 240w
Booklist 35:208 F 15 '39

GREENBIE, MARJORIE LATTA (BARSTOW) (MRS SYDNEY GREENBIE). American saga; the history and literature of the American dream of a better life. (Whittlesey house publication) 682p map $4 (17s 6d) McGraw

973 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—History
(W) 39-4017

The author's purpose is "to collect in one volume the records of [America's] long struggle for better living, beginning with the first colonists at all the main centers on the Eastern coast, and continuing across the country to the Pacific, and down the line of history to the present." (Introd) The work is based upon, and contains many excerpts from, personal letters, diaries, and the accounts of contemporary travelers. Bibliography. Index.

"At a time when, as never before, Americans are turning to their past for guidance and inspiration and for refreshment, too, this book is peculiarly timely. It reveals how deeply ingrained in American experience is that passion for freedom and for the fullest development of the individual which we like to think of as American." H. S. Commager

+ Books p2 Mr 12 '39 950w

"[The] author scorns the dull detail of checking dates and facts, prefers irresponsible imaginative invention to accuracy and in writing 'the history and literature of the American dream of a better life' indulges in romantic fancy. She wanders capriciously through space and time." H. M. Jones

— Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 330w

" 'American Saga' is a volume as worthy as it is unique. The reader will be both refreshed and inspired by the perusal of its pages." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 18 '39 650w

"This book is solid stuff, well prepared, and a valuable addition to the fast-growing shelf of Americana." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 148:408 Ap 8 '39 400w

Reviewed by Milton Waldman
New Statesman & Nation 17:750 My 13 '39 210w

"Mrs. Greenbie has given us something that stirs the pulse with a sense of destiny. If her book is incomplete, if sometimes it repeats the familiar when it might be exploring the debatable land, it is still moving, still full of the saga quality. One would like to see it on every shelf of American history, for it does an excellent thing—it stirs the imagination." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 F 19 '39 1400w
New Yorker 15:68 F 25 '39 40w

"With all its faults of occasional inaccuracy and frequent sentimentalization, the book does much to illustrate an important element in American history, and in doing so touches the imagination." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 25 '39 380w

"Seldom does one find such a readable book of American history; a book so rich in folklore and thrilling dramatization of the American people. . . The book covers a wide range of material and shows a great deal of research. It is interestingly arranged and constantly avoids monotony." G. F. Gray

+ Social Studies 30:233 My '39 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 20 '39 80w
Wis Lib Bul 35:101 My '39

GREENBIE, SYDNEY. Furs to furrows; an epic of rugged individualism. 413p il map $3.50 Caxton printers

978 West. Frontier and pioneer life—West
39-30360

This volume "centers its interest primarily in the thirty to forty years of American history following the Louisiana Purchase." It is the saga of the opening up of a new territory and the struggles of the explorers, traders, and settlers with the Indians, the weather, the wild animals, and other deterrents to a peaceful opening up of the land. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:174 Ja 1 '40

"The author has attempted to put his trappers, soldiers and pioneers into social focus against the terrific natural and man made forces with which they struggled. His conclusion that America has a priceless heritage of 'rugged individualism' which she must guard against abuse, has some validity, of course. But the genuine, if romantic, admiration engendered by a study of the valour and acumen of a pioneering people should not be allowed to cloud an objective understanding of the dog-eat-dog principle by which most of them succeeded." Eleanor Godfrey

Canadian Forum 19:299 D '39 220w

"The most interesting chapter is that entitled 'Wiving in the Wilderness'; it offers material which seems never before to have been printed; and it proves that the mixed marriage was, in many cases, looked upon as an honorable estate, marked by admirable devotion, and pride in and tender care of the children." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 28 '39 600w

"The theme is fascinating, the writing (apart from a few flights whose wings might well be clipped) eloquent. No one could read this rich narrative without a better understanding of America." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 D 24 '39 1400w

"Mr. Greenbie has a substantial amount of basic material in his book and this is interesting in itself. The author is at his best in telling of the men themselves, but less satisfactory when indulging in interpretative enthusiasm. It may also be remarked that Mr. Greenbie's style is occasionally flamboyant."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 D 29 '39 600w
Wis Lib Bul 35:212 D '39

GREENE, MRS ANNE (BOSWORTH). Punch, the cruising dog; il. by Ruth Bennett. 273p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century

Dogs—Legends and stories 39-24197

True story of a bulldog of fighting ancestry, who once belonged to the author. Punch shared the author's love of horses and learned to travel between the ankles of Mrs Greene's horse. When the family went on cruises along the Connecticut river and the Sound, Punch went too. And when a baby was added to the family, Punch laid aside his fighting propensities to become the baby's guardian.

Booklist 36:84 N 1 '39

"This tale of Punch's experiences ashore and afloat, in city and in country (up to the time he is stolen), has charm for all human friends of dogs."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 300w

GREENE, GRAHAM. Another Mexico [Eng title: The lawless roads]. 279p il map $3 Viking [10s 6d Longmans]

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Roman Catholic church in Mexico 39-14448

A somewhat impressionistic, personal account of a visit to Mexico in the spring of 1938. The author, an English Catholic, novelist and journalist, was particularly interested in observing the effects of persecution on the Mexican peasants' belief in Catholicism.

"Another Mexico is the book of a man who observes minutely and writes beautifully. It has striking, unforgettable characters. But the author did not enjoy his journey. . . The result is a record of things that disgusted him, and will probably disgust the reader. It is also surprising to find a Catholic author constantly at pains to report every sexual demonstration of the people who fill his pages." R. A. Hewitt

America 61:406 Ag 5 '39 240w

"Mr. Greene's failure lies in his allowing himself to regard every phase of Mexico with an eye jaundiced by (a) the bad religious conditions and (b) his own instinctive dislike of anything not British. The consequence is a book in which purely personal prejudice controls every reaction. . . Mr. Greene on occasion writes well. His weakness lies in his total inability to report what he sees. He can only report Mr. Greene." J. H. Jackson

— Books p12 Jl 16 '39 750w

"Another Mexico conveys a definite impression of its author's high intelligence and blunt sincerity; and he truly sketches a country very different from that described by the average traveler in Mexico. . . It contains so many delectable passages that one wishes for an alphabetical index so that they could be easily read again." J. McS.

+ Cath World 150:121 O '39 200w

Reviewed by J. A. Magner

Commonweal 30:263 Je 30 '39 350w

Reviewed by E. K. James

Living Age 357:197 O '39 120w

"Mr. Greene only offers 'the personal impression of a small part of Mexico at a particular time,' so it is probably unreasonable to regret that after reading his book one does not know Mexico very well but has a strong, uncomfortable dislike for it. . . The final effect is more fatigue than pleasure and understanding, though some things go right and hard into one's consciousness. That it has its effect is freely admitted. There is bone and gristle in the book."

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 24 '39 280w

"He uses hatred as a barrier against beauty, though there are glimpses of it in the book that have entered through the interstices of his antagonisms. But the flood-gates are open to ugliness and vice. They flow through the book in a torrential stream. The prose itself is stunning because of the economy and impact of its concrete imagery, and the book contains some telling characterizations of the disagreeable features of Mexican life." Virginia Mishnun

Nation 149:250 S 2 '39 290w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 17:466 Mr 25 '39 1000w

Reviewed by T. R. Ybarra

N Y Times p10 Je 11 '39 1100w

"A Catholic view of Mexico by an Englishman who can write extremely well but whose perspective is somewhat limited by his constant indignation at what he conceives to be Mexico's anticlericalism. Mr. Greene has a considerable talent for describing vividly a country he apparently doesn't like much."

+ New Yorker 15:91 Je 17 '39 50w

"Two characteristics, forthrightness and superb writing, distinguish this account of an adventurous penetration by boat, horse, and mule-back and plane, into the tick- and fever-infested Mexican tropics. The author desires to make clear that he is conditioned to not liking Mexico. He refers to its 'evil Aztec soil,' to 'this hating and hateful country.' . . But as a consequence of this antipathy, he gives us some supremely realistic and often valid descriptions." Ernest Gruening

+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Je 17 '39 650w

Reviewed by Evelyn Waugh

Spec 162:413 Mr 10 '39 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 11 '39 600w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Yale R n s 29:397 winter '40 70w

GREENE, GRAHAM. The confidential agent; an entertainment. 302p $2 Viking [7s 6d Heinemann]

39-23873

Mr D., a former professor of Romance languages in an unnamed country, arrives in England as confidential agent for his war-weary country. His object is to buy coal. Violence, theft, and love follow him all thru his stay, and the last-named is still with him on his homeward trip—his mission a failure.

Booklist 36:111 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p20 O 1 '39 200w

Commonweal 31:191 D 15 '39 100w

"The distinction of the book derives from Mr. Greene's power of enduing the most improbable predicaments with a semblance of plausibility. This he achieves by giving each episode a setting which is remarkable for its realistic verisimilitude. He can convey the very atmosphere of the more squalid aspects of the English scene in a few telling phrases, and he conveys to us so adequately the sense of being actual eye-witnesses of his hero's adventures that the requisite suspension of disbelief is induced without any conscious effort on our part." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '39 350w

"This is by no means a flawless book. Some of the detail is faulty . . . and many of the characters are more than a little stagey. All the same, Confidential Agent is the best highbrow thriller I have read for a long time, and will certainly appeal to all secret lovers of violence and psychosis." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:432 S 23 '39 500w

"With Graham Greene's sure skill, his brilliance and ingenuity, his original and powerful creation of character, event and scene, his story unfolds in breathless excitement, mystery that ranges from the macabre to the apparently trivial, suspense that is laden with tragedy, surprise with a gift of hope. . . If you want a gripping and hair-raising story, flawlessly constructed and completely engrossing through a maze of astounding incident, this is it." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p7 O 1 '39 800w

"Pretty sinister goings on, and told excitingly."

+ New Yorker 15:72 S 30 '39 50w

"Mr. Greene can manage suspense so that he has you sitting on the edge of your chair, or suddenly bolt upright in bed at the slight sound of a creaking door. If you felt, for instance, that the moving-picture of Buchan's 'The Thirty-Nine Steps' was first-rate, you will get the same sort of satisfaction out of 'The Confidential Agent.'" W. R. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 O 21 '39 200w

"Mr. Greene's new book is labelled 'An Entertainment,' which presumably means that it is not to be taken seriously. It is a straightforward thriller of slight literary pretension, which gives the impression of having been put together with rather more than one eye on the films. Despite the contemporary accents of its style and setting, it is curiously old-fashioned in some respects, not least so in the rather self-conscious way in which its author has set out to maintain an air of mystery about it." Derek Verschoyle

Spec 163:418 S 22 '39 650w

GREENE, GRAHAM—Continued

"Mr. Graham Greene knows his stuff. Excitement, suspense, the terrors of the pursuer and the pursued—they are all to be found in this new 'entertainment' of his, together with the drastic and often brutal criticism of our way of life which would appear to be his ruling motive as a serious novelist. The story he tells in 'The Confidential Agent' is a little thinner than usual and lacks unity of detail, but the thrills are nicely spaced and carry an ingeniously rendered flavour of evil."

\+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 23 '39 550w

GREENE, JOSIAH E. The laughing loon. 316p map $2 Morrow

39-20246

Mystery story.

"The characters may not always react as people generally do, but that's true of most dwellers in Mystery Land. As agreeable filler Mr. Greene uses quantities of forest and lake scenery, woodcraft and fish. . . The breezy background is the most striking feature of this tale." Will Cuppy

Books p9 Jl 23 '39 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 120w

"The story is well up to the Morrow standard, which is a high one." Isaac Anderson

\+ N Y Times p12 Jl 23 '39 110w

New Yorker 15:68 Ag 5 '39 50w

GREENE, LAURENCE. Era of wonderful nonsense; a casebook of the 'twenties. 290p il $3 Bobbs

973.91 U.S.—History. U.S.—Social conditions. Journalism 39-9232

"Written chiefly by named and unnamed newspaper men, this book undertakes to show how the American press 'has inflated beyond all reason a great many essentially trivial happenings.' . . In working out his thesis Mr. Greene has selected and arranged excerpts from newspapers and news weeklies so that, combined with his own comment, they show up certain shallow aspects of American life and journalism. Among the twenty-five 'case histories' . . . are included such well-remembered items as the premature news of the armistice in 1918; the Boston police strike; the rise and fall of Charles Ponzi [etc]." N Y Times

---

"Much of his material, has been treated more adequately in the writings of Frederick Lewis Allen, but there are bits here and there—the story of Sergeant York's homecoming, the amusing machinations of Charles Ponzi, Pegler's story of Babe Ruth and the 1932 World Series, and Paul Y. Anderson's description of the brutal attack on the Bonus Army (a moving piece of journalism)—that give this book some distinction. It is a handy commentary which can be used, along with the fiction of F. Scott Fitzgerald and John Dos Passos, as a document of an incredible decade." Daniel Aaron

Boston Transcript p2 My 6 '39 220w

"Mr. Greene has rendered a real service. His methods are heroic and his attack is direct." F. L. P.

\+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 29 '39 480w

"Mr. Greene has made an entertaining book. . . Whatever its classification, it is a remarkable example of what can be done in the field of criticism with not much more than a pair of scissors and a paste pot." E. F. Allen

\+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 23 '39 550w

GREENE, THEODORE MEYER, ed. The meaning of the humanities. 178p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

370.4 Humanities. Education—Addresses, essays, lectures 39-4572

Five lectures for 1937-38 on the Spencer Trask Foundation. Contents: A definition of the humanities, by R. B. Perry; History and the humanities, by A. C. Krey; The history of art as a humanistic discipline, by Erwin Panofsky; Theology and the humanities, by R. L. Calhoun; Literature and the humanities, by Gilbert Chinard. Index.

Reviewed by Preserved Smith

Am Hist R 45:185 O '39 240w

"My chief quarrel with this series of lectures is that the contributors did not confine themselves more strictly to pleading their lost cause. Several of the lecturers seem a little uncertain whether their chief subject is fourteenth century humanism, or the timeless humanistic ideal, or the place of the humanistic studies in the modern curriculum. . . Professor Krey's 'History and the Humanities' is to my mind the best essay in the volume, and yet the one which leaves the most to be desired." Albert Guerard, jr.

\+ — Books p18 N 27 '38 700w

Reviewed by R. A. Tsanoff

Ethics 49:369 Ap '39 700w

"The five lectures seem no two of them to agree exactly concerning what they mean by the humanities and humanism. The lectures are not especially the worse for that. . . The volume is worth while, even though its impact seems a bit scattered." H. T. C.

\+ — J Philos 36:52 Ja 19 '39 300w

"Worth-while discussion offered by six scholars in [a] lucid and penetrating book." Dino Ferrari

\+ N Y Times p18 F 5 '39 1000w

GREENMAN, RUSSELL L. The worker, the foreman and the Wagner act. 137p $1.50 Harper

331.154 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. U.S. National labor relations board. Foremen 39-27080

The object of this book is to explain to foremen those rulings of the National labor relations board, which affect the hiring and firing of employees.

Booklist 35:218 Mr 1 '39

Reviewed by Elliott Earl

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '39

"This useful book is full of warnings and advice valuable to all employers. Contractors, handicapped by inability to supervise closely the acts of their foremen on widespread construction projects, will find here the basis of permitted practices in dealing with labor that they can pass on to the men in the field."

\+ Eng N 123:80 Jl 20 '39 230w

Reviewed by R. R. R. Brooks

Nation 148:734 Je 24 '39 280w

Wis Lib Bul 35:98 My '39

GREENSTONE, JULIUS HILLEL, ed. See Bible. Old Testament. Numbers. The Holy Scriptures; Numbers

GREENWOOD, WILLIAM OSBORNE. Biology and Christian belief; with a foreword by Theodore Savory. 192p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Student]

215 Religion and science. Biology 39-3100

Study of the new theory of immaterialism and its significance in the field of biology. "Not satisfied to list a few condescending phrases from scientists as to the possibility of God, Dr. Greenwood marshals his facts to show the necessity for a creative act, and for a spiritual purpose. He points out that just when the immortality of substance disappears the beginning of the nervous system creates a new chapter in the immortality of the mind. Belief in immortality he bases on the purpose motif which runs through all creation." (Churchman) Index.

Christian Century 56:1345 N 1 '39 90w

"The author is to be complimented on abiding by his promise to be understandable to the average reader. He also resists the use of diagrams which are the curse of most scientific treatises." G. A. Cunningham

+ Churchman 153:16 Mr 1 '39 130w

"A book which can be understood by any intelligent reader. The change has been going on for some years and Dr. Greenwood has done an admirable job in interpreting it." W. M. Agar

+ Commonweal 29:446 F 10 '39 650w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 16:305 O '39 350w

Reviewed by I. E. Lunger
J Religion 19:299 Jl '39 300w

GREGG, FRED MARION. The psychology of a growing personality. 489p il $2.50 Personality press, University pl, Lincoln, Neb.

150 Psychology. Child study. Personality 38-13543

"The author, who is a professor of psychology at the University of Nebraska has written a textbook presenting the successive stages in the development of body and mind—personality including both—and discussing the inner powers and urges which may produce either conflict and confusion or the harmonious strength of an integrated personality." Christian Century

"The carelessness of the author in preparing the manuscript and proof reading is everywhere apparent. Psychology is spelled 'physchology' in the very first sentence. The following names are misspelled: Gesell, Woolley, Kuo, Descartes, Thom, and Berkeley. R. S. Woodworth becomes S. R. Woodworth. Vineland appears repeatedly as Vinland. Although these are inconsequential errors, they indicate the general characteristics of the volume. Psychologists will not find it a useful book to have in their library." C. S. Hall

— Am J Psychol 52:160 Ja '39 100w
Christian Century 55:818 Je 29 '38 70w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Mad O'Hara of Wild river. 272p $2 Dodd

39-25957

Western story.

Booklist 36:151 D 15 '39

"Mr. Gregory's latest is a galloping number that you need on your outdoor shelf." Will Cuppy

Books p14 D 17 '39 100w

"Jackson Gregory has hit his stride as a writer of Westerns that have novelty of plot, distinctive settings, convincing characterization and always breathless action. This galloping and gripping tale will not detract from his growing reputation." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p30 O 29 '39 200w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Mysterious rancho. 248p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder]

38-32613

Western story.

Booklist 35:174 Ja 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p23 D 11 '38 40w

"A factitious performance apparently aimed at the Class B movie market."
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 90w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Secret valley. 256p $2 Dodd

39-17414

Western story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

"Mr. Gregory writes of the Old Southwest in a suitably sentimental vein. A superior frontier tale of gambling, murder and love under New Mexican stars." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 Ag 13 '39 120w

"As lively, swift-paced and engrossing a tale of romance, fierce combat and sudden death as any in Jackson Gregory's lengthening list of Westerns without cowboys. It's a gripping story, expertly told." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p18 S 17 '39 280w

GREGORY, JOHN CROSBY. Heroes on your stamps. 248p il $2 Knopf

383 Postage stamps 39-32038

Biographical sketches of people whose portraits appear on American postage stamps. The author is a youthful stamp collector who tells these stories for his contemporaries. The material is arranged under ten periods of American history. For fifth grade and over.

Cath World 150:379 D '39 80w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 1 '39 50w

"This young author's style is refreshingly candid and straightforward, his text dwells chiefly on the main incidents in each person's life, though occasionally becoming anecdotic and the volume as a whole will undoubtedly tend to increase the young philatelist's interest in his country's story. The book is attractive in its clear type and its reproductions of stamps in some cases shown with photographs of the sculpture or painting from which the designs were made." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 64:953 D 1 '39 80w

"Well-handled, interesting idea."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 30w

GREGORY, TAPPAN. Eyes in the night [with 50 phot. by the author]. 243p $3.50 Crowell

799.28 Photography of animals. Photography, Night 39-29450

The author is a Chicago lawyer who for thirty years has made a hobby of photographing animals at night. His subjects have been found in his own backyard, in the Louisiana swamps, in the Montana mountains, in Mexico, in fact, anywhere in the United States where he could find subjects. The account of his adventures is illustrated with photographs. Contains two chapters on the apparatus and some instructions for hunting with a camera. Index.

Booklist 36:172 Ja 1 '40

"Mr. Gregory's final achievements are admirable, measured either in terms of value to natural history, or in the pleasure he has had and shown others that they may have." D. C. Peattie

+ Books p4 D 31 '39 650w

"For those who don't mind doing their hunting the hard way, this book will be invaluable. We venture to predict that Mr. Gregory's volume will go far toward adding to the slowly growing list of a new type of sportsman, the camera hunter." H. B. Kane

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 2 '39 230w
Christian Century 56:1410 N 15 '39 30w

"Although 'Eyes in the Night' is well illustrated with the remarkable results of Mr. Gregory's work, it is not primarily a picture book, the narrative chapters having about eight pages of text to one of illustration. The style is as pleasing as the author's passion for nature and interest in its protection." C. H. Pope

+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 D 30 '39 550w

GREGORY, THOMAS C., ed. Uses and applications of chemicals and related materials; a guide to the current industrial uses; potential applications and sales possibilities of 5167 products. 666p $10 Reinhold [50s Chapman]

660.3 Chemistry, Technical—Dictionaries. Chemicals—Manufacture and industry 39-17199

"An amplification, rearrangement, and careful editing of data published since 1922 in the Oil, Paint, and Drug Reporter. It contains a surprising amount of concise information concerning inorganic chemicals, organic chemicals, mineral acids, organic acids, fine chemicals, drugs and pharmaceutical products, and related materials as metals, petroleum products, greases, minerals, ores, animal and vegetable oils, essential oils, waxes, etc. Many new products are included." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"While there are certain blatant omissions, the book does give valuable information and covers a great deal of ground in dealing with about 5,000 chemicals. . . Among the notable omissions are linseed and olive oils. However, this is of lesser importance than a claim made for the book by its advertising literature. It is claimed that the book should be of extreme usefulness to advertising men, salesmen, advertising managers and manufacturers. This is true only to a limited degree." H. M. Batters

Chem & Met Eng 46:724 N '39 300w

Ind & Eng Chem 17:478 Jl 20 '39 90w

Nature 145:7 Ja 6 '40 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:36 Jl '39

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Elder sister. 269p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]

39-21787

The story of two English sisters, one of them an actress, the other secretary to an explorer-scientist. It is the double dealing of the younger sister which brings about a crisis in the love affairs of both sisters.

"An interesting drama. The life of an English stock company is one that Maysie Greig knows thoroughly, and the young producer, Derek Warman, is one of the best portraits she has given us." Lisle Bell

\+ Books p11 Je 25 '39 150w

"Some readers will wonder how these two girls manage on their slender budget to buy all the stunning clothes they wear. But this is a minor detail in the swarm of amazing events which crowd the pages of this lively but routine Greig romance." B. S.

N Y Times p16 Je 11 '39 200w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Not one of us. 273p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]

An old-fashioned story in which an ancestral English home, a poor but lovely heroine, a lost will, and the final restoration of the rightful heir are the chief ingredients.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p19 N 5 '39 70w

"This is one of the author's longest, plottiest and most English stories." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 N 5 '39 240w

"In Cecily Humphries, Miss Ames has created yet another of those charming characters that have won for her so admiring a public."

Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 27 '39 40w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Stepping under ladders. 274p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]

39-22932

Marjorie Norman was only a little country girl but when the sophisticated sister of Marjorie's fiancé tried to make her corespondent in her own divorce case, Marjorie finds herself capable of matching wits and charm not only with her primary enemy, Kitten, but with others as well.

"As a study of the feline female, 'Stepping Under Ladders' is up to scratch." Lisle Bell

Books p18 My 7 '39 110w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 Ap 23 '39 140w

GREN, AXEL LEONARD WENNER-. See Wenner-Gren, A. L.

GRENSTED, LAURENCE WILLIAM. This business of living. 187p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Student]

248 Christian life 39-6243

The professor of the philosophy of the Christian religion at Oxford University studies the business of living in this book of essays. He states that the volume "is not a primer for the puzzled" but is offered as an introduction to ways of facing life. His theme is that the solution of all problems is on the personal level, and that Christianity offers a release of spiritual power in the intelligent human being. Index.

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 1 '39 50w

"The book reflects careful thinking and is written in polished language, but it is a disappointment in its uninspired and at times trite and prosy restatement of Christian truisms. There is no spark of spiritual fire, no high adventures of the spirit, no analysis of current delusions, no excursions into forgotten corners." R. K. Morton

— + Christian Century 56:448 Ap 5 '39 390w

Churchman 153:34 My 1 '39 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser

Crozer Q 16:311 O '39 160w

"This is, of course, not an easy book. But it ought to be really useful."

\+ N Y Times p18 Mr 19 '39 390w

"It is a most interesting book, in which wide learning is concealed by an easy, attractive style."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p167 Mr 18 '39 150w

GRETHER, EWALD THEOPHILUS. Price control under fair trade legislation. 517p $5 (21s) Oxford

338.5 Prices. Restraint of trade 39-20973

"In this book E. T. Grether, professor of economics at the University of California, presents an analysis of various types of retail price control laws. . . The book proceeds from an introduction covering the historical and legal development of price control laws, through a five-chapter description of California's experience with them (California being the first state with resale price maintenance and, hence, having had the greatest experience), to a final section of seven chapters in which is presented an economic analysis of the whole retail price control problem." (Survey G) Index.

Reviewed by Harvey Pinney

Am Pol Sci R 33:1120 D '39 300w

"If lawyers turn to the part of Dr. Grether's book that will have the most significance for them, those familiar with his previous writings on resale price maintenance in England and in California will not be disappointed. He inspires confidence by the manner in which he treats complicated matters of fact. He is not afraid of details, qualifications, cross currents or reservations. He carries objectivity of statement to a fault, if such a fault there be. Economic rubbish in trade or judicial opinion is described with such detachment that the impatient reader may falsely suspect him of having been taken in and smothered by it." J. A. McLaughlin

+ Harvard Law R 53:512 Ja '40 1050w

"The book will be invaluable to students of marketing, economists, trade associations, chain and department store managements, manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers, and consumer groups."

+ Management R 28:330 S '39 280w

"In the reviewer's opinion, [this] is the most significant [book] yet written on this subject. To his subject the author brings not only a wide background in theoretical economic analysis but several years' careful research in the field in both Great Britain and this country." C. F. Phillips

+ Survey G 28:696 N '39 500w

GREVILLE, CHARLES CAVENDISH FULKE. Memoirs, 1814-1860; ed. by Lytton Strachey and Roger Fulford. ltd ed 8v 3576p il $80 (15gs) Macmillan

B or 92 Great Britain—Politics and government [39-1530]

The first unabridged edition of these famous memoirs, of which an expurgated edition was published in 1874. "These diaries kept by Charles Greville, who was connected by ties of blood and friendship with the leaders of English social and political life, are documents of the utmost importance for the history of nineteenth-century England. During the greater part of his life, Greville kept a daily journal giving a faithful record of his impressions of the events he witnessed and the persons with whom he associated. He recorded not so much public events as the private causes which led to them, during the reigns of George IV, William IV, and Victoria." Publisher's note

---

"Greville had a passionate and omnivorous curiosity about men and women and the interplay of their activities. He himself was a bystander rather than an actor among the personalities of his time. But he was a bystander of quick sympathies and vivid intelligence. He made the most of what he saw. His own age rated him high as confidant and as companion. There is no immortality he would have more deeply cherished than the fact that his diaries have made him a delightful confidant and companion even in a world from which he would have shrunk in bewildered dismay." H. J. Laski

+ Books p1 Ja 15 '39 2400w

"This is the definitive Greville. At last we have the text entire, including not only the numerous passages suppressed by Reeve, but much that was crossed out by Greville himself, edited in most scholarly fashion with succinct notes and an invaluable analytical index." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:924 D 3 '38 1850w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p4 F 19 '39 1750w

"The most valuable section of the Memoirs is that covering the years between the beginning of the Duke of Wellington's administration in 1827 and Lord Melbourne's retirement in 1841. The early chapters are rather tiresome with a moralising tone and the quality of immature censorious appraisal which the diarist happily outgrew. But even at the worst it is merely tedious and has none of that juvenile and flaring pedantry which marked the contemporary work of Henry Fox. . . In dealing with the life of the great English houses his treatment is inadequate. He takes so much for granted in their way of living, and is stiff and desiccated." David Mathew

+ — Spec 161:sup 3 N 18 '38 1100w

"Full publication of the 'Greville Memoirs' is a major event of the publishing year in England. There may be doubt as to the authenticity of everything reported, or as to the justness of his judgment on all occasions, but publication of the unexpurgated memoirs has intense interest for students of history and biography and for persons who can relish the drama of court and society from the period of the regency through the first quarter of Victoria's reign."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 4 '38 350w

Time 33:36 Ja 2 '39 490w

"Here is the whole of Greville, without suppression or emendation; and, if we except perhaps a very few, relatively unimportant sentences, there is little in them that could not be read aloud to a bench of bishops. Greville is more nice and scrupulous than we had ever supposed. He is stern—perhaps he is almost too stern—in his attitude towards personal gossip and social scandal. He labours to include nothing that does not possess real and solid interest. He has, moreover, high ideals of the diarist's function. . . His Memoirs are, indeed, the transcript of a mind that need have no fear of transcription—not a mind very original or very profound, gifted with any particular spiritual finesse, but admirably well equipped for the purposes of a shrewd observer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p740 N 19 '38 2100w

GREY, CHARLES HERVEY. Hardy bulbs; including half-hardy bulbs and tuberous and fibrous-rooted plants; il. by Cecily Grey; 3v; v 3, Liliaceae. 664p $11 Dutton [45s Williams & Norgate]

635.944 Bulbs. Floriculture. Botany—Great Britain (38-10095)

Volume three of this authoritative English work deals with the liliaceae. It is composed of alphabetical listings of the members of the lily family, with descriptions and cultural notes. Includes a glossary of botanical terms. For volumes one and two see Book Review Digest, 1938.

Reviewed by R. G. E. Willison

New Statesman & Nation 18:257 Ag 12 '39 90w

"Beautiful illustrations by Cecily Grey, many of them in water-color, add character and distinction to the work." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 13 '39 180w

GREY, ZANE. Knights of the range. 308p $2 Harper (W) 39-27063

Western story.

Booklist 35:206 F 15 '39

"This is meaty, heart-warming entertainment, a necessity for every Zane Grey fan, old or young." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 15 '39 170w

New Repub 97:352 Ja 25 '39 50w

"This is an average Zane Grey yarn and should please those who are not repelled by his wordy style." G. W. Harris

N Y Times p24 F 26 '39 120w

Time 33:63 Ja 16 '39 80w

Wis Lib Bul 35:50 Mr '39

GREY, ZANE. Western Union. 297p $2 Harper (W) 39-25440

Western story.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p20 O 29 '39 90w

Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 140w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p27 O 22 '39 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 6 '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:17 Ja '40

GRIBBLE, LEONARD REGINALD. Tragedy in E flat. 267p $2 Hillman-Curl [7s 6d Harrap] 39-32051

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 Je 18 '39 180w

"The method employed by the murderer is over-complicated and by no means sure fire. At a rough guess we should say that the odds against it being completely successful would be at least 20 to 1. But the story does keep you guessing, if that is all you want." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 18 '39 100w

"Meticulously wrought affair, in best British manner, with numerous leads, clever murder device, and reverse-English ending. Safe and sane."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 17 '39 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p545 Ag 20 '38 80w

GRIFFIN, CONSTANCE MAGEE. Henry Blake Fuller; a critical biography. 117p $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press [7s Oxford]

B or 92 Fuller, Henry Blake 39-16629

Biography of a Chicago writer, a novelist and literary critic. The book contains extracts from several of Fuller's works, including two hitherto unpublished pieces, The Red Carpet, and Carl Carlsen's Progress. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. S. Bates
Books p19 O 15 '39 550w

"Of Miss Griffin's volume on Henry Blake Fuller it can only be said that the bibliographies are useful and the information presumably accurate. More uninspired writing it would be difficult to come by." H. M. Jones

— + Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 370w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 19 '39 270w

"A balanced and interesting interpretation of Fuller's thoughts and artistic purposes." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 1 '39 1000w
Times [London] Lit Sup p615 O 21 '39 250w

GRIFFIN, ELDON. Clippers and consuls; American consular and commercial relations with eastern Asia, 1845-1860. 533p il map $10 Edwards bros.

382.2 U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Far East). East (Far East)—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Diplomatic and consular service 39-5343

"The Preface describes the study's purpose in these words: 'to provide for general readers and specialists a manageable, critical treatment of (1) relevant features and tendencies of the years 1845-1860, especially in the more limited consular and commercial scene in the Orient, (2) the basis and evolution of the American consular system in that region, (3) the general and commercial functions of consular officers there, (4) the diverse problems to which the discharge of these duties gave rise, and (5) the growth of American consular and commercial interests in selected posts of Eastern Asia.' . . The book's 21 chapters are grouped under four large divisions: the first, a description of the period, 1845-1860; the second, an analysis of consular powers and functions; the third, detailed consideration of various types of consular problems; and the fourth, consular and commercial history in the principal treaty ports of China, in Macao and Hongkong, in Japan and, finally, in Eastern Siberia. The last 150-odd pages are devoted to appendices and bibliography." Pacific Affairs

"The work is but part of a larger and as yet unpublished manuscript based on years of painstaking research in a great range of primary sources. A book mainly for historians, it nevertheless holds much of value to sociologists as well." Albert Parry

+ Am J Soc 45:637 Ja '40 150w

"The author has written a scholarly book which will prove of great worth both to students interested in the Far East and also to those interested in diplomatic history and the history of the development of our own consular and diplomatic service. The major criticism of Mr. Griffin's book is that in spots it is repetitious and long-winded. Some sections are eminently readable, other sections suitable only for reference." W. M. McGovern

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:540 Je '39 350w

Reviewed by F. V. Field

+ Pacific Affairs 12:346 S '39 750w

GRIFFIN, JOAN, and GRIFFIN, JONATHAN. Lost liberty? the ordeal of the Czechs and the future of freedom. 290p maps $2.50 Oxford [8s 6d Chatto]

943.7 Czechoslovakia—Partition. Europe—Politics—Crisis, 1938 (W) [39-27906]

Two English people who were residents in Prague during the summer and autumn of 1938, here give an analysis of the events which led up to Munich and the events which followed so swiftly thereafter. The book, written in terms harshly critical of the "betrayal" by France and Great Britain, contains many documents not available before its publication.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 207:225 Ja '40 750w
Booklist 36:107 N 15 '39

"There is undoubtedly a little special pleading here and there in this book. . . Occasionally the reader may impatiently feel that the Czechs in 1938 behaved too well for the story to be credible, or that these writers exaggerate. Yet even the most dubious will agree that the picture 'Lost Liberty?' gives them of the Czechs [is] something not to be missed." Elizabeth Wiskemann

+ Books p4 Ag 20 '39 850w

Reviewed by R. A. Chace
Boston Transcript p13 Ag 25 '39 650w

"The book is well documented, and makes a powerful appeal to the reader's sympathy and imagination."

+ Canadian Forum 19:262 N '39 150w

" 'Lost Liberty?' is, I suppose, the best-documented study of the Munich crisis and the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia that has so far been written. The authors have had access to important official papers in Prague, hitherto unpublished; they write with clarity and passion and make a formidable factual case against the French and British Governments. This is a partisan book, but it is closely reasoned and Mr. Jonathan Griffin has a particular standing as an expert on armaments." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '39 150w
Foreign Affairs 18:166 O '39 40w
Living Age 357:497 Ja '40 70w

"Those who can stomach gall and wormwood will find a sensible and sensitive record of the chief events with the minimum of commentary required to bring out (1) the strength and fortitude of the Czechs in their ordeal and (2) the deeper implications of the manœuvring that ended in Munich for the other countries that still profess democracy." W. H. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 6 '39 320w

"The Griffins are first-class reporters. Move by move they trace the intrigues by which the seemingly impossible was accomplished. Equipped with an exact knowledge of the country, its people, and its leaders, and with an admirable ability to see the trees and the forest at the same time, they make one relive, on the spot and day by day, one of the most profound and instructive dramas of modern history. They never write fiction, never oversimplify, yet the heart beats as theirs did." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 149:223 Ag 26 '39 430w

New Repub 100:111 Ag 30 '39 50w

"The peculiar merit of Mr. and Mrs. Griffin's book is its reproduction of a number of documents that are new to the British public. . . These and many other documents would make Lost Liberty a book of great importance even if it had not other very considerable merits." Tom Paine

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:910 Je 10 '39 750w

"It is not an 'objective' report that they give. Objectivity is difficult under such conditions. But if the book is written with a bitter passion verging on contempt for the statesmen who paved the way for the Munich settlement, the facts, cold and objective, are there to speak for themselves." Ernest Von Hartz

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '39 1200w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper

Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ag 26 '39 270w

"Lost Liberty is an expert and consequent piece of work which provides a very clear narrative in order to raise certain fundamental issues." Elizabeth Wiskemann

+ Spec 162:966 Je 2 '39 600w

"Both the matter and the style of the book are emotional rather than critical. The authors have had access to official Czech-Slovak documents and quote some of them, including the first reply of September 20 to the Anglo-French Plan. But there is little attempt to elucidate the sequence of events."

Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 20 '39 490w

GRIFFIN, JOHN IGNATIUS. Strikes; a study in quantitative economics. 319p $4 Columbia univ. press [16s King]

331.892 Strikes and lockouts 39-18112

"The material in this study is correlated to business cycles and to the labor movement. In order to examine more clearly the fluctuations in the national economy as reflected in strikes, the author discusses the industrial history of one state, Massachusetts, and particularly the growth and decline of its major industries. The author shows why, on the basis of the figures used, there is no dominant trend to be found and no basis for forecasting the future. Material is presented to show how strikes oscillate in accordance with two factors and are shaped by them—the business cycle and the political 'climate' of the country. The relationship between business cycles and strike cycles is studied, as is the relationship between unionization and strikes." (Management R) Bibliographies. Index.

"In spite of deficiencies this book is helpful in its discussion of source material and in its evaluation of the availability and the extensiveness of information and statistical data upon this disturbing phenomenon." P. A. Dodd

+ — Ann Am Acad 205:149 S '39 900w

Reviewed by J. C. Cort

Commonweal 30:242 Je 23 '39 200w

Reviewed by E. T. Hiller

J Pol Econ 47:900 D '39 350w

Management R 28:142 Ap '39 210w

GRIFFIN, MARTIN IGNATIUS JOSEPH. Frank R. Stockton; a critical biography. 178p $2 Univ. of Pa. press [9s Oxford]

B or 92 Stockton, Frank Richard 39-17310

"This critical biography of Frank R. Stockton attempts to piece together details of his life, many of which have not before been integrated into a complete chronological sequence, and, in so doing, to illustrate how much of Stockton's life was represented in his work. A second, but not secondary purpose, is to place Stockton and his work in proper perspective in the history of American literature." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The book lacks material concerning Stockton's association with the editors of the day, such as Richard Watson Gilder and Robert Underwood Johnson of 'The Century,' and of A. B. Frost, Charles Dana Gibson and the other great illustrators who illustrated his stories. The latter part of the volume is constantly broken by long synopses and quotations from Stockton's stories and novels, which mar its flow. This spoils the effect of the informative first part of the book, which is written in a free and easy style and a happy turn of idiom which makes the early chapters most pleasant reading." W. L. Pforzheimer

+ — Books p8 S 3 '39 460w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 370w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 19 '39 350w

Springf'd Republican p10 S 20 '39 480w

"Excellent biography. . . While the full account given here of Stockton's development as a writer and of his methods of composition will appeal mainly to members of the literary profession, this record of his life and work will repay the attention of a much wider constituency."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p647 N 4 '39 200w

GRIFFITH, COLEMAN ROBERTS. Psychology applied to teaching and learning; a first book in the field of educational psychology. 650p il $2.60 Farrar

370.15 Educational psychology. Learning, Psychology of 39-2369

"This book is addressed to 'young men and women who are preparing to teach. Its main purpose is to facilitate the understanding of and control over the increasing varieties of formal school activity' (p.v). It is the author's conviction that such a book should present basic laws and facts about human nature and their application to educational practice rather than psychological analyses of instances of schoolroom activities." (Social Educ) Index.

"Up-to-the-minute research workers might object to a few of the statements made in this volume by Griffith on the ground that they overlook the latest research data on the subject, but it would be next to impossible for any one author to keep pace with all the latest findings of research in psychology and education. The book lacks some of the color and inspiration that it should have in order to be most popular and useful, but it does cover the field." M. R. Trabue

+ — El School J 40:230 N '39 400w

Reviewed by W. B. Featherstone

Social Educ 3:288 Ap '39 450w

GRIFFITHS, ALAN. Authors in paradise [Eng title: Spirits under proof]. 336p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d; 3s 6d Laurie]

39-32125

The exploits of an illiterate cockney medium suddenly thrust into the London literary world by his publication of a book called The Return of Gulliver, dictated to him from the spirit world by Dean Swift.

"It is a droll if absurd fantasy, done in ornate prose." George Conrad

Books p6 Ag 20 '39 420w

"The story is a little slow to start, and there is too much of it. But it is extremely bright, and there are a few ridiculous scenes that are as broadly funny as any the season has produced. . . The ending is delicious." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 19 '39 500w

"Good clean fun at the expense of the literati—sprinkled with some first rate puns."

+ New Repub 100:112 Ag 30 '39 50w

"It is a grand jest and Mr. Griffiths skims the cream of it so diligently that the residue must be very flat and flavorless skim milk. His humor is on the ponderous side, thumping down on the contrast between the Cockney's ratty little mind and the cultured keenness of the classic author whose celestial opus he has swiped. . . Much of the book is heartily humorous. It grows a bit tiresome when it pursues too continuously the vein of a learnedly jocose letter to The London Times." Beatrice Sherman

GRIFFITHS, ALAN Continued

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 20 '39 550w

"The complications are colossal, also amusing."

+ New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 70w

"When Mr. Griffiths lets you into Albert's small, outrageous, hopeful, ignorant baffled head—'the capital of a none too lovely column' —he sometimes recalls the early H. G. Wells. But when he parodies book reviews, leading articles, and literary gabble in general, his satire is still more thin and dusty than his originals, and just as melancholy reading. If Albert's authors are in Paradise, his critics and public are in a limbo of terrifying shadowiness." K. S.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 19 '39 140w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 450w

GRIFFITHS, CATHARINE, and CRAINE, SUSAN. The children's New York [il. with photographs]. 35p 50c Rand McNally

917.471 New York (city)—Description 39-16992

Introductory guide to New York city for young visitors. There are eighteen pages of photographic illustration with descriptive matter for each of them.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Je 4 '39 70w

"A slight little book, but it is inexpensive and may fill a temporary need." M. F. Potter

Library J 64:614 Ag '39 90w

GRIGGS, EARL LESLIE, ed. Wordsworth and Coleridge; studies in honor of George McLean Harper; essays by Emile Legouis [and others] an appreciation by J. Duncan Spaeth; a bibliography by Evelyn Griggs. 254p $4 Princeton univ. press [18s Oxford]

820.4 Wordsworth, William. Coleridge, Samuel Taylor. Harper, George McLean 39-16345

Contents: Some remarks on the composition of the Lyrical Ballads of 1798, by Emile Legouis; Solitude, silence, and loneliness in the poetry of Wordsworth, by R. D. Havens; Wordsworth's conception of the esthetic experience, by O. J. Campbell; The tragic flaw in Wordsworth's philosophy, by N. P. Stallknecht; Wordsworth and his daughter's marriage, by Ernest de Selincourt; An imitation of Wordsworth, by L. N. Broughton; Helen Maria Williams and the French revolution, by M. R. Adams; Anna Seward and the romantic poets: A study in taste, by S. H. Monk; Samuel Taylor Coleridge discovers the Lake Country, by Rev. G. H. B. Coleridge; Coleridge's "Preface" to Christabel, by B. R. McElderry, Jr; An early defense of Christabel, by E. L. Griggs; Coleridge on the sublime, by C. D. Thorpe; Coleridge in Germany (1799), by E. J. Morley; Professor Harper: An appreciation, by J. D. Spaeth; Bibliography of the works of George McLean Harper, by Evelyn Griggs.

"Volumes such as this are often in the nature of a very heterogeneous miscellany, but the present volume has more of unity and coherence than most such. . . Altogether this seemly and serene book is worthy of the scholars who have banded together to produce it and of the scholar to whom it has been presented."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 19 '39 550w

Reviewed by C. O. Chapman

Library Q 9:543 O '39 400w

"'The volume as a whole is a fitting memorial to a very distinguished scholar." Alexander Cowie

+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 8 '39 130w

"While the volume is intended primarily for students of the period or of the two poets, several of the monographs would prove of interest to any serious reader."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 21 '39 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p440 Jl 22 '39 850w

GRIGGS, EDWARD HOWARD. Beauty in nature and art. 72p il 75c Bobbs

701 Esthetics 39-3909

Short study for high school students on the nature of beauty and of art.

Christian Century 56:218 F 15 '39 60w

Wis Lib Bul 35:62 Ap '39

GRISWOLD, ALFRED WHITNEY. The Far Eastern policy of the United States. 530p maps $3.75 Harcourt

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Far East). U.S.—Foreign policy (W) 38-29014

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"The treatment is refreshing in its frankness and its almost surgical cutting through verbiage to find the vital truth. . . No one will agree completely with Dr. Griswold, but he at least has documented the reasons for his beliefs." P. J. Treat

+ — Am Hist R 45:182 O '39 550w

Reviewed by P. J. Treat

Ann Am Acad 205:184 S '39 480w

"Here is the most serious study of American policy in the Far East ever made, a book which will be standard for decades, and what it boils down to is this—the considered judgment of its scholar-author that from William McKinley to Franklin D. Roosevelt there never has been a time except perhaps during the period when Mr. Hughes was secretary of state, when the United States has fully understood what it was up to in the Orient. . . To be sure, Professor Griswold says all this in scholarly and unsensational fashion, sometimes by implication rather than explicitly, as befits a professor of government and international relations at Yale. But he says it, just the same." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 56:286 Mr 1 '39 700w

"This is a volume deserving of the highest praise. It is easily the best one-volume work on the subject." R. S.

+ Current Hist 50:5 Mr '39 260w

"A scholarly and up-to-date exposition of American diplomacy in the Pacific. . . Professor Griswold not only records but criticizes; and his judgments are strictly realistic."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:633 Ap '39 40w

"Professor Griswold's volume is a unified and coherent discussion of the policies of the United States in the Far East during the past forty years. It is certainly the most authoritative account available, from both published and unpublished sources, of the Open Door, dollar diplomacy, the territorial integrity of China, immigration, naval equilibrium and other objectives of American diplomacy." E. M. Earle

+ New Repub 98:51 F 15 '39 900w

"Griswold's volume is a valuable book for every person interested in the Far East today. For the more that we can learn about Oriental problems, the better off the United States will be." Walker Matheson

+ No Am 247:182 spring '39 1000w

"Appearing at a juncture when the frustration of America's objectives in the Far East compel their reconsideration, this book performs a timely service by revealing the fundamental motives and methods of American twentieth century Far Eastern diplomacy, by candidly appraising its ends and means, and by explaining with penetration its failures. In addition important scholarly contributions are rendered by Dr. Griswold in this well-documented and careful study, which not only fills in the lacuna in historical literature between the period covered by Dennett's Americans in Eastern Asia and the present, but also utilizes the Rockhill Papers to cast much new light on the background of Hay's Open Door diplomacy." A. K. Weinberg

+ Pacific Affairs 12:236 Je '39 1050w

Pratt p8 spring '39

Reviewed by P. H. Clyde

Social Studies 31:41 Ja '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 35:46 Mr '39

"No more timely or satisfactory contribution to the diplomatic history of the United States has appeared during the past year than Professor Griswold's survey of our Far Eastern policy since 1898. He has made good use of the wide range of printed sources and brought to light important new material from the Rockhill, Knox, and Lansing papers. His book is so readable, clear, and well-balanced that it will take rank at once as 'must' reading for students of American foreign policy." J. P. Baxter, 3rd

+ Yale R n s 28:647 spring '39 550w

GRISWOLD, FRANCIS. A sea island lady. 964p map $3 Morrow

(W) 39-30688

Long chronicle of a Southern family living near Beaufort, South Carolina. It begins with the Civil war, and continues thru the years to the 1920s. The heroine is a Northern girl who marries first a carpet-bagger, and later takes as her second husband Stephen Fenwick, a member of one of Beaufort's most aristocratic families.

"It must have taken an enormous amount of knowing to have written so straightforwardly and convincingly of many different times, tongues and manners. . . . The force and substance of the story is evidenced by the fact that the outcome of this record of the sorrows and joys of a family and a neighborhood is a conviction of the beauty and importance of living." Mary Ross

+ Books p5 O 29 '39 1000w

"It is a gargantuan novel, but its size has not made it great. Mr. Griswold overwrites when he tries to write well and he frequently writes rather badly. The dialogue is often incredible, and though the novel has action a-plenty it tends to bog down in the frequent and interminable domestic bickerings to which Mr. Griswold's characters are prey. But the greatest weakness of the book lies in Mr. Griswold's central character, who gives the book its name. He has worked hard to make her a convincing symbol of simple humanity courageously fighting on against historical and social forces. But in the end she tends to bore us a little, for she has more sentiment than courage and completely lacks the dash and fire of a Scarlett O'Hara." G. K. Smart

— + Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 550w

"It is said that the author spent seven years in writing the novel. Representing as it does, a story which is much more than merely another fictional account of reconstruction and the South, it seems as though this work should be ranked as one of the very best novels of the current year. It is realistic without being disgusting, and it is interesting without being cheaply melodramatic. It will be read by those who appreciate good fiction." Paul Kiniery

+ Commonweal 31:169 D 8 '39 300w

"Mr. Griswold's family portraits are distinct; his clear agreeable fluency is something of a feat for a book so long."

+ New Repub 101:214 D 6 '39 60w

"In many ways it is an amazing performance, this story of love and loss, of death and time and change—or the illusion of change. Most novels of anything like this length . . . could profit by judicious cutting. Even here there are passages, usually descriptive, which might have been condensed. But they are seldom more than passages. Francis Griswold had something to say which could be said only at such length at this." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p2 N 5 '39 950w

"The style is clear and pleasant, the locality seems to be faithfully described, but Mr. Griswold might very well have studied Miss Margaret Mitchell's racy narrative technique and her desperate boy-meets-girl-etc. formula."

+ — New Yorker 15:81 O 28 '39 200w

"In his first four-hundred-odd pages, Mr. Griswold has told an admirable and moving story. The War part is very well done, and so is Emily's first contact with the sea-islands and the real South. Her sinister, praying carpetbagger of a first husband, Aaron Moffet, is shrewdly sketched, and so is Stephen Fenwick, the dashing Southern gallant, never quite healed from the War. . . So far, so good. But, after Emily has married her Stephen and started trying to rebuild the plantation, the book begins to lag and grow diffuse." S. V. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:13 N 4 '39 450w

"Though A Sea Island Lady never in any direction exceeds what its audience can take, it rarely eases up short of that. Within those limits it is extraordinarily warm, full, and actual, and by bulk alone gathers an enormous and serene momentum that ends by making the story seem as real and immediate as air."

+ Time 34:83 N 6 '39 350w

GROGGINS, PHILIP HERKIMER, ed. Unit processes in organic synthesis. 2d ed 769p il $6 (36s) McGraw

545.9 Chemistry, Organic 38-25477

"The object of this volume continues to be the presentation of an outline of the industrial technic generally employed in attacking problems involving organic synthesis. . . In this second and enlarged edition, the general plan of the book remains unchanged, but every chapter has been revised and brought into line with current developments as revealed by the technical and patent literature." (Pref. to the 2d edition) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

"The book contains a mass of valuable information for the chemist and chemical engineer and is organized in such a way that it is readily accessible. The authors have succeeded in including much of current industrial importance and very few omissions may be noted. The volume is a handy one for frequent reference by the organic chemist and is the best available book for unit processes in organic syntheses." Roger Adams

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:217 Ja '39 500w

"The book fills a gap left by the more specialized texts on organic and physical chemistry and chemical engineering. . . [It] should continue to be helpful particularly to students in chemistry who plan to go into industry, and to those who are already engaged in industry who are anxious to obtain a general knowledge of fields other than the particular one in which they specialize." K. H. Klipstein

+ Chem & Met Eng 45:697 D '38 420w

"This volume exhibits the usual careful workmanship of all members of the McGraw-Hill Chemical Engineering Series. It is indispensable to workers in the field of organic technology and should be equally useful to the pure organic chemist, because of its valuable correlation of synthetic methods." R. E. Montonna

+ J Phys Chem 43:389 Mr '39 320w

"The new enlarged edition is likely to enhance the reputation of the work."

+ Nature 143:140 Ja 28 '39 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:53 O '38

GROOCH, WILLIAM STEPHEN. From crate to clipper with Captain Musick, pioneer pilot. 243p il $2 Longmans

B or 92 Musick, Edwin Charles. Aviators 39-27862

Biography of Pan-American's pioneer flyer, whose main interest was airplanes from the time he built his first ship out of junk, in 1912, until he went down with the Samoan clipper in 1938.

GROOCH, W. S.—Continued

Booklist 36:87 N 1 '39

"One of Capt. Musick's close friends, associated with him in the development of transoceanic commercial flying, has told the story of his notable and tragically terminated career as simply and unpretentiously as it was lived."
+ Books p20 O 29 '39 120w

"The fascinating but amateurishly told story of Eddie Musick."
+ — New Repub 101:27 N 8 '39 60w

GROSECLOSE, ELGIN EARL. Ararat. 482p $2.50 Carrick

(W) 39-27655

Story of racial warfare in the region lying south of the Black sea, the region around Mt Ararat. The story opens in the Turkish village of Dilijan, in 1895, and covers in time the period up to the early nineteen hundreds. The central figure is Amos Lyle, an American missionary to the Armenians, who leads a remnant of the persecuted people thru massacre, migration, and starvation, on their journey to find a home.

Booklist 36:8 S '39

"His new novel shows that Mr. Groseclose can deal with a large and exciting theme, without losing that sensitivity to shades of human character which distinguished 'The Persian Journey.' . . 'Ararat' is one of those books that people are going to argue about, puzzle over, attack and defend, and remember. It is the work of a thoughtful and civilized mind, of a man who can tell a rapid and exciting story and yet makes ideas as exciting as physical adventure. And I think it will be widely read—for, as I write this review, it seems to me an almost unbearably timely book." S. V. Benét
+ Books p1 S 10 '39 1500w

"Mr. Groseclose is particularly successful in his delineation of children, and of adults in relation to them. His most conspicuous failure lies in the not very vivid characterization of his three central figures, which weakens in some degree the solution which they find, and thus, the resolution of the problem which the author poses." Ruth Page
+ — Boston Transcript p1 S 9 '39 410w
Cath World 150:633 F '40 150w

" 'Ararat' has a depth and power which assure it an abiding place in literature. Its surface narrative alone is colorful and intense enough to make it of absorbing interest; but its greatest value lies in its vast implications and particularly in its affirmation of the fundamental truths of being which provide security and peace for all those who cling to them." M. W. Stoer
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '39 500w

"The author understands the Near East. He taught in a mission school at Tabriz and did relief work in Southern Russia, where he was imprisoned by the Cheka. His first novel was 'The Persian Journey.' But in 'Ararat' he has gone well beyond a realistic sense of scene and has written an inspirational philosophical novel." Stanley Young
+ N Y Times p7 S 3 '39 900w

"Mr. Groseclose is a writer of considerable quality, as readers of his curious little novel, 'The Persian Journey,' may remember. He manages a pure, grave English style, bare of all affectation. He can excite in the reader certain emotions—mainly pity and reverence—with which most novelists nowadays are callously unconcerned. These gifts, plus a talent for dramatic narrative, are displayed without ostentation in 'Ararat.' Yet the book as a whole, though often moving, does not remain in the memory as [Vardis Fisher's] 'Children of God' so solidly does." Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 15:57 S 2 '39 300w

"The difficulty of the book lies in pulling unfamiliar elements into a whole with the intensity and grandeur required by the epic quality of its material. Mr. Groseclose has not been quite successful in a large scale task. His book, however, is stimulating for all its structural weaknesses." Raymond Holden
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:6 Ag 26 '39 600w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 1000w
Wis Lib Bul 35:187 N '39

GROUSSET, RENE. Art of the Far East. See Art of the Far East

GROVES, HAROLD MARTIN. Financing government. 777p map $5 Holt

336.73 Finance—U.S. Taxation—U.S.

39-14073

"A clear and comprehensive exposition of the principles, practices and problems of public finance, designed primarily as a college textbook. Though the author presents and competently defends his own point of view, the volume is mainly factual, and an effort has been made to designate controversial issues." (Management R) Index.

"The book is abundantly supplied with footnotes for purposes of both supplementary context and documentation, and has a carefully prepared list of selected readings at the end of each chapter. It is characterized by the crispness, frankness and subtle humor that everyone who knows the author will recognize and appreciate. The style is clear and simple." Roscoe Arant
+ Am Econ R 29:624 S '39 900w

"The author is qualified to write his text for college courses in public finance by virtue of his long experience as a teacher and his work in financial administration and legislation. He has succeeded in presenting a well-written, comprehensive, and up-to-date volume." A. G. Buehler
+ Ann Am Acad 205:155 S '39 450w
Management R 28:251 Jl '39 40w
Wis Lib Bul 35:182 N '39

GRUBER, RUTH. I went to the Soviet Arctic. 333p map $3 Simon & Schuster

919.8 Russia—Description and travel. Arctic regions. Women in Russia

(W) 39-16828

When in 1932 Miss Gruber received her doctor's degree from the University of Cologne, Germany, she was the youngest Doctor of Philosophy on record. She arrived home in the United States only to be caught in the depression. After a discouraging interval she got an assignment to visit the Arctic regions and find out how women were living and working in the Soviet Arctic regions. This book describes her adventures on her six thousand miles of travel by plane and boat.

Booklist 36:5 S '39

"The odds must be at least ten to one against a temperate and well-rounded book by a disconcerted feminist who goes to the Soviet Union on a quest. This is the tenth and winning number." J. B. Phillips
+ Books p3 Je 25 '39 950w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 8 '39 450w
Foreign Affairs 18:379 Ja '40 10w
Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:vi Ag '39 240w
Reviewed by Anthony Fiala
Living Age 357:199 O '39 150w
New Repub 100:56 Ag 16 '39 70w

"Miss Gruber is too much the emphatic stunt journalist ('the youngest Doctor of Philosophy in the world') to be very readable, but the non-feminist material i.e. the picture of Soviet colonisation in the North, is interesting and specially to those who followed Stefansson's theory of the northward course of empire." V. S. Pritchett

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:556 O 21 '39 150w

"What Ruth Gruber saw in the Soviet Arctic and put down with infinite detail is by far the best bit of reporting which has come out of that strange land. Other people have been there and written about it, although not many, but they failed to translate the color and buoyancy and fascination of life in the clean north." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 2 '39 950w

"Lots of readable information about the scientific and industrial development of the Russian Far North. General tone: admiring."

New Yorker 15:87 Je 24 '39 50w

"Despite the wealth of material which she gathered and facts which are astonishing to those of us not so well read or experienced, the book could easily have been dull in less accomplished hands. The writer in this case has the gift of recreating the scenes and atmosphere in which she lived and instead of dry statistics, she makes her points just as tellingly through the medium of personal interviews and well reported conversations."

+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Ag 19 '39 380w

"Miss Gruber tells her story in colorful, journalistic style, filling it with interesting details and humorous anecdotes." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 2 '39 1450w

GRUENBERG, MRS SIDONIE (MATSNER). We, the parents; our relationship to our children and to the world today. 296p $2.50 Harper

136.7 Child study. Children—Management. Parent and child (W) 39-32430

The director of the Child Study Association of America presents a guide for modern parents, containing chapters on different types of problems which parents must face. Partial contents: Authority and the modern parent; Sex education today; Learning the uses of money; Children and reading; Radio and the movies; School and home; Toward adulthood. Suggested reading list.

Booklist 36:167 Ja 1 '40

"A valuable book. As director of the Child Study Association of America she has known many other people's children and their parents. Her own four offspring justify the title of this new discussion addressed not to the small group of experts in child psychology, but to the ordinary fathers and mothers of ordinary American children."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 450w

New Yorker 15:120 D 2 '39 50w

GRZESINSKI, ALBERT CARL. Inside Germany; tr. by Alexander S. Lipschitz. 374p il maps $3.50 Dutton

943.085 Germany—History—Revolution, 1918-. Germany—Nazi movement (W) 39-3676

Albert Grzesinski, one of the organizers of the ill-fated German Republic who held important positions under the Weimar democracy, explains that democracy's fall and the events that paved the way for Hitler and the Nazi revolution. The last half of the book is a detailed study of the consolidation of Nazi power, the party machinery and laws, its war machine and Hitler's world policy. Index.

Reviewed by Clifford Kirkpatrick

Am J Soc 45:490 N '39 230w

"Inside Germany should be useful to the general reader for the personal and descriptive material that it contains; the specialist is unlikely to find in it much of significance for him." A. V. Boerner

Am Pol Sci R 33:534 Je '39 280w

"Speaking objectively and as a participant, the author presents what is probably the most authentic and illuminating report on post-war Germany. It is a tragic and moving recital of rare merit. . . For the student who would understand Germany this book cannot be too highly recommended." N. L. Sims

+ Am Soc R 4:413 Je '39 150w

"Although the book is written from a point of view, it exhibits no acrimony or prejudice, and is as up-to-date as the Sudeten episode. The liberal values which are fundamental in the labor movement, both in economics and in politics, are ably demonstrated. Grzesinski's text has been well translated by Lipschitz." P. F. Douglass

+ Ann Am Acad 203:210 My '39 600w

Booklist 35:228 Mr 15 '39

"At times Mr. Grzesinski's chronology of his own life and activities is somewhat confusing, nor is his book evenly written. Nevertheless, the story of his important role in the Weimar republic has the indubitable ring of authenticity and is peculiarly valuable to all who would understand the years which led up to Hitler deluge." Leland Stowe

+ Books p3 F 12 '39 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39

"His portraits of Hindenburg, Bruening and others are wrong and unfair. His bias reduces the value of a book packed with interesting information. He writes without any sense of humor and without the slightest understanding of the opinions of his adversaries and the causes of their success." C. O. Cleveland

— Commonweal 29:611 Mr 24 '39 420w

Foreign Affairs 17:635 Ap '39 50w

Reviewed by Karl Loewenstein

Nation 148:706 Je 17 '39 1150w

New Repub 98:83 F 22 '39 120w

"For those who are trying to understand what lies beneath the phenomenon of nazism this book is a most valuable contribution. It ranks with the best of the revelatory works." E. J. Young

+ N Y Times p3 F 5 '39 1450w

"A spirited and entirely logical attack upon Nazism. Indeed, the volume is temperate throughout. And even though the reader may feel at times that the author is a little hard on some of his colleagues, the wonder is that one who has lived through such harrowing experiences could be, on the whole, so impartial." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 F 4 '39 800w

"In his estimate of Prussian power, and also of several leaders, past and present—especially Paul von Hindenburg—the author is very harsh. No one can fail to find these accounts engrossing and often stirring. They make a disorganized, but nevertheless clarifying, picture of conditions inside Germany today."

Springf'd Republican p8 F 14 '39 600w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Survey G 28:337 My '39 370w

GUBBELS, JAC L. American highways and roadsides. 94p il $2.75 Houghton

625.7 Highway engineering. Roadside improvement (W) 38-29054

The author, who is landscape engineer for the state highway department of Texas, explains the principles of highway construction and landscaping for the preservation of roadsides, promotion of safety, and soil conservation. Index.

Booklist 35:170 Ja 15 '39

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 28 '39 110w

Eng N 122:72 Mr 30 '39 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:8 Ja '39

Special Libraries 30:137 Ap '39

Wis Lib Bul 35:25 F '39

GUEDALLA, PHILIP. The hundredth year. 312p $3 Doubleday

909.8 History, Modern. Europe—Politics. Edward VIII, king of Great Britain [abdicated 1936] (W) 39-27908

In framework and manner this volume is similar to the author's panoramic survey of English and world history recorded in The Hundred Years (Book Review Digest, 1937). Month by month he records the events of 1936 from the funeral of George V to the abdication of Edward VIII. Index.

Booklist 36:108 N 15 '39

"In general, Mr. Guedalla uses fewer set pieces than in 'The Hundred Years,' less of spectacular scenery and gorgeous costuming and more of incisive comment upon the men and ideas which supplied the essential action. It is a less colorful and more political book than its predecessor, and the political emphasis, as has been said, now seems somewhat distorted. But that, after all, is the fault of history rather than of Mr. Guedalla. It is still splendid panorama, with a strange, discreet but appealing human story in the foreground." Walter Millis

+ Books p1 O 22 '39 1550w

Reviewed by R. E. Moody
Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '39 230w

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill
Canadian Forum 19:298 D '39 350w

"Mr. Guedalla is already noted for his brilliant style. Here the style is often so brilliant as almost to blind the reader to the fact that this is a very serious, indeed tragic book. It is one-sided; it is, perhaps, no more than journalism of the highest class; it doubtless needs correctives at countless points—correctives, however, rather in the way of providing other points of view than of expunging positive errors; but it is immensely entertaining and often very moving. In it the immediate past, which all of us observed as it went by, is brought vividly to life again." S. C. C.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '39 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

Reviewed by Philip Burnham
Commonweal 31:49 N 3 '39 650w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:5 D '39 30w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis
New Repub 101:235 D 13 '39 350w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p9 O 29 '39 1350w

New Yorker 15:86 N 4 '39 40w

"The manner of the book is familiar, but its method is newer, something that was approached but not so firmly grasped in 'The Hundred Years,' a series of pictures of historic moments, brilliantly visualized and surrounded by compact comment, the method, in fact, of a good newsreel, with the camera focused by an Historian. For if this author has written history with the nervous vividness of contemporary journalism, he writes journalism with the perspective and detachment of good history." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 O 28 '39 550w

Time 34:88 O 23 '39 50w

GUERIN, DANIEL. Fascism and big business; introd. by Dwight Macdonald; tr. by Frances and Mason Merrill. 339p $2 Pioneer pubs.

335.6 Fascism. Capitalism. Socialism 39-7920

Study of fascism according to Marxist formulas. The author is a young French writer. Index.

Canadian Forum 19:194 S '39 900w

"Although Guerin handles his material with firmness and skill, one of his major conclusions is not only unconvincing, but it negates his careful factual analysis. For it gives the impression of a sharp break between the objectively presented facts and their interpretation. In offering us a program against fascism, he not only affirms the need of a strong working-class movement against capitalism, but he suggests also that we break with 'the rotten structure of bourgeois democracy.' Considering in this review the latter suggestion only, one can show that it does not hang together with the facts." Robert Pollock

+ — Commonweal 30:161 Je 2 '39 1100w

Foreign Affairs 17:808 Jl '39 10w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 149:736 D 30 '39 800w

GUEST, DAVID. A textbook of dialectical materialism: with a foreword by H. Levy. 107p $1 Int. pubs. [2s Lawrence]

335 Materialism, Dialectic

This exposition of the Marxist faith is the work of a young British intellectual, a convert to Communism who was killed in Spain in 1938. The book was prepared for the press by T. A. Jackson, author of Dialectics (Book Review Digest, 1937).

Reviewed by Richard Coventry
New Statesman & Nation 18:620 O 28 '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p586 O 14 '39 180w

GUIGNEBERT, CHARLES ALFRED HONORE. The Jewish world in the time of Jesus; tr. from the French by S. H. Hooke [foreword by Henri Berr]. (History of civilisation) 288p $4 Dutton [21s Routledge]

296 Jews—History. Bible. New Testament—History of contemporary events [39-8534]

Study of the political and religious conditions of the Jewish world in Palestine just before the Christian era. It considers the innovations, native and foreign, from the period of the Exile onwards, the real nature of Jewish religious life, and the questions arising over Hellenistic Judaism. Bibliography. Index.

"There is additional value in the volume because of the complete bibliography and the voluminous notes. Unfortunately, the notes appear as numbers on each page, and the references themselves are in the back of the volume. This makes it very annoying for the average reader, who must refer to the appendix every few sentences. But the specialist in the field will not mind the extra chores, for he has, in the scope of one volume, the distillation of modern scholarship as it plays upon the most important period in the religious history of the Western World." A. L. Sachar

+ Books p15 Ag 13 '39 600w

Reviewed by H. R. Willoughby
J Religion 20:101 Ja '40 200w

"Professor Guignebert's book covers a wide field. . . A field presenting many problems, old and new. Such problems might easily claim more than one volume. If, therefore, the author seems to skim rather lightly over some of them it must be remembered that this is a companion volume to his book entitled 'Jesus' and that it is intended to be a guide rather than an exhaustive treatment of so many problems. Nor is it merely a guide along much-trodden paths. It is a guide also in the sense of a way-opener into paths which are to a large extent new. This gives it a rare stimulus." M. A. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '39 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p144 Mr 11 '39 1150w

GUILLAUME, ALFRED. Prophecy and divination among the Hebrews and other Semites. 434p $5 Harper [20s Hodder]

291 Prophecies. Divination. Jews—Religion. Semitic race—Religion [39-11251]

"These Bampton lectures for 1938 deal with 'man's intercourse with the unseen world, among the Hebrews and other Semites.' Since, however, the religion of all except a comparatively small fraction of the Semites was influenced and molded by the non-semitic Sumerians, the first lecture treats of Sumero-Babylonian religion, special attention of course being given to its magical and divinatory conceptions. The succeeding lectures discuss nomad religion, magic and sorcery, ecstasy, and personal religion." Living Church

Reviewed by A. I. Hallowell
Am Soc R 4:883 D '39 60w

"A work of first importance." W. P. Lemon
+ Christian Century 56:1341 N 1 '39 900w

"Dr. Guillaume has made an extremely able presentation of a great mass of material. . . Two criticisms must be made: first, while Dr. Guillaume refers again and again to the selective, purifying, and unifying power of Yahwism, he nowhere advances clearly any explanation as to why Yahwism was almost unique in this respect. . . Second, in many cases the author's discernment of the nature of the material he discusses is not as keen as might be. . . These deficiencies however only very slightly impair the enormous value of the work, which is a mine of information for the student of prophecy, interpreted by a wise scholar of wide learning who is not afraid of the truth." C. A. Simpson
+ — Living Church 102:12 Ja 10 '40 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p706 N 5 '38 1250w

GUILLEBAUD, CLAUDE WILLIAM. The economic recovery of Germany, from 1933 to the incorporation of Austria in March, 1938. 303p $3.25 (10s 6d) Macmillan

330.943 Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Economic policy [39-21088]

This study of Germany's economic conditions is based, statistically, on official or semi-official sources, and, generally, on intensive study of German periodical literature. The author is lecturer in economics in the University of Cambridge. While he disclaims any sympathy with the political creed of the National Socialists, he has tried to present the picture of conditions from an impartial and objective viewpoint. Index.

"Although Mr. Guillebaud's book seems to this reviewer to be based on a fundamentally mistaken method of inquiry, it is nevertheless valuable, since it contains a good deal of data which are difficult to obtain otherwise, and also because it may serve as a perfect illustration of how not to write a book on a totalitarian economy. The classical economists never thought of economic processes as in a social vacuum, as minor epigones of the classical school only too often do. Adam Smith never committed the follies of which some of his so-called disciples are guilty. A perusal of The Wealth of Nations should guard effectively against the unfortunate dissociation of economy from politics into which so many of our economists have fallen." William Ebenstein
+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:689 Ag '39 650w

"Laudably, Mr Guillebaud is determined to be impartial. But there are two brands of impartiality. The first is for the student to rid his mind of all prepossession and prejudice, but to retain his analytical and critical faculties. The second variety of impartiality consists in merely recording without question the official accounts of what happened and the official explanations of why it happened. Of the two possible brands of impartiality, Mr Guillebaud has definitely chosen the second."
Economist 135:4 Ap 1 '39 2400w
Foreign Affairs 17:814 Jl '39 40w

"Take official German literature and figures, accept without question their interpretation by the Nazis, present the Nazi case more intelligently than most Nazis would be able to do, and you have Mr. Guillebaud's book. There is hardly a line in his 271 pages of text to which Dr. Goebbels would not subscribe without reservation. Yet it seems to me that the author, who is a lecturer in Economics at the University of Cambridge, wishes to be impartial. He is a victim of an inferiority complex that is widespread today among economists in democratic countries." Adolf Sturmthal
New Repub 100:194 S 20 '39 500w

"It is unfortunate in many ways that Mr. Guillebaud cuts his narrative short at the moment of the annexation of Austria, and makes no attempt to deal, except in a few incidental passages, with the problems of the past year and the 'Greater Reich.' It is also a pity that he does not tell us more about German methods of liquidating outstanding foreign debts or pushing trade in South America and South-Eastern Europe—or indeed about any of those aspects of German policy about which it is difficult to write with the equanimity of one elucidating a statistical table. For the consequence of these omissions is both to give an unduly favourable picture and to avoid telling the reader what he presumably most wants to know." G. D. H. Cole
New Statesman & Nation 17:469 Mr 25 '39 650w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson
N Y Times p17 Jl 9 '39 900w

"Had Mr. Guillebaud been less cautious and less anxious to be objective, his book might have been even more illuminating. His knowledge evidently goes beyond his statements." M. J. Bonn
Spec 162:356 Mr 3 '39 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p130 Mr 4 '39 800w

GUINEY, LOUISE IMOGEN, ed. Recusant poets; with a selection from their work [v] 1, Saint Thomas More to Ben Jonson. 419p $6 (18s) Sheed

821.08 English poetry—Collections. Roman Catholic poetry—Collections (39-4694)

A collection of English verse by Catholic writers chosen from the works of thirty poets from Sir Thomas More to Ben Jonson. The verse of each poet is accompanied by a biographical sketch and brief critical and bibliographical notes. Glossary. Indexes.

"Louise Guiney was not only a great poet in her own right, and a critic of impeccable taste; she was a great scholar, and the notes and biographies which abound in the book are set down with an almost passionate exactitude. The book will have as much historical as literary interest, but in both rôles it has satisfied completely this reviewer." Leonard Feeney
+ America 60:573 Mr 18 '39 480w
Cath World 149:242 My '39 850w

"A valuable collection, which should interest all having any liking for sixteenth and seventeenth century poetry, as well as all English-speaking Catholics." Mason Wade
+ N Y Times p20 S 10 '39 800w

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec 162:720 Ap 28 '39 1050w

"Louise Guiney's 'Recusant Poets' is a book which deserves to live; it represents twenty-five years of patient research, initiated by Father Bliss, S.J., and completed by Mr. Edward O'Brien; but the greater part of the work, the heat and burden of the day, was borne by that fine poet and scholar Miss Guiney. Their labours, which are not likely to be rivalled, have provided a unique collection of interesting and generally unfamiliar poems, together with biographies and a scholarly list of references. The present volume covers roughly the last three-quarters of the sixteenth century, and will be followed by a second volume carrying the work down to Pope."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Ap 1 '39 1400w

GUITERMAN, ARTHUR. Lyric laughter. 288p $2.50 Dutton

811 (W) 39-28980

Humorous verse, some of it from the author's out-of-print books, and some new poems reprinted from magazines.

GUITERMAN, ARTHUR—Continued

Booklist 36:146 D 15 '39

"Mr. Guiterman's muse has the unpretentious wisdom of the fable-teller, and the jingling bells in her hand play more than one tune. I don't see how anybody who likes good work and deft craftsmanship can fail to enjoy this book." S. V. Benét

+ Books p2 Ja 21 '40 500w

"Ridiculous, highly entertaining verse. Good to read aloud."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"With humorously shrewd perception of human traits in general and the phenomena of organized life in our era, Mr Guiterman has a command of pliable verse forms to match his thought. The reader enjoys Mr Guiterman's satire and sententiousness the more because there is not too much of either."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 26 '39 340w

Time 35:46 Ja 1 '40 500w

GUITTEAU, WILLIAM BACKUS, and BOHLMAN, MRS MARY EDNA (MCCAULL). Our government today. 727p il maps $1.80 Houghton

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government

38-17215

Textbook on high school civics. It "combines the traditional historical approach with the more recently popularized practice of grouping the concepts on the organization of government about its functions (judicial, legislative, and administrative) rather than about the governmental divisions (federal, state, and local). . . The forty chapters of the book are grouped into fourteen units. Each unit is introduced by a brief summary preview. Each chapter is followed, first, by a group of references, chiefly to college and high-school textbooks; then, by a series of factual questions on the chapter; and, finally, by a list of exercises and activities, which suggests specific outlines, comparative charts and tables, floor talks, debates, and compositions. The illustrations consist of photographs of governmental activities and political instruments, as well as diagrams of political structures, maps, charts, and graphs. There are the usual appendix and index." School R

"This new book is distinctive in that its approach is first made through the judicial rather than the legislative functions. . . The most commendable features of the presentation in the book are the attention devoted to innovations in the form of governmental organization, the practice of comparing the processes of the government of the United States with those of other democratic governments, and the high degree of accuracy of statement achieved in the historical and the descriptive passages. The least commendable feature is that, in spite of careful statements of both sides of several controversial problems, the presentations in several instances are tendentious enough to carry acceptance of the point of view of the authors." Elmer Ellis

+ — School R 47:315 Ap '39 480w

"A larger type would make the book more readable for those students who are handicapped with reading difficulties, but little fault can be found with such features as illustrations, maps, graphs, charts, bibliographies, and exercises, all of which have been well selected and pertinently placed. An interesting innovation which will be welcomed by teachers is the inclusion in the Appendix of a recommended list of illustrative material for the study of national, state, and local government. Without question the volume represents a contribution worth consideration for the modern civics class library." F. M. Lawson

+ Social Educ 2:589 N '38 440w

"The authors have necessarily gone into detail in order to do justice to their subject. This of course, makes the book rather long to be studied by some high school classes. However, it would make an excellent reference book for any group interested in studying government and could be used as a text by most high school classes. The material is up-to-date and much more practical than many books on this subject inasmuch as it associates a great deal of the information with the every day life of the reader." Betty McCord

+ — Social Studies 30:140 Mr '39 330w

GULICK, LUTHER HALSEY. Education for American life. See New York (state). University. Regents' inquiry into the character and cost of public education

GUMPERT, MARTIN. Dunant; the story of the Red cross. 323p $2.50 Oxford [8s 6d Eyre]

B or 92 Dunant, Jean Henri. Red cross

(W) 38-27863

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"This is a readable, in fact in large part a fascinating account of an unusual and little known character. . . The book gives an excellent historical background throughout for understanding Dunant and the development of the Red Cross." E. F. Reed

+ Am Soc R 4:449 Je '39 320w

"Mr. Gumpert has written this rather dull story with care. The main interest is the picture it presents of the period in which this unappealing Swiss banker, with his small skull cap and big idea, lived." R. D. De Sales

Atlantic Mr '39 480w

"Mr. Gumpert is somewhat obsessed by a contempt for the 'bourgeois,' and his style is inclined to be turgid. But one can accustom oneself to these drawbacks, of which the second is the more serious, and then see the story of Dunant stand out as one of the strangest, most pathetic, and, in a way, heroic lives of the nineteenth century." M.C.

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 21 '39 330w

Pratt p27 summer '39

"Dr. Gumpert's life of Henri Dunant contains so little about the man and so much about his times that it will disappoint readers who are interested in the Red Cross and its originator. The author's long historical surveys need a good deal of revision, and his repeated complaint that the Red Cross movement has kept clear of pacifist politics is hardly fair. But when Dr. Gumpert is actually writing about his hero, he compels attention."

— + Spec 162:504 Mr 24 '39 240w

"Any life of Dunant must contain reference to war strategies of his day. Mr. Gumpert's portrayal, sans pictorial illustration, gives an excellent picture of events framed in the shadow box of the nineteenth century. . . Whittaker Chambers, the translator, has given the writer's opinions clearly and concisely. One will do well to read and ponder his words." E. L. Brown

+ Survey 75:60 F '39 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p83 F 11 '39 440w

GUNTHER, JOHN. Inside Asia. 599p map $3.50 Harper [12s 6d Hamilton, H]

950 Eastern question (Far East). Asia—Politics. Asia—Biography (W) 39-27492

The author of Inside Europe (Book Review Digest, 1936) has written a similar study of Asia. Starting in Japan, his trip included China, and Manchukuo, the Philippines, Singapore, Netherlands East Indies, Siam, India, Iran, Arabia, and Palestine. Personality sketches, anecdotes, bits of local color, and jokes enliven this account of outstanding persons, wars and near-wars, social and economic conditions, and politics and intrigues on the continent of Asia. Bibliography. Index.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 11:660 Je '37

Reviewed by H. B. Elliston
Atlantic Ag '39 500w
Booklist 35:346 Je 15 '39

"This is the biggest one-man reportorial job that has ever been undertaken, and since it is one of the most competently done jobs for a half dozen widely separated parts of Asia of which this reviewer has some knowledge, it is probably as thoroughly and intelligently done throughout as any living man could do it. It is encyclopedic in its scope, and if the average publisher instead of John Gunther had contemplated it, he would probably have divided it into a dozen fields, assigned each of half a dozen men a different line of study in each field, and would have employed a competent editorial staff to make a compendium of all the material assembled." Rodney Gilbert
+ Books p1 Je 11 '39 2500w

Reviewed by Halfdan Gregersen
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 22 '39 430w

"As a sustained piece of journalism, covering the largest and most complex continent, this book is something of a tour de force, but three books, shorter in total length, and issued at intervals, might have served a better purpose." C. A. Ashley
Canadian Forum 19:163 Ag '39 300w
Cath World 149:751 S '39 420w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:1 Jl '39 1850w
Foreign Affairs 18:173 O '39 40w

"Read Inside Asia by all means and read it preferably, in 'takes,' letting one section soak in before passing to the next. It's a great book for those who like an hour of reading now and then before going to bed for it falls naturally into parts which can be taken separately with a maximum of enjoyment." M. W. Vaughn
+ Living Age 356:590 Ag '39 600w

" 'Inside Asia' is delightful reading and should win a wide and appreciative audience. If its popularity measures up to 'Inside Europe,' it will make a valuable contribution to America's knowledge of the movements and forces which are now stirring the Oriental peoples. This is the sole comprehensive treatment of the political struggles, and of the drive for national emancipation, of well over one-half the population of the world." T. A. Bisson
+ Nation 148:703 Je 17 '39 850w

" 'Inside Asia' has all the charm, humor, balance, factual richness and ultimate theoretical weakness that are inseparable from Mr. Gunther's character as a person. . . I feel diffident about recommending the line-by-line texture of 'Inside Asia,' for I have yet to digest the differences between Shensi and Shansi, Kwangtung and Kwantung, and it always strikes me as affectation that Chinese patronymics should precede given names or that tang should be pronounced dong. But I have seen Mr. Gunther at work (he has on various occasions collected material for Fortune Magazine) and I know that his method is not apt to lead him very far astray." John Chamberlain
+ — New Repub 99:219 Je 28 '39 1350w

Reviewed by Freda Utley
New Statesman & Nation 18:20 Jl 1 '39 1000w

"Mr. Gunther put in over two years of concentrated work and travel. He might easily have spent twenty; but then he probably would have been unable to write the book. As it is, he turns a fresh and critical eye on the vast drama of the Far, Middle and Near East and tells in a straightforward manner, and with gusto, what he finds. The result is a vivid panorama of living peoples." W. W. Lockwood
+ N Y Times p1 Je 11 '39 1850w

"Having polished off that inconsiderable cape of Asia known as Europe, John Gunther now turns his attention to the mainland itself. The astonishing thing is that he does not seem to have bitten off more than he can chew. 'Inside Asia' is even more successful than its predecessor. In a sense, because so much of its material will be fresh to most of us, it is more interesting. I deem it the plain duty of all anti-parish-pump citizens to ship east of Suez at once with John Gunther as their dragoman. 'Inside Asia' runs to nearly six hundred pages. It has only one map—but it's a corker—and is innocent of statistical tables and appendices. Gunther makes no bones about it: he is out to be read, and read he will be." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:92 Je 10 '39 1550w
Pratt p26 summer '39

"With the exception of a little reporting done in the Near East, Mr. Gunther had not visited any of the places he writes about in 'Inside Asia' until he set out on a trip to gather material for it, about two years ago. To state that fact is to say that 'Inside Asia' is not as good a book as 'Inside Europe.' And it is not. Partly, perhaps, because of the author's relative unfamiliarity with his subject, and partly, no doubt, because of the insurmountable language barriers he encountered, even more than the earlier volume 'Inside Asia' takes refuge in anecdote and personality. . . Yet, despite its little flaws and blemishes (there are a few slips), 'Inside Asia' is, all things considered, a remarkably good job. It is packed with information. It is eminently fair. It is highly readable. To the reader who does not know as much as he would like to know about the East —far, Middle, or Near—it will prove as pleasant and easy an introduction as any book available." Varian Fry
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 Je 10 '39 700w

"This is a breathless book, ambitious in scope, varying in merit no doubt, but never varying in its power of holding the reader's attention." A. F. Whyte
+ — Spec 162:1136 Je 30 '39 950w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 18 '39 1500w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser
Survey G 28:548 S '39 190w
Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Je 24 '39 800w
Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

Reviewed by Barnet Nover
Yale R n s 29:189 autumn '39 650w

GURKO, VLADIMIR IOSIFOVICH. Features and figures of the past; government and opinion in the reign of Nicholas II; ed. by J. E. Wallace Sterling, Xenia Joukoff Eudin [and] H. H. Fisher; tr. by Laura Matveev. (Hoover lib. on war, revolution, and peace. Publication) 760p $6 Stanford univ. press [27s Oxford]

947.08 Russia—History. Russia—Politics and government 39-7869

Memoirs of a prominent member of the pre-War Russian ruling class. The book covers the period from the accession of Nicholas II in 1894 to the eve of the Revolution in 1917. Index.

Reviewed by B. W. Maxwell
Am Pol Sci R 33:721 Ag '39 220w

"If Mr. Gurko is not the chosen historian of the fall of the Empire, his work, filled with details of the administrative side of the old Empire . . . will claim the close attention of such a historian, when he appears. Particularly timely, in the light of present events, is the author's analysis of how war undermined the foundations of an autocratic system which had endured for three centuries and paved the way for the coming of Bolshevism." W. H. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p22 Ap 25 '39 500w

"The book is excellently annotated and documented. It does for pre-revolutionary Russian history what William Henry Chamberlain's The Russian Revolution did for the period 1917-21. It is an historical work of the first importance." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist 50:8 Ap '39 280w
Foreign Affairs 18:378 Ja '40 10w
Times [London] Lit Sup p441 Jl 22 '39 800w

GUSTAFSON, AXEL FERDINAND, and others. Conservation in the United States, by members of the faculty of Cornell university. 445p il maps $3 Comstock pub. co.

333.0973 Conservation of resources. U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 39-27375

"The basic facts of current problems of conservation, presented for students and general readers. The authors believe that a well-informed public is necessary before a plan will be adopted for conserving and restoring the country's natural resources. Their book is dedicated to that end." Booklist

Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

Reviewed by J. S. Gardiner
Nature 144:310 Ag 19 '39 700w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:43 Jl '39

"The style is simple and nontechnical. Technical terms are introduced gradually and are accompanied by textual discussion which makes them readily understandable. As in many recent publications dealing with informational material, such as popular magazines, high-school textbooks, and recent federal research studies, much can be learned directly from the pictures and their captions, with little dependence on the text. Occasional repetitions and perhaps oversimplifications occur, but hardly enough to be annoying." H. H. Punke
+ School R 47:550 S '39 430w

GUTKIND, KURT SIGMAR. Cosimo de' Medici; pater patriæ, 1389-1464. 352p $5 (15s) Oxford

B or 92 Medici, Cosimo de', the elder 39-3679

A study of the life and times of the first important member of the Medici family. "Dr. Gutkind's exact and comprehensive study . . . is concerned to place its subject in his proper setting and, as that setting is renaissance Florence, the pains taken over it are well spent. Florentine politics are dealt with in the first two chapters and are further illuminated in several of the book's numerous appendices. Dr. Gutkind tells us enough of the Florentine constitution to explain its eventual breakdown and exhibits the tangle of Florentine public finance in a way which accounts for the emergence of a family of bankers as the rulers of the State. If he does not throw an abundance of new light on Cosimo himself, that is because it was Cosimo's principle to remain a dim figure in the background." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

"Mr. Gutkind's persistent inaccuracy and uncritical acceptance of whatever adds flavor to his theme unfortunately go far toward discounting the merits of this biography." G. R. B. Richards
— Am Hist R 44:959 Jl '39 360w

"Cosimo de' Medici, Pater Patriae, 1389-1464 is not a book for the general reader. Anyone not already familiar with Florentine history and institutions would find himself baffled at the outset by the formidable introductory chapter which may be described as a series of notes on the cultural and economic life of the city, and its financial administration at the opening of the fifteenth century. The lavish use of technical words and phrases, and the untranslated passages from Italian sources embodied in the text, add to its severity. On the other hand, Mr. Gutkind's work is disappointing from the standpoint of the historian. He has made a careful study of the printed sources, but he has not succeeded in throwing fresh light upon Cosimo de' Medici's career." C. M. A.
— + Eng Hist R 54:361 Ap '39 500w

"This is not the life of Cosimo Vecchio that we are still waiting for, and it is not for and not intended for the general reader. But it is a stimulating and a valuable source book and it not only tells the story of how this shrewd, cool, clear headed, reticent man was forced by circumstances into the public arena, but it gives in full the background against which this took place." T. C. Chubb
+ — N Y Times p16 F 26 '39 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 14 '39 700w

H

HAACK, HERMANN, ed. See Stieler, A. Atlas of modern geography

HAARHOFF, THEODORE JOHANNES. Stranger at the gate; aspects of exclusiveness and co-operation in ancient Greece and Rome with some reference to modern times. 354p $5 (12s 6d) Longmans

913.38 Civilization, Greco-Roman. Rome—Civilization. Nationalism and nationality [39-12812]

"Professor Haarhoff, of the Witwatersrand University is an intense patriot, anxious to put his scholarship to the service of the cultural development of his native South Africa. . . For Professor Haarhoff, the immediate problem is that of the harmonizing of the young and virile Afrikaner tradition and the great European culture from oversea; and in the history of ancient Rome he sees the essentials of the problem writ large. . . To examine the interactions of the Hellenic and Roman cultures and the process of their fusion Professor Haarhoff goes back to the beginning of Greek history." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A timely book."
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 150w

"The author's discursive treatment of his subject makes it none too easy to carry away a clear scheme of the contacts between Romans and strangers. The complexity of the subject is increased by the vagueness of the word 'stranger', which can mean here foreign nations, passing travellers, or resident aliens. But one does receive some interesting and fruitful suggestions on particular aspects. Not all the analogies drawn with modern times are equally valuable. . . However, the central comparison between the Roman farmer and the Boer is certain to impress a British reader. Mr. Haarhoff has drawn widely on ancient and modern authors for illustrative material, and the notes at the end of each chapter are well constructed to convey their general context, even when read apart from their corresponding passages in the text." H. W. Parke
+ — Eng Hist R 54:481 Jl '39 700w

"The book is a warm and vigorous compilation, the work of a mellowed scholar, which will be best appreciated by those who have a good working knowledge of the ancient background. Nor does the South African application restrict its appeal; for, fortunately enough, the primary object of the book is overlaid by the happy ramifications of discursive scholarship, and the modern moral is little more than an epilogue. In fact the best part of the book is that in which the writer has forgotten his particular theme and gives us a general anatomy of Rome."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 7 '39 700w

HAAS, ARTHUR ERICH, and FREEMAN, IRA MAXIMILIAN. Elementary survey of physics; a non-mathematical presentation. 203p il $1.90 Dutton [7s 6d Constable]

530 Physics 38-18101

"This is a brief survey and compilation of physics which the authors suggest may be used to acquaint students, among them premedical students, with the whole field of physics." J Phys Chem

"Its briefness has led to a number of naive statements and generalizations, and the reviewer hopes that all premedical students will be required to complete a more comprehensive and detailed course than is given here. The essentials of physics are stated in the book, but it alone would give a very superficial knowledge of the field." J. W. Buchta

J Phys Chem 42:1251 D '38 80w

"It may be safely predicted that the work will commend itself to a large number of students, and the general public too will find it most readable." M. D.

+ Nature 144:744 O 28 '39 170w

HAAS, MRS MYRA MAY, and SCHAFFER, NATHAN. Recipes and menus for allergics; menus by Cay Hillegas; il. by O. Soglow. 250p $2.50 Dodd

641.56 Cookery for the sick. Menus. Allergia (W) 39-27188

"Practical suggestions for providing the special diets required by allergics with the least possible disturbance of the ordinary meals of the patient and the rest of the family. The preface by Dr. Schaffer gives a clear though brief explanation of what allergy signifies and also lists the ingredients of various common products which may prove pitfalls to the allergic. The suggestions and recipes (tested by competent home economists) in the body of the book are classified according to the more common allergies (egg, milk, wheat, and their combinations), and substitutes are listed for common foods that must be avoided." J Home Econ

Booklist 35:247 Ap 1 '39

J Home Econ 31:333 My '39 110w

HABAS, RALPH A. Morals for moderns; with an introduction by Hendrik Willem Van Loon. 289p $2.50 Liveright

170 Ethics. Social ethics 39-23521

"Moral standards of today are set forth in today's language by the Associate Leader of the Chicago Ethical Society; and the book covers a wide field of conduct, with a brisk and practical prescription for liberal thought and ethical behavior. . . The author looks at life—from yesterday into today—with a fresh point of view and offers sound suggestions as to how it may be lived better." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Books p23 N 19 '39 350w

"In spite of its definite appeal to 'moderns' and its emphasis upon change and difference in the workings-out of moral principles, the novelty of Dr. Habas's book is not in what he thinks but in the way he thinks it."

+ N Y Times p20 O 15 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:182 N '39

HABE, HANS. Three over the frontier; tr. by Eric Sutton. 287p $2.50 Dodd [8s 6d Harrap]

39-4491

Story of three exiles from Nazi Germany and their wanderings in search of safety and security in central Europe, Paris and London.

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin

Books p10 F 26 '39 800w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 29 '39 120w

"Much of the book is a cry from the heart of German Jewry and the story is more an inducement than a primary subject." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p5 Ja 6 '39 280w

"One has the feeling that Herr Habe is almost too determined not to be propagandist, not to invite sympathy for his expatriates: Nora and Kiesler are an intensely unattractive couple, and the young Communist, who should by rights be the hero, only achieves, like so many fictional Communists, a kind of plaster cast, Exposition heroism. In fact, Herr Habe is better at social analysis than at people or plot." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 17:56 Ja 14 '39 290w

" 'Three over the Frontier' is more than a novel. It is a sociological document that needs to be read as an elaboration and interpretation of newspaper headlines and reports. The translation by Eric Sutton is excellent." R. C. Feld

+ N Y Times p6 F 26 '39 950w

New Yorker 15:67 F 25 '39 50w

"The uncomfortable feeling that develops as we read Hans Habe's tale of danger and intrigue, may be traced to the strange mismating of background and plot. . . The agony and despair of today's European populations make a queer sub-structure for the posturing of so dubious a character as Nora Geldern. Only an Anna Karenina could carry it off." N. L. R.

— Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 11 '39 130w

"I found Three Over the Frontier unsympathetic. I read it—sometimes interested, sometimes bored, but never with the least enjoyment. The descriptions, the facts, are, I should imagine, accurate, for care seems to have been taken not to overstate their horror. In this careful presentment of a political situation lies, indeed, the chief value of the novel." Forrest Reid

— + Spec 162:64 Ja 13 '39 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 7 '39 380w

HABIG, MARION ALPHONSE. Heroes of the cross; the Franciscan martyrs of North America. rev and enl ed 176p il map $2 Fortuny's

922 Franciscans. Martyrs

"This is a studious and compact study of the Franciscan martyrs in North America. Or rather, since the author does not wish to anticipate the judgment of the Church about the holiness of the early missionaries, it is an objective compilation of the available knowledge concerning the circumstances of death, and necessarily of life, of the 117 Franciscan heroes who died violently on our continent bringing Christianity to the Indians." Commonweal

Reviewed by F. C. Bailey

America 61:502 S 2 '39 150w

"It is an intelligent and clear record, whose moving quality derives completely from almost statistically stated facts."

+ Commonweal 30:363 Ag 4 '39 80w

HACKER, LOUIS MORTON, and KENDRICK, BENJAMIN BURKS. United States since 1865. 3d ed 821p il maps $5; text ed $3.75 Crofts

973.8 U.S.—History—1865- (W) 39-2382

New edition of a college text first published in 1932. 2d edition 1935 (Book Review Digest, 1932, 1935). "The authors state that revision does not consist of supplementary chapters, as in the 1934 edition, but in the rewriting of the last third of the book, on the period since the World war, and in the addition of four new chapters covering the New deal." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

"The scarcity of errors of fact in a book of this size is a tribute to the authors' scholarship. But there are overstatements, such as calling the Interstate Commerce act 'the first piece of federal legislation of any broad economic significance,' and describing the national banks' legal reserves against deposits as 'fictitious in character'. The various tables should show their source, even when drawn from the census, and the bibliography, particularly for the recent chapters should contain more adequate references for the 'conservative' viewpoint." D. L. Kemmerer

HACKER, L. M., and KENDRICK, B. B.— Continued
+ — Am Econ R 29:816 D '39 700w
Booklist 35:235 Mr 15 '39
Social Studies 30:238 My '39 150w

"The tendentious character of Messrs Hacker and Kendrick's interpretation extends even to intellectual and artistic themes. Readers who make allowance for the authors' point of view will find the work ably written. Indeed, there is a gift of analysis in the work that shows what the authors could do if they would drop the doctrinaire point of view."
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 23 '39 200w

HACKETT, FRANCIS. Queen Anne Boleyn. 477p $2.75 Doubleday [8s 6d Nicholson]
Anne Boleyn, consort of Henry VIII, king of England—Fiction (W) 39-27863

Long historical novel based on the life of Anne Boleyn. It begins with Anne's first love affair with Henry Percy, while she was one of Queen Catherine's maids-in-waiting, and ends with her death on Tower Hill.

Booklist 36:88 N 1 '39
Reviewed by F. T. Marsh
Books p2 S 24 '39 800w
Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p3 N 4 '39 90w
Cath World 150:634 F '40 140w

"Some passages read like fragments from old chronicles. In style, the book is brilliant, allusive, crammed with provocative and multitudinous detail. It is called a novel because it takes liberties forbidden to strict biography; but, in all essentials, it is a life of the second of Henry the Eighth's wives and a picture of her violent times." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '39 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

"The basis of the novel is careful research and tested material. It is probably as good a biography of Anne Boleyn as we shall ever have." Katherine Anthony
+ New Repub 100:310 O 18 '39 1000w

"Anything that tells the story of the wretched Anne is bound to be moving, and Mr. Francis Hackett writes about her with such fondness and with such delight in the Abyssinian splendours of the Tudor court that he conveys his pleasure to the reader. Queen Anne Boleyn is a fine cloak-and-sword historical novel of the old-fashioned kind." Anthony West
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:525 O 14 '39 350w

"The novel, of ample size and careful documentation . . . is a forceful and impressive picture of a period of ruthlessness, political imbroglio and religious conniving. . . . 'Queen Anne Boleyn' is a good story." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p9 S 24 '39 1100w

"A persuasive historical novel, as rowdy and vital as the times it treats of."
New Yorker 15:76 S 23 '39 100w
Pratt p23 winter '40

"Mr. Hackett's imagination is as fresh and vigorous as ever, his verve and pictorial skill are unimpaired. . . But in his success he forgets the novelist's task of convincing us that such a woman, for her own sake, and aside from the great events which happened to hang upon her story, was interesting and important. Not many people would read this as a novel if the names of the characters were not Henry VIII, Francis I, Cardinal Wolsey, Anne Boleyn, but as first-rate popular history with romantic trimmings, intelligently imagined and skillfully written, it should find the wide public it aims at and deserves." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 S 23 '39 800w

"Mr. Hackett's novel is very long, mannered and assiduous—good of its kind, but historical novels, with their air of let's pretend, seem to me intended for children rather than for adults." Graham Greene
Spec 163:556 O 20 '39 100w

"Anne herself fails to stand out with that extra vividness which an imaginative writer should add to history if he is to justify his choice of a subject. He does indeed exhibit with some power the development or degeneration of her character; the open-hearted and affectionate young girl who is tempted by the King's interest to plunge into the game of political intrigue gradually changes into a hard and scheming woman, in whom the lineaments of her daughter are curiously foreshadowed. This is interesting and true to history; but it has to be winnowed out by the reader, instead of dominating the book as it should."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p575 O 7 '39 500w
Wis Lib Bul 35:215 D '39

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Cock-a-doodle doo; the story of a little red rooster [pictures by the authors]. [56p] $2 Macmillan (W) 39-27727

Picture story book for the very young describing the adventures of a little red chicken, born into a family of ducks, who persisted in his hunt for his own kind until he was successful.

Booklist 36:46 O 1 '39

"Four-year-olds, to whom chicks are dear, will give one look at the latest Hader opus and grab it. Imagine 'The Ugly Duckling' turned inside out, transferred to an American farm, and told in lovely colored pictures, so large the chicks are life-sized with just words enough to give story tellers a lead. Such is this tale of Little Red." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 29 '39 250w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 13 '39 130w
Churchman 154:35 Ja 1 '40 10w

"This is one of the Haders' most successful books, and a completely satisfying one for its very young audience." Irene Smith
+ Library J 64:999 D 15 '39 100w

"This is a delightful picture story book for the youngest children. It has a real feeling of out of doors and, because of its rapid movement and its characterization of the barnyard animals, lends itself readily to dramatic play." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 D 31 '39 300w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 70w

HADFIELD, JOHN, ed. The Christmas companion; with contributions by [W. R. Matthews] and many others. 560p il $2 Dutton [7s 6d; lea 10s 6d Dent]
394 Christmas (W)

An omnibus volume containing stories, poems, carols, humour, problems, games, history, essays, etc. Among the contributors are the Dean of Saint Paul's, Rose Macaulay, D. B. Wyndham Lewis, James Hilton, Frank Sullivan, and many others. Index.

Booklist 36:208 F 1 '40

"The selections are of high grade, and never artificially cheerful. The effect is of a stirring overture to a merry play." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 23 '39 100w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 30 '39 200w

Reviewed by T. C. Worsley
New Statesman & Nation 18:830 D 9 '39 150w

"It must be a dour dissenter who will not find something especially pleasing for himself somewhere in [these] well-filled pages."
+ N Y Times p16 D 17 '39 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup ix N 18 '39 50w

HAGEN, MRS LOIS (DENLEY). Parish in the pines. 263p $3 Caxton printers

B or 92 Missions—Minnesota. Frontier and pioneer life—Minnesota (W) 38-29015

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"It is a well drawn picture of a rugged community." C. J. Finger
Books p19 F 26 '39 600w

Reviewed by Philleo Nash
Canadian Forum 18:383 Mr '39 120w

"The book is valuable chiefly for the inside story it offers of events well known to history. . . . There are appealing portraits of Indians, young and old, civilized and pagan; details of their loyalty, their innate sense of justice, their essential dignity; and intimate glimpses into the life of the missionaries, always hard, seldom far from heroic. Not to mention lovely views of a virgin, unspoiled country, seen through the wide eyes of a child. There is a fragrance over the whole book, cool and sweet, like wood smoke drifting over water." K. C. K.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 4 '39 650w

"The scent of the pines breathes through these pages, carrying a story of unselfish devotion, simply and sincerely told as it was simply and sincerely lived. . . . Well worth reading, either as straight missionary stuff, or as the biographical sketch of pioneering lives." M. L. E.
+ Churchman 153:34 F 15 '39 110w

HAGER, MRS ALICE (ROGERS). Wings to wear. [96p] il map $2 Macmillan

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature (W) 38-35747

An attempt "to provide a coordinated visual outline of aviation, as business and as profession, with sources where detailed information concerning types of jobs and requirements for them can be obtained." (Author's note) Illustrated with many clear photographs. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 35:159 Ja 1 '39

"Will be of great assistance to young enthusiasts in finding their particular interests."
+ Churchman 153:34 Ja 1 '39 40w

"By means of clear photographs on every page and a brief, interesting text, the author does give a bird's-eye view of the different aspects of aviation. . . . Recommended for both junior and senior high schools." M. F. Potter
+ Library J 64:118 F 1 '39 90w

Wis Lib Bul 35:70 Ap '39

HAGER, DORSEY. Fundamentals of the petroleum industry. 445p il maps $3.50 (21s) McGraw

665.5 Petroleum industry and trade 39-4667

A college textbook covering the geology, resources, engineering, history and economics of the oil industry. Index.

Booklist 35:284 My 1 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

N Y New Tech Bks 24:26 Ap '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:317 N '39

HAIG-THOMAS, DAVID. Tracks in the snow. 292p il map $3 Oxford [10s 6d Hodder]

919.8 Greenland—Description and travel. Eskimos

With two other young and adventurous Englishmen the author visited northern Greenland, lived with the Eskimos, journeyed thousands of miles to discover a new island, and survey a portion of the coast. The story of the expedition is told in simple, straightforward style, and is marked particularly by anecdotes of the author's friends among the Eskimos. Index.

Booklist 36:108 N 15 '39

"With complete simplicity, a British explorer in the Arctic has written here a delightful and unusual book, and has illustrated it with delightful and unusual photographs." John Patton
+ Books p18 S 17 '39 430w

Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p1 S 16 '39 300w

"One thing that strikes the reader is Mr. Haig-Thomas's remarkable friendship and liking for the Eskimos, and theirs for him, which results in many amusing and interesting stories of these unique people. Another point is the photographs, which even allowing for the generally high standard of such productions, are extraordinarily good." M. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 15 '39 250w

"An exciting narrative, well and modestly told. . . Beyond which Tracks in the Snow contains some of the finest photographs of the Arctic ever published in a book about the far North." H. B. Mallalien
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:1008 Je 24 '39 100w

Reviewed by Martin Lindsay
+ Spec 163:230 Ag 11 '39 210w

"This book succeeds because it is the work of a gifted watcher of animals, birds and men, and because it describes without artifice the life of one who was testing a theory to the limits of his bodily powers and was finding that it worked."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p284 My 13 '39 600w

HAIGHT, AUSTIN D. The biography of a sportsman; il. by Arthur D. Fuller. 209p $3.50 Crowell

B or 92

Informal autobiography of a lover of hunting and fishing, who with a rarely congenial companion grew up with rods and dogs, attained the dignity of ownership of a real gun, and has kept his fondness for his avocation intact.

Booklist 36:176 Ja 1 '40

"Lovers of hunting and fishing will enjoy this intimate record of the experiences of an American sportsman and, though it is not a book of instructions, may improve their technique by learning something of his."
+ Christian Century 56:1410 N 15 '39 40w

"Even if one is not a sportsman in the popular sense, he will become one in his mental attitude towards that life, as he reads this delightfully charming book. . . Mr. Haight's old age must be as mellow and serene as the autumns he depicts when he hunted the bobwhites. Thousands will read the book who never saw Field & Stream where the chapters first appeared." A. L. Byron-Curtiss
+ Churchman 154:22 Ja 15 '40 80w

HAILE, BERARD. Origin legend of the Navaho enemy way. 320p il pa $3.50 Yale univ. press [pa 16s Oxford]

970.3 Indians of North America—Legends. Indians of North America—Dances. Navaho Indians—Legends 38-16121

"The Navaho Enemy Way rite is performed to cure a person whose abnormal condition is attributed to the action of foreign ghosts. The legend connected with the rite, the songs used in it, and a native description of the ceremonial itself are presented in text and free translation, together with notes giving native explanations of various allusions. The work is of primary interest to linguists and to students of folklore and ritual." Am Soc R

HAILE, BERARD—Continued

"The work is especially illuminating to the student of religion who depends on linguistic evidence as the ultimate means of interpretation of a belief as strange as that of the Navajo. All Navajo students, like their native instructors, disagree, and the final authority must be the texts themselves. For this reason the book is indispensable. We may not agree with points in the author's introduction—his attempt to make the different chant myths consistent in dogma, his classification of the ceremonies, his comparisons with other tribes and consequent derivations, for examples—but the text is here, and that is the important thing." G. A. Reichard

\+ Am Anthropol 41:141 Ja '39 750w
Am Soc R 3:612 Ag '38 70w

HAILEY, MALCOLM HAILEY, 1st baron. African survey; a study of problems arising in Africa, south of the Sahara; issued by the com. of the African research survey; under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 1837p maps $7 (21s) Oxford

309.16 Africa 39-14257

"Following an appeal for a comprehensive survey of Africa and its problems made by General Smuts in his Rhodes Memorial Lecture in 1929, an authoritative committee was formed to give effect to his proposal. . . Lord Hailey agreed to undertake the task on his retirement from the governorship of the United Provinces in India. Five years intensive work has produced a comparative study of the countries, peoples and their indigenous institutions and the influence of the different European Colonial Powers on the development of both in connexion with the exploitation of the natural resources of the whole of the mainland of Africa lying south of the Sahara, with the exception of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, the Italian possessions and Liberia." Nature

Reviewed by R. L. Buell
Am Hist R 45:364 Ja '40 700w

"It is difficult to over-praise this report. From every point of view it is an outstanding achievement, and one which truly merits that much abused adjective, 'monumental.'" G. L. Kirk

\+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1111 D '39 750w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Am Soc R 4:740 O '39 450w
Economist 133:312 N 12 '38 1800w
Foreign Affairs 17:642 Ap '39 100w
Nature 142:939 N 26 '38 2300w

"'The sole object for undertaking the Survey', says Lord Hailey, 'was the hope that it might prove of some service to the Powers which have possession of territories in Africa, and of some benefit to the African people'. Understatement and humility could go no further. In reality, the survey was conceived on a grand scale and has been compiled with imaginative insight and rare judgment. It takes into account every important aspect of the African scene. It is no mere compilation of facts, but a study in breadth and depth enriched by the intuitive and persevering genius of the master mind responsible for its direction and shape and the actual material it contains." A. G. Church

\+ Nature 143:2 Ja 7 '39 2400w

"This book is easy, indeed delightful, reading throughout, but owing to its bulk few public men will have the time to study it. It should be possible, with a little rearrangement, to issue the conclusions, with much less background, in a small volume." Donald Cameron

\+ — Spec 161:816 N 11 '38 900w

"Where the standard of treatment is so high throughout, it is difficult to commend selected chapters. Yet there are two which seem to have received a special measure of continuity and of force from the writer's personal interest. These are the chapters dealing with law and with land."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p735 N 19 '38 1150w

Reviewed by H. R. Rudin
Yale Law J 48:1464 Je '39 950w

HAINES, DONAL HAMILTON. Langford's luck. 275p $2 Farrar

39-4389

Young Langford had been known thruout his school days as Lucky Langford, but after graduation the luck apparently disappeared. However, in time, Bob enrolled in a civilian flying school, became a crack pilot, encountered a series of adventures and finally, outwitting a smart uncle, vindicated his father's honor and proved his grandfather's genius as an airplane inventor.

"The two ends of the story are more interesting than the middle, and there is a lot of middle. . . With all this, moreover, [the youth] stays a boy in a book, and the reclaiming of character from the inroads of riches has been done too many times in books to arouse feverish interest in boys of today." M. L. Becker

Books p10 Ap 30 '39 320w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 20w

"Mr. Haines is more in his element in writing school stories—this tale has too many improbabilities to be thoroughly convincing. However, older boys will enjoy it because of the aviation interest. For younger high school boys." Marian Herr

\+ — Library J 64:244 Mr 15 '39 90w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p10 Ap 30 '39 240w

HALDANE, JOHN BURDON SANDERSON. Marxist philosophy and the sciences. 214p $2 Random house [5s Allen, G]

335 Communism. Science—Philosophy

39-27189

"Prof. Haldane is, by his own confession, a recent convert to the philosophy of Marx, and with the characteristic zeal of the convert wishes others to share his faith. . . He begins with a brief general sketch of Marxism. He then discusses a number of present-day problems, mathematical, physical, biological and sociological, on this basis. He quotes a number of excellent comments that were made by Engels on the science of his day and are still relevant and illuminating." (Nature) The book is based upon the Muirhead lectures on political philosophy delivered in January and February, 1938, at the University of Birmingham. Index.

Booklist 35:247 Ap 1 '39

"Professor Haldane fails to explain dialectical materialism, although he attempts to do so in his first chapter. A vast and cloudy philosophy needs space and time for its explanation, and Haldane has neither to give. . . There is never a moment in which the reader does not feel the superficiality of the analogies and comparisons made by the author. The words of the Marxian authorities are usually clear and often eloquent, but Haldane's comment is for the most part poorly written, except in the chapter on his own field, biology." H. M. Parshley

— + Books p17 My 7 '39 600w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 90w

"This book will inspire some to collateral reading. It will leave others far behind. Specifically, it is for those otherwise reasonable people whose picture of Marxism is that of a bear flicking his tongue over bloody chops. Also for Marxist bigots. Haldane doesn't preach. He brings out the brass tacks and forces one to sit on them." C. M. Smith
+ Christian Century 56:1073 S 6 '39 440w
Foreign Affairs 17:808 Jl '39 10w
Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 101:vi Ap '39 150w

"Professor Haldane has a unique commentatory style which makes his writings most fascinating for the general reader. . . His book is by far the best introduction to the Marxist view of the sciences. It is extremely readable and the circumvention of difficulties in exposition is miraculous. Those who wish to learn why Marxism has such intellectual durability will find the book a paragon of instruction and palatability." J. G. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 22 '38 330w
Reviewed by Ernest Nagel
Nation 148:448 Ap 15 '39 900w

"As usual, Prof. Haldane displays an astonishing encyclopædic knowledge of science, and is interesting and lucid—except for one point. He does not succeed in dispelling the fog that surrounds the uses of the term 'dialectic.'" A. D. R.
+ — Nature 143:97 Ja 21 '39 550w
Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 101:148 N 22 '39 400w
Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
New Statesman & Nation 17:94 Ja 21 '39 1400w
Reviewed by W. M. Malisoff
N Y Times p23 Ap 16 '39 700w
Pratt p8 autumn '39

"He would be a bold Marxist, who would controvert Professor Haldane on the subjects of these chapters, for in them Professor Haldane speaks with authority. But it may be doubted whether any great lesson can be drawn from the numerous scientific facts and theories which he here describes. . . No doubt the Marxist faithful will regard this as a triumphant vindication of their beliefs, but Professor Haldane himself fully realizes that the principles in question are wider than Marxism, and the most his book can be said to do is to show that Marxism is not incompatible with the development of modern science."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p719 N 12 '38 380w

HALE, CHRISTOPHER, pseud. See Stevens, F. M.

HALE, LINCOLN BELL. From school to college. See Hartshorne, H., ed.

HALE, ROBERT SHEPARD. Welded steel construction. 170p il $3 (12s 6d) Pitman 691.7 Steel construction 39-761

"A manual for the design, detailing, fabrication and erection of welded steel buildings, bridges and other steel structures." (Subtitle) Index.

Eng N 123:59 O 26 '39 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:62 O '38

HALE, WILLIAM HARLAN. Hannibal Hooker; his death and adventures. 479p $2.50 Random house 39-4167

A picaresque novel set in near modern times —from Cleveland's administration to the end of the World war. The hero begins his career as a Quaker youth from the Middle West studying theology at Harvard, but after a period he leaves the church and has more mundane adventures in Haiti, Washington, and Europe.

"The book has its shortcomings. But it cannot be dismissed as a composite of the worst faults of James Joyce and E. Phillips Oppenheim. For it is a novel of ideas, scrambled though they sometimes may be. Some of the dialogue is brilliant. And on every page are bits of keen observation and good writing. There is also a deeper bite to Mr. Hale's irony than a cursory reader would suspect. But that is hardly the reader's fault, because Mr. Hale firmly steers his allegories so as to avoid both the Scylla of clarity and the Charybdis of common sense. Yet his literary virtues are such that the book shows much promise if Mr. Hale can be coaxed out from among his stoles, naves and flying buttresses, and wheedled into writing simply, directly and steadily about a world he knows." W. L. White
— + Books p5 F 19 '39 850w
Reviewed by Eunice Clark
Nation 148:300 Mr 11 '39 450w

"I am afraid this is a novel of words, words, words. The words are the best things about it, for many of them are very good words—a few of them witty, a few others stimulating, a few others critical or revealing. . . But there are no people and there is no story." F. T. Marsh
— + N Y Times p23 F 19 '39 700w

"Maybe Mr. Hale wanted to write a sort of American 'Candide,' but he is so much subtler than Voltaire that ordinary readers like myself will not be sure of his meaning or his aim. I am convinced that Mr. Hale has not one talent but a score of turbulent talents. I'd like to read anything he might write after he has settled down, and I'd also be honestly glad to hear from those who know exactly what 'Hannibal Hooker' is about." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 15:80 F 18 '39 310w

" 'Hannibal Hooker' is unquestionably an unusual novel, often absorbing, sometimes dull, rarely convincing, never banal. There is no novelist under thirty in America today whom we shall watch with more interest and hopefulness than William Harlan Hale." R. A. Cordell
Sat R of Lit 19:13 F 18 '39 460w
Time 33:71 F 20 '39 230w

HALE, WILLIAM JAY. Farmward march; chemurgy takes command. 222p $2 Coward-McCann 660 Chemurgy. Agriculture—Economic aspects 39-18096

The greater part of this book voices the author's plea for the development of the use of agricultural products and by-products in industry and the coordination of farming and industry. The final pages are almost wholly devoted to a consideration of the political and social results of such a policy.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 5 '39 490w

"There may be many who will not agree with the logic of 'Farmward March.' Few, however, will deny that it is a truly challenging book." R. M. Cleveland
+ — N Y Times p9 S 17 '39 700w

"To this reviewer, Dr. Hale has weakened the value of his excellent analysis of contemporary economic needs by many of his statements in the latter part of his book. Here he comments most freely upon American 'economic soothsayers', the passing of international trade, and the need for national self-sufficiency on the lines which Hitler has imposed upon Germany. Few will feel that chemical independence is a perfect substitute for all individual freedom. Dr. Hale overlooks the axiom that only in a democracy could he be so outspoken against the government."
+ — Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Jl '39 300w

HALL, MRS MAY EMERY. Writing the juvenile story. 229p $2 Writer

808.3 Authorship. Children's literature
39-18829

Practical guide for the writer of juvenile fiction in which are discussed the tools of the trade, the juvenile audience, style, writing methods, different types of stories, marketing manuscripts, etc. No index.

Booklist 36:86 N 1 '39
Books p8 Ag 20 '39 120w

"Mrs. Hall covers the juvenile field thoroughly, and her book is as useful for those who have a more academic interest in this branch of authorship. Its 20 chapters are crammed with help geared to today: subject matter, treatment and markets. The best book on the subject I have yet seen."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 110w

HALL, ROSALYS. Animals to Africa; pictures by Fritz Eichenberg. [27p] $1.50 Holiday 39-27539

Hilarious tale of two small boys with animal-collecting propensities who were to be taken to Africa by their parents. The warning against collecting any more animals before sailing, because "in Africa there are plenty of animals" fell on deaf ears, as far as David and Daniel were concerned.

Booklist 35:366 Jl 1 '39

"An Opus 1 seldom has such good backing in the way of pictures; Holiday House evidently thought it worth taking special thought and thought directly of Fritz Eichenberg, whose full-page drawings, some touched with color, are in his most hilarious vein." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Je 4 '39 340w
Cath World 150:373 D '39 50w
Reviewed by E. G. Mullan
Library J 64:662 S 1 '39 110w

"Fritz Eichenberg's lively drawings in clear, bright colors and Rosalys Hall's swiftly moving little tale present the kind of absurd nonsense adventure that delights the 5, 6 and 7 year old." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 23 '39 240w

HALL, WILLIAM STANLEY, ed. Eyes on America; the United States as seen by her artists. 150p $3.50 (10s 6d) Studio

759.1 Paintings. Art, American. U.S.—Pictorial works
39-27318

Reproductions of over two hundred American paintings, eight of them in color, representing various aspects of American life. Biographical index.

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"Since Hartley, Marin, Blume, Davis, and Criss are among the missing, this attempt to portray 'the United States as seen by her leading artists' is as remarkable for its omissions as, in some instances, for its inclusions. It's intended more as a picture book than as a parade of talent, however; as such, its 228 illustrations give a lively enough panoramic view of contemporary scenes."
New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p482 Ag 12 '39 80w

HALLACK, CECILY. The happiness of Father Happé; il. by Robin. 167p $1.50 Kenedy [3s 6d Browne & Nolan]
39-27447

"The Superior of an English Franciscan monastery was so overcome by consternation on reading his mail that his assistant could only suspect that 'the Catholic church had been wound up and the Holy Father had gone out of business.' But the news was the assignment of Father Happé to the monastery. He was a French peasant, and he was also a scientist of world repute, but no one in the English village knew that. They knew his sermon advised them to become mules, they knew he announced himself as an agnostic, and the village communist knew that Father Happé's communism went beyond Marxian practice. The lovable little monk's experiences in practicing Christianity are joyous escapades." Booklist

Booklist 35:332 Je 1 '39

"Who but Miss Hallack could tell so well this simple story of an old Savoyard archaeologist, at once a great scholar and a humble Franciscan monk? She speaks through these pages in the characteristic vein of combined playfulness and piety always associated with her name."
+ Cath World 148:765 Mr '39 100w

HALLER, WILLIAM. The rise of Puritanism; or, The way to the new Jerusalem as set forth in pulpit and press from Thomas Cartwright to John Lilburne and John Milton, 1570-1643. 464p $4.50 Columbia univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

285.9 Puritans. Religious literature. Milton, John 38-36498

A study of the "sermons, popular expositions of doctrine, spiritual biographies and manuals" of the early Puritan divines, begun by the author in an attempt to understand Milton and his relation to Puritanism. The study closes with the year 1643. Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Haller's book is very valuable in three ways. It supplies a much needed investigation of Milton's Puritan background and heritage. It comes to grips with (if it does not completely solve) one of the ultimate problems of Puritanism—how it shaped public opinion for the revolution. It is a pledge of the fruitful alliance of historical and literary studies, whose benefits are mutual: to place Milton in his setting is not only to illuminate Milton, it is to throw light on features of the age which historians neglect at their peril." A. S. P. Woodhouse
+ Am Hist R 45:123 O '39 1300w

"Although the author may disavow the charge, his book is a distinct contribution to historical sociology. This brief review does less than justice to a work which is singularly well-written and intelligently executed." R. K. Merton
+ Am Soc R 4:436 Je '39 480w
Reviewed by S. C. Chew
Books p21 Mr 26 '39 550w

"Professor Haller's extended studies in the literature of this period have enabled him, in this indispensable volume, to illuminate a crucial period in the religious development of England and properly to present Puritanism in a far more favorable light than that in which it is seen by those who think of it only as the somber influence that wrought the 'decline of Merrie England.' " W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 56:122 Ja 25 '39 650w

"Haller, who is professor of English at Barnard College, Columbia University, has given the public the most satisfactory and scholarly study of the whole Puritan movement that your reviewer has seen." T. F. Opie
+ Churchman 153:17 Ap 15 '39 250w
Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
Crozer Q 16:143 Ap '39 300w
Reviewed by G. L. Abernethy
Ethics 49:506 Jl '39 300w

"When one reflects upon this revealing study it seems remarkable that so much has hitherto been written on Stuart Puritanism in ignorance of most of the wealth of literature here explored. Dr Haller is a professor of English, and he employs a style worthy of his academic role." J. T. McNeill

+ J Religion 19:284 Jl '39 800w

"The book is notable in its entirety. The vast amount of learning that went into its making is handled with ease. It is factual, positive but undogmatic." D. A. Roberts

+ N Y Times p18 F 19 '39 550w

Reviewed by F. L. Baumer

Yale R n s 29:211 autumn '39 360w

HALLET, RICHARD MATTHEWS. Michael Beam. 451p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 39-30065

Tale of the Ohio frontier in the 1820s. Michael Beam, frontier trailbreaker and town founder, is the hero. In Michael there were two contrasting characters—one who loved the Indian girl Red Bloom, and the other whose loyalty was given to Charlessie Carteret.

"Mr. Hallet writes with gentleness and certainty and strength. One of the tests of any novel is whether it can be read hurriedly. There is scarcely a phrase here which can be skipped without loss. Michael Beam is a book to be read a sentence at a time." B. A. Williams

+ Atlantic D '39 400w

"Charlessie, the white sweetheart, shows up well enough, but faintly. At the end of the book one is inclined to regret Red Bloom, in spite of her utterly unorthodox way, as an Algonquin, of making love. . . These few cavillings should not obscure the fact that 'Michael Beam' is an extremely entertaining novel of the Illinois country in the days when Indians did not limit their scalpings to oil companies." Phil Stong

+ — Books p10 O 29 '39 500w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 9 '39 650w

New Repub 101:122 N 15 '39 30w

"Mr. Hallet writes always with verbal skill, gusto for outdoor life and sometimes, as in the scenes in the Michigan woods, with psychological verity. . . Certainly the triumph of the book is the character of the Indian maid, Red Bloom. She is both charming and pathetic, the realized romantic conception of the ideal mademoiselle la sauvage." H. R.

+ N Y Times p24 O 22 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:82 O 28 '39 40w

"Richard Matthews Hallet is another first-class teller of tales of the days when America was a younger and tougher land."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 500w

Time 34:85 D 11 '39 20w

HALLIDAY, BRETT. Dividend on death. 252p $2 Holt

39-23863

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 100w

"Since Michael Shane manages to be a not wholly unlikable figure, it seems possible that Brett Halliday may become popular with readers whose first demand is for nonchalant rough stuff. But he is an inexpert story-teller. His plot breaks in two." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p22 O 1 '39 200w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 30 '39 30w

"A murder story with real characters and plausible background."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 180w

HALPERIN, SAMUEL WILLIAM. Italy and the Vatican at war. 483p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

261.7 Church and state in Italy 39-8528

"A study of their relations from the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war to the death of Pius IX [February, 1878]." (Subtitle) "This book . . . is the second in a series projected by the author. The first, The Separation of Church and State in Italian Thought from Cavour to Mussolini [Book Review Digest, 1937, 1938], is a book of political theory; this present volume deals with the actual relations between Italy and the Vatican chronologically treated in their political, ecclesiastical, and diplomatic aspects. The last study in the series will bring the situation down to date. Mr. Halperin is a member of the Department of History of the University of Chicago." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Dr. Halperin understands the situation; he has combed through a vast amount of material, diaries, memoirs, official documents and the files of a dozen periodicals; if his sympathies are, quite naturally, with the new Italy, he displays, nevertheless, a scholarly restraint and a determination to be fair. The Ultramontane Catholics of France and the Jesuit editors of the Civiltà Cattolica appear in a somewhat unfavorable light. Their defense of an unpopular cause deserves better treatment. Still, we believe that the author wants to be objective." Raymond Corrigan

+ — America 60:621 Ap 1 '39 500w

"Dr. Halperin's book is replete with valuable characterizations of comparatively minor situations, always judicially weighed and amply buttressed with pertinent quotations and citations. One misses, however, a general picture that is now hidden among the multitude of situations and the accompanying 2,414 footnotes. We hope that in his third book of the series . . . the author will give us the benefit of the mature judgment of a man who has mastered an enormous amount of material, much of it from hitherto unpublished documents in French and Austrian archives." J. B. Mason

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:537 Je '39 210w

Christian Century 56:1109 S 13 '39 170w

"Professor Halperin's sparing use of quotations, his refusal to pad his account at any point, the summary of pages of original documents in a few lines, the fair treatment of arguments, pro and con, the evident linguistic sufficiency of the author, and the absence of any trace of wishful thinking combine to make this study the most dependable outline in English of the years 1870-78 in Italian history." C. H. Moehlman

+ J Religion 19:391 O '39 900w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p7 My 23 '39 330w

Reviewed by Walter Littlefield

N Y Times p18 Mr 5 '39 1400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 240w

HALSEY, GEORGE D. How to be a leader. 219p $2.50 Harper

174 Leadership. Psychology, Applied. Executive ability 38-23744

From long experience in training executives and personnel, the author develops a technique for influencing and leading people. His book is designed to be of use both for self-study and as a group conference textbook. Partial contents: Understanding and influencing people; Remembering names and faces; Ten attributes of leadership; The art of making meetings interesting; The short business speech; Measuring and rating individual performance; The leader's "problem cases"; How to handle dismissals: Developing an assistant; Index.

"Another book on self development well arranged, and analyzed with many suggestions for further reading. Specific and practical in treatment, on the whole a good workmanlike job if not too inspiring."

+ Special Libraries 29:329 D '38

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 18 '39 750w

HALSEY, G. D.—Continued

"Altho something on the order of the How to win friends type of book, this volume would be genuinely helpful to the person thrust suddenly into prominence as president of a club or chairman of an important committee."

\+ Wis Lib Bul 34:195 D '38

HALSTED, WINIFRED. Marriage is so final. 282p $2 Kinsey

39-251

In her working hours Miranda Wick edited a house paper for a large New York bank. After five her life was complicated by two suitors, a respectable, hard working Vermonter, and a gay irresponsible chap from Philadelphia. When trouble overtook the bank—the year was 1932—Miranda found the lessons there learned useful in making up her mind.

Booklist 35:206 F 15 '39

" 'Marriage Is So Final' is Winifred Halsted's first—but shouldn't be her final—appearance as a novelist. This young writer examines a segment of the contemporary scene with a tolerant and twinkling eye, and has translated her impressions into a narrative that is articulate and diverting. All the characters are interesting, their problems are genuine but not too serious, and their behavior accords with their temperament and their glands." Lisle Bell

\+ Books p9 Ja 8 '39 250w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '39 100w

"There are indications in this amusing first novel that Miss Halsted may some day write better than light fiction, or, if that is too optimistic, better light fiction." C. D.

\+ N Y Times p7 Ja 15 '39 120w

"Miss Halsted writes intelligently and amusingly. Everyone has known her characters; everyone will recognize that many of her situations and comments are funny. But the characters never take over the book; Miss Halsted's smiling face is always to be seen, as she jerks their strings." K. S.

\+ — Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 7 '39 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 26 '39 100w

HAMBLOCH, ERNEST. Germany rampant; a study in economic militarism. 297p map $2.50 Carrick [10s 6d Duckworth]

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Foreign policy. Pangermanism 39-27798

In his preface the author states "My aim in this book has been to try and show that German 'economic militarism'—more particularly in its most characteristic form of the Drang nach Osten, the Drive to the East—is not merely a facet of German foreign policy, but must be considered as part of a national impulse with its roots in German tradition." Index.

Booklist 36:65 O 15 '39

"The author is a well informed, experienced and intelligent man who has developed through study his ability to sense the value of historical perspective. I think his best pages are not concerned with Germany at all, but with his own Britain. . . He manages a neat epigram upon occasion, and the best are at Mr. Chamberlain's expense. Perhaps his own book, by making a bogey out of a Germany that is only part bogey, errs as badly as does the state of mind it combats. But he might argue that it is too late now to expect any course of action to work save a resolute seizure by the scruff of the neck. One may leave it at that and hope that a new edition will expunge minute errors of fact and a variety of typographical blunders." G. N. Shuster

\+ — Books p6 Ag 27 '39 1400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Ag '39

"This is an unpleasant book, because its attitude is 'Nazi' and its cliché is that of parlor pink vulgaris. We have enough of that by now." H. A. Reinhold

— Commonweal 31:142 D 1 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:376 Ja '40 50w

"Mr. Hambloch recounts here the sum and substance of his observations and reading with a lively and well-barbed wit which makes three-quarters of the book eminently readable. It is a formidable indictment of a nation—such as might even have reduced a Burke to silence. Yet the author is never indignant, never Chauvinistic, never unbalanced: he is simply concerned to state 'the German problem' (he offers no solution) for the benefit of non-German statesmen and peoples who have failed so pathetically to see it, let alone cope with it." W. H. C.

Manchester Guardian p7 My 23 '39 400w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Nation 149:446 O 21 '39 450w

New Repub 100:167 S 13 '39 40w

"Despite a wealth of detail and a noteworthy condensation of history, Mr. Hambloch's book really adds very little to our knowledge of contemporary Germany. It certainly offers no solution for the Anglo-German conflict—except, presumably, a European war every few decades. In the event of another European war, however, we shall probably be deluged by similar treatises on the Huns, who will be carefully catalogued in accordance with one chapter in this treatise, 'From Arminius to Hitler.' " J. F. G.

— + Sat R of Lit 20:21 Ag 26 '39 310w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 25 '39 1000w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 28:633 O '39 100w

"Mr. Hambloch studies thoroughly the history of Germany's economic drive in Eastern Europe, going back to the early history of Prussia. He also shows penetrating insight into the Prussian mentality. Here and there his picture is over-painted; he has caught some of the German mania for classifying and docketing peoples. . . One doubts whether he understands post-War England. He certainly does not understand the motives which led Mr. Chamberlain to renounce the policy of enforcing an international law through the League."

\+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Ap 1 '39 340w

HAMBURGER, ESTELLE. It's a woman's business. 300p il $2.50 Vanguard

B or 92 Advertising (W) 39-27910

Miss Hamburger began her career in advertising as a sixteen-year-old substitute stenographer at Macy's. She has worked since then in half-a-dozen other New York stores and is now executive vice-president of Jay Thorpe's. The story of her career is gay and informal and the story of her romance and marriage is given its place.

Booklist 36:109 N 15 '39

Reviewed by Ann Springer

Boston Transcript p3 O 21 '39 280w

"A clever and suggestive book."

\+ N Y Times p11 O 15 '39 320w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hawes

Sat R of Lit 21:14 D 30 '39 600w

HAMILTON, BRUCE. Traitor's way. 260p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Cresset]

39-6263

An adventure story laid in England sometime in the near future. The story centers in a plot engineered by English Fascists to involve Great Britain as Germany's ally in a war with Soviet Russia.

"If you like your thrillers swift, smooth and civilized, here is a book for you. Mr. Hamilton has an engaging manner, fluent invention, and a refreshingly realistic appreciation of the facts of international politics. The result is a lively story of current political intrigue, told without benefit of such melancholy props as slant-eyed master-minds, whiskery bomb-planters, and highly aphrodisiacal female spies." J. H. Friend

+ Books p14 Mr 26 '39 360w

Reviewed by Norah Hoult
Nation 149:79 Jl 15 '39 330w
New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 40w

"If you must read Empire-in-danger stories, you may well enjoy a National Government's wickedness being thwarted finally by a Labour Party Colonel Lawrence; but I do not think Mr. Bruce Hamilton a match for Kipling." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 16:786 N 12 '38 90w

"A swift and exciting piece of fiction."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 Mr 25 '39 160w

"You may find the political background rather vague, but the book's excitement and verisimilitude are undeniable." Nicholas Blake
+ — Spec 161:740 O 28 '38 60w

"An exciting and unusual story."
Times [London] Lit Sup p666 O 15 '38 90w

HAMILTON, CICELY MARY. Modern Sweden, as seen by an Englishwoman. 226p il $2.75 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

914.85 Sweden (W) 39-30389

Descriptive history of modern Sweden. It touches on such things as education, housing, the forest industries, food, drink, divorce, and government. There are further chapters on: gymnastics, Dalecarlia, Sweden of yesterday, and Sweden in Europe. No index.

Books p13 Jl 23 '39 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

"Miss Hamilton's style of writing borders occasionally on the quaint, but her thinking has nothing fuzzy about it. Aside from a somewhat venomous dislike of airplanes, she appears to have few prejudices to mar her excellent and suggestive ideas. While not exactly a guidebook, inasmuch as the imparting of pure travel information is not its purpose, this handy-sized volume can be wholeheartedly recommended to anyone visiting or intending to visit Sweden." R. H.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 15 '39 170w

"Miss Hamilton has dealt in an admirably thorough fashion with most aspects of political and social life in Sweden. One of her most interesting chapters deals with the tortuous laws governing the sale of drink." P. H. Johnson
Spec 162:1052 Je 16 '39 180w

"As a whole, it is not one of Miss Hamilton's best books, but she is a graceful and intelligent writer, and anything that interested her is likely to interest the casual reader, even if the book offers little of informative or interpretative character that is likely to be used for reference."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Je 23 '39 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p287 My 13 '39 210w

HAMILTON, CLAYTON MEEKER. The theory of the theatre and other principles of dramatic criticism; with a foreword by Burns Mantle. 481p $3.50 Holt

792 Theater. Drama—History and criticism 39-6957

Essays written by a dramatic critic during the early years of the century were gathered into four books, and published between 1910 and 1920: The theory of the theatre; Studies in stagecraft; Problems of the playwright; Seen on the stage. These essays, dealing with character, construction, and presentation of plays, are here combined into one volume, with some revision and omissions.

"The styles of playwriting change, and the spirit of the times dictates new styles no matter what the physical form of the theater is (as today we are calling back the Drama of Rhetoric to the stage of Illusion). But the fundamentals of drama do not change, and because Mr. Hamilton's volume is so largely concerned, and so intelligently concerned, with these fundamentals, it is still a very useful and valuable book." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p18 Mr 12 '39 500w

"Having dismissed professors as commentators on the drama, Mr. Hamilton exhibits an equal tendency to what may be called academic discussion and an equal resoluteness in treating the drama as a form of literary art. In this, indeed, lies the chief merit of the book. It is a work in which persons who like to treat drama seriously will find themes for discussion. The author is not always illuminating, but he is always thoughtful."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 10 '39 900w
Theatre Arts Mo 23:684 S '39 150w

HAMILTON, ELISABETH B., ed. Reginald Birch—his book. 280p il $2.50 Harcourt

741 Children's literature—Illustrations. Children's literature—Collections 39-24919

Selections in prose and verse from the books which Reginald Birch illustrated for children, from 1886 to 1938.

"Begun as a tribute to one who after fifty years' service as an illustrator is still one of the liveliest and most popular of the lot, this collection . . . turns out to be a book giving as much pleasure in reading as in looking at pictures. Under the hand of an expert and gifted editor, with publishers making so much material available, it became a little library in itself, because Birch illustrated so many books children love as well as those who first read them. . . It is a beautiful bargain in reading matter." M. L. Becker
+ Books p13 N 12 '39 350w
Cath World 150:376 D '39 50w
Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 30w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 31:133 D 1 '39 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:394 N '39 50w

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 64:952 D 1 '39 100w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 11 '39 160w
Wis Lib Bul 35:217 D '39

HAMLIN, TALBOT FAULKNER. Some European architectural libraries; their methods, equipment and administration. (Studies in lib. service) 110p il $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

026.72 Architectural libraries 39-2757

Study of fifteen important English and European architectural libraries, based on an eight-week tour made in 1937. Contains abstracts of the classifications of three archeological libraries. Index.

"Though the primary object was to aid in solving problems faced at Columbia, by direct observation of methods slowly evolved in Europe, the author has rendered an important service to American libraries by generously sharing his findings." E. H. Reed
+ Library J 64:746 O 1 '39 1250w

"It is valuable not only for the amount of detailed practical information clearly set forth, illustrated, and summarized but also because the author looks at the technical library problems with an appreciation of the needs of the research scholar, of the practicing architect, of the undergraduate student, and of the layman. He is also aware of the financial requirements for ideal service." Etheldred Abbot
+ Library Q 9:363 Jl '39 1300w

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:314 N '39

HAMM, WILLIAM ALBERT. The American people; drawings by David and Lolita Granahan. 1110p maps $2.20 Heath

973 U.S.—History 38-25119

A history of the United States for high school students. The book is divided into seven units and under each unit the arrangement of the material is largely topical rather than chronological. Each chapter is supplied with a list of "words and phrases" to be understood, questions on the text and for further reading, and references. Index.

"All the mechanical features of the book are excellent, and, on the whole, it seems to be an extremely usable text. It is well written, fully equipped with maps, the type is good, and the paper is of high grade. It seems that each new United States history that comes out is a little longer than its predecessor. We sometimes wonder whether we have gone to the extreme in this respect. If one has time to use a text of this dimension, well and good. Should we think a little about the students who carry them around?" L. F. Ullrick

+ Social Educ 3:68 Ja '39 850w

"Teachers of this subject can well afford to consider this book for use in their classes. It is a good general history emphasizing the social, economic, and industrial development of America as well as the political." H. H. Lawrence

+ Social Studies 30:188 Ap '39 380w

HAMMERTON, SIR JOHN ALEXANDER, ed. Concise universal biography; a dictionary of the famous men and women of all countries and all times, recording the lives of more than 20,000 persons and arranged for reading or reference. 4v in 2 il $12.75 1934-35 Educational bk. co, ltd. London (price quoted by the Geo. E. Dum co., 214 Oak St, Columbus, Ohio, distributors in the U.S.)

920 35-3706

"The Concise Universal Biography originally appeared in four volumes priced at $20. In the consolidation into two volumes the separate title pages of the original four volumes have been retained. . . According to the foreword, these volumes are based upon the biographical section of the Concise Universal Encyclopedia, also edited by Sir J. A. Hammerton and published by the Amalgamated press, London, 1930-31, but the original articles have been 'subjected to rigorous revision' and expanded to include double the number of entries, or about 20,000 names. Eight supplementary pages located at the end of the set include dates of death and other important events which occurred in the lives of the biographees during the process of publication; the correction of errors; and a few additional biographies." Subscription Bks Bul

"The text is well printed on paper sufficiently smooth to reproduce the illustrations effectively. Margins are narrow. The binding does not seem strong enough to withstand hard use. The information in these volumes appears generally accurate and up to date to the time of publication, which, it must be remembered, was 1934-35. . . In school or public libraries which have great demand for biographical material, the Concise Universal Biography may be of interest to supplement the general encyclopedias, the 'who's whos,' and such standard works. It is recommended for this purpose."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:39 Jl '39 550w

HAMMOND, C. S. and company. Hammond's modern illustrated atlas of the world. de luxe ed 293p $2.98 1937-38 Garden City pub. co.

912 Atlases (W)

"This volume contains 16 pages of well-chosen historical maps, 81 pages of political maps of the United States and its dependencies, and 48 pages of political maps of foreign countries. The United States maps, in two colors, are shown on a fairly large scale, being in many cases the same as those in Hammond's New World Atlas, reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, January 1938 [Book Review Digest, 1938]. Foreign maps are in full color. The maps are, in all cases checked, satisfactorily up to date. A map of Central Europe showing boundary changes of March 1938 has been inserted in the 1938 reprinting of the volume, which was originally published in 1937." Subscription Bks Bul

"The maps vary in legibility, some, like those of Central Europe, Michigan, Vermont, Kentucky, etc., being admirably clear while others, like those of Pennsylvania, Maine, Mexico, Ontario, India and Switzerland, are difficult to read because of the crowding of place names and insufficiently clear-cut type."

Subscription Bks Bul 10:34 Jl '39 320w

HAMMOND, JOHN LAWRENCE LE BRETON. Gladstone and the Irish nation. 785p il $12.50 (36s) Longmans

941.58 Home rule—Ireland. Ireland—Politics and government. Gladstone, William Ewart [39-5001]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"This work must be rated among the very best that have appeared in the field of history within recent years. It is long, but there seems to be little that could have been left out." Paul Knaplund

+ Am Hist R 45:147 O '39 700w

"It is a fine book and a valuable one which casts a flood of light on this vitally important topic." Edgar McInnis

Canadian Hist R 20:55 Mr '39 450w

"This is a very fine book. To my mind it throws more light on Gladstone than anything that has yet been written about him." G. M. Trevelyan

+ Eng Hist R 54:345 Ap '39 1800w

"A great and moving book. . . It unfolds an epic story of the fight of the sense for justice against the imperial sense of national egoism and raisons d'état, of the faith in moral forces against old prejudices and fears, comparable only to the Dreyfus affair in France." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 148:208 F 18 '39 280w

"This book is much more than a portrait of Gladstone: it is a detailed narrative, backed by the elaborate study of documents many of them now available for the first time, and fortified by ample quotations—if anything too ample—from letters and memoranda. It is done with the skill in analysis and the grace of style that one expects from the most moving writer and the most persuasive advocate among the English historians of our time. He is never cold; yet he is always just." H. N. Brailsford

+ New Repub 99:314 Jl 19 '39 600w

Reviewed by Alexander Thomson

Sat R of Lit 20:6 Ag 19 '39 650w

HAMRIN, SHIRLEY AUSTIN, and ERICKSON, CLIFFORD E. Guidance in the secondary school. 465p $2.75 Appleton-Century

370.15 Educational guidance. Students. Education, Secondary 39-15475

"Out of a background of public-school experience and a continuing interest in and contact with the work-a-day problems of the modern secondary school, the authors have attempted both to clarify the working principles of guidance and to suggest how such principles apply in typical school situations. Guidance is conceived as the process of aiding pupils both in their present adjustments and in their intelligent planning for the future. The guidance services suggested in this book begin with the study of pupils and consider the school's complete responsibility toward pupils from that of aiding them to make a good beginning, to that of following them up after they have completed their secondary schooling." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 36:36 O 1 '39

"Should be entitled 'How Not to Teach.' "
— Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 60w

"This publication is primarily intended as a first course in guidance for teachers and is not, for this reason, as analytical or critical of guidance techniques and situations as are some of the other recent books on the subject. However, the authors have provided valuable reference material for those inclined to go farther into any phase of the work. The real value of the book lies in the number and the variety of useful suggestions for putting into practice sound educational procedures and guidance activities." R. C. Woellner
School R 47:790 D '39 500w

HAND, HAROLD CURTIS, ed. Campus activities; prepared by the Stanford student leadership seminar. 357p $3 (18s) McGraw

371.8 Student activities. Colleges and universities—U.S. 38-17543

Articles on different aspects of college life in the United States, based on surveys conducted by Stanford university students. Partial contents: Social life on the campus; Student-faculty relationships: The college guidance program; The self-help program; Sororities, fraternities, and other living groups; The college newspaper; Music activities; Campus dramatics; Religious life on the campus. Index.

Booklist 35:18 S 15 '38

"The book possesses much practical material and helpful suggestions." H. D. Meyer
+ Social Forces 17:560 My '39 120w

HANDFORTH, THOMAS. Faraway meadow. unp il $2 Doubleday

(W) 39-32824

Nonsense story about the great battle between ponies and buffaloes. The author drew the pictures while in the Vale of Kashmir.

"The pictures strike me as nervous and the fantasy labored—for instance, telling fortunes in rhyme by reading the lines on a pony's hoof. My strongest feeling about the book is relief that Mr. Handforth has got it off his mind and can get back to his real work." M. L. Becker
Books p6 D 17 '39 200w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 15:295 S '39 50w

"The drawings of the animals are delightfully absurd; the beautiful Lalla is irresistible. This is not a book to compare with Mei-Li [Book Review Digest, 1938] for it is utterly different; but it has a distinct place of its own." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:847 N 1 '39

"Recommended only for large picture book collections." E. G. Mullan
Library J 65:37 Ja 1 '40 90w

"The incongruity and the slapstick action are amusing to children, yet the story lacks that inexplicable quality of logic which underlies the best nonsense. The pictures are more successful in this respect." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p11 Ja 21 '40 250w
New Yorker 15:84 N 25 '39 50w
Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 40w

HANIGHEN, FRANK CLEARY, ed. Nothing but danger. 285p $2.75 McBride

946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 39-30556

A collection of war-correspondents' stories from Spain during the Civil war, stories the censor would not pass. Contents: Revolution on the Ramblas, by L. A. Fernsworth; Assignment in hell, by Edmond Taylor; I hate war, by Noel Monks; Through the enemy's lines, by Denis Weaver; I cover the water front, by Joseph Swire; Seen from a skyscraper, by J. H. Yindrich; Correspondent's wife, by Lorna Wood; Death from the skies, by Irving Pflaum; Five waited for a city to die, by O. D. Gallagher; Escape from disaster, by Keith Scott-Watson.

New Repub 101:296 D 27 '39 40w

"This is not an enjoyable book, but it has its points as propaganda against war and as a study of journalistic reactions to horror, chaos and suffering. And its most convincing chapter is the one written by a young woman on her honeymoon." E. F. Allen
N Y Times p8 N 5 '39 600w

"Good adventure yarns, these 10 articles may also be regarded as arguments for peace."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 24 '39 300w

HANLEY, EDNA RUTH. College and university library buildings. 152p il $4.50 A.L.A.

022.317 Library architecture. Libraries, University (W) 39-27596

Descriptions, floor and section plans, or elevation drawings, of forty-two American college and university library buildings, all but one of which were erected during the last sixteen years. Plans are grouped according to cost: buildings costing over $600,000; buildings costing between $300,000 and $600,000; and buildings costing less than $300,000. Two teacher training institutions, and three junior colleges are considered. Includes a chapter on some essentials in college library planning, a list of selected references, and a statistical chart.

Booklist 35:376 Jl 15 '39

"The author's method is objective throughout the manual. . . The reviewer wishes to emphasize what the author admits concerning her criticisms. Since they are based chiefly on floor plans and section drawings and not on actual visits to the libraries in question, the librarians who are now planning buildings or who will do so in the future will have to make visits to the library or libraries which come nearest to meeting their needs. The value of this significant manual on College and University Library Buildings has been greatly enhanced by an annotated bibliography." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 64:864 N 1 '39 420w

Reviewed by M. R. Lingenfelter
Library Q 10:118 Ja '40 850w

HANNA, ALFRED JACKSON. Flight into oblivion. 306p il maps $2.75 Johnson pub.

973.7 Confederate States of America—Biography 38-37471

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by W. M. Robinson, Jr.
Am Hist R 45:179 O '39 650w
Booklist 35:249 Ap 1 '39

"Painstakingly, yet in a narrative style charming for all its detail, Alfred Jackson Hanna . . . had followed these southern statesmen in their perilous adventures, some through swamps and over dangerous waters to freedom, others to military prison, but all to a place in history deservedly theirs." M. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 11 '39 600w

"The author has handled the theme with life, color, and careful research." R. S.
+ Current Hist 50:64 Mr '39 200w

"Mr. Hanna's book is a calm, appreciative and most painstaking narrative. The bibliography, references and acknowledgments occupying 35 pages testify to the thoroughness of his research."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 28 '39 750w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 1650w

Reviewed by J. P. Gavit
Survey G 28:550 S '39 160w

"The trail pursued by Professor Hanna is well off the main highway of history, but it has led him to a treasure-house of adventure. There

HANNA, A. J.—Continued
he has found a new store of southern romance, a great achievement when the field has been so thoroughly prospected by historians, novelists, dramatists and film-scenarists."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 18 '39 330w

HANNA, FRANK WILLARD, and KENNEDY, ROBERT CHARLES. The design of dams. 2d ed 478p il $5 (30s) McGraw

627.8 Dams 38-29055

New edition of a work first published eight years ago (Book Review Digest, 1932). "New material has been added covering earthquake stresses in single- and multiple-arch dams, stresses due to holes such as inspection galleries of various shapes through dams, the use of models in dam design, and the use of the hydraulic pump as a means of dissipating energy." (Pref)

Booklist 35:175 Ja 15 '39

"Because of the large amount of space devoted to arch dam design in so small a book, the treatment of other types is necessarily so sketchy as to limit the usefulness of those sections. Further, the section on earth dams is quite out of date, there being no reference to the revolutionary developments since the first edition was printed. Tables of dams, flood flows, etc., have not been revised to take account of the remarkable floods of recent years."
Eng N 122:72 Ap 27 '39 140w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:21 Ap '39

HANNA, PAUL ROBERT; POTTER, GLADYS L., and GRAY, WILLIAM SCOTT. Without machinery. 288p il 92c Scott

372.4 Readers

"This is one of the Everyday Life stories in the Curriculum Foundations series. . . The purpose is to make 'use of contrasts as a means of helping the child interpret his own social scene in new ways.' Five groups described as doing their work without machinery are Pacific Island villages, reindeer Lapps, wheat farmers of Egypt, rice growers of China, and the Zuni Indians. Vocabulary and reading level are kept in mind for the third grade child." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 35:366 Jl 1 '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY. Full recovery or stagnation? 350p $3.50 Norton [15s Black, A. & C]

330.973 Economics. Finance. Business cycles. U.S.—Economic conditions 38-25488

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by F. R. Fairchild
Ann Am Acad 202:229 Mr '39 550w

"Professor Hansen's book leaves the reader with the impression of having spent an hour or two in the company of an expert who is not too remote from the world, of having enjoyed a pleasant chat with an intelligent observer of monetary affairs. Such a book is of great value, but it would be an exaggeration to pretend that, with all its merits, it provides an original answer to the problem posed by its title."
Economist 134:21 Ja 7 '39 500w
Foreign Affairs 17:631 Ap '39 30w

Reviewed by J. L. Snider
Harvard Business R 17:378 spring '39 200w

"This book is an admirable achievement in literary thrift. In it Professor Hansen has assembled almost all his scattered publications of the last few years—articles, reviews, lectures, and contributions to symposia. That the result is a coherent and highly readable discussion of major economic problems is a tribute to the author's skill in revising and arranging the original essays and to the continuity of his work. . . Recognizing the outstanding merit of Hansen's work, one may perhaps usefully devote a short review mainly to critical remarks which aim to put the worst construction upon certain aspects of his position. One purpose of these remarks, frankly, is that of goading Hansen into a straightforward statement of his own views on the central questions of economic policy. As matters stand, he seems to have no position; or, if a position may be pieced together from his occasional categorical observations about actual policies and about other people's schemes, it is, for the reviewer, neither elegant nor commendable." H. C. Simons
— + J Pol Econ 47:272 Ap '39 1150w
Pratt p8 spring '39

"Few economists are so well qualified to deal with both theoretical and practical problems as Professor Hansen, who is the author of numerous important economic publications and has acted as Economist of the State Department at Washington and in various other practical capacities. In this volume he deals not only with the trade cycle but with the larger problem, familiar to English readers in the writings of Mr. Keynes, of the chronic under-employment of resources which has been such a disturbing feature of the post-War years in capitalist countries. The chapters dealing with the literature on these questions are exceedingly valuable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p270 My 6 '39 310w

Reviewed by E. V. Rostow
Yale Law J 48:917 Mr '39 1850w

HANSEN, HARRY, ed. See O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories of 1939

HANSON, HALDORE E. Humane endeavour; the story of the China war. 390p map $2.50 Farrar

951 Chinese-Japanese war, 1931- (W) 40-27036

This book, by a young American journalist who spent several years in China, is a mixture of personal narrative and observation of political and military history. Index.

Booklist 36:212 F 1 '40

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert
Books p6 Ja 21 '40 850w

"The chapters on the guerrillas are particularly fascinating. No foreigner except the Snows and Agnes Smedley has spent so long a time with the Eighth Route Army, and Hanson's material is by far the most up-to-date available on the Communists. Although not as politically astute as some observers he is an excellent reporter. One does not need to accept his rather uncritical picture of the central government or the Eighth Route Army in order to profit from his experience and reportorial ability." M. S. Stewart
+ — Nation 150:105 Ja 27 '40 150w

"Lively and illuminating reading, with some clinical notes to explain why the Japanese can be so charming at home and such devils in China."
+ New Repub 101:297 D 27 '39 50w

"While the defects of the qualities of charm and insouciance show in the form of some half-baked generalizations and some immature judgments about what underlies the war, the result is nevertheless a book of diverting, even exciting, reading." Nathaniel Peffer
+ — N Y Times p5 D 24 '39 600w
New Yorker 15:122 D 16 '39 50w

HANSON, JAMES CHRISTIAN MEINICH. Comparative study of cataloging rules based on the Anglo-American code of 1908; with comments on the rules and on the prospects for a further extension of int. agreement and co-operation. (Studies in lib. science) 144p $2 Univ. of Chicago press [10s Cambridge]

025.3 Cataloging 39-27493

"The basis of the book is the Anglo-American code. All the one hundred and seventy-four rules are taken up in the order of presentation in this code, paragraph by paragraph, beginning with the section on author entry and ending with the rule devoted to figures. With regard to each rule the agreement or disagreement of the eighteen other codes is stated. Whenever a code fails to mention the point involved, Mr. Hanson usually attempts to outline the probable procedure that would be followed. If another code agrees in the main with an Anglo-American rule but has certain deviations, such exceptions are noted. The eighteen sets of catalog rules which are compared with the Anglo-American code represent the output of thirteen different nations and of the Vatican Library." (Library Q) Index.

Booklist 35:357 Jl 1 '39

"It would be difficult to find a cataloger in Europe or America who is better fitted to undertake a comparative study of cataloging rules than Mr. Hanson." H. D. MacPherson

+ Library Q 9:518 O '39 1000w

HANSON, LAWRENCE. The life of S. T. Coleridge: the early years. 575p il $5 Oxford [21s Allen, G.]

B or 92 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor [39-2903]

Biographical study of the early life of Coleridge which takes the story to the time when the Coleridge family moved to the Lake district. A second volume is to complete the study.

"A volume whose profoundly entertaining quality is enhanced by its careful scholarship, interpretational insight and skillful presentation." C. G. Stillman

+ Books p3 Jl 9 '39 1150w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Je 17 '39 1050w

"Mr. Hanson is too wise, he knows his Coleridge too thoroughly, to play the role of worshiper or apologist. He takes the middle ground and holds it admirably. His aim is to make us see Coleridge as he was in his weaknesses and in his genius. To the former he brings a sly but genial humor; to the latter the intimate knowledge revealed throughout this study. At long last we are to have the definitive biography of Coleridge; it is worth waiting for." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 150:116 O '39 650w

"Writing for the student, but with agreeable concessions to the general reader . . . Mr. Hanson has let a good deal of the narrative remain in Coleridge's own words. This enormously enhances its fascination. And Mr. Hanson's gifts as a biographer are delightfully shown in the full-length handling of the pantisocracy comedy." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '39 180w

Reviewed by B. I. Evans

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 10 '39 400w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke

New Repub 100:163 S 13 '39 800w

"[Mr Hanson's] book is very attractive, particularly in the pictures faced by excellent quotations about their subjects. It . . . relies very largely on quotations: letters often run to two or three pages on end; there are 7 and again 5½ pages of continuous Hazlitt. Though Mr. Hanson himself often writes very well, the book lives by its documents. For there is otherwise no unifying vigour in it, no conception of Coleridge that fills it with 'something more than nature.' Mind and events fall apart into separate chapters." Humphry House

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:21 Ja 7 '39 480w

"The book, in spite of the high academic standing that it obviously must command, is far from dry reading. On the contrary, largely because of the many letters scattered through the pages, many of them here printed for the first time, it is an amazingly human portrait of a man in whom were mingled genius and human frailty to an unwonted degree. . . This book, because it rounds out a definite period in the poet's life, is complete in itself. But all who read its vivid pages will look forward eagerly to Lawrence Hanson's next installment." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Je 25 '39 1550w

"Mr. Hanson's work is no mere 'psychograph' or interpretation, but a rounded and thoroughly documented biography. . . It is from almost every point of view so admirable that one can only look forward to its continuation in the confidence that the completed work will constitute one of the more important literary biographies of recent years." Alexander Cowie

+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 Jl 8 '39 600w

"One of the most original contributions in Mr. Hanson's admirable book at this stage seems to me his analysis of the Wordsworth-Coleridge-Poole triangle. His comparison of the two poets could not well be more acute." Edward Sackville-West

+ Spec 162:98 Ja 20 '39 900w

"Mr. Hanson's scrupulousness as a biographer is equal to Sir Edmund [Chambers']; but he is more sympathetic to Coleridge."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p12 Ja 7 '39 700w

HANSON, RITA MOHLER. The desert road to Shani Lun. 288p $2 Binfords

39-31196

Story of an American girl, who went to China on a strange mission, most of which she did not understand, and finally achieved her heart's desire.

"There is not a dull moment on or in 'The Desert Road to Shani Lun'. If you like your mysticism on the exotic side, here is a nifty camel-jump into adventure. It shows you what a maiden is apt to run up against in nomads' land." Lisle Bell

+ Books p19 N 5 '39 50w

"The story is light and fast-moving enough to keep the upper strata of the reader's mind entertainingly occupied." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p20 O 22 '39 220w

HANSON, SIMON GABRIEL. Argentine meat and the British market; chapters in the history of the Argentine meat industry. 294p $3.50 Stanford univ. press [16s Oxford]

338.4 Meat industry and trade. Argentina—Commerce—Great Britain. Great Britain—Commerce—Argentina 38-22642

Study of the development of the Argentine meat industry, especially in relation to the export trade with Great Britain. Beginning with the pre-refrigeration period, the author considers the various steps in advancement of trade conditions up to 1933. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is well written, and is worthy of high praise as a historical study. On the side of economic analysis, however, the treatment is inadequate, and is occasionally misleading." G. B. L. Arner

+ — Am Econ R 29:140 Mr '39 290w

Economist 134:248 F 4 '39 700w

Foreign Affairs 17:450 Ja '39

HANSON, VIRGINIA. Casual slaughters. 275p $2 Doubleday 39-25148

Detective story.

"Much of this tale is intended as innocent merriment, yet there's a strain of sober detection for those so disposed. By the author of 'Death Walks the Post.'" Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 Ag 20 '39 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 70w

"This is another story of life and death at an army post by the author of 'Death Walks the Post' and it proves that Virginia Hanson knows something about army life and that she has a knack for the writing of mysteries. Two of the characters from 'Death Walks the Post' are in this book and again they are in the thick of what goes on. At the end of the story there is an unnecessary element of mystery that serves no purpose unless it be to preserve the status quo between these two characters so that their emotional complications can be carried over into another book." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 20 '39 170w

"Very swell story."
+ New Yorker 15:67 Ag 19 '39 60w

"Capitally constructed plot, cheerful feminine narrator, love interest and double-barrelled ending that raises eyebrows to limit. Distinguished."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 26 '39 40w
Time 34:56 S 4 '39 30w

HAPGOOD, HUTCHINS. A Victorian in the modern world. 604p il $5 Harcourt
B or 92 (W) 39-25183

"'A picture of the modern world strained through the Victorian temperament or, rather, the Victorian culture' is the author's description of his memoirs, which are prolix but interesting. Mr. Hapgood seems to have known most of the important labor leaders, writers, anarchists, and eccentrics of the last forty years and is especially detailed in his account of the American and international bohemian life that died in the late twenties." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by Floyd Dell
Books p1 S 24 '39 1350w

"Rich in anecdote, garrulous, and warmly human, Mr. Hapgood's autobiography is interesting both as a history and as a personal document. As history it throws valuable sidelights on the literary, artistic, and labor movements of the first quarter of this century; as document it is a frank, and even naive, revelation of a personality. . . If 'A Victorian in the Modern World' is sometimes silly, sometimes repetitious, and sometimes dull, the total impact of its 600 pages is really great for it represents the wisdom of simplicity. Perhaps we could do with a great deal more wisdom of this kind." H. M. Jones
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 23 '39 900w

"Along with the nonsense and folly there is a lot of wisdom in this story of an unrepentant libertine who, having great abilitities and opportunities, might have accomplished much more than he ever did if he had not been so obsessed with the idea of having a good time."
Christian Century 56:1169 S 27 '39 400w
Churchman 153:35 N 15 '39 70w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester
Commonweal 31:228 D 29 '39 550w

"This is a kaleidoscopic, chaotic, and ingenuous book. The first half has a unity, felicity, and poignancy which are necessarily dissipated in the second, to which it is the prelude and key. . . Mr. Hapgood's story is a period piece that vividly retains the surface gleams and forms of the society that produced it. There is nothing one can say for or against that way of life that he does not say himself, thus saving one the trouble. He is as amiably ready to say mea culpa as he is to grant himself absolution. Maybe he wasted his life, he remarks, enjoying it so, but he did enjoy it. And people who enjoy, who approach life as artists and lovers, do not persecute. Maybe there is something in that." C. G. Stillman
+ Nation 149:325 S 23 '39 1000w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 100:307 O 18 '39 1700w

"The book is a record of its time, valuable and highly readable—especially so for those whose memories go back before 1914. It loses some significance because its confessional quality is carefully restrained within definite limits and because it does not reveal a deep understanding of the forces which were moving the personalities with which it deals." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p2 S 24 '39 1500w
New Yorker 15:78 S 23 '39 90w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven
Sat R of Lit 20:12 S 23 '39 800w

"One would have more sympathy with Mr Hapgood's 'wonderful wasted life' if he did not so often speak with implied scorn of people who have ambition and materialistic aims. Somebody must do the hard work—and also the hard thinking—of the world. Mr Hapgood might have accomplished more if circumstances had not so often permitted him to follow his own wayward inclinations. But his book, although not wholly engaging, has verve and personal force. It also has social interest as the delineation of a definite phase of American intellectualism mingled with self-indulgence—a phase which developed, with Greenwich Village as a symbol, before the World war and reached its fullest flowering in the twenties."
Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 1350w
Time 34:67 S 25 '39 500w

HARBARGER, SADA ANNIS, and others. English for students in applied sciences. 260p il map $2 (12s) McGraw 808 Technical writing. English language—Rhetoric 38-25671

"A text for beginning college composition courses for students in applied science by members of the faculty at Ohio State University. Without disregarding either 'the definite contribution of English composition to the students' general outlook, achievement, and personal development' or 'the sound tradition of good English as a concomitant of clear thinking,' the attempt is made to integrate it with the other interests of the curriculum in applied science." (J Home Econ) Index.

J Home Econ 31:332 My '39 60w

"This book outlines a course for American science students in the writing of English. It is thoughtfully written and well produced. Though not entirely suitable in structure or detail for students in Great Britain, it should be found stimulating by their teachers." B. S.
+ Nature 143:426 Mr 11 '39 170w

HARBESON, MRS GEORGIANA NEWCOMB (BROWN). American needlework. 232p il $15 Coward-McCann 746 Needlework 38-29098

"The history of decorative stitchery and embroidery from the late 16th to the 20th century." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:186 F 1 '39

"The book is overflowing with oddments of information, which are interesting quite apart from the study of needlework. . . Georgiana Harbeson writes with real feeling about these needlecraft pastimes, whether their fruits were actual works of art or merely examples of patient craftsmanship devoid of any real esthetic value." L. D. Bensel
+ Books p20 Mr 12 '39 380w
Nation 149:23 Jl 1 '39 160w

"A definitive history of needlework on the North American continent from the late sixteenth to the twentieth century. . . And in it, too, a well-known needlework expert gives her readers some practical guidance."
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 8 '39 400w
Pratt p16 autumn '39

HARD, WALTER R. Vermont valley. 187p $2.50 Harcourt 811 39-20200
Free verse renderings of anecdotes about Vermonters and the Vermont countryside. Some of the poems have appeared in the Rutland Herald and the Manchester Journal.

Booklist 36:86 N 1 '39
"Like most columnists, Mr. Hard has his moments. There is much here that verges on the merely quaint or pleasant; but the authentic acid is not to be missed. The material stands up much better than the form, which isn't good free verse, but a kind of hybrid prose. . . However, the Vermont tang is here on every page: these sketches, with their folk idiom, are a worthy contribution to regional writing in America." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p13 Ag 13 '39 350w
"It is not for their poetry but for human nature in its Vermont incarnation that Walter Hard's little narratives are best regarded. With the native idiom he has preserved the wit, terseness, devastating shrewdness, and independence of the Vermonter, along with some less attractive characteristics. . . The author specializes in putting a snapper at the end of each poem, which precisely agrees with the Vermonter's habit of closing a discussion with point and pithiness, and letting it go at that."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 12 '39 470w
"There are few false notes; the poems are sturdy American stuff, filled with the humor and pathos and people of our country. . . There is abundance of humor in 'Vermont Valley'; not the weary and manufactured humor of the radio and the cocktail bar, but the spontaneous, caustic wit of New England, the humor of situation and character rather than the pun or the double-meaning. Mr. Hard's few failures occur when he deserts people and things and becomes abstract and consciously poetic." J. G. E. Hopkins
+ — Commonweal 30:423 Ag 25 '39 210w
New Repub 100:252 O 4 '39 30w
" 'Vermont Valley' will remain a pungent memory long after the last page has been turned. The pieces seem artless, and, although probably more care has gone into their making than shows on the surface, they have a poetic individualism, a genuineness of feeling and understanding, which place the book high in the literary scale." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p4 S 10 '39 700w
"Characterized by good handling of colloquial speech." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 5 '39 30w
" 'Vermont Valley' shows Mr Hard becoming surer in his craftsmanship. His touch is much more deft than in his earlier books, and his choice of material seems better designed to bring out and explain the thoughts and actions of the people of his state. It pleases Vermonters that no matter what stories he tells there is never a suggestion of poking fun."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 370w

HARDENBERGH, WILLIAM ANDREW. Water supply and purification. 458p il $4 Int. textbook 628.1 Water supply engineering. Water—Purification 38-36461
"The theories underlying the collection, transportation, delivery, and treatment of water are linked with such practical problems as the civil engineer is likely to encounter in the design, equipment, operation, and maintenance of water-supply systems and water purification plants. Special emphasis has been placed on the public health features of the subject." N Y New Tech Bks
"All phases of the subject of water supply are covered in concise, understandable fashion. Illustrative examples are effectively used to show the application of design theory to practice. And a step-by-step procedure in designing the various units of a purification plant serves as a fitting conclusion to the discussion on treatment methods."
+ Eng N 122:75 Ja 19 '39 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:31 Ap '39

HARDING, MRS BERTITA (LEONARZ). Imperial twilight; the story of Karl and Zita of Hungary. 345p il $3.50 Bobbs
B or 92 Charles I, emperor of Austria. Zita, consort of Charles I, emperor of Austria (W) 39-23668
A somewhat fictionized dual biography of the last Hapsburg emperor of Austria-Hungary, and his wife, Zita of Parma. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:87 N 1 '39
"The whole eventful and tragic biography is treated exactly like a novel. Built up into telling climaxes, warm with human sympathy, Bertita Harding's work is romanticized history at its most alive and spirited. She does not always hold her narrative within the strictest confines of documented fact, and her purpose is not to enlarge historical knowledge but to vivify historical characters and scenes." John Patton
+ Books p2 S 24 '39 950w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39
"The deeply human qualities of Karl and Zita are not captured in this book. Theirs is the story of heroic frustration, and failure denies itself to conventional treatment. The reader has the impression that the author is not in sympathy with her characters. . . Many Hungarian names in the text are misspelled and the titles of some of the books in the bibliography are erroneously given." Emil Lengyel
— N Y Times p9 O 8 '39 1450w
"As usual, the author is lively and even sensational in the way she shapes up her narrative of royalty, but she fails to convince us that the royalties themselves are especially important."
New Yorker 15:70 S 30 '39 50w
"Bathed in a warmly sentimental flood of gossip and anecdote, simplified history, and glorified society-page journalism, Karl and his family in this skillful book become as appealing and as remote as the Stuart pretenders. No doubt that is the right attitude towards them, that their woes make pleasant reading but no longer concern history." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 20:11 S 30 '39 360w

HARDY, GODFREY HAROLD, and WRIGHT, EDWARD MAITLAND. An introduction to the theory of numbers. 404p $8 (25s) Oxford
512.81 Numbers, Theory of [39-4001]
The authors are professors in the University of Cambridge and the University of Aberdeen, respectively. "The book is written for mathematicians, but it does not demand any great mathematical knowledge or technique. In the first eighteen chapters we assume nothing that is not commonly taught in schools, and any intelligent university student should find them comparatively easy reading. The last six are more difficult, and in them we presuppose a little more, but nothing beyond the content of the simpler university courses." (Pref)
"There can be no doubt that the authors have carried out their programme with marked success. In spite of their modest disclaimer, HARDY, G. H., and WRIGHT, E. M.—Cont. the book is really as systematic as any elementary account of so extensive a subject can be, or ought to be. . . Mathematicians of all kinds will find the book pleasant and stimulating reading, and even experts on the theory of numbers will find that the authors have something new to say on many of the topics they have selected." H. Davenport

+ Nature 144:347 Ag 26 '39 800w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:9 Ja '39

"Those who are interested in one of the most fascinating branches of mathematics will have a lively sense of what Professor Hardy and his collaborator have to offer them and will hasten to acquaint themselves with a book which will be sure to delight them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 7 '39 160w

HARLING, ROBERT. Home: a Victorian vignette. 157p il $1.50 Appleton-Century [6s Constable]

914.2 England—Social life and customs. Architecture, Domestic. House decoration 39-13312

Brief study of life in Victorian England, in which the author considers the houses, gardens, and furniture, and the people themselves—their dining and wining, and evenings at home.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 130w

"Amusing and well-seasoned book." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 My 28 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:99 My 27 '39 40w

Sat R of Lit 20:8 Je 10 '39 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 11 '39 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p803 D 17 '38 300w

HARLOW, RALPH VOLNEY. Gerrit Smith, philanthropist and reformer. 501p $4 Holt

B or 92 Smith, Gerrit 39-4639

"Gerrit Smith was a wealthy land-holder, a businessman, and a Christian gentleman. His philanthropic spirit and his reforming zeal drew him irresistibly into nearly all of the benevolent enterprises of his time: temperance, abolition of slavery, peace, prison reform, emancipation of women, and education. He was intermittently but nonetheless zealously a vegetarian, an antitobacconist, an advocate of home and foreign missions. He preached on occasion, dabbled at law, and served some time in Congress. . . The difficulties confronting the biographer are at once apparent. Professor Harlow met them skillfully by not attempting to write the history of the reform movements or to rewrite the history of the United States around the life of Gerrit Smith. The biography, therefore, is replete with human interest and free from any attempt at sweeping interpretation or apology." (Am Hist R) Index.

"This is an exceedingly fine biography. . . The volume has no bibliography, and the reader is always in doubt as to the location of letters so abundantly cited in the footnotes. It is the one really serious criticism of an otherwise excellent piece of work." D. L. Dumond

+ — Am Hist R 45:417 Ja '40 500w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p10 S 10 '39 750w

HARNER, NEVIN COWGER. The educational work of the church. 257p $1.25 Abingdon

268 Religious education 39-27247

Survey of the educational aspect of the church, written for ministers and church workers. The emphasis is upon objectives and organization methods, rather than on problems of curriculum.

Booklist 35:263 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by F. G. Ensley

Boston Transcript p7 Je 3 '39 50w

Christian Century 56:323 Mr 8 '39 30w

"Every rector would profit by a study of this stimulating little book, which is concerned not only with the church school, but with all young people's activities." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 153:14 My 15 '39 330w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, ed. Flying hoofs; stories of horses; il. by Paul Brown. 292p $2 Houghton

Horses—Legends and stories 39-31192

Collection of twenty-four stories about horses by present-day writers. Some of the stories are taken from books; others are from magazines. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 36:179 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:382 N '39 50w

"Although many children will be familiar with some of the tales, there is enough new or little-known material to make the book very interesting for seventh, eighth and ninth grades." Marian Herr

Library J 64:1000 D 15 '39 80w

New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 40w

"Fine."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 10w

HARPOLE, JAMES, pseud. Body menders [Eng title: The white-coated army]. 296p $2.75 Stokes [8s 6d Cassell]

610.9 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Medicine—History (W) 39-27029

These further "leaves from a surgeon's casebook" tell the stories of some twenty cases, each illustrating some point in medical history or some reading of human nature. For the author's earlier volume see Book Review Digest, 1938.

"This surgeon seems to get around almost as much as Sherlock Holmes and to know altogether too much about his patients' private lives. . . The long arm of coincidence stretches across several of these stories. . . When the account turns from the imitation of fiction to exposition of medical matters, the style becomes simple and effective." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books p13 Ja 15 '39 450w

"In these pages Mr. Harpole ably exploits the drama and romance of his craft, and his vivid presentation of happy cures should, as he hopes, tend to lessen that trepidation with which most of us approach the operating-table." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 2 '38 230w

N Y Times p3 Ja 8 '39 360w

New Yorker 14:55 Ja 7 '39 20w

"The present volume is decidedly more praiseworthy than his 'Leaves from a Surgeon's Case-Book,' because the center of interest has been shifted from the disease to the patient. The author is no longer lecturing to medical students and using the story of a patient to illustrate a certain point. On the contrary, he presents an intimate account of the illness of the individual patient and only introduces enough medical information to make what is going on understandable to the lay reader. This shift of emphasis appears trivial but has the result of changing the key from a false one to one that is true." E. D. Churchill

+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 Ja 14 '39 440w

"The doctor wields his pen as skillfully as his scalpel; his obviously truthful tales are as fascinating as the best of fiction. Under cover of fictitious names, all restraints are removed, and the reader is welcomed into consultation office, operating room and hospital ward."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Ja '39 260w
Times [London] Lit Sup p790 D 10 '38 220w
Wis Lib Bul 35:47 Mr '39

HARRIS, MRS BERNICE KELLY. Purslane [Eng title: Pates Siding]. 316p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press [7s 6d Putnam]
(W) 39-27376

Story of a family of cotton farmers in a North Carolina community in the early years of the twentieth century.

Booklist 35:307 My 15 '39

"Without a single excursion into the weird jungle of psycho-pathology, without a single rape, incest, or lynching, without a diatribe against the existing social order, the author has contrived to turn out a startling book. The feat is achieved by the combination of an extraordinarily keen eye with an unerring appreciation of the dramatic element in small things." G. W. Johnson
+ Books p2 My 14 '39 650w

"The purpose of the book is to give as well rounded a picture as possible of life in one little community of middle Carolina farmers, and in as charming and amusing and touching a way as the author knows how. She succeeds admirably in her pictures; she builds episodes that are both penetrating and kindly. . . The speech of her ordinary people and her Negroes is so authentic, so right in every little note, you are almost sick with nostalgia for the sound of it. With her uppity characters she is less successful. She makes them talk in the false disdainful language of rich city cousins in an old-fashioned drama, but fortunately there isn't enough of them to matter." Ann Springer
+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 20 '39 500w

"It is rather a pity that Mrs. Harris is not a better craftsman or that she has not a firmer sense of drama. She might have written a bestseller or a Great American Novel or both. As it is, she has written a heart-warming chronicle that many readers, provided they hear about it, are going to like very much." Dorothy Van Doren
+ Nation 148:650 Je 3 '39 440w

Reviewed by Caroline Gordon
New Repub 99:286 Jl 12 '39 650w

"While it is the succession of incident that holds the book together, it is the richness and integrity of description of rugged, honest folk and their traditional and regional folkways which gives this novel its peculiar excellence. In many ways it will recall the beauty of Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings's 'The Yearling.' While it lacks the artistic unity of that story, it depicts the same closeness of family ties, however unspoken; the same loyalties, the same understanding of human frailties." R. C. Feld
+ N Y Times p6 My 7 '39 650w

"I don't much care about Calvin and Milly's pathetic love affair or the literary ambitions of Nannie Lou, but it's hard to forget Mrs. Harris when she lets herself go on a baptism or a Sunday-school roll call or levitation experiments with the 'dumb table' or a Christmas dinner or a wedding or a coon hunt. All very minor, no doubt, but very sweetly and vividly done." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:98 My 13 '39 450w
Pratt p28 autumn '39

"Mrs. Harris only injures her portraiture when she tries to pull drama and tragedy into her book, as in the amazingly bad last three or four pages. Fortunately the conclusion happens to be trivial in this book, and so an unimportant though glaring fault. Mrs. Harris makes pictures which of themselves are richly dramatic in their implications. It is a pity that she felt a need for more obvious dramatics. They mar a beautiful book but fortunately do not seriously interfere with appreciation of its high and unusual quality." Jonathan Daniels
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 My 13 '39 460w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 190w
Time 33:93 My 22 '39 190w
Times [London] Lit Sup p595 O 14 '39 330w

HARRIS, MRS FLORENCE LA GANKE. Flavor's the thing. 319p il $2 Barrows
641.5 Cookery 39-27081

A collection of recipes, each, in the author's estimation, worthy of inclusion because of its distinctive flavor. Many of the recipes come from a European background. Index.

Booklist 35:218 Mr 1 '39

"Mrs. Harris has done a beautiful bit of collecting in her 'Flavor's the Thing.' She has rounded up well over 300 unusual and not difficult recipes, from all corners of the world. Particularly valuable is the section on uses of herbs, for practically every foreign dish calls for one or more of these flavorful plants."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39
J Home Econ 31:260 Ap '39 70w
Pratt p16 summer '39

HARRIS, HERBERT. American labor. 459p il $3.75 Yale univ. press
331.0973 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Trade unions—U.S. (W) 38-29056

The purpose of this book is "to view the current labor movement historically, against the background of its predecessors, and thus perhaps to bring some perspective to the interpretation of its present hopes and achievements and defeats." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. L. Christenson
Am Econ R 29:613 S '39 280w

Reviewed by H. A. Marquand
Am Soc R 4:897 D '39 300w

"Because of the author's vigorous views on various points, one wishes he had omitted some of the factual material with which the book abounds and thus given more attention to the more meaty problems of labor direction, discipline, and control. But he has produced a highly stimulating and well-written volume, and it would have been even more so if he had broken up his long chapters by a suitable number of sub-titles." Herman Feldman
+ Ann Am Acad 205:146 S '39 480w
Booklist 35:168 Ja 15 '39

"Although his publishers point to him as a paragon of impartiality, Herbert Harris in his study of American labor leans definitely and demonstrably to the side of John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. . . Once the reader makes allowance for Mr. Harris's leanings, they do not detract from an appreciation of the excellence of his study." Edward Angly
+ — Books p5 Ja 1 '39 1350w

Reviewed by G. K. Smart
Boston Transcript p1 Ja 7 '39 750w

"Lucid, fast-reading book." R. M. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 F 15 '39 550w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipler, Jr.
Churchman 153:17 Mr 15 '39 450w

Reviewed by David Ramsey
Columbia Law R 39:547 Mr '39 1600w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:4 Ap '39 100w
Foreign Affairs 18:163 O '39 10w

Reviewed by B. M. Selekman
Harvard Business R 17:358 spring '39 120w

"It goes almost without saying that the book suffers from its own virtues. The vertically

HARRIS, HERBERT—Continued

segmented approach makes difficult an effective presentation of the horizontal aspects of the labor movement. Emphasis on the particular must sacrifice the general. The opening and closing sections of the book do not quite meet this shortcoming, and other reviewers have found this a major defect. Any reader who wants to meet this defect, however, may do so by equipping himself with one of the several short standard labor histories which set forth the broad horizontal stages in the development of organized labor. Mr. Harris' book will for a long while provide a fascinating and valuable account of the way in which particular unions have composed the horizontal categories of labor history." R. R. R. Brooks

+ — Harvard Law R 52:1029 Ap '39 600w

Management R 28:30 Ja '39 650w

"Mr. Harris has done an outstanding job. His book fills a long-felt need for a readable and authoritative one-volume labor history. It deserves examination by all who are interested in the subject." Philip Taft

+ Nation 148:155 F 4 '39 650w

"By far the most satisfactory general history to date is the handsomely printed 'American Labor,' by Herbert Harris, who has been reporting labor affairs for the past ten years and has in this way accumulated a store of first-hand knowledge. It is a keen book, written with verve and drive. In fact, it comes close to meeting the requirements of that long needed history of American labor. The main fault of this history is to be found, I think, in its structure. . . Confronted with the perplexing tangle of materials of the past fifty years, Mr. Harris selects certain sample threads to unravel separately. . . A long concluding chapter tries to weave these threads together into a single fabric. Mr. Harris' method results in many disturbing gaps. . . Even more serious than the gaps is the lack of unity and continuity." Samuel Yellen

+ — New Repub 97:323 Ja 18 '39 600w

Reviewed by Louis Rich

N Y Times p17 F 26 '39 1250w

New Yorker 14:55 Ja 7 '39 10w

"The volume has little value for the specialist in labor history, but the lay reader should find it both informative and interesting. Mr. Harris, who writes with skill and vigor, has the journalist's flair for the sharp and striking phrase, and is refreshingly unacademic. While his sympathy with labor is undisguised and he has strong likes and dislikes, his treatment is essentially fair throughout. In general, his errors of judgment can be traced not so much to bias as to incomplete or faulty information." Henry David

+ — Pol Sci Q 54:465 S '39 480w

Pratt p9 summer '39

"Herbert Harris has done a beautiful job. He has written a book which labor students will find useful, lay readers will find informative, and both will find fascinating." R. R. R. Brooks

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 D 24 '38 950w

"Teachers of social studies will find the book a convenient source for use in the study of labor problems. At this time when labor disputes occupy such a prominent place in the news this work cannot fail to be of great benefit to the student. The general reader also will benefit by gaining a clearer insight into the problem that has not always been portrayed in such an impartial way." D. W. Harr

+ Social Studies 30:187 Ap '39 300w

"This book attempts to fill the need for an authoritative, up-to-date, one volume history of American labor. It is scholarly, well-documented, eminently readable and impeccably fair. The effort to be impartial, however, seems to have squeezed out of the book something of the sense of life and dynamic vitality which is so notable a characteristic of the labor movement itself." C. R. Walker

+ — Survey G 28:242 Mr '39 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Ap 22 '39 230w

Wis Lib Bul 35:46 Mr '39

"Although the reader will, on the whole, be grateful for Mr. Harris' readable style, he may wish that the author had not worked quite so hard at it, and that the magazine Time was having a less pervasive influence on American prose." W. W. Rostow

Yale Law J 48:1456 Je '39 1100w

Reviewed by Leo Wolman

Yale R n s 28:833 summer '39 700w

HARRIS, MRS LEILA (GOTT), and HARRIS, WALTER KILROY. Canadian ways. 207p il maps $1 McKnight

917.1 Canada—Juvenile literature

(W) 39-8221

Textbook on economic geography of Canada. Contains chapters on lumbering, the capital cities, life on a habitant farm, fishing, national parks, etc. Illustrated with photographs. Grades five to eight. Index.

Booklist 35:350 Je 15 '39

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 30w

HARRIS, LESLIE JULIUS. Vitamins and vitamin deficiencies; 7v; v 1, Introductory and historical, vitamin B_1 and beri-beri; with a foreword by Sir F. Gowland Hopkins. 204p 50 il $2.50 Blakiston [8s 6d Churchill]

612.39 Vitamins. Deficiency diseases

(40-1412)

"This is the first volume of a series to be published under the general title of Vitamins and Vitamin Deficiencies. This volume is entitled Vitamin B_1 and Beri-beri—Introductory and Historical. . . An enormous amount of research is reviewed but there is no attempt to give detailed information on any point; an excellent bibliography accompanies each chapter. There are a good many illustrations which add greatly to the value of the book." Am J Pub Health

---

Reviewed by Nina Simmonds

Am J Pub Health 29:1161 O '39 160w

"The present volume is an excellent example of what Dr. Harris has set out to do by way of 'comprehensive synopsis'—to use his own phrase. In reading it . . . one has the impression that the author himself has read, and read critically, every paper that has been published on his subject, has evaluated them all and selected for his readers information from those papers only that have contributed significantly to our knowledge. It may be arguable whether this first volume could or could not have more successfully achieved its object; what is beyond dispute is that no one could have made a better job of it than Dr. Harris. Its readers will eagerly await all six of its companions." A. I. Bacharach

+ Nature 143:659 Ap 22 '39 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p818 D 24 '38 130w

HARRIS, LINA SMALL, and HARRIS, VALERIA. Tony and Toinette in the tropics; il. by Margarette Oatway Dornbusch. 90p $2 Whitman, A.

39-23300

Travel story for readers of eight to ten. It describes a trip to the West Indies on which Tony and Toinette went with their grandfather and grandmother.

"The selection of local color and incidents is excellent, and the drawings lively and informative." Vivian Lundberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 100w

HARRIS, MAY V. Carnival time at Strŏbeck; il. by Kurt Wiese. 64p $1.50 Whitman, A.
38-31617

The great event of the year in Strŏbeck, in the Harz Mountain district, is the chess carnival, with the school children taking part. This story-picture book for young readers tells of the year when Hans and Elsa almost lost the prize because of their unselfish devotion to their grandmother.

"We will admit that the Wiese illustrations, mostly in color, are extremely good, depicting people in the Harz Mountains, a section very familiar to the artist. We rather think that the story may drag a bit for young readers who may not understand how important a part chess evidently plays in the lives of the school children there. Although this is a story for an older child we don't think they will like it too well" Irene Weise

— + Boston Transcript p4 D 3 '38 130w
Wis Lib Bul 34:205 D '38

HARRISON, GEORGE BAGSHAWE. The Elizabethan journals: being a record of those things most talked of during the years 1591-1603. 3v in 1 395,379,364p $4.50 Macmillan [15s Routledge]

942.05 Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603. Great Britain—Social life and customs. Great Britain—Intellectual life [39-16423]

"Here published in one volume for the first time are three books which appeared between 1928 and 1933 under the titles An Elizabethan Journal, 1591-1594, The Second Elizabethan Journal, 1595-1598 [Book Review Digest, 1929, 1931] and A Last Elizabethan Journal, 1599-1603. With the exception of a new introduction and new index, the contents are identical." (Publisher's note) Unpaged index.

"This reviewer was already familiar with two-thirds of the volume but found himself avidly re-reading them and welcoming the additional part. The variety of topics presented, the direct and often racy style of the material presented, are hard to resist. These Journals are as fascinating for the general reader curious as to the times of his ancestors as 'Pepys' Diary' and offer an even greater range of entertainment."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 130w

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas
Manchester Guardian sup xiii D 9 '38 150w

"Stressing human interest, offering court news, society chatter, anecdotes, wisecracks, obits, theatre gossip, medical misinformation, wagers, and war alarums, these Journals give Shakespeare's England the cozy quality of Winchell's New York."
New Yorker 15:60 Jl 29 '39 50w

Reviewed by Conyers Read
Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ja 27 '40 600w

HARRISON, GEORGE RUSSELL. Atoms in action; the world of creative physics. 371p il $3.50 Morrow

530 Atoms. Physics (W) 39-20932

Popular exposition of the latest developments in physics and their use in our daily lives. Contents: The taming of energy; When physics goes farming; Sound rides the wire; Glass—more precious than rubies; Light for a living world; The ransomed electron; Sound borrows wings; Eyes that see through atoms; The doctor and the physicist; Glass sharpens vision; Eyes for the memory; Sight conquers space; The capture of melody; Outwitting the weather; Man climbs the winds; The end is not yet; Acknowledgments; Suggested reading; Index.

Booklist 36:38 O 1 '39

"Dr. Harrison deserves much credit for making the subject attractive and eliminating all its forbidding technicalities. The reviewer must protest, futilely as usual, to a title which is not informative. . . 'Atoms in Action' is, however, a masterly book of success stories in physics and does impressively prove its major point, that modern research in pure science is an excellent investment not only for industry but for society." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p6 O 8 '39 700w

Reviewed by M. F. Ashley-Montagu
Boston Transcript p1 S 30 '39 230w
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '39 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"The volume contains a large number of excellent illustrations. The author has succeeded extremely well in his obvious objective of being impartial in the assignment of credit for different discoveries and fundamental observations. The whole work should create in the minds of intelligent laymen (including business men) a proper appreciation of the contributions made by physics to industrial progress." Saul Dushman

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:670 O 20 '39 330w

"High praise to Professor Harrison for having written one of the most intelligent and stimulating accounts of what science actually has done and can do for the average man and woman."

+ New Repub 100:251 O 4 '39 50w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 101:202 D 6 '39 70w

"The writing of this important book in popular science was undertaken at the instance of the American Institute of Physics. . . Even without the bias conferred by authority, the book turns out to be an excellent one at its own level of discourse. It has very little to say about the philosophical issues so prominent in modern theoretical physics." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p10 S 10 '39 850w

"This is a book, by a professor who writes soundly and clearly, on how modern physics is being put to work. . . High-grade popular science."

+ New Yorker 15:78 S 23 '39 60w
Pratt p8 winter '40

"No book such as this could have been written before, for the science of physics has only recently shown the wide importance of its applications. Nor do I expect another presentation with comparable reliability, information, and human appeal to appear for a long time. It is a distinctive addition to the literature of modern science." A. H. Compton

+ R of Scientific Instruments 10:295 O '39 400w

Reviewed by John Riordan
Sat R of Lit 20:11 S 23 '39 220w

"Reliable and authoritative, Professor Harrison's book shows also a remarkable combination of imagination and appreciation of human interest. No one who desires to understand how we have reached our present high stage of technical development or what future developments may be expected, will fail to find this book of absorbing interest." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 S '39 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 35:183 N '39

HARROW, BENJAMIN. Biochemistry for medical, dental and college students. 383p il $3.75 Saunders

574.19 Biological chemistry 38-23177

"In this book the emphasis is on the application of biochemistry to clinical medicine, and it has been planned to cover more than the usual requirements of biochemistry courses for medical, dental, agricultural, and general college students. A short, carefully selected, and briefly annotated bibliography concludes each chapter." J Home Econ

"Professional biochemists and advanced students of the subject will find the new book an interesting and useful addition to their libraries.

HARROW, BENJAMIN—Continued
Beginning students using it as a text will have ample opportunity to confirm the statement quoted from the preface." H. C. Trimble
+ Am Chem Soc J 61:759 Mr '39 350w
J Home Econ 31:43 Ja '39 50w

HARROWER, MARY RACHEL. The psychologist at work; an introduction to experimental psychology. 184p il $1 Harper [5s Routledge]
150 Psychology, Physiological [38-9578]

In the belief that a general knowledge of modern psychology is part of the equipment of an educated person, the author has written this brief introduction to experimental psychology to show what the psychologist's problem is and how he goes to work to analyze everyday experiences and human behavior. Index.

"The author recognizes that the selection of topics and their mode of treatment have been largely dictated by her predilection for the Gestalt point of view. Evaluated from this purpose and point of view, the book can be commended for its selection of topics, and especially for the directness, simplicity, and clarity of its exposition. Naturally the book is of no great interest to the professional psychologist, with the exception that it might well be used as supplementary reading in introductory courses." H. A. Carr
+ — Am J Psychol 52:156 Ja '39 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 15 '38 10w

HART, ARCHIBALD. Twelve ways to build a vocabulary; with a foreword by Johnson O'Connor. 128p $1.25; school ed $1 Dutton
428.3 Vocabulary. English language—Idioms (W) 39-4691

Exercises on vocabulary building, designed to arouse curiosity about words and to encourage use of the dictionary.

Booklist 35:246 Ap 1 '39
Pratt p10 autumn '39
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 31 '39 170w
Wis Lib Bul 35:108 Je '39

HART, HAROLD. Invitation to fun; il. by Jesse Jacobs. 383p $1.98 Stokes
793.73 Puzzles. Amusements 39-25725

Omnibus volume containing over one hundred and fifty puzzles—picture puzzles, cross-words, intelligence tests, word teasers, etc.

"A first-class fun book, sure to please the most fastidious."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 60w
Wis Lib Bul 35:213 D '39

HART, MERWIN KIMBALL. America, look at Spain. 253p $2.50 Kenedy
946.08 Spain—Politics and government. Communism—Spain. Communism—U.S. 39-11073

"Mr. Hart, a non-Catholic New York lawyer and President of the New York State Economic Council, relates that in the summer of 1938 he grew suspicious of the voluminous propaganda in behalf of Loyalist Spain and visited Nationalist Spain in order to find the truth for himself. What he discovered corresponds with the accounts given by such men as Theo Rogers, Edward Knoblaugh and Professor Peers; and he has written his book to warn America of the way in which Communism is carrying on the process of infiltration in the United States." Cath World

Cath World 149:753 S '39 350w
Reviewed by H. R. Southworth
— Nation 148:677 Je 10 '39 1050w

HART, SCOTT. The moon is waning; il. by Edwin Megargee. ltd ed 134p $7.50 Derrydale 39-11811

"In a brief tale Mr. Hart lovingly evokes all the savor of the Virginia 'possum hunt. Through old Lon Braxton and his feeling for the chase in the dark of the night when the moon is waning and the beasts of the field are abroad at last on their little errands, the reader is made to see and to share a pastime that has become pretty much a full-time occupation to certain back country individuals in the South. How Lon proved to the meddling pastor the sanity and the wholesome appeal of background, is a distinct bid for the reader's indulgence while the author proceeds to ride a hobby." Boston Transcript

"The story, which is mildly reminiscent of McKinlay Kantor, is a bit on the amateurish side, though some of the scenes are well told and entirely authentic, and the hound lore is all right. It has evidently been the author's intent to make his hero, one Lon Braxton, a rough but lovable character; but Lon tends rather too definitely, for purposes of the modest tale, toward the Jeeter Lester type. The illustrations, by Edwin Megargee, are very good."

Books p16 Jl 23 '39 110w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 190w
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Jl 15 '39 150w

HARTHERN, ERNST, pseud. See Jacobson, E. L. H.

HARTLEY, DOROTHY. Irish holiday. 272p il map $2.50 McBride [7s 6d Drummond]
914.15 Ireland—Description and travel. Giraldus Cambrensis (Giraldus Barri) [39-27448]

With a copy of the seven-hundred-year-old Topography of Ireland by Giraldus Cambrensis, as guide, the author took a camping holiday trip thru Ireland, visiting in the main some of the less well-known sections of the country. Her search was for the picturesque, not the political, and her account of the trip is anecdotal, and interspersed with excerpts from Giraldus. Index.

Booklist 35:329 Je 1 '39
Books p10 Je 11 '39 250w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 90w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 3 '39 400w

"The author claims, and has a right to claim, for her book the favorable reception which is due to those who have enjoyed an adventure with others. The expert must therefore forgive her daring efforts to write in the Anglo-Irish dialect. There is little else of which he need complain. . . No doubt the book will stir many to imitate her example and see Ireland with the help of a car and tents or a caravan. It is no bad plan, for though Irish hotels are now earning a good reputation there are still parts of the country where hotels are few and far between, and perhaps it is just in those regions that the very essence of Ireland is most easily discerned." J. T. G.
+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 26 '38 270w

"Miss Hartley is learned, vivacious, inquisitive; she shows an informed interest in domestic arts and crafts, energy and a most impressive indifference to discomfort and even danger. Her descriptive passages are nice; the only pity is that she should be whimsical. More and more high-minded English people seem to be coming to Ireland, and no doubt it is for them that this book is written." Elizabeth Bowen
+ New Statesman & Nation 16:426 S 17 '38 150w

"A fresh and oddly informing book. . . What is delightful about 'Irish Holiday' comes from distinctive qualities in Dorothy Hartley's mind, her medieval scholarship which becomes really enlightening in a country where so much of the medieval world has survived, her interest in country arts and crafts, in hens and donkeys and geese, her real affection for the folk." Padraic Colum

+ N Y Times p2 Jl 9 '39 440w

"Irish Holiday is typical of one kind of book whose loss would not impoverish the world. Miss Hartley had an idea which provided the basis of what appears to have been an enjoyable, and perhaps to her instructive, holiday. . . But was it necessary to make the journey again on paper? And, if it was, was it desirable to make it so archly, so sentimentally, with so little useful information and so many conventional raptures? Irish Holiday carries a heavier ballast of synthetic and highly improbable Anglo-Irish than any book I can recall reading." Derek Verschoyle

— Spec 161:272 Ag 12 '38 210w

"Unconventionality has the advantage of taking her over untrodden ground. The places which she describes with most interest are off the ordinary holiday-maker's track. The drawings and photographs are equally fresh. . . She has also a keen ear for a good story particularly if it has a flavouring of magic."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p547 Ag 20 '38 230w

HARTLEY, LIVINGSTON. Our Maginot line; the defense of the Americas. 315p map $2.75 Carrick

355.0973 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Foreign policy 39-6655

The author reviews the United States' international relations and policy in view of the possibility and probability of another World war. He holds that we cannot be indifferent to the fate of France and Great Britain, and that it is necessary also to strengthen our positions in South America and the South seas if we would hold our own against Germany or Japan. Index.

"I find Mr. Livingston Hartley's title confusing and misleading. . . His discussion is diffuse, his abundant material poorly ordered, and his documentation spotty. . . On the other hand, Mr. Hartley's conviction that we should tie in the Western Hemisphere is sound and sensible, whether for peace or war." J. W. Thomason, Jr.

— Atlantic S '39 300w

Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39

"This is a serious and persuasive book by a writer who clearly understands the fundamental and close relationship between foreign and military policy. Unfortunately, like the little girl in the nursery rhyme, it is very good when it is good, but when it is bad it is, let us say, decidedly unconvincing. It is bad chiefly when the author strays into the strategical field; and when he does one recalls Maj. Gen. Ellison's indignant title to his work on the Gallipoli campaign—'The Perils of Amateur Strategy.'" G. F. Eliot

+ — Books p5 Mr 12 '39 1250w

Discussion by the author & G. F. Eliot
Books p23 Mr 26 '39 900w

Reviewed by A. L. Harris
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 350w
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 4 '39 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39

"To the many wholly sincere Americans who still regard recent and current events in Europe and the Orient with the traditional complacence of our countrymen in the past, 'Our Maginot Line' is recommended. The conclusions drawn by a reader may not be those drawn by the author, but 'Our Maginot Line' is an able presentation of one point of view." T. Q.

+ Commonweal 29:669 Ap 7 '39 220w
Foreign Affairs 17:810 Jl '39 100w

Reviewed by E. M. Earle
New Repub 99:106 My 31 '39 450w

"Like Mr. Mumford, Mr. Hartley is an alarmist; he sounds the tocsin of danger; but there the resemblance ends, for Mr. Hartley's hysteria is calm and deliberate—and sometimes dull. Yet the purpose which motivates this book is praiseworthy—the attempt 'to examine the more salient requirements for continued American security,' to invite thought and attention to the measures that we should take to insure that security before an imperiling emergency arrives. But the thesis on which this book is based seems, to this reviewer, to be faulty in broad outline and in some of its details." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 9 '39 1100w

Discussion by the author & H. W. Baldwin
N Y Times p19 My 7 '39 1400w

"Should be read by all non-ostrich citizens."

+ New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 30w

"The book sometimes presents a vigorous analysis of diplomatic and military affairs from the point of view chosen, but belongs rather to the sphere of alarmist discussion than statesmanlike comprehension."

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 31 '39 330w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE. Finding wisdom; chronicles of a school of today. (John Day bk) 147p il maps $3; text ed $2.40 Reynal

372 Avery Coonley school, Downers Grove, Illinois. Education—Experimental methods 38-29017

Description of the Avery Coonley school at Downers Grove, Illinois. Illustrated with photographs of the school grounds and building, the children at work or play, and of plays and pageants. Includes thirteen color plates representing work of children from five to thirteen.

Booklist 35:152 Ja 1 '39

"Miss Hartman is to be commended for the excellence of her text, as well as for the care with which she has chosen the many illustrations and the examples of the children's work. Especially has she made it possible to know the children themselves." J. L. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Ap 22 '39 500w

Reviewed by A. H. Horrall
El School J 39:709 My '39 700w

"A fine book. . . A moving argument for the 'progressive' methods of Dewey and his disciples."

+ New Repub 98:175 Mr 15 '39 80w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE. Machines and the men who made the world of industry. 278p il map $2.50 Macmillan

609 Machinery. Inventions (W) 39-25154

History of the great industrial changes of the last two hundred years, and the men who have stood back of the inventions which have revolutionized transportation, communication, and the manufacture of commercial products. For young readers. Index.

Booklist 36:136 D 1 '39

"Centered in the United States, it keeps the world in mind; it is not polemic, but strictly informative, and with so much information it is not dull. . . I like it because it brings out, as far as young children can be expected to understand, the adjustments machines made necessary in our ways of life and in our social relations, adjustments by no means complete." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 15 '39 360w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:394 N '39 100w
J Home Econ 31:716 D '39 50w

"This is a well-considered work. Naturally some of the material is in other volumes, but here we have it in its finest form, with significant interpretations by a true historian." Irene Smith

+ Library J 64:845 N 1 '39 50w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE—Continued
Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 64:1002 D 15 '39 50w
New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 40w
"Sound but heavy."
Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 190w
Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

HARTSHORNE, HUGH, ed. From school to college; a study of the transition experience, conducted by Lincoln B. Hale in cooperation with D. W. Bailey [and others] the statistical aspects of this study were carried out as projects 2 and 19 of the Conn. State dept. of educ. under the Works progress administration [pub. with the aid of Samuel B. Sneath memorial publication fund]. 446p $3.50 Yale univ. press [16s Oxford]

136.7354 Students. Adolescence 39-8490

"This report of an extensive study of what happened to 1,200 boys as they passed from secondary school into college, shows in concrete detail both the myriad problems of adjustment faced and the sources of failure and success in meeting these problems. . . Detailed investigation of precollege conditions in school, home, and community throws light on facts making for success and failure, and an elaborate exploration of behavior patterns of one hundred sample cases reveals the definitive habit patterns characteristic of those who achieved various levels of successful transition as measured by the scale of freshman performance. The findings are summarized both verbally and statistically." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by K. I. Brown
Christian Century 56:577 My 3 '39 550w
Reviewed by C. H. Brewer
Churchman 153:14 My 15 '39 350w
Reviewed by A. J. Brumbaugh
School R 47:707 N '39 450w

"The study is stimulating, and provocative, and should leave the average student counselor with a warning of the inadequacy of his present activities, but with the encouragement that here are the materials which he may use to fashion his own plan of future work." F. H. Turner
+ Survey 75:260 Ag '39 320w

HARVARD UNIVERSITY. Psychological laboratory. Explorations in personality. See Murray, H. A., and others

HARVEY, JEAN CHARLES. Sackcloth for banner; tr. by Lukin Barette. 262p $2.25 Macmillan (Toronto)

[39-15612]

"The story concerns Max Hubert, a youth who came to Quebec with ideals and aspirations, and was given an opportunity to prove them through the medium of an independent journal. Little by little he explores the field of artistic criticism and exhorts his readers to grasp at liberty of thought and conscience. But an article on the modern Christ brings on a deluge; eventually he has to give up his paper, and even his beloved is denied him by death." (Canadian Forum) The novel was first published in Canada in 1934 under the title Les Demi-Civilisés, and was banned by the Archbishop of Quebec. This edition, translated by M Lukin Barette, was published in Toronto.

"Harvey hits at the rich, but alas, too often on personal grounds rather than as products of a system. The historical background of the French-Canadian is vividly sketched in; but the economic background is missing. Nevertheless, that it carries weight is obvious from the concern it aroused in its French publication. And it is a gracefully presented statement of the present feeling of many thinking French-Canadians. As such, apart from its narrative interest, it commends itself to all those who welcome healthy criticism of French Canada from within its own borders." Helen Marsh
+ — Canadian Forum 18:348 F '39 550w

" 'Sackcloth for Banner' is, at least in its English translation, a novel of very little literary interest, having many of the characteristics of a penny-dreadful. . . It would be grossly unfair to judge of the style of the French original from the English translation, but one can at least make this inference: that if the style of the French is distinguished, it has inspired the translator to no emulation of its distinction. One is inclined to suspect that in style as well as matter, the original is jejune. One can also understand why the Cardinal of Quebec should have disapproved the book on moral grounds. . . It is in the field of social problems that his book has real merit and a great deal of interest—as a symptom of the changes which are belatedly coming over the French-speaking portion of our northern neighbor."
— + Commonweal 29:501 F 24 '39 600w

"When he finds his pen no longer needed for fiery polemics, Harvey may well turn out to be the realistic modern novelist for whom the Canadian scene has long been waiting. 'Sackcloth for Banner' shows abundantly that he has a poet's sensitivity to beauty wherever, in man or nature, it is to be found. His keen satiric observation is offset by reasonableness and his love of sincere and unaffected people is ingrainedly deep. Add, for good measure, that his writing, even in translation, has the gracious clarity peculiarly characteristic of classic French prose." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 8 '39 850w
Pratt p31 spring '39

HARWOOD, EDWARD CROSBY, and FRANCIS, BION HUBBARD. Life insurance from the buyer's point of view; including annuities, endowments, accident and health insurance. new omnibus ed 262p il $1 Blue ribbon bks; pa $1 Am. inst. for economic research

368 Insurance, Life

"The purpose of this volume is to make information available to the average man who buys life insurance, annuities, and health and accident insurance. Technical words and the more complex aspects of the subject have been avoided as far as practicable." (Pref) Index. Replaces a former book by the same authors entitled Insurance and Annuities from the Buyer's Point of View. "There have been ten editions of Insurance and Annuities and two or three of the original paper-bound abridgement Life Insurance from the Buyer's Point of View. Both of these publications are now out of print, and [the publishers] do not intend to reissue them, inasmuch as their texts are available, complete, in the new omnibus edition." (Publisher's note)

Boston Transcript p1 S 16 '39 50w
New Repub 100:139 S 6 '39 30w

"This sound and conservative manual, written in simple and non-technical language, should be a help to anyone that takes his life insurance seriously enough to read more than company advertisments." Maurice Taylor
+ Survey 76:28 Ja '40 360w

HASKELL, ARNOLD LIONEL. Balletomane's album; with 152 illustrations. 88p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Black, A. & C.]

792.8 Ballet

Reproductions of posed studio portraits, action pictures, and snapshots of the members of the Russian ballet, in rehearsals, on the stage, or on their trips abroad.

Reviewed by Margaret Lloyd
Christian Science Monitor p10 D 16 '39 120w

"A thoroughly gay and instructive collection at reasonable price." G. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 4 '39 120w

"This album of photographs is an improvement on some other collections of the kind. . . Pictures of rehearsal aboard ship, of dancers seeing the sights at a strange port like other travellers and sleeping exhausted in the train are revealing and often full of humour, and unlike some of the professional studies they require no apology for the absence of colour, lights, music, and the indescribable excitement of a great theatre."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p519 S 2 '39 200w

HASKELL, HENRY JOSEPH. The new deal in old Rome; how government in the ancient world tried to deal with modern problems. 269p maps $2.50 Knopf

937 Rome—Economic conditions. Rome—History. Rome—Social conditions

(W) 39-12576

In his preface the author says: "To prevent any misconception let me say that this book is neither a criticism nor a defence of the New Deal. It is an attempt to provide an objective survey of instances of government intervention in the ancient world. Many of these were so like experiments tried in the United States in recent years that they may fairly be classed as New Deal measures. I have tried to show what these experiments were, why they were tried, and how they worked. Making allowance for the differences between ancient and modern society, I have ventured to call attention to certain warning signals from the past." Bibliography. Index.

"The professional historian will not learn anything from this study, but he may be stimulated by the original point of view; others may well read it with pleasure and profit." A. E. R. Boak

+ — Am Econ R 29:575 S '39 320w

Booklist 35:361 Jl 1 '39

"Mr. Haskell's book will be read with eager interest even by those who can permit themselves an independent judgment of the events he recounts. And if all his readers follow his advice and proceed to the books he lists in his second appendix he will have deserved well of his country." Max Radin

+ Books p4 Je 4 '39 950w

"In a meditative spell the editor of the Kansas City Star must have asked himself: Is the New Deal really new? Unlike most self-questioners Mr. Haskell proceeded energetically to answer himself. This answer is embodied in his book, 'The New Deal in Old Rome,' which he clearly wrote with amusement, and relish and, undoubtedly, much amazed discovery. The results (as results usually are with books written with a lively spirit) are wholly worthwhile to the reader; the volume is informative and appropriate to the times in which, alas, we live." L. S. Wellstone

+ Boston Transcript p11 Je 16 '39 550w

Commonweal 30:363 Ag 4 '39 170w

New Repub 99:316 Jl 19 '39 40w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p14 My 21 '39 1250w

Pratt p20 winter '40

"The drawing of historical parellels is usually regarded by professional historians as beneath their dignity, and so is left to partisans or moralists who are apt to know little about either the old or the new. Mr. Haskell, editor of the Kansas City Star, has here shown how it ought to be done. He knows what he is talking about and he has no axe to grind; neither champions nor haters of the current New Deal will get much campaign ammunition out of what he truly defines as 'an objective survey of instances of government interference.'" Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 My 27 '39 1900w

"Mr. Haskell has written a volume which, however much or little one agrees with its conclusions, deserves and will well repay the attention of all who feel a serious interest in the world situation. . . The book is based upon a thorough acquaintance with the best of recent authorities on Roman history, and on the writings of Latin authors in the period under consideration. Consequently the information presented is neither new nor very startling, but this is the first time it has been put together so compactly for the benefit of the general public." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 21 '39 1150w

HASKINS, CARYL PARKER. Of ants and men. 244p il $2.75 Prentice-Hall

595.796 Ants. Psychology, Comparative

(W) 39-27494

"'Of Ants and Men' is not an elementary book. Assuming the reader has some knowledge of ant life, it goes on to a consideration of the main ant varieties today; ant physiology; the manner in which a city culture rises, develops, and dies: Communist and Fascist ant societies; war and slavery among the ants, and other problems. Throughout the book parallels are drawn, always with due restraint, between the social development of ants and of men." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 35:344 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by W. M. Murphy

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 8 '39 210w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 14 '39 600w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:v S '39 160w

"Dr. Haskins, a naturalist of great ability and fine gifts as a story teller, may be guilty of bad sociology and naïve economics, but his knowledge of ants is beyond reproach, and he has written a book crammed with fascinating information about their ways." Harold Ward

+ — New Repub 99:369 Ag 2 '39 330w

"Happily, Caryl P. Haskins, the brilliant and versatile author of the present volume, in addition to his accomplishments in physical and organic chemistry and in biophysics, is a qualified myrmecologist who has studied ants in the field and in the laboratory and is widely acquainted with the literature bearing upon them. Hence he brings a spirit of informed caution to his work that for the most part restrains him from expatiating too exuberantly on the social parallels." H. F. Schwartz

+ N Y Times p5 Je 4 '39 1300w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:86 Je 3 '39 450w

"It is a volume which I found myself compelled to read to the last page without a stop." D. C. Peattie

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Je 17 '39 700w

"Professor Haskins's book occupies a unique place in ant bibliography." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 My '39 1200w

HASSALL, CHRISTOPHER. Christ's comet; the story of a thirty years' journey that began and ended on the same day; a play in three acts. 151p $1.50 Harcourt [6s Heinemann]

822 Jesus Christ—Drama 39-7111

Drama in blank verse, chosen as the 1938 Canterbury Cathedral festival play. It is another version of the story of the fourth wise man, Artaban. Overcome by doubts of his own worthiness to look upon the Prince, he takes a different turn, and after wandering thru all the years of Christ's lifetime, ends at Golgotha.

"'Christ's Comet' is better poetry than its curiously harsh name suggests. It is done in blank verse which is often eloquent and sometimes attains great mystical intensity.

HASSALL, CHRISTOPHER—Continued
There is a good deal of evocative description and of effectively managed dramatic contrast. . . But there is a dearth of dramatic action. Too much is reported, too little enacted. Yet the play has genuine charm." T. H. B. R.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 130w

"To the many fine experimental groups that have been developing steadily since the advent of the Catholic Theatre Conference two years ago, 'Christ's Comet' will doubtless be [a] dramatically interesting script. . . . It is the stage searching for a feeling of eternity, and any college group that attempts the script is sure of a provocative and rewarding experience in the theatre. The play can be done with a simple arrangement of platforms and levels, depending as it does for atmosphere on ingenious lighting and superb playing. The lines are colorful and dramatic, the characters rich and varied." Emmet Lavery
+ Commonweal 29:555 Mr 10 '39 220w
Forum 101:240 Ap '39 20w

"Apart from the prose, a few lyrics put into the mouth of the Muleteer, and some heroic couplets spoken by the angel who appears above the Cross, the play is in blank verse. This varies in kind from the colloquial to the imaginative and, for the most part, does the work it is meant to do. It is flexible, lucid, and free from the diffuseness and involutions and descriptive facility that marred 'Devil's Dyke.'" Charles Powell
+ Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 8 '38 550w
Theatre Arts Mo 23:312 Ap '39 20w
Times [London] Lit Sup p237 Ap 2 '38 220w

HATCH, DUANE SPENCER. Further upward in rural India. 212p il $1.50 (4s 6d) Oxford 323.354 Sociology, Rural. India—Social conditions [39-11995]

"This book is a sequel to Up from Poverty, a book previously written by Dr. Hatch on the development of his Y.M.C.A. center at Martandam in South India. These two volumes give a graphic account of the organization and development of this center as an agency of village improvement, its spread to a number of other localities in southern India and Ceylon, its contact with government and other agencies, and the nature of the program itself." Am Soc R

"This book should prove of value in leadership training and program-making for missionary work among the retarded peoples, and doubtless will find ready use in the study of mission work by supporters back in the home lands. Teachers of rural sociology in the colleges will find it useful, and so will rural teachers of the elementary and high schools who wish to gain a grasp of what progressive education can do when really put to work." J. L. Hypes
+ Am Soc R 4:132 F '39 410w

"For anyone interested in the experiment this little book will repay study."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p511 Jl 30 '38 160w

HATCH, RICHARD WARREN. The curious lobster's island; il. by Marion Freeman Wakeman. 264p $2 Dodd 39-22443

The curious lobster of the author's earlier book (Book Review Digest, 1937) goes exploring with Mr Bear and Mr Badger for company and discovers an island, where the friends find lively adventures.

Reviewed by Vivian Lundberg
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 14 '39 70w
Cath World 150:376 D '39 50w

"Fun, good sense and the jolliest of adventures are to be found in Richard Warren Hatch's 'The Curious Lobster's Island.'" F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 13 '39 250w

"We recommend this book for reading aloud to enjoy its philosophy with others and we heartily applaud the pictures." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:383 N '39 150w

"This new book, The Curious Lobster's Island, is delightful reading, and delightful to look at are Marion Freeman Wakeman's drawings. I like this story even better than the first one." Irene Smith
+ Library J 64:840 N 1 '39 120w

"The first part of the book lacks the spontaneity and lightness of its predecessor. There is occasionally too much discussion, and Mr. Lobster's speeches of wisdom do not always keep to the humorous side. But once the exploration is well under way, the book regains the humor, adventurousness, and atmosphere of the sea of The Curious Lobster. Although it is not, on the whole, so good as that, it is still a good story, with genuine suspense and the inevitability of true humor." Alice Monroe
+ — Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 150w

"The author writes with imagination and humor. As Mr. Lobster, Mr. Bear and Mr. Badger decide to become explorers, as they react to danger and discomfort each in his own way, Mr. Hatch not only makes them amusing but shows that he understands human nature and what happens to it under strain and stress. There is a homely wisdom and a pithy philosophy in the Mr. Lobster stories which adults as well as children enjoy." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 8 '39 480w

"Amusing for everyone."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 200w

HATCH, WILLIAM HENRY PAINE. The principal uncial manuscripts of the New Testament. 34p 76pl $10 Univ. of Chicago press [50s Cambridge]
225.48 Bible. New Testament—Manuscripts, Greek. Manuscripts, Greek. Paleography, Greek 39-2415

"In splendid format—a foot high and nearly as wide—are presented photographic facsimiles of sample pages of seventy-six New Testament manuscripts. . . . On the page facing each facsimile a full technical description of the manuscript is given. Introductory chapters discuss a variety of matters important to students of manuscripts. The collection includes all the important codices, including, of course, the famous Vatican, Sinaitic and Alexandrine." (Christian Century) Indexes.

"The value of such a collection of facsimiles to all serious students of the New Testament text is obvious. For those who are not technical scholars in this field, it is a delight to the eye, a stimulus to the imagination, and a source of information about the materials upon which the textual scholars work."
+ Christian Century 56:158 F 1 '39 270w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 1 '39 180w

"For those who wish a general acquaintance with the uncial manuscripts of the New Testament, this will be a most useful book. . . The usefulness of the book for reference would be increased by a more complete general index, especially by the inclusion of the names of the manuscripts, instead of giving them only in a separate chronological list, and there, in some cases, only by symbol or number." J. M. Rife
+ — J Religion 19:300 Jl '39 250w

"Dr. Hatch has chosen his material with great care, partly as examples of the most artistic work of the ancient craftsmen, partly as examples needed by the student of paleography, illustrating the various types of writing throughout the centuries. All this is supplemented by an introduction, detailed description of the codices, and elaborate indexes, each worthy of the volume in which it stands. There is only one lack. Could not each reproduction have been faced with a transliteration in modern Greek type? This is commonly done in similar work and is a great help to the student." B. S. Easton

+ Living Church 100:608 Je 7 '39 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p207 Ap 8 '39 170w

HATHAWAY, MRS SIBYL MARY (COLLINGS). Maid of Sark; color pl. from paintings of Sark by J. M. W. Turner. 150p map $2.50 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century

39-27728

Romantic story of the island of Sark in 1565. A Breton ruffian attacks the inhabitants, kills some of them, burns their cottages, and proclaims himself lord of Sark. The island is saved by the courage and daring of a maid of Sark who escapes from the brigand and brings help to her remaining people. The author is the present feudal ruler of the island.

Booklist 36:44 O 1 '39

"It is a charming story, as Sark is a charming place. . . It is a telling evocation of a beautiful and unique corner of the world." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p4 S 10 '39 500w

Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 130w

"History and legend, as well as literary creation and some slight manipulation of chronological sequence, have gone to the making of it; but this lovely and distinguished little romance of the Sark Islanders could not have been what it is had it not been written by one of themselves, speaking their own unique, centuries-preserved Norman patois and steeped in their own unspoiled, sane culture." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 S 10 '39 700w

"The swiftly moving plot, the legends that Dame Hathaway has woven into her story and the charming illustrations by Mr. J. M. W. Turner all combine to make a most interesting and attractive book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 S 30 '39 100w

HAUCK, MRS LOUISE (PLATT) (PETER ASH, LOUISE LANDON, pseuds). Dear Deborah. 310p $2 Penn

39-23639

When a scheming classmate declares her intention of marrying Deborah's widowed father, Deborah leaves her home in the East, and accompanied only by a faithful old servant, goes to California. There she finds new friendships and love, new troubles also, but in solving one new problem an old one is solved, too.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p14 S 17 '39 150w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '39 140w

HAUSER, ERNST ALFRED. Colloidal phenomena; an introduction to the science of colloids. 294p il $3 (18s) McGraw

541.3452 Colloids 39-3396

"What the author set out to do and hopes to accomplish by this book is to acquaint the reader in as simple a manner as possible with the modern viewpoints in colloidal science and to show where and why they must differ from those so successfully applied in physicochemistry. . . The book is based on notes written by the author, which have been successfully used as text for regular classes in colloid chemistry and physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." (Pref) Indexes.

"This work by a recognized authority and successful practitioner of the art should find a place in almost every chemical and industrial library. . . The numerous diagrams are beautifully clear, but they are largely schematic and are not referred to actual examples or measurements." J. W. McBain

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:1935 Jl '39 400w

"The author has succeeded in keeping the reader aware of the reality of the subject of colloids by frequent reference to pertinent literature and by introducing in appropriate fashion the names of those responsible for major advances in the subject. For those who wish to acquaint themselves quickly with the essentials of colloid chemistry, 'Colloidal Phenomena' can be highly recommended." C. S. Fuller

+ Chem & Met Eng 46:373 Je '39 220w

"The book is highly recommended." R. A. Gortner

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:579 S 10 '39 750w

HAUSER, HEINRICH. Battle against time; a survey of the Germany of 1939 from the inside. 386p $3 Scribner

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Politics and government (W) 39-32966

Survey of Germany in the early months of 1939, made from inside Germany by a German who has recently come to this country. Partial contents: National Socialism: triumph and decay; From labor surplus to labor shortage; The four-year plan; Ley and his labor front; Blood and soil; Gearing up the Austrian economy; Anti-Semitism; The state youth; The mailed-fist of the Third Reich; Index.

Booklist 36:175 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Books p4 D 17 '39 750w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '40 280w

New Repub 101:269 D 20 '39 60w

"Mr. Hauser was in Germany last Summer, surveying conditions there for an American magazine for which he prepared a series of articles. His work suffers from a certain disjointedness, and the long quotations translated from German sources militate against its unity and cohesion, but it is filled with extremely valuable material." T. R. Ybarra

+ — N Y Times p3 D 10 '39 550w

New Yorker 15:122 D 16 '39 60w

"Heinrich Hauser, who is evidently an opponent of the Hitler regime, has risen above prejudice in this book and has produced a generally well balanced survey of many aspects of the new Germany. By way of introduction he has written a striking pen portrait of Berlin under the Nazis, in a chapter which epitomizes the Third Reich. . . The book is well worth reading for its insight into the condition of a people which has tasted despair." D. H. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 23 '39 350w

"The great merit of 'Battle Against Time' is the relatively objective manner in which it discusses Nazi Germany. To be sure, the author frequently shows an obvious dislike for Hitler and for the system he represents. Moreover, the statistics and other figures he gives, as well as the conclusions he draws from them, may need revision when the facts about contemporary Germany are more fully known. . . But most of his work deals with subjects concerning which it is easier to secure information of a reliable nature. . . This book is a clear and enlightening statement of conditions as they appear to have been in Germany just before the present war began. It gives what is no doubt as fair and accurate a picture of the National Socialist state as could be written at present."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 D 13 '39 650w

HAVILAND-TAYLOR, KATHARINE. See Taylor, K. H.

HAWES, ELIZABETH. Men can take it; il. by James Thurber. 275p $2 Random house

646 Clothing and dress. Fashion

(W) 39-15364

The author of Fashion is Spinach (Book Review Digest, 1938) tackles the matter of men's clothing. "Her argument is simply that men's clothing is uncomfortable, illogical and foolish and should be changed radically. She has a violent and yet convincing attack upon men who insist upon wearing stiff collars; she considers them not merely reactionary but dangerous to the commonweal, and she cites examples out of her own considerable experience. . . [She also] employs her style of gentle raillery to discuss such monstrosities as the attire of clergymen, judges and officers of the Army and Navy. And the clothes worn by the ordinary business man also come in for sharp criticism." (Books)

"It is a fascinating subject and there is much to be said on all sides—and Miss Hawes manages to say it in this rambling, discursive and sometimes highly informative book." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 Je 11 '39 600w

"Miss Hawes is bitingly amusing and has the unusual gift of being virtually unanswerable when she is most inconsistent. Although her knowledge of men's clothes has not extended to the wearing of them, her convictions are expressed with a there's-no-argument-about-it finality." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p3 Je 11 '39 800w

"'Men Can Take It' will have its reinforced binding tested by many conventional gentlemen this summer as they throw the book down; and fifty-five percent of the female population—herein castigated as spoiled and stupid creatures—will have hatchets out for Hawes. Altogether, a highly promising beginning for the men's style revolution Hawes humorously anticipates." Gould Cassal

+ Sat R of Lit 20:12 Je 10 '39 500w

Time 33:86 Je 12 '39 250w

HAWGOOD, JOHN ARKAS. Modern constitutions since 1787. 539p $5.50 Van Nostrand [16s Macmillan]

342.09 Constitutions. Constitutional history

[39-25265]

The author is reader in modern history in the University of Birmingham, England. He has attempted in this book to analyze every constitution made since 1787, and to place it in its historical setting. Bibliographies. Index.

"One can usually learn something from books on 'constitutions,' but one fails to find fundamentals in this well written volume. The bibliography 'is intended as a students', and not as a specialists', bibliography.' The author's characterization of his bibliography may be not inappropriately applied by political scientists to the volume itself." J. G. Heinberg

Am Pol Sci R 33:1125 D '39 290w

"Mr. Hawgood's book is vigorously written. It contains many striking phrases. And, even if it irritates some readers, it will, at any rate, serve as an incitement to more original thinking about the art of government than is usual in the universities of Great Britain and the United States." C. D. Burns

+ — Ethics 50:236 Ja '40 550w

"Mr. Hawgood, menaced by the opposite perils of encyclopædic dullness and readable superficiality, has inclined towards the latter alternative. There are many illuminating judgments, together with many of the witty remarks which sound so well in a lecture but look so flat in print. One looks in vain for some discussion of the ideas which people have had about Constitutions as well as of the Constitutions they have made, for without a background of ideas the actual Constitutions seem a mere catalogue." A. J. P. T.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 My 9 '39 360w

HAWKINS, DESMOND. Hawk among the sparrows. 289p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Longmans]

39-10520

The "hawk" in this story is Mr Kipter who comes as lodger to Uplands, the home of Mr Sparge, his ex-actress wife, and her niece, Ellen. Mrs Sparge sets her cap for the lodger and Ellen knows the beginnings of love, but in the end Mr Kipter, scapegoat for others' sins, escapes by a back window.

"Mr. Hawkins ridicules in minor key, his cruelty is leashed. This is in line with his restrained and fine-drawn prose, which, save for an occasional overdone metaphor, has no rough edges. . . One is discomfited rather than moved. There is none of the emotional undertow, whether pity or anger, which hotter ironists and more full-blooded material provoke. This is no doubt intentional. The result is intelligent, urbane and pungent comedy." A. H. Eckstein

+ — Books p16 Ap 2 '39 700w

"For a first offering, 'Hawk Among the Sparrows' does not lack interest. Indeed, the worst I can say is that Mr. Hawkins has written a good short story, based on the threadbare theme of the artist's relation to society, and unfortunately expanded to novel length." Otto Schoen-Rene

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 8 '39 230w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '39 250w

"Desmond Hawkins writes in a style that is carefully wrought and pellucid, but he has divorced himself from reality, and both his characters and his situations lack substance. One's interest is held only by the lambent prose with which the somewhat monotonously melodramatic plot is unfolded. But the fine writing does not compensate for the meretricious story or for characters that are moved like puppets."

— + Nation 148:680 Je 10 '39 110w

"Desmond Hawkins is a young English literary critic and this is his first novel. There is no doubt at all that he is an accomplished writer. Here he has chosen a theme of minor importance, and treated it with too much seriousness, with the result that his subtlety tends to be mere preciosity. But he says fine things finely." Michael Sayers

+ New Repub 98:353 Ap 26 '39 360w

"Hawk Among the Sparrows is too well written to be dismissed out of hand, and if the author has nothing much to say, he at least refrains from the psycho-sexual nonsense that his school of writing tends to promote. The real, perhaps the only, trouble about his book is that it overworks its material, and makes what might have been an admirable short story into a long-winded, second-class novel." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:250 F 18 '39 400w

"As a psychological study, this book takes high rank. As is true of most English writers, Mr. Hawkins's hand is capable both in technique and flow of narrative." R. C. Feld

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 2 '39 900w

"A neat psychological study, cold and intelligent."

New Yorker 15:85 Ap 8 '39 40w

"Mr. Hawkins plays one woman off against the other, precipitating, before he releases his hero from the toils of his own attitude, a scene of violent denunciation. It is in the contrasting types he presents, the simple, sly, and foolish adolescent girl, the sensuous, crafty woman, that he shows his skill. His book has freshness of approach and deftness of characterization, and progresses through its story with a nice economy of means. Mr. Hawkins will bear watching." A. L.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:19 Ap 15 '39 220w

"Hawk Among the Sparrows is a clever book about very little—but it is clever. It has devices and unexpected movements, and it keeps you bothered until the last page, when it leaves you dissatisfied, not to say out of temper." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 162:276 F 17 '39 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 360w
Time 33:79 Ap 10 '39 100w

"An interesting first novel—candid, amusing, and a little cruel."
Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 18 '39 700w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
Yale R n s 28:vi summer '39 140w

HAWKINS, RICHMOND LAURIN. Positivism in the United States (1853-1861). 243p il $3 Harvard univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

146 Positivism. Comte, Auguste. Edger, Henry 38-24877

"Dr. Hawkins, who is Associate Professor of French at Harvard, has now carried the story of the American fortunes of Positivism, which he began in Auguste Comte and the United States (1816-1853) [1936] to the outbreak of the Civil War. The present instalment, which deals mainly with the apostolate of Henry Edger in the remarkable village of Modern Times, is a bizarre, distressing, and amusing tale that has long needed an authoritative telling. Professor Hawkins prefaces it with a meticulous survey of the 'American Attitude towards Comte's Philosophy, Polity, and Religion (1853-1861)' with special attention to the British sources, including Harriet Martineau." J Philos

"This carefully documented study closes an important gap in our intellectual history and should be in the library of anyone interested in the development of American thought."
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 120w
J Philos 35:665 N 24 '38 450w

HAWKINS, SHEILA. Appleby John, the miller's lad [drawings in color by the author]. 93p $1.75 Harper [7s 6d Hamilton, H]

Appleby John was a simple English lad who was hired by a busy miller at the hiring fair. His exploits were so foolish that he lost his job, but got it back again because his sheer stupidity made the solemn miller laugh. Picture book age.

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39

"This picture book is sheer, simple nonsense, and small children will recognize it as such. The laughter of all the animals on the farm, as they join the Miller in his laughing, is contagious. The book has an unusual appearance. It is a book originally from England, and the pictures (as well as the text) reflect this. They have an English atmosphere, from the Hiring Fair on, and are full of the same humor that is in the story." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p12 S 17 '39 250w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Romantic cities of California; il. by E. H. Suydam. 456p $6 (21s) Appleton-Century

917.94 California—Description and travel. Cities and towns—California 39-27541

Historical and descriptive material on some thirty California cities, with their environs. Such famous spots as the Yosemite and the deserts are omitted, but the cities considered cover most of the state. Index.

Booklist 35:362 Jl 1 '39

"No history, the volume contains a surprising number of historical bonnes bouches; no cut-and-dried guide, it may nevertheless be used as one by the average visitor bent on hitting the high spots." J. H. Jackson
+ Books p28 N 26 '39 500w

"The book is packed with picturesque incident and circumstance which together make up a brightly colored and kaleidoscopic whole, hardly to be crowded into a single book, or, as the writer suggests, a single life." Anita Moffett
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 2 '39 1050w

"It is easy to imagine a tourist in California keeping this volume handy, and by reading its descriptive sections finding that he could get along without any other guide-book. A resident of California might well keep the volume on his desk for pleasant refreshment of memory and extension of knowledge. Written by a woman, the book generally preserves an agreeably feminine point of view." G. R. Stewart
+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 Jl 1 '39 240w

"The State has a history which though short has been full and turbulent, and in telling it Miss Hawthorne manages both to be entertaining and to avoid the dangerous trap of facetiousness. Her book is in fact an admirable guide to the country, ideal except perhaps for its size, and very pleasantly and lavishly illustrated."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p530 S 9 '39 180w

HAWTREY, RALPH GEORGE. A century of bank rate. 328p $4 (10s 6d) Longmans

332.11 Interest and usury. Bank of England. Banks and banking. Currency question 39-12944

The author describes his book as "a history of the practice of the Bank of England in employing its discount rate as an instrument of monetary regulation." "It begins with four chapters reviewing the history of bank rate in England and the reasons for the action taken from time to time as they are revealed not only in the testimony of participants but in the statistics of the period from 1844 onward, which are given in useful detail in appendices. There follows a chapter tracing the relation between bank rate and the price of consols, and then four more chapters discussing the theory of bank rate from various approaches, long-term and short-term rates, rate of interest and price level, bank-rate tradition in later years, and the sum of it all under the title 'past and future.'" (Am Econ R)

"Here is a stout-hearted person who still thinks bank rate is important enough to write a whole book about it, and a good book too." W. R. Burgess
+ Am Econ R 29:404 Je '39 800w

Reviewed by F. C. James
+ Ann Am Acad 204:221 Jl '39 550w

Reviewed by Dorothy Bacon
Boston Transcript p13 Jl 27 '39 550w

"For the most part Mr Hawtrey is content to let the facts of history speak for themselves. Only a third of his notable book is devoted to the author's own views."
+ Economist 133:660 D 24 '38 550w
Foreign Affairs 17:819 Jl '39 20w

"Nowhere else will the student find so detailed a chronology or so lucid an explanation as here; and historians, no less than theorists, will be grateful for this. Criticism, however, may be offered on one small point: the decline of the inland bill, which Mr. Hawtrey attributes to the development of branch banking about 1880, had actually set in much earlier." T. S. A.
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 20 '39 330w

"Except on points of relative detail, the theoretical chapters do not add a great deal to the expositions given by Mr. Hawtrey in previous books. What is new in his work is the careful historical section, in which the effects of rising and falling (as against absolutely high or low) bank rates are studied, both in themselves and in the light of the somewhat rare ex-

HAWTREY, R. G.—Continued
planations of policy given by the Bank of England itself. This factual survey is useful; and Mr. Hawtrey's interpolated comments and judgments are always interesting, and usually shrewd. As a whole, however, this part of the book is not easy to read, because most of it consists mainly of a recital of the actual statistics of movements in bank rate. Mr. Hawtrey will not convince the confirmed Keynsians that his emphasis is right; but many of his comments, especially in the section dealing with long-term interest rates, will give Mr. Keynes something to answer." G. D. H. Cole
+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:28 Ja 7 '39 650w

"Based on the statistical studies undertaken in preparation for three Alfred Marshall Lectures delivered at Cambridge last year, Mr. Hawtrey's latest book suffers from the handicap of an unattractive title and bears some traces of its eclectic origin. Immense masses of data occupy its central chapters, immense statistical tables, from which these have been selected for rearrangement, fill its last closely-printed twenty pages. The weary reader, flicking the pages to and fro for reference, longs for a time chart, for graphical presentation, even for a divorce into two volumes of evidence and conclusions. But sandwiched between these slabs of nutritious but unpalatable matter lies some admirable fare, and Mr. Hawtrey's generalisations and theoretical analyses are wonderfully strengthened by their preliminary barrage of facts." Honor Croome
+ — Spec 161:777 N 4 '38 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p806 D 17 '38 220w

HAXEY, SIMON. England's money lords: Tory M.P. [Eng title: Tory, M.P.]. 263p maps $2.50 Harrison-Hilton [7s 6d Gollancz]

329.942 Conservative party (Great Britain). Great Britain—Politics and government [39-24459]

"A study of the personnel of the Tory party and the opinions of leading Tories who have held the reins of government for eight years; its object is to show the true character of toryism or conservatism." Introd.

"The body of fact which is here collected is impressive. It shows the whereabouts of the goods of Tory M.P.s and it gives some very emphatic pointers to the material origin of their political policy. The facts might have been allowed to speak for themselves. But Mr Haxey accompanies them with a volume of commentary which seldom limits itself to the economical statement most appropriate to a statistical study, but overflows into the repetitions of inferences which are not always valid, a number of familiar and a few grossly inaccurate historical statements, and a mass of personal detail which is sometimes relevant."
— + Economist 136:567 S 23 '39 220w

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 28 '39 490w

Nation 150:106 Ja 27 '40 210w

Reviewed by George Catlin
Sat R of Lit 21:32 D 2 '39 850w

"Many of Mr. Haxey's readers will regret that an investigation, in itself important, of the personal associations between political power and economic power should have been conducted in so narrowly partisan a spirit."
Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 29 '39 220w

HAY, JOHN. Lincoln and the Civil war in the diaries and letters of John Hay; selected and with an introduction by Tyler Dennett. 348p $4 Dodd

973.7 Lincoln, Abraham. U.S.—History—Civil war—Sources (W) 39-2698

As one of the President's secretaries John Hay was very close to Lincoln during the entire period of the Civil war. From Hay's diaries and letters Mr Dennett has selected whatever throws light on Lincoln, on the war, and on the early politics of the Reconstruction. The pages are full of frank comments on personalities and on the war-time atmosphere of Washington. Indexes.

"The present volume is one of the most important books on Lincoln that have appeared in recent years. . . In 1908 this material was privately printed in part in a limited set of three ponderous volumes by the Hay family. The significance of the present volume is that the material, still in the possession of the family and known directly to very few persons, is now for the first time made available to the general reader." J. G. Randall
+ Am Hist R 45:175 O '39 750w

Booklist 35:221 Mr 1 '39

"Outside the family, nobody save Herndon ever saw Lincoln at closer range or more constantly than John Hay. Herndon knew him in the days when he was slowly and uncertainly rising to greatness—at first with a long way to go; Hay knew him when his unconscious greatness was fully attained. For four years the young man was with the President all day and often half the night. Their relations were on a plane of the frankest informality. . . If the book contains no great novelties it does offer an immense amount of colorful detail, amusing anecdote, and illuminating comment. . . Its addition to our knowledge of Lincoln and the Civil War are details, but they are enlightening details." Allan Nevins
+ Books p1 F 12 '39 2100w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Commonweal 29:526 Mr 3 '39 350w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 98:134 Mr 8 '39 700w

"There is little here that is new, little that will change or even qualify the accepted interpretation of Lincoln and the Civil War. . . Yet here and there are observations which have a freshness lacking in the more formal record, incidents forgotten or ignored, spontaneous reactions mercilessly preserved." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Times p3 F 12 '39 1050w

New Yorker 14:83 F 11 '39 10w

Pratt p25 autumn '39

Reviewed by Emanuel Hertz
Sat R of Lit 19:6 F 18 '39 1000w

"The volume is full of spontaneous paragraphs, sparkling letters and diary passages in which the impressions of a brilliant young man of literary instincts lose nothing of freshness through the writer's attention to phrase and form."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 1000w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 F 18 '39 200w

Time 33:69 F 13 '39 400w

HAY, SARA HENDERSON (MRS R. P. HOLDEN). This, my letter. 110p $2 Knopf

811

A volume of short lyrics—on such subjects as home, children, religion, etc.—by the author of Field of Honor (Book Review Digest, 1934).

"As in her first book, 'Field of Honor,' Miss Hay's best poems are those based on religious subjects or biblical references. The lyrics in the concluding pages of 'This, My Letter' have a beautiful simplicity, candor, homely tenderness, and an ironic insight that turns their edges sharply from the sentimental." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p16 O 8 '39 500w

"This Is The Most arresting book of poems to appear in America so far this year. For too long now the latest work of one of the most talented American women poets has been available only through the medium of current magazines." John Ritchey
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 4 '39 500w

"Will appeal to readers who like well done conventional comment in readily recognizable verse forms."
New Repub 100:278 O 11 '39 30w

"Technically competent and warmhearted poems, some of them clever, a few pointed and profound."
+ New Yorker 15:79 O 7 '39 20w

"This poet does not experiment with form. Her range in rhyme and meter is not great. She accepts certain conventions of statement. All of which does not greatly matter, because her individual touch is on her verse and in it the revelation of a fine and brave nature. Above all I like what I can only call the literacy of her work and its direct intelligibility." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 O 21 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 120w
Time 34:70 O 9 '39 500w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. The border trumpet. 306p $2 Little 39-16963

Story of a frontier army post in Arizona in the 1870s.

Booklist 36:10 S '39

"If you like army stories—and you should—this will give you a lift." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 Jl 16 '39 90w
Christian Century 56:826 Je 28 '39 30w

"In this novel Ernest Haycox has found himself at last. Never before has he written so carefully or so well. Not only is it by far the best of the baker's dozen Western tales he has published; it is among the most noteworthy half-dozen historical Westerns of the last decade." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 16 '39 200w

HAYES, MARJORIE. The little house on runners; with il. by George and Doris Hauman. 274p $2 Little
(W) 39-4489

Sequel to The Little House on Wheels (Book Review Digest, 1934). In this book the little house is put on runners and the children, their father, and Candy, their Negro maid, make a winter trip from Vermont to Boston. There they live in a boarding house on Franklin street, while Charles attends the Boston Latin school, and Lottie the Temple school, presided over by Bronson Alcott. The time is about a hundred years ago.

Booklist 35:278 Ap 15 '39

"This will be not only required but desired reading for a child of eight or ten living in Boston or within its immediate sphere of influence, and it should be at hand in a school library called on to furnish to children living anywhere something to show them what life in that city was like in 1833." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 My 7 '39 320w
Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 60w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 28 '39 160w
Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 170w

"The book gives a pleasant picture of Boston of an earlier day and child readers will enjoy particularly the account of the Brewster children and their young friend Edward Hale helping a runaway slave to escape by the Underground Railway. On the whole, however, the characterization is too slight to make the Brewster family and the others come to life." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 19 '39 270w
New Yorker 15:106 My 13 '39 80w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 30w

"Boys and girls will read the story tensely to the last page, when the trip, in the summer, is made back to the farm in the little Vermont town."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 160w

HAYNE, COE SMITH. Cry dance. 255p map $2 Harper
39-9059

The theme of this novel is the treatment of the modern western Indian by the white man. There is a love story between two young white students in Southwestern university, and a tale of friendship between the hero, an Indian, and the girl, Maren Hagerthorn, whose sense of justice is outraged by the land-grabbing of settlers and business men.

"The author is a penetrating observer of Indian character in relation to modern environment, and conveys his ideas in the framework of a story which is enlightening as well as dramatic." Lisle Bell
+ Books p16 Ap 16 '39 100w
Reviewed by C. C. Walcutt
Boston Transcript p1 My 20 '39 170w

"As a novel, the book leaves much to be desired; situations seem made to order, and characters are conventional, while solutions are dragged in by the heels. But it is a fine plea for justice to mistreated Indians, and the portrayals of the Indians and their way of life are very well done." K. C. K.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 My 16 '39 550w

"Mr. Hayne obviously knows his subject and feels strongly concerning it. He is bitter—and justly so—about the plight of the Sierra Indians. . . But his grave theme is inadequately matched by the story through which he has endeavored to express it. There are good scenes . . . but the plot persists in remaining stereotyped and none of the characters, with the exception of Yosemite, attains much independent existence. Even Yosemite, though true enough to his Indian heritage, suffers at times from the author's uncritical admiration." Margaret Wallace
— + N Y Times p19 Ap 23 '39 480w

HAYNES, FREDERICK EMORY. The American prison system. 377p $4 McGraw 365 Prisons—U.S. 39-7917

"The purpose of this book is to describe the American prison system as it exists today—the different types of institutions, their administration, their problems, and the methods used. The development of prison architecture is traced and a number of new types of correctional institutions are described. In a final chapter the author shows how the use of probation and parole, and the use of farms and camps, are already doing away with the cell prison stereotype which has been almost exclusively characteristic of American prisons." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Jay Beck
Ann Am Acad 207:261 Ja '40 500w

"The book is a thoroughgoing and lucid account of what is noteworthy in more than 4,000 penal and correctional institutions. Moreover, it is a scholarly discussion of all essential elements of prison life. The conclusion, however, that the 'prison without walls,' meaning the developments of probation and parole, is an approach to the abolition of the whole prison system is, I am afraid, rather premature." Rustem Vambery
+ — Nation 149:473 O 28 '39 320w
Reviewed by H. E. Jensen
Social Forces 18:290 D '39 300w

"Just as correct diagnosis must precede wise therapy, so careful clinical observation must come before sound diagnosis. This simple rule of the modern physician indicates the value of Professor Haynes' book—a value far greater than that of many more original and more scholarly treatises." J. N. Ulman
+ Survey 75:293 S '39 360w

HAYNES, GEORGE HENRY. The Senate of the United States; its history and practice. 2v 567;571-1118p il $8.50 Houghton

328.73 U.S. Congress. Senate 38-38772

This comprehensive and scholarly treatise covers every phase of Senatorial practice—powers, rules, procedures, privileges, relation to the President, etc. Index at end of volume two.

Reviewed by E. McC. Sait
Am Hist R 45:423 Ja '40 550w

"What does criticism come to? It indicates that the work is not perfect, and hints that it may not be—as certainly it does not pretend to be—the last word on the broader issues of American politics. It must not be allowed to obscure the fact that Professor Haynes' book is a monumental achievement of sustained and painstaking scholarship. In the whole history of American political science, it has few rivals among institutional studies of its kind. For anything comparable, one has to turn to a few treatises like Warren's The Supreme Court in United States History and Sharfman's The Interstate Commerce Commission." James Hart
+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:497 Je '39 750w

Reviewed by T. H. Skinner
Ann Am Acad 204:209 Jl '39 1000w

"The work is, essentially, historic as to its scope, intensely interesting as a record, and enlightening in its broad view." F. L. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 15 '38 450w

Foreign Affairs 17:633 Ap '39 20w

Reviewed by Claude Pepper
Harvard Law R 52:1026 Ap '39 750w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski
Nation 148:384 Ap 1 '39 550w

"The work rests upon long, painstaking and accurate research, and is documented with meticulous care. It is not likely to be superseded soon, if ever; doubtless it will long remain as the great, authoritative treatise on the subject, in the manner chosen. Every person who pretends to think about and discuss business in Washington in which the Senate or Senators are concerned will do well to read it with care and to ponder the precedents herein set forth with scholarly precision and as a rule with good temper. Only when Mr. Haynes departs from the austere operation of citing and quoting documents does he betray any underlying emotions." C. A. Beard
+ — New Repub 98:26 F 8 '39 850w

Reviewed by C. A. Berdahl
Pol Sci Q 54:297 Je '39 650w

"Despite its scope and its excessively factual character, the work is not dull. Mr. Haynes has a feel for the humorous and the picturesque. He has filtered the facts through a sympathetic and trained intelligence." Lindsay Rogers
+ Sat R of Lit 19:19 F 4 '39 650w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Social Educ 3:507 O '39 400w

HAYNES, WILLIAMS. Chemical pioneers; the founders of the American chemical industry. v 1 288p il $2.50 Van Nostrand

926.6 Chemists. Chemical industries (39-17461)

Short biographies of John Winthrop, Jr.; George D. Rosengarten; Martin Kalbfleisch; Alexander Cochrane; James Jay Mapes; Eugene R. Grasselli; George T. Lewis; Lucien C. Warner; Edward Mallinckrodt; August Klipstein; E. C. Klipstein; Martin Dennis; Jacob Hasslacher; John F. Queeny; Frank S. Washburn; Herbert H. Dow. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"The book is well written and the details are effectively portrayed. . . There is a happy combination of the business and personal life of each pioneer. Anyone interested in the background of the American chemical industry should not fail to read this book. The example set by strong, shrewd, tenacious leaders supplies an inspiring motto for our present situation." W. N. Watson
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:478 Jl 20 '39 300w
New Repub 102:30 Ja 1 '40 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:36 Jl '39

HAYS, ARTHUR GARFIELD. Democracy works. 334p $3 Random house

309.173 Democracy. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-27319

An American liberal writes in defense of the American democratic system and voices a plea—not for communism or fascism, but for more democracy to solve the evils in our economic and social life. Index.

"The book should be read by those interested in observing the practical results of a democratic regime. In his broad humanitarian outlook over the American scene, Mr. Hays compels both admiration and respect. Whatever doctrinal criticisms left- or right-wingers may bring against him, all would agree that his writing breathes something of the noble liberal temper that is typified by Mill. Certainly we could all wish that democracy always worked as Mr. Hays would have it work." Leslie Lipson
+ — Ann Am Acad 205:175 S '39 550w
Booklist 35:284 My 1 '39

"Among the many defenses of democracy that are appearing in these days, the latest book by Arthur Garfield Hays is distinctive for its constructive attitude and breadth of outlook. Where too many of the volunteers for the cause seem nervous and overly excitable, this veteran of a hundred fights for civil liberties is calmly confident." E. S. Bates
+ Books p4 Ap 9 '39 850w

Reviewed by W. E. Greening
Canadian Forum 19:98 Je '39 550w
Christian Century 56:857 Jl 5 '39 170w

"It is a fact-filled book, well documented, invaluable to those who are thinking, writing or speaking of the issues of the day. Yet at the same time it is an intensely human document. The engaging tolerant personality of the author pervades even those chapters where he discusses such apparently dry matters as government income and spending." McAlister Coleman
+ Churchman 153:17 My 1 '39 280w

"Mr. Hays has furnished a delightful discussion of our past, present and possible future. While it attempts to be unbiased, it is evidently not intended to be deeply penetrative or philosophically analytical. The author's marvelous facility of expression and his constant resort to illustration and colorful phrases will hold a reader's attention throughout. It is a book that can be read and appreciated by the coal miner, the bank clerk or the capitalist." M. I. Hart
+ Commonweal 30:49 My 5 '39 480w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:6 My '39 650w
Foreign Affairs 17:811 Jl '39 50w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
Nation 148:566 My 13 '39 850w

Reviewed by O. G. Villard
Nation 149:102 Jl 22 '39 180w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p5 Je 4 '39 800w
New Yorker 15:87 Ap 8 '39 30w

"This book should be an admirable antidote for the jitters which seem to have overcome so many of our more thoughtful people. It is not, and clearly Mr. Hays had no intention of trying to make it, a profound analysis of contemporary society. Even as a series of common-sense reflections on some current problems, however, it suffers from the neglect of one very obvious factor—population. Mr. Hays is, one hopes, quite right in assuming that for some time to come our irrational, unsystematic economy (it is certainly not 'pure' capitalism) can continue to work. But if the experts on population are right, and we are faced with a stationary or slowly declining population by 1960, we are likely to be obliged to make major adjustments he does not clearly contemplate in this book." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Ap 8 '39 800w

HAYTER, EDITH FLETCHER. Retail selling simplified; a manual of essentials; with a foreword by Ernest A. Lawton. 129p $1.25 Harper

658.8 Salesmen and salesmanship. Retail trade (W) 39-22455

In an informal, chatty style the author presents those fundamentals of retail selling which she has taught in her position as training supervisor of R. H. Macy and company, New York department store, and in classes in salesmanship at the New Rochelle high school of adult education.

Booklist 36:128 D 1 '39

Management R 28:332 S '39 70w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. B is for Betsy; il. by [the author]. 159p $2 Harcourt

(W) 39-6264

Description in simple narrative form of the experiences of a little American girl during her first year of school and her summer vacation at her grandfather's farm.

Booklist 35:278 Ap 15 '39

"Every day little events, told in very large, well leaded type, with pictures about everything, these daily doings are those of little children anywhere that good public schools flourish in little American cities. The advantages of putting so young a story into such large, clear type are obvious; so are those of putting a picture wherever anything happens." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 9 '39 470w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p13 Je 29 '39 40w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 24 '39 300w

Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 10w

"The story is filled with the day-by-day activities in and out of school, and should interest the third graders for whom it is intended. Black and white illustrations by the author are very appealing." Marian Herr

+ Library J 64:244 Mr 15 '39 70w

"The story is told simply and naturally, with drawings to illustrate each incident. The joy children find in stories is of two kinds, the delight of marvelous adventure in fairy tale lands and pleasure in the recognition of the familiar. Little girls see themselves in Betsy. . . This is a pleasing addition to the list of realistic stories for the 6 to 7 year olds and one that will be useful for the beginners in reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 16 '39 370w

New Yorker 15:105 My 13 '39 30w

Wis Lib Bul 35:115 Je '39

HAZELWOOD, LOLA. Discovering the lands of the Bible. 184p maps $1 Meth. bk.

268.62 Vacation schools, Religious—Textbooks. Bible. Whole—Study and teaching 39-21186

Textbook for juniors in vacation church schools. The scheme is a journey to Palestine and the Bible lands, worked out by maps, travel folders, and handicraft.

"The material is thoroughly and skillfully organized for the guidance of the teacher as well as the pupils."

+ Christian Century 56:904 Jl 19 '39 40w

Churchman 153:34 S 1 '39 50w

HEAGNEY, HAROLD JEROME. Blockade runner. 188p il $1.50 Longmans

Tabb, John Bannister—Fiction 39-30333

Based on the life of John Bannister Tabb, this story for boys describes Father Tabb's adventures on the famous Confederate blockade runner, the Robert E. Lee, during the Civil war. Written from the Southern point of view.

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 30w

Cath World 150:381 D '39 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 31:132 D 1 '39 10w

HEARD, GERALD. Pain, sex and time; a new outlook on evolution and the future of man. 301p $3 Harper [10s 6d Cassell]

901 Civilization—Philosophy. Evolution. Intellect 39-23842

"This book deals with the past and future evolution of man. It shows how mankind has developed, and comes to the conclusion that no further physical or technical evolution is probable. Therefore, the only future development of man is in the realm of the psyche. The evolution of consciousness is traced in the people of Egypt, the Hebrews, the Greeks, and the Middle Ages. The latter part of the book is a discussion of techniques for bringing about evolution of the psyche, for while all previous evolution has been unconscious on man's part this new development must be sought deliberately." Churchman

Reviewed by H. A. Overstreet
Books p20 O 15 '39 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 153:19 O 1 '39 200w

"In spite of the difficulty of the subject, Mr. Heard so mixes entertainment with instruction that to read him is as pleasant as it is easy. There may be two opinions as to the validity of his ideas; there can be only one as to the sincerity which informs them and the brilliance with which they are set forth. Unfortunately, the excitement attendant upon the reading of Mr. Heard produces a cold fit of reaction when the reading is finished." C. E. M. Joad

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:526 O 14 '39 1500w

"Fine for readers of Alexis Carrel."
New Yorker 15:80 S 9 '39 30w

"Whether [his] thesis deserves consideration or not depends entirely upon the reader's theory of human nature. No one can doubt that the book is erudite, but for all of that, and in spite of the tolerance with which liberal opinion should receive heterodoxy, it may be erudite nonsense." R. B.

Sat R of Lit 20:21 O 7 '39 230w

"Those who were moved, and perhaps startled, by the trumpet tone of warning sounded two years ago by Mr. Gerald Heard in the 'Third Morality' will be ready to welcome, at this poignantly opportune moment, what is authoritatively described as a companion volume to that work. The later book is, however, a pendant to the earlier in the sense of constituting a development and supplementation rather than a restatement."

Times [London] Lit Sup p603 O 21 '39 800w

HEATH, ERIC. Murder in the museum. 272p $2 Hillman-Curl

39-10519

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p11 My 28 '39 100w

"Fair to middling is the best rating we can give this book." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 My 14 '39 110w

— Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 27 '39 40w

HEATON, KENNETH LEWIS, and WEEDON, VIVIAN. The failing student; a study of academic failure and the implication for education. 286p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge]

378 Students. Grading and marking (students). Educational psychology 39-20833

The report of a cooperative investigation carried on by faculty and students in four Michigan institutions: two liberal-arts colleges, a teachers' college, and a land-grant college. The study demonstrates that the failing student is not a type, that academic failure is based on more factors than mental inability and lack of industry. Index.

"The reviewer commends the volume to administrative officers, faculty members, and counselors at both the secondary-school and the college levels because it presents techniques that may be employed for diagnostic purposes, aids in understanding the problems of students entering colleges from the secondary schools, and points the way to the development of instructional and guidance procedures that will make for success on the part of many students who each year receive the brand of failure." A. J. Brumbaugh

+ School R 47:708 N '39 490w

"This report is a distinct contribution to educational literature in its field. It should prove most thought provoking to instructors who have perhaps forgotten that their main responsibility is to guide the growth and development of their students. It should also prove suggestive as to scope and methodology to other administrative or personnel officers who wish to improve the institutional program in their own institutions." W. B. Featherstone

+ Social Educ 4:74 Ja '40 360w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET. Death on the door mat. 277p $2 Doubleday

39-25147

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 90w

"There are so many killers and potential killers in it that one has difficulty in keeping track of them all. Neither is it easy to straighten out the international complications in the case. But there is no lack of excitement and action." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Ag 20 '39 200w

Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 26 '39 40w

HECHT, BEN. A book of miracles. 465p $2.75 Viking

(W) 39-14613

Seven tales of miracles, some of them allegories, others satirical. "Like the old Miracle Plays [the book] is concerned with the relations between God and man and visitations between heaven and earth. And as with them, God is confined within the meager limits of mortal understanding while his angels are all too human." (N Y Times)

"Mr. Hecht's miracles are brightly illuminated, performed in clouds of sensationally colored and scented smoke and steam, explosive, exciting—and superb entertainment." William Soskin

+ Books p5 Je 18 '39 1250w

"Mr. Hecht has an active and fertile brain. His sympathies are on the right side. There are many amusing, and some clever, remarks in these 465 pages. There are moments of pathos, indignation and disgust. And yet the volume does not quite come off." H. M. Jones

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 24 '39 800w

Reviewed by Patricia Palmer

Canadian Forum 19:227 O '39 500w

"Except for the long and rather rambling Adventures of Professor Emmett, which tells of an entomologist whose soul was translated into the body of an ant and who managed to warn the President of an approaching termite invasion, you will find every one of the stories in the volume more than worth your time, unless you are one of those mistaken realists who don't like stories of the supernatural even when they are good. These are mature, refreshing additions to Mr. Hecht's already distinguished list of contributions to our imaginative fiction." L. B. Salomon

+ — Nation 148:733 Je 24 '39 600w

New Repub 99:288 Jl 12 '39 50w

"Something of a miracle itself, this book is probably the most amazing work of fiction of the year. For boldness of contrivance, swashbuckling invective, mordacious diatribe and derision by way of manhandling hogs, hypocrites and scoundrels all in an unpredictable prose that crackles (or at times merely cackles) above the storm—these seven extended parables attain the height of something or other. It's not only an amazing book; it's an amazingly good book." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 Je 18 '39 800w

"If you omit 'Remember Thy Creator' and 'The Little Candle,' I think you have a book superior to anything Mr. Hecht has done in the past. In addition to the wit and invention, there is a new vein of seriousness. The satire may be boisterous, but it is also cutting, and never, as in his previous books, merely negative. It doesn't always come off, but then Mr. Hecht is trying something harder than he's ever attempted before." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:89 Je 17 '39 1000w

"When Mr. Hecht is bitter, he can be admirable; but when he tries to be satiric, he can be admired only by readers who have forgotten Anatole France and never read Voltaire." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 20:14 Je 17 '39 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 900w

Time 33:78 Je 19 '39 310w

HEDGES, JOSEPH EDWARD. Commercial banking and the stock market before 1863. 164p pa $1.50 Johns Hopkins

332.1 Banks and banking—U.S. New York stock exchange 38-16853

Study of the origin and early development of commercial banking, of the stock market, and of the relationship which grew up between them, particularly as expressed thru what has been designated the call loan mechanism. Index.

"The author discusses adequately the development of the stock market up to 1863 as part of the general economic growth of the nation. . . Perhaps the most interesting portion of the book is the author's comparison of the English and American systems of stock market trading and his conclusion that the practice of daily settlement in the United States rather than the English system of term settlement is responsible for the explosive connection between the call market and stock market loans." N. M. Becker

+ Am Econ R 28:587 S '38 430w

"While the author has treated his subject in detail and has drawn the bulk of his data from primary sources, it is doubtful if his main conclusions add significantly to the material in Margaret Myers's The New York Money Market, Volume I, especially chapters II, VI, and VII. With so much to be done in the field of early American financial and banking history it seems too bad to have any duplication of effort." H. F. Williamson

Am Hist R 45:236 O '39 180w

Eng Hist R 54:190 Ja '39 360w

HEGNER, ROBERT WILLIAM. Big fleas have little fleas; or, Who's who among the protozoa. 285p il $3 Wood

593.1 Protozoa. Protozoa, Pathogenic 38-30770

"Under a more or less facetious title, Dr. Hegner, head of the department of medical zoology at Johns Hopkins University and expert on tropical diseases, has written a very important book on protozoa. . . Particularly interesting to the general reader are the portions of the book dealing with parasites which produce diseases in man . . . amebic dysentery . . . sleeping sickness and malaria. . . Humorous verses, parodies on well-known poems or jingles, complete the various chapters and sum up their contents in an unusual and entertaining way." Scientific Bk Club R

"The printing and make-up are excellent and the book can be recommended both for the information it contains and the delightful style in which it is written. Before this time one could hardly have imagined that such a difficult subject could be made so entertaining." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 29:797 Jl '39 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '39

"If the book is considered by some a curious puzzle of light humor and weighty science, it will as surely be rated by others as a record of firm fact, emphasized by witty similes and metaphors from the current scene and from literature. . . Dr. Hegner has had much experience both in the laboratory and the field. He gives interesting reports on work done in the Philippines both with human beings and animals."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 9:3 O '38 360w

HEIDEN, KONRAD. The new inquisition; tr. by Heinz Norden [introd. by Hendrik Willem Van Loon]. (Starling press bk) 188p $1.50, pa 50c Modern age; Alliance bk. corp.

296 Jews—Persecutions. Jews in Germany (W) 39-27389

"Brief, fact-filled, moving account of one of the most appalling chapters in modern history—the story of the Nazis' repressive measures since the pogrom of November 9, 1938." New Yorker

Booklist 35:309 My 15 '39

"Like no other book, this one makes the Nazi terror real to those who do not know it at first hand. It should, and no doubt will, reach tens of thousands—and they will not sleep easily thereafter." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 50:8 My '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:165 O '39 10w

Reviewed by Karl Billinger

Living Age 356:499 Jl '39 110w

"For two reasons one cannot read this short book at one sitting. First, one has to pause before continuing to look at a reality which the most fearful imagination could not invent; second, one is forced to think. The lessons to be drawn are manifold and of far-reaching consequences. The introduction says rightly: 'Konrad Heiden has rendered us a signal service by writing this book, which may well contain his own death sentence. . . He has deserved well of the American people.' " Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 148:567 My 13 '39 430w

New Repub 99:82 My 24 '39 40w

"He assures his readers that he 'has drawn from and reproduced only such reports as he has conscientiously investigated in every respect, and for which he believes he can vouch.' His book is horrible. And it ought to be widely and thoughtfully read."

N Y Times p9 Jl 23 '39 340w

New Yorker 15:124 Ap 29 '39 30w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 My 27 '39 320w

HEILNER, VAN CAMPEN. A book on duck shooting; paintings and drawings by Lynn Bogue Hunt. 540p maps $7.50 Penn

799.248 Duck shooting 40-463

Personal experiences of a well-known duck hunter, who has shot ducks and geese from one end of North America to the other, and in England, Scotland, and on the continent of Europe. The appendix contains useful material for duck hunters: Flight speed of birds, by M. T. Cooke; The waterfowl flyways of North America, by F. C. Lincoln; Modern decoys, by Joel Barber; Boats and blinds, by H. L. Betten; Sunspots and cycles of abundance in waterfowl, by R. E. De Lury; Marshes of the past and future, by Clarence Cottam and W. S. Bourn; Duck clubs; Guide for duck shooters; Bibliography; Index.

"A fascinating, irresistible volume, replete with photographs by himself and color plates by the famous wildlife artist, Lynn Bogue Hunt." Wilbur Forrest

+ Books p16 O 29 '39 350w

Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '39 220w

HEILPERIN, MICHAEL ANGELO. International monetary economics. 281p $4.20 (15s) Longmans

332.4 Money. Currency question. Foreign exchange 39-24099

"The scope of this book covers an investigation of the structure of international monetary relations, an inquiry into the nature of monetary internationalism and into the conditions which make its continued existence possible, and an investigation of the consequences of its destruction and replacement by nationalistic monetary policies." (Pref) The author was at the time of writing assistant professor at the Graduate Institute of International Studies, Geneva.

Reviewed by L. L. Watkins

Am Econ R 29:872 D '39 850w

Reviewed by N. L. Silverstein

Am Pol Sci R 33:723 Ag '39 350w

Economist 135:662 Je 17 '39 180w

Foreign Affairs 18:371 Ja '40 10w

"From a perusal of Dr. Heilperin's solid, forceful, well-written but by no means easy book, one personal inference can be drawn with crystal clarity; he is no strategist. In economic debate he conducts himself on the lines which have grown familiar in recent European politics; he prepares for conflict with a powerful adversary by knocking on the head a substantial proportion of his own allies. . . Altogether this is a notable contribution to the literature of international economic affairs, and a fine example of what can be done by a combination of academic strictness of logic and practical shrewdness of judgement." Honor Croome

+ Spec 162:1137 Je 30 '39 650w

"Dr. Heilperin's contribution to the abundant current literature on monetary problems can be recommended without reservation to all students of economics. . . Dr. Heilperin holds many original views on the subject and challenges many widely held beliefs."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p346 Je 10 '39 160w

HEIM, ARNOLD ALBERT, and GANSSER, AUGUST. The throne of the gods. 235p il map $5 (21s) Macmillan

915.42 Himalaya mountains. Mountaineering

A popular account of a Swiss expedition to the Himalayas. Dr Heim, the leader and author of the greater part of the book, is a Swiss geologist and the purpose of the expedition was mainly geological. However, to quote from his preface: "In the present work, which we hope to make thoroughly comprehensible to the general reader, little is said about our geological researches, a detailed account of which is reserved for a study now in course of preparation, to be first published in English. Here we recount our experiences and discoveries, the lives of men, animals, and plants, not only among the crags and glaciers of the high mountains, but also on the way thither."

Booklist 36:212 F 1 '40

HEIM, A. A., and GANSSER, A.—Continued

"Any one who enjoys reading about mountain exploration should follow with keen attention the whole story of the Swiss party's exploit and the information which these explorers have to impart. But the 220 photographic plates which illustrate this imposing volume comprise a collection so varied, so illuminating, and so beautiful, as to set the book apart even among the almost always well-illustrated books from the high mountains." John Patton

+ Books p26 D 10 '39 550w

"'The Throne of the Gods,' although very, very prosy in tone, is packed with interesting facts about the flora, fauna and geodesy of the southeastern Himalayas. The translation is a careless one, considering that it was done by two such experts as Eden and Cedar Paul. Many German rhythms have been left unchanged. At the end are appended copious notes on the photographic equipment used, the kind of supplies, and a summary of the scientific findings.' An indispensable adventurer's book, indeed."

+ — Boston Transcript p15 N 24 '39 230w

"The narrative is spoilt in the telling. It is a bald recital of facts, which are hammered home in one short sentence after another, with a rhythm as monotonous as that of a pile-driver. As far as I was concerned, it became unendurable; but, fortunately, there were the photographs, 220 of them, and nearly all superb. I should add, in fairness to the authors, that the book has been translated by others from the German." Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 13 '40 200w

"The two explorers seem to have enjoyed the Himalayas, and they communicate their enjoyment to the reader. Their impressions of the people are superficial, but lively and friendly; and the many magnificent photographs illustrate the character of the people and their homes as happily as the magnificent scenery among which they dwell." P. J. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '39 240w

"The lack of emphasis on the personal achievement of the members of the expedition is characteristic of the narrative, which on the whole is simple, direct and impersonal to the point of dryness. Dr. Heim does not appear in the least impressed that a party of two Europeans, with a minimum of equipment, very little money, and no aid or even encouragement to speak of from local British authorities (whose indifference appears to have amused rather than annoyed these Swiss visitors) should have carried out an epic program of exploration and scientific observation." Edward Cushing

+ N Y Times p6 D 3 '39 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p656 N 11 '39 600w

HEISER, VICTOR GEORGE. You're the doctor. 300p $2.50 Norton [8s 6d Cape, J]

613 Hygiene (W) 39-27449

"'Health,' says Dr Heiser, 'is something definite and vibrant, not merely freedom from disease.' To keep the body machine in good running order it is as important to see one's doctor from time to time as it is to see the dentist. However, he goes on to explain that, barring certain danger signals and accident, once a person has grasped the fundamentals of keeping well, he can, if he will, make the responsibility his own. In other words, you can be your own doctor." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"The advice given is generally sound. The book is interestingly written and will probably appeal to the public. . . Some of the statements lack exactness." M. P. Ravenel

+ — Am J Pub Health 29:1265 N '39 350w

Booklist 35:325 Je 1 '39

"Good, modern, chatty household medicine this. Indigestible in large doses because too full of vitamins and such, but tasty when properly diluted." E. L. Keyes

+ Commonweal 30:167 Je 2 '39 420w

"Anecdote and strange fact accompany his homely rules. Personal adventures give color and conviction to his arguments. If it is possible to beguile a large public into observing the laws of hygiene, this is the book to do the trick." M. L. Elting

+ Forum 101:v Je '39 130w

New Repub 99:168 Je 14 '39 40w

"This is one of the best books of medical essays that have been published; the author has an engaging style, and he writes by the light of many years' common sense to describe the primary reasons for ill-health. . . Every man is self indulgent at heart, and however well you find yourself this book will do you some good, if only the reading of Dr. Heiser's anecdotes. It is amusing, and as Dr. Heiser is a great man, authoritative, but it does not venture to presume. He writes well, very observantly, but does not let his own personality obtrude. If you aren't well, it will save you several guineas, and if you are you will learn something healthful, and then you can hand it on to your aunt. Dr. Heiser inspires great confidence in the patient."

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:530 O 14 '39 150w

"The book can be recommended to the non-medical public as a useful and pleasant discussion of topics connected with health." Saul Jarcho

+ N Y Times p4 My 14 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:92 My 6 '39 20w

Pratt p13 summer '39

"Shoes, houses, beds, and a 'merry heart' are important to our individual well-being, as water and milk supplies are to that of a community, and on all of these and much more, Dr. Heiser discourses always sensibly, often amusingly. But what gives his book outstanding charm in the family of 'doctor books' is the manner in which Dr. Heiser uses his great reservoir of associated material provided by his unique opportunities for observation. In an effortless, almost rambling style, he wanders about in his storehouse of memories, producing incidents that give color and conviction to a vitamin or a vital statistic. . . Here then is a book about health that belongs not on the first aid shelf, but on the library table." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 My 6 '39 500w

"While there have been many books written recently to tell the American people how to live and what to eat, we venture the opinion that Dr. Heiser, world-physician in a very real sense, has produced the sanest, chattiest and most informative of the long list now available."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 Je '39 370w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 5 '39 600w

Reviewed by I. V. Hiscock

Survey 75:264 Ag '39 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p9 Ja 6 '40 250w

HELLMAN, LILLIAN. The little foxes; a play in three acts. 159p $2 Random house

812 (W) 39-27320

Bitter play about a crucial period in the lives of a Southern industrial family, when in order to pave the way for a money-making plant, the three Hubbards stop at nothing, in their efforts to lay hands on some necessary cash.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 13:632 My '39

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p11 Jl 23 '39 100w

"As brilliant and incisive a play as the current season is apt to produce. . . It is Lillian Hellman's detachment, together with her very lovely portraits of Birdie and Alexandra, that makes it clear her pen has not been dipped in unadulterated gall. But the play suggests one question: whether any of the persons in it has really been affected by the action." T. H. B. Robertson

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 130w

"Technically this is a better play than Miss Hellman's Children's Hour. It offers keen interest but not much pleasure." E. V. Wyatt Cath World 149:87 Ap '39 600w (Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch
Nation 148:244 F 25 '39 600w

Dramatic criticism by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 98:279 Ap 12 '39 750w

"If Miss Hellman's play seems slightly overplotted, and occasionally melodramatic, it has the advantages of sharp observation, and incisive character drawing. The exposition of the plot is superbly managed, and the action stems directly from the characters as they reveal themselves to make an absorbing drama." John Anderson
+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ap 29 '39 140w

HELMREICH, ERNST CHRISTIAN. The diplomacy of the Balkan wars, 1912-1913. 523p $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

949.6 Balkan states—History 39-150

"A fundamental contribution to our knowledge of the background of the World War, by an assistant professor of history and government in Bowdoin College. To no small extent the author has relied on unpublished archival material and on information obtained in personal interviews with several of the statesmen whose policy he discusses." Foreign Affairs

---

"The author, obviously, was well equipped for his task. He not only has used the well-known documentary collections, memoirs, biographies, and monographs so much used by students of the origins of the World War, but he has read important materials in Italian, Russian, and Bulgarian, particularly the little known 'Report of the Bulgarian Parliamentary Commission of 1918.' In addition, he has exploited the War Archives at Vienna and has interviewed some fifty participants in Balkan affairs. After collecting his sources, he has subjected his raw material to penetrating criticism and finally produced a skilfully organized, well-written book." C. P. Higby
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:542 Je '39 300w

Reviewed by R. C. Binkley
Ann Am Acad 206:181 N '39 280w
Foreign Affairs 17:631 Ap '39 50w

"Mr. Helmreich has written a most useful book. Nevertheless, it is not without faults. . . A serious criticism is that somehow Mr. Helmreich lets the Great Powers elude him. . . It seems a pity that Mr. Helmreich did not take another dozen or even two dozen pages to place the Balkan problems more clearly in their European perspective." B. E. Schmitt
+ — Pol Sci Q 54:448 S '39 1000w

HEMPEL, EDWARD HENRY. The economics of chemical industries. 259p $3 Wiley [15s Chapman]

338.4 Chemical industries 39-2047

"It is the purpose of this book to familiarize the readers and especially students with the characteristic background and the economics common to the American chemical industries. . . Its main aim is to demonstrate what has been done so far in chemical economics, and it describes the dangerous as well as the practical and useful economic policies which should be understood by those who actually are or hope to be dependent on the industry." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. W. Bass
Ind & Eng Chem 17:295 Ap 20 '39 400w
Pratt p9 autumn '39

HEMPEL, EDWARD HENRY. Industrial political economy; the fundamentals. 454p $3.50 Pitman

330.9 Economics. Industry and state. Industrial laws and legislation 39-7746

"This . . . economic history traces from Greece to modern England the development of forms of enterprise, industrial relations, and governmental attitude toward business." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

"When the author chooses to comment, he over-simplifies, straddles, and pontificates platitudes. And this is to say nothing of the vast amount of erroneous inference that might be drawn from such a hapless concatenation of roughly chronological comment and quotation. I am sorry, but I know of no really useful function that this book may perform." Harvey Pinney
— Am Pol Sci R 33:731 Ag '39 210w

Reviewed by G. E. McLaughlin
Ann Am Acad 205:193 S '39 320w

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:315 N '39

HENAO, JESUS MARIA, and ARRUBLA, GERARDO. History of Colombia; tr. and ed. by J. Fred Rippy. (Inter-American historical ser) 578p maps $5 Univ. of N.C. press

986 Colombia—History 38-23982

"A translation by Professor J. Fred Rippy of the most complete and scholarly history of Colombia. The narrative comes down to the 1920's." (Foreign Affairs) Bibliography. Index.

"While the translation follows the original closely for the most part and is generally excellent, the passages omitted by the translator include some of the most characteristic details, such as anecdotes, tropical flowers of rhetoric, and expressions of devout Roman Catholicism. The reviewer agrees with Professor Rippy that the original was too long, but he is inclined to think that it would have been better either to make a thorough revision of it (especially by condensing the disproportionately long section on the wars of independence) or else to reproduce the Colombian self-portrait with the utmost fidelity, wart and all. Perhaps neither of these alternatives was practicable; and even as it stands, the book is a valuable addition to the literature in English on Latin America." A. P. Whitaker
+ — Am Hist R 44:1015 Jl '39 360w

Reviewed by A. P. Whitaker
Ann Am Acad 204:182 Jl '39 250w

"Dr. Rippy has performed a praiseworthy effort in compressing, reducing and changing where necessary to make the volume a readable survey of the historical evolution of Colombia. . . The present volume may be recommended for the reader anxious to become familiar with the broad sweep of one of the most interesting of the South American states. For the first time, an adequate volume is available in English which reflects the viewpoint and opinions of two excellently equipped Colombian historians who tell the story of their own people for their own fellow countrymen." Richard Pattee
+ Commonweal 29:166 D 2 '38 290w
Foreign Affairs 17:450 Ja '39 20w

"Despite condensation, the translation into English, characterized by an easy and flowing style, still remains a formidable tome. It is not for casual readers; thorough perusal of its contents requires a deep interest in the ups and downs of Colombia's colorful record, such as is usually found only in serious students." T. R. Ybarra
+ — N Y Times p9 Jl 9 '39 650w

Reviewed by R. R. Hill
Pol Sci Q 54:634 D '39 600w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
Yale R n s 29:395 winter '40 500w

HENDERSON, CHARLES, and PALMER, CHARLES. How to sing for money; the art and business of singing popular songs professionally. 369p $3.95 Putnam, George P.

784.9 Singing and voice culture. Music as a profession. Radio broadcasting
(W) 39-32444

A good deal of practical advice, set forth in semi-humorous tones, for the singers of popular songs, over the radio, on the vaudeville stage, and in musical-comedy films.

"This is not a manual of voice culture but a string of detailed directions for putting it over, written in the swift patter of the studios but not with the tongue in the cheek. The popular song is a major industry; Mr. Henderson and his ghost take it seriously, however smartly they talk."
Books p42 N 12 '39 250w

" 'How to Sing for Money' is more than competent. It is a masterpiece of its kind, unique in its field. If you're a professional singer, especially of popular songs in any medium—radio, stage, or what not—this book is indispensable." Roy Lamson, Jr.
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '39 230w

HENDERSON, DAVID KENNEDY. Psychopathic states. 178p $2 Norton

616.8 Psychology, Pathological. Personality, Disorders of 39-3562

This book is an outgrowth of a series of Salmon memorial lectures. The greater portion of the book is devoted to an attempt to define as clearly as possible the term psychopath, and to classify the various types of psychopathic states. This section is illustrated with a collection of case histories. The final section of the book deals with the problem of rehabilitation of the psychopath. The author is professor of psychiatry in the University of Edinburgh and physician-superintendent of the Royal Edinburgh Hospital for nervous and mental disorders. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. S. Plant
Am Soc R 4:758 O '39 140w

Reviewed by Robert Fleming, M.D.
Boston Transcript p11 Jl 7 '39 600w

"Every phase of this work is scholarly and well constructed. The historical discussion is thorough, and the review of the earlier definitions of the term is more than adequate." Livingston Welch
+ N Y Times p15 F 26 '39 440w

"The facts are dependable and the interpretations are reasonable."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Mr '39 100w

"Quite aside from the author's professional acumen the book is packed with common sense observations that bear upon the possibility of better social control." William Healy, M.D.
+ Survey 75:228 Jl '39 330w

HENDERSON, EDWIN BANCROFT. The Negro in sports. 371p il $2 Associated pubs.

796 Negro athletes. Sports. Negroes—Biography (W) 39-29452

Survey of the American Negro in athletics, both amateur and professional. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 36:169 Ja 1 '40
Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 20w
Christian Century 56:1410 N 15 '39 20w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus and the river. 128p il $1.50 Bobbs

39-30184

"Augustus was ten; he lived on a shantyboat that might go anywhere and generally did, because there was always the Mississippi going somewhere and when wild geese began to fly they put ideas into Pop's head. . . The shantyboat took Pop's family south on the Mississippi to the place where the brown stream of the Missouri joined in, and when ice began to glitter on black branches it was well on its way to Kentucky, where the South begins." Books

Booklist 36:179 Ja 1 '40

"The story has genuine river spirit. I can't say it all happened, but it might. On the Mississippi, as the author says, 'always there's something new to see hidden down below the next bend.' " M. L. Becker
+ Books p22 N 12 '39 300w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 40w

"Rarely does an author both write and draw equally well. We recommend Augustus."
+ Cath World 150:377 D '39 80w

"The author has drawn with pencil and in words a typical boy whose presence gives spontaneity and zest to this engaging book. That he is so successful in giving a sense of the riverman's graphic speech without sacrificing grammatical construction is an achievement." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:41 Ja '40 160w

"More local color in character and dialogue, and more sustained excitement than in many children's books. Illustrations large and funny."
+ New Repub 101:237 D 13 '39 30w

"This is a lusty, exciting tale of the ever-fascinating river for youngsters not quite old enough to read 'Huckleberry Finn,' yet who prefer a more masculine introduction to that life than Charlie May Simon has written in 'Teeney Gay.' The author has caught the homely flavor of the vernacular without having to resort to dialect, and he has illustrated his story with boldly effective drawings, as humorous as the text, and equally descriptive of the background." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p34 N 12 '39 250w
Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 30w

HENDERSON, WILLIAM OTTO. The Zollverein. 375p maps $4.50 Macmillan [18s Cambridge]

337.0943 Zollverein [39-11016]

"A hundred years have yielded a vast literature on the subject of the German Zollverein. But this literature is widely scattered and much of it deals with special periods or special phases or is merely incidental to more general historical and economic writings. Dr. Henderson has added little to previous findings except some side-lights from archives in Vienna and London. He has, however, integrated his findings and those of his predecessors into a clear, well-organized, interesting history of the Zollverein. This has been accomplished without over-simplification. The story of the Zollverein is skillfully interwoven with that of other economic, political, and diplomatic developments; the interaction between these and the Zollverein is brought out at each stage; and the place of the Zollverein among the various factors making for the economic progress of Germany, its unification, and the establishment of the empire, is judicially evaluated." Am Econ R

"This volume will take its place as the standard work in English on the subject." P. S. Peirce
+ Am Econ R 29:593 S '39 250w

"At long last we have in English a detailed history of the Zollverein, well written, cautiously appraised. The book is perhaps a little short on figures, as it is probably long on diplomatic details. Statistical evidence on domestic and foreign market penetration would have been particularly welcome, although for ordinary purposes enough is available in Dawson and in Clapham." E. A. J. Johnson
+ Ann Am Acad 206:206 N '39 390w

HENDRICK, BURTON JESSE. Statesmen of the lost cause: Jefferson Davis and his cabinet. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 452p il $3.75 Little

973.7 Confederate states of America. Statesmen, American. U.S.—History—Civil war
(W) 39-28981

A history of the Confederacy behind the lines of the manoeuvers and policies of statesmen and politicians: Jefferson Davis, Alexander H. Stephens, Judah P. Benjamin, James Murray Mason, John Slidell. Bibliography. Index.

"As a study in personalities, Mr. Hendrick's book deserves a high rating. He is a fine biographer and well deserves the reputation he has both for thorough research and for his ability to bring the dead to life. . . This, then, may rightly be called a monumental contribution to a subject inexhaustible in its interest and its importance to Americans. It does not allow its fine scholarship to be a burden, but it is readable, informative, and provocative." Herschel Brickell

\+ Atlantic Ja '40 500w

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

"Mr. Hendrick, whose talent lies largely in biography, has presented his case in terms of personalities. This approach is one that lends interest to the subject, but it is one that, at the same time, gives a deceptive simplicity to problems that are highly complex." H. S. Commager

\+ — Books p7 N 26 '39 1850w

"The relations among Davis and his cabinet, the cabinet and the diplomats, are shown more vividly and amply than ever before. But the sketches themselves, though amiable and intelligent, are lacking in penetrating insight and revealing observation. The characterizations are competent, but far from brilliant. The style also, while pleasant and readable, relies too largely on over-wrought descriptive passages and on exclamation points to introduce color and emphasis into the narrative. A recurrent insensitivity in choice of words, a preference for the vaguely picturesque over the exact . . . becomes somewhat disturbing." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

\+ — Boston Transcript p5 D 30 '39 700w

"A most notable book." C. W. T.

\+ Cath World 150:503 Ja '40 430w

"There is no new material here, but bringing together old material from many sources makes an intensely interesting book."

\+ Christian Century 56:1511 D 6 '39 420w

"This volume deals not with the military leaders such as Lee, Jackson, Stuart, et al, but with the men who occupied positions of political and civic leadership in the south, before, during and after the war. As a publisher's product it bears notable excellence and as an author's product it has decided literary merit and should commend itself to searchers for the truth wherever they are found." T. F. Opie

\+ Churchman 154:21 Ja 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor
Commonweal 31:290 Ja 19 '40 350w

"This is both a fascinating and a needed book; its author shows himself a more than able historian and biographer. Had he not three times won a Pulitzer Prize, it would not be necessary to call attention to defects of style and even of grammar." James Orrick

\+ — Nation 150:51 Ja 13 '40 700w

"It will take more evidence than Mr. Hendrick has here summoned successfully to challenge the belief that the ultimate cause of the Confederacy's downfall was the superior resources of the North—plus the abler statesmanship, not of the Union Cabinet, but of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Hendrick, none the less, has given us a book we have long needed. Here, for the first time and in one place, has been assembled all the important information concerning the lesser known figures of the Confederate South. . . For these biographies, as well as for his full examination of Confederate diplomacy abroad, we are in Mr. Hendrick's debt." Hamilton Basso

— + New Repub 102:185 F 5 '40 700w

"In general the book may be relied upon and will give the public a new point of view of what was going on behind the scenes of the great drama of the Civil War, and will be read with interest by historians for many suggestive interpretations. If a reviewer may intrude himself on the scene I may add that for me, personally, it has proved the most interesting of those books by Mr. Hendrick which I have read." J. T. Adams

\+ — N Y Times p5 D 3 '39 950w

New Yorker 15:119 D 2 '39 40w

"There are minor misstrokes on the part of Mr. Hendrick. The book as a whole is a splendidly executed succession of fascinating studies." D. S. Freeman

\+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 D 2 '39 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 1200w

Time 34:84 N 27 '39 700w

HENDRICK, IVES. Facts and theories of psychoanalysis. 2d ed rev and enl 384p $3 Knopf

131.346 Psychoanalysis 39-31937

"A survey of the field of psychoanalysis, intended for the interested layman. First published in 1934 and now revised and enlarged by two new chapters." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:200 Ja 15 '40

"The original edition five years ago was welcomed as a definitive statement of psychoanalytic theory and practice, the first to be written by an American psychoanalyst and, in the reviewer's opinion, the best that has yet been written by any psychoanalyst. In this revised edition there are some statistics regarding therapeutic results which will interest the skeptical and those who believe in numbers; an excellent chapter has been added on the psychological investigation of organic disease. Another new chapter is on the organization and education of psychoanalysts in this country. The book is better than it was, and it was already excellent." Karl Menninger

\+ New Repub 102:57 Ja 8 '40 80w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Black John of Halfaday creek. 305p $2 Doubleday

39-20722

Western story.

"Mr. Hendryx appears to have joined up a number of shorter pieces to make this story, or else he just sees Black John that way. At any rate, he achieves plenty of classic unity and good fun to boot." Will Cuppy

\+ Books p9 Jl 23 '39 150w

"The episodes and exploits narrated (they do not make a continuous story, though Black John figures in all of them) are told in outlaws' lingo (profanity and gutter words included), but they are vastly diverting, and shrewd, burly Black John is as lovable a scoundrel as you are likely to find in a book." G. W. H.

\+ N Y Times p16 S 3 '39 250w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Edge of beyond. 276p $2 Doubleday

39-32489

Tale of adventure and romance in the Yukon. Corporal Downey is one of the characters.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p26 N 26 '39 100w

"The tang and grip of the far frozen North are in this new novel by the veteran James B. Hendryx, who has made the Yukon Territory his special province in fiction, and it is one of the best in his long list of thirty books." G. W. H.

\+ N Y Times p14 D 17 '39 200w

HENNEPIN, LOUIS. Description of Louisiana newly discovered to the southwest of New France by order of the king; tr. from the original ed. by Marion E. Cross; with an introd. by Grace Lee Nute; pub. for the Minn. soc. of the Colonial dames of America. 190p maps $3.50 Univ. of Minn. [16s Oxford]

917.7 Mississippi valley. Indians of North America—Social life and customs. Louisiana—Description and travel 38-38693

Father Hennepin's narrative was published in Paris in 1683 but remained untranslated into English till 1880. That translation is now difficult to obtain so that the present one again makes available this important source book. The name Louisiana in Father Hennepin's day embraced the entire Mississippi valley and his journey took him thru its upper reaches. A section on the manners and customs of the Indians is included. Index.

Booklist 35:171 Ja 15 '39

"For all people living in that region this is the most important book in their older history."

+ Books p13 Je 11 '39 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p22 Mr 5 '39 80w

Wis Lib Bul 35:12 Ja '39

HENRY, HARRIET. Shake down the stars. 318p $2.50 Dutton

39-9399

Story of a charming, but possessive mother, whose obedient young daughter finally had her eyes opened to her mother's deceit by a very understanding husband. The scene is New York and Santo Domingo.

"A well contrived and sharply dramatic study, it adds another feather to Miss Henry's fictional cap." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 Ap 9 '39 310w

"If you like your light fiction with a dash of malicious humor and a thought more penetrating than the average you should like this story." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 16 '39 220w

"Written brightly, with some feeling for sharp character contrast, 'Shake down the Stars' seldom dips below the surface, content with its obvious role of light entertainment." G. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:31 Ap 29 '39 170w

"While the final episodes are obviously contrived, the familiar theme of romance and youthful courage arrayed against unreasoning parental control is cleverly handled."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 16 '39 350w

HENRY, NELSON BOLLINGER, and KERWIN, JEROME GREGORY. Schools and city government. 104p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press [7s Cambridge]

379.15 School administration and organization. Public schools—U.S. 38-35509

A study of school and municipal relationships in cities of 50,000 or more population by two University of Chicago professors. Contents: The legal basis of school and city relationships; The selection of boards of education; Administrative services to schools by municipal offices; Municipal services in relation to school property; Municipal control of the school budget; Cooperative procedures in functional areas; Index.

"The findings may be regarded as an important contribution to a field which has received comparatively little attention from political scientists." Harold Zink

+ Am Pol Sci R 32:1200 D '38 260w

"The contribution of the study lies in two areas. First, it provides an excellent summary of various legal and structural arrangements for the control and administration of public education on the local level. . . Second, the study presents a number of illustrations of the manner in which school and municipal officials have achieved co-operation in various areas of common concern—public health, recreational facilities, and the like. The foregoing contributions of the investigation, however, are incidental. The document is mainly concerned with stating the case for placing education under the control and administration of local government. In doing so, it commits some of the errors of the advocate." J. K. Norton

+ — Ann Am Acad 202:222 Mr '39 500w

"In spite of the fact that this comparison of fiscally independent and fiscally dependent cities may not rest on observations which are, to any great degree, scientific, the book performs a real service in analyzing the problem, in critically evaluating previous studies, in presenting a picture of the legal basis of school control in cities with populations of more than fifty thousand, in pointing out the need of cooperation between school and municipal authorities, and in showing the ominous extent to which politics of the bad sort have entered into the administration of schools with all known types of administrative control." M. G. Neale

+ School R 47:149 F '39 1200w

"On the whole, the book is a popular presentation of the subject containing a goodly quantity of facts presented for the most part in expository rather than in tabular form. It reads easily and gives promise of having a fairly good consumption by professional administrators as well as by the laity." A. D. Simpson

+ Survey 75:356 N '39 450w

HENRY E. HUNTINGTON LIBRARY AND ART GALLERY, SAN MARINO, CALIFORNIA. American fiction. See Wright, L. H.

HENRY E. HUNTINGTON LIBRARY AND ART GALLERY, SAN MARINO, CALIFORNIA. Catalogue of William Blake's drawings and paintings in the Library, by C. H. Collins Baker. 42p 24pl $2.25 Huntington lib. [12s 6d Oxford]

741 Blake, William 38-32807

"The Huntington collection of Blake paintings and drawings is given a handsome collotype reproduction in this volume. Included are nineteen illustrations to works of Milton, principally Paradise Lost. The pages of text contain comprehensive descriptions of the plates. The volume will be of interest to students whose access to the originals is likely to be difficult." Library Q

Reviewed by L. C. Wroth

Books p13 Ja 1 '39 210w

Library Q 9:126 Ja '39 60w

"As these drawings have never been well known, and since their disappearance over the western horizon were almost lost to view, the current publication provides a rare opportunity for students." Philip Brooks

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 22 '39 550w

HERBERT, CLARA WELLS. Personnel administration in public libraries; with a chapter by Althea H. Warren and Lora A. Roden. 190p $2.25 A.L.A.

023 Library administration (W) 39-27542

This book contains "some observations on bringing together and building up a highly qualified staff, with the conditions necessary for its effective and happy functioning." (Foreword) Partial contents: Executives, major and minor; Democracy in the library; Graded systems and classified services; Selection and appointment of staff; Working conditions; In-service training; Promotions; Welfare activities; Libraries and civil service; Certification; Bibliography; Code of ethics for librarians. Index.

Booklist 35:357 Jl 1 '39

"This monograph is an important addition to the meager literature of library administration. . . Miss Herbert's study is the first full-length treatment of the many and varied problems of personnel management in American public libraries. As such, it is a competent treatment of the general field. It is natural that a detailed study of this kind should emphasize the personnel problems of large and medium-size public libraries. Nevertheless, much of the material presented is readily adaptable to the needs of small public libraries and also to libraries of other types." C. B. Joeckel

+ Library J 64:746 O 1 '39 700w

Pratt p5 autumn '39

HERBERT, FREDERICK HUGH. The revolt of Henry. 311p $2 Putnam

39-21786

Henry Bleeker was probably the mildest, kindest man who had ever been henpecked. For twenty years he had put up with his selfish, mean-spirited Mildred, until at forty-six he revolted. His departure and subsequent happy life with Sheila was a great relief to his many friends.

"A lively turning-worm treat." Lisle Bell

+ Books p11 Ag 27 '39 400w

"Mr. Herbert knows how to be amusing, but his revelation of what can go on behind the scenes in an unhappy household is searing. It's a nicely rounded plot, but the book leaves a wry taste. Not one of these people is really admirable." Olga Owens

+ — Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 160w

"The story is told in readable and realistic style, with the detail of Henry's life at home, with his poker-playing cronies and in the store faithfully reported. The most illuminating angle on Mildred is that Henry always refers to her as 'she.' Interest in his long-overdue revolt against 'her' holds the reader to the end." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p16 S 3 '39 360w

Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 2 '39 250w

HERBST, JOSEPHINE (MRS JOHN HERRMANN). Rope of gold. 429p $2.50 Harcourt

39-5403

Miss Herbst's third novel in a series dealing with economic conditions in modern America covers the period, 1933 to 1937. The chief characters include a farm organizer and his wife, an automobile manufacturer, and a union organizer.

"Of all the crusading novelists who started out so bravely a decade ago to create a lean, hard social fiction fit for the 30's, Josephine Herbst has not weakened. . . What is remarkable in this writing is its delicacy and fullness. . . Such sympathy as Miss Herbst has displayed is a distinction found chiefly in those novelists whose interest rarely goes beyond individual lives, and it is that distinction that has set her apart and that gives her so much promise." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p7 Mr 5 '39 900w

"Miss Herbst never shies from anything she needs to say, in either act or vernacular. 'Rope of Gold' is written in a hard and painfully dry style, but you have a strong feeling that the writer is deliberately suffocating a fine sense of humor and a love of beauty. We know of no woman who writes in her fierce vitality, but in her fundamentally idealistic attitude towards women. . . It is sincerity and intensity that holds this moody, rebellious structure together." Olga Owens

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 11 '39 410w

Christian Century 56:998 Ag 16 '39 170w

"In the nature of things, practically all Miss Herbst's story is depressing. But the great shrewdness of her observation, her ability to remember everything she sees and hears, and to touch it all with the magic of fiction lifts her novel at once far above any mere chronicle of disaster. The saving grace of art comes in to ease the pain of the picture, and at the same time by a familiar paradox to make it more telling and memorable." Herschel Brickell

+ Commonweal 29:555 Mr 10 '39 450w

Reviewed by Dorothy Van Doren

Nation 148:272 Mr 4 '39 400w

"In spite of [its] rich picture of social movement, the novel is not dramatic; it has no powerful, pointed scenes, few moments of suspense, no clash of resolute wills. It is true that people line up on one side or another in the social battle, but the struggle is impersonal. . . But if she is not a dramatist, Miss Herbst is a novelist in the true sense—a creator of 'characters,' showing her people as typical products of their age and class." Rebecca Pitts

+ — New Repub 98:202 Mr 22 '39 1050w

"Miss Herbst writes with an almost morbid intensity, with a fierce, masculine virility that does not falter at the language of the beer joint and lavatory. One is caught by the current of her emotion; it is more difficult, however, to follow the direction of her plot and counterplot. . . There are bits in the book which are excellent, single episodes, points of view, expressions of fear or rebellion. As a whole, however, 'Rope of Gold' is overburdened with mood and rebellion which never rise to dramatic climax. The general tone of the book is gray, and even bloodshed does not add any crimson to the canvas." R. C. Feld

N Y Times p6 Mr 5 '39 650w

"Whether her characters are fighting or loving or merely suffering for want of food and shelter, Miss Herbst writes about them with a nervous intensity that carries its own compulsion. A powerful, thoughtful book."

+ New Yorker 15:78 Mr 4 '39 120w

" 'Rope of Gold' will delight those readers who share the author's political and economic beliefs. Other readers will not find the book dull, but they may wonder whether such modern proletarian fiction is any more effective as a medium of propaganda than was the sentimentalism of Dickens in 'Hard Times' or the plain, unvarnished accounts of oppression in Garland's 'Main Traveled Roads.' " R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:7 Mr 4 '39 550w

Time 33:61 Mr 6 '39 180w

HERLITZ, NILS. Sweden: a modern democracy on ancient foundations. 127p $2 Univ. of Minn. [9s Oxford]

342.485 Sweden—Politics and government. Sweden—Constitutional history 39-27543

"In connection with the celebration of the tercentenary of the first Swedish settlement in America the author was invited by several universities in the United States to lecture, in April and May, 1938, on the following topics: Constitutional Government in Sweden Three Hundred Years Ago and Today, Public Administration and Civil Service in Sweden, and Government and Citizen in Sweden. The present publication is based on these lectures, which have, however, been amplified and rearranged." Pref.

"Dr. Herlitz's brief volume does not deal so much with detailed factual information as with certain distinctive features of Swedish political institutions. Because the author's interest lies chiefly in the field of public law, it is not surprising that the emphasis is laid on legal and constitutional aspects, and because Dr. Herlitz is an authority on Swedish administrative law, his comments in this field are especially significant. . . It is to be hoped that the appearance of this volume will stimulate so much interest in Dr. Herlitz's earlier contributions that translations of them will result in enrichment of the literature in English on the workings of democracy." B. A. Arneson

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:719 Ag '39 650w

"Professors Anderson and Stephenson of the University of Minnesota have assisted in giving this book an excellent form. It is to be regretted that there is no index, which is surprising in view of the fact that Professor

HERLITZ, NILS—Continued
Herlitz is one of the few Swedish scholars who seem to realize the value of an index. But this is really not so important when the volume is small and as well written as this one is." R. V. Peel

+ Ann Am Acad 206:176 N '39 750w
Booklist 35:362 Jl 1 '39
Foreign Affairs 18:376 Ja '40 20w
Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

HERRING, HUBERT CLINTON. Neilson of Smith. 48p $1.50 Daye

B or 92 Neilson, William Allan

"William Allan Neilson, who after twenty-two years in office is now retiring from the presidency of Smith College, has been for years the acknowledged dean of the women's college presidents, and has attained high place among the heads of all American educational institutions. Therefore it is fitting that his character and virtues and career should have place in daily press and current periodical literature. Mr. Hubert Herring has done us a service in reproducing in book form his charming essay (Harper's Magazine) of a year ago. Mr. Herring paints a lively and just picture of Dr. Neilson, of his vivid personality, of his academic ideals, of his Scotch canniness in administration." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Christian Gauss
Books p2 Jl 2 '39 900w

" 'Neilson, of Smith' will unquestionably be eagerly snapped up by the alumnae. Yet our guess is that this genial tribute will win a far wider circulation. In this opportunity to meet face to face a college president so distinguished, more than one parent may find his college problem, whether for daughter or for son, happily solved. Shall it be impersonal freedom or the personal contact? The book is infinitely valuable here." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Je 25 '39 800w

Reviewed by T. W. Lamont
+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 Je 10 '39 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 11 '39 160w (Reprinted from Sat R of Lit)

HERRIOT, EDOUARD. The wellsprings of liberty (Aux sources de la liberté); tr. by Richard Duffy. 279p il map $2.50 Funk

323.44 Liberty. France—Politics and government

An interpretation of the French liberty written from the point of view of a moderate liberal, in celebration of the sesquicentennial of the French revolution.

"I opened this volume with the deepest sympathy; I closed it with the sense that it was practically worthless. It is so elementary as to be rudimentary. . . Herriot is a trained historian; he has traveled widely and intelligently; he is a man of letters, whose 'Madame Récamier' and 'Beethoven' were appreciated by the best judges. Of all these qualifications, not a trace is to be found in this volume. It is a well-aimed projectile from a big gun—but filled with wet sand: a perfect dud." Albert Guerard

— Books p8 D 17 '39 750w

"The translator has done a faithful piece of work in general." S. M. Waxman
Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 280w
New Repub 101:269 D 20 '39 50w

"[The book] adds neither to M. Herriot's fame as a writer nor his scholarship as a student of history, but it is sufficient to throw some light on his personality as a politician. . . 'The Wellsprings of Liberty' appears to be as much the composition of an able and agile-minded politician as it is the work of an impartial historian. At the same time, one must admit that there is much that is good and suggestive in it if one considers the limitations of the book." Herbert Gorman

+ — N Y Times p9 D 31 '39 1000w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 5 '40 350w

HERRMANN, JOHN. The salesman. 332p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
39-14382

A picture of the life of the American traveling salesman—not the stock character of the Pullman smoking room—but the average, more or less honest, hard-working chap who is worried about how to care for his wife and baby on the twenty or thirty dollars a week that he makes.

"Herrmann paints an excellent portrait of a salesman and the details of salesmanship. . . There isn't much drama in this book and what there is Herrmann deliberately tones down to the level of ordinary existence. Death, marriage, mortgages, childbirth—all these are the lot of man and Crawford in his solemn way has to cope with them." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 My 28 '39 750w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p2 Je 3 '39 270w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 15 '39 500w

"John Herrmann knows how to write well. That he has not written well in this book seems to indicate that he is simply tired, physically tired. Certainly, its very uneven texture would seem to confirm this." Harry Sylvester

— Commonweal 30:261 Je 30 '39 350w

"The portrait of this little business man is one that is necessary for our contemporary gallery and could not have been done with more scrupulous integrity. Herrmann is a master of portrait technique, so much so that one wishes next time he would permit his talents a richer, more colorful subject. For though Crawford lives and breathes and you even know his voice on the telephone, he is definitely not the boy you'd ask to come right over for a little conversation. His blues are far too contagious." Dawn Powell

+ — New Repub 99:227 Je 28 '39 650w

"Everything in this novel is as real and everyday as talk about the weather and mumbled wondering what to eat for lunch. It is all, you are certain, true. The incidents end in anticlimax; the problems are resolved largely through the inertia of the men and women involved; no moment is brightened by wit, there is not a clever line; situations promise, then evade excitement." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p7 Je 4 '39 550w

"Not a 'great' theme, but a touching one. Neatly told."

+ New Yorker 15:87 Je 3 '39 70w

"Herrmann has given us the process in deadly detail, by which a little man is stripped of his spirit. He has done it with the devices of naturalism, the authentic, stock phrasings of the Robert Crawfords, who never put two words together that have never been put together before, and a thorough-going, functional view of society in its contracting cycle, squeezing the Crawfords out of sight. This novel, soundly written, is to remember them by." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 My 27 '39 490w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 210w
Time 33:86 Je 12 '39 150w

HERTZ, EMANUEL, ed. Lincoln talks; a biography in anecdote. 698p $3 Viking

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham (W) 39-6469

This collection of stories and anecdotes about Lincoln has been drawn from many and varied sources—biographies, memoirs, letters, and the contemporary press, and all kinds of people reporting from memory. The order of arrangement is mainly chronological and the book is divided into two parts, the first and smaller part relating to the years before he became president. Index.

Booklist 35:222 Mr 1 '39

"The fullest compilation of Lincoln anecdotes yet made; the fullest, most catholic, and best arranged. . . The origins of each story are indicated in merely a rough-and-ready way, and some have apparently no more real lineage than Topsy. Historians will not use this book without corroborative searches. Public speakers may be expected to levy upon it heavily, however, and many plain readers will find it full of entertainment." Allan Nevins

+ Books p2 F 12 '39 180w

Christian Science Monitor p18 F 14 '39 450w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Commonweal 29:526 Mr 3 '39 210w

"Hertz's new book is a miscellany of trivia. But when you add them up they come close to amounting to Abraham Lincoln. The weakness of the book is that it is neither biography nor portrait: it is too inclusive to be either, for each involves selection." Max Lerner

+ — New Repub 98:134 Mr 8 '39 700w

"This is a fine, stout, comprehensive book, alive with vitality and humor, the work of a thousand men and women who received for themselves some moment of Lincoln's life and preserved it." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p3 F 12 '39 750w

New Yorker 15:83 F 18 '39 50w

"The book is a sort of reference book of 'Lincoln stories.' Indeed Mr. Hertz dedicates his book to 'all the speakers and writers who have ever used, or intend to use, a "Lincoln story." ' That numerous and motley tribe will soon discover the unrivaled utility of the book in this respect. Finally the compilation should interest students of humor. For Lincoln was a great story-teller." P. H. Buck

+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 11 '39 440w

"A critical edition of Lincoln anecdotes would be an interesting contribution to biography and to history. In the absence of such it is the course of wisdom to accept thankfully the uncritical editions and 'edit' them as one reads with suitable mental reservations. A good deal of enlightenment as well as enjoyment can be derived from even an indiscriminate mass of Lincoln stories. Moreover, the reader has the satisfaction of believing that a greater percentage of the humorous anecdotes probably has some foundation in fact than is ordinarily the case with a celebrity."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 750w

Time 33:69 F 20 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

HERVEY, HARRY CLAY. The damned don't cry. 426p $2.50 Greystone

39-6265

The story of Zelda O'Brien, a girl of fine potentialities, born in the poorest district of Savannah. Thru sheer force of character, Zelda fought her way up the social scale, and then on the eve of making good and realizing her childhood dream, was dragged down to destruction by a series of misfortunes.

Reviewed by F. J. Feldkamp

Books p14 Mr 26 '39 500w

" 'The Damned Don't Cry' deserves a neutral blurb; it is certainly of higher literary caliber than the run of Mr. Hervey's work, and its weakness of structure and, occasionally, treatment, is more than compensated by the excellent handling of character, the richness of scene and the sure rendering of individual episodes. . . The author is to be commended for making the dialect of the poor 'white trash' comprehensible and easy to read while retaining the strange quality of it and for restricting the greater part of the novel's melodrama to conceivable proportions." Hassoldt Davis

+ — N Y Times p20 Ap 2 '39 950w

"Not for members of the all-men-are-created-equal school."

New Yorker 15:86 Mr 25 '39 60w

"The whole life of Zelda O'Brien is narrated in Zolaesque detail, but somehow the effect is plausible at best, rather than convincing. . . It is quite true that some people's lives are shaped by the fact that the breaks go against them but such a theme needs a powerful novelist, writing with passionate sincerity, to rouse our indignation or pity. Mr. Hervey is a competent narrator who rouses, alternately, a mild skepticism and a milder interest. He leaves us willing to believe that everything in the story could have happened, but not feeling that it makes much difference." G. S.

Sat R of Lit 19:21 Mr 25 '39 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p627 O 28 '39 150w

HERZOG, MRS ELIZABETH. See Mumford, E., pseud.

HESS, FJERIL. Toplofty; il. by Ruth King; approved by Girl scouts, inc. 304p $2 Macmillan

39-22584

Girl scout story for older girls. It continues the adventures begun in Shanty Brook Lodge (Book Review Digest, 1937). This time the girls are busy converting a city loft into a meeting place, where they put into practice the revised girl scout program.

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39

" 'Toplofty' is a winter version of 'Shanty Brook Lodge,' which gave its name to an earlier volume. Both are approved by Girl Scouts, Inc., and I don't wonder; they are hopeful, happy and constructive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 4 '40 350w

Churchman 154:35 Ja 1 '40 10w

"Girl Scouts will ask for this book and other girls from twelve to sixteen will be fascinated with it and long to become Scouts. Approved by Girl Scouts, Inc., and recommended for all libraries." Bertine Weston

+ Library J 64:713 S 15 '39 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 140w

HEVESY, GEORG VON, and PANETH, FRITZ. Manual of radioactivity; tr. by Robert W. Lawson. 2d ed rev and enl 306p il $5.50 (17s 6d) Oxford

539.7 Radioactivity [39-15695]

"Of this comprehensive textbook there have been two German editions (1923 and 1931) and one English edition (1936). This new English version shows much revision and the rewriting of several chapters. It gives a general elementary survey of modern developments both from the chemical and physical viewpoints and assumes no previous knowledge of the subject. There are selected references at many of the chapter endings. Chapter XXVI covers a brief historical review." N Y New Tech Bks

"A very readable and useful manual of radioactivity." S. C. Lind

+ Am Chem Soc J 60:3093 D '38 220w

"The book should prove to be an excellent text for honor students in the natural sciences." A. F. Kovarik

+ J Phys Chem 43:1233 D '39 500w

"In this new edition, concise accounts of this recent work have been embodied in the fuller descriptions of the older and fundamental experiments and theories. The book is not overloaded with new material. It still retains its characteristics as a text-book for the ordinary student of physics and chemistry. . . . It is a pleasure to welcome this new edition." A. S. R.

+ Nature 143:416 Mr 11 '39 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:60 O '38

HEWES, MRS AGNES DANFORTH. The sword of Roland Arnot; il. by Paul Strayer. 206p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 39-7583

Tale of adventure in and near the city of Damascus in the fifteenth century. A Frankish merchant refuses to pay tribute to the desert tribes thru whose lands his rich caravans must pass. The ensuing trouble is smoothed out by the wisdom of the merchant's young son, aided by the old family sword which dated back to the days of the Crusades.

HEWES, A. D.—Continued

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 My 7 '39 650w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '39 230w

"This is an almost perfect story of its kind, thrilling and virile but with an undercurrent of the social implications of the situations as well. It is easier reading than Spice and the Devil's Cave and will appeal particularly to the ages from twelve to fourteen." J. L. Sauer
+ Library J 64:380 My 1 '39 210w

"Primarily this is a story of high-hearted deeds and intrigue of the sort to light the imagination of 12 to 15 year old boys, but it has a solid basis in a thoughtful approach to history, and the whole is suffused with the color and movement of that Damascus which its people lovingly called 'our mother.'" E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 My 21 '39 350w
New Yorker 15:107 My 13 '39 30w
Wis Lib Bul 35:117 Je '39

HEWETT, EDGAR LEE. Ancient Andean life. (Ancient American life ser) 336p il map $4 Bobbs

980.1 Indians of South America. Andes mountains. Incas 39-6467

"In this work, [the author has endeavored] to portray the ancient Andean life, not as an isolated entity, but as an essential factor in the culture history of the American Indian race. This is the continuation of the story which has been presented in broad dramatic outlines in Ancient Life in the American Southwest and Ancient Life in Mexico and Central America [Book Review Digest, 1931, 1936]. . . In this final volume of the series, an effort is also made to see America in the world-picture—to show that it has a vital place in the world-drama, along with the Asiatic, European, and Mediterranean cultural developments. To assist in following this line of thought, some space is devoted to typical stage settings in world history." (Foreword) Index.

Christian Science Monitor p16 My 13 '39 650w

"The book is one which all students of American archaeology should own and study. Its major weakness arises from Dr. Hewett's disdainful rejection of the Spanish Chroniclers. Whatever their faults—and all who work with them are well aware of them—the Chroniclers are our sole literary informants regarding the native civilization of America. Modern archaeology alone cannot take their place, particularly when important contributions to it are ignored. Had Dr. Hewett set himself to give us footnotes and a bibliography, he would probably have covered the field more completely than he has done without them. The index, however, is so good that it largely makes up for the lack noted." P. A. Means
+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 9 '39 1050w

Reviewed by J. E. Thompson
Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 29 '39 500w

Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others
Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 Mr '39 1050w
Springf'd Republican p8 My 9 '39 700w

HEWITT, ARTHUR WENTWORTH. Highland shepherds; a book of the rural pastorate. 246p $2 Willett

250 Pastoral work. Country church 39-31304

Chapters on the rural ministry by a country pastor of the Methodist church. In its four sections the book deals with the person, the priest, the preacher, and the pastor. It contains counsel as to the preparation of sermons, weddings, funerals, baptisms, Holy Communion, among other matters which go to make up a pastor's life. Index.

Booklist 36:168 Ja 1 '40

"This is the first American book on pastoral theology written specifically for the rural minister. Indeed, say the publishers, it is the first book on the subject in English since George Herbert's A Priest to the Temple in 1632. In Highland Shepherds Mr. Hewitt gives us a book that will stand as a classic in its field." Mark Rich
+ Christian Century 56:1546 D 13 '39 550w

"One of the most sparkling and timely books ever written on the rural ministry, that ought to be in the hands not only of the country parson but of every minister of the gospel. . . The book is characterized by good sense and wit and has literary and artistic merit." T. F. Opie
+ Churchman 153:21 D 1 '39 110w

Reviewed by S. E. Greene
J Religion 20:102 Ja '40 300w

HEWLETT, DOROTHY. Victorian house. 522p $2.75 Bobbs [8s 6d Hurst]

39-21298

Long novel of English life stretching in time from 1826 to the opening of the Great Exhibition in 1851. It is a chronicle of the Pratt family, a typical Victorian group, ruled over by the autocratic father, whose word is law to his whole clan, with the exception of one son, and his ward, Phoebe.

Booklist 36:110 N 15 '39

"The value of 'Victorian House' rests solidly upon its reflection of its time. With the quiet charm of apparent effortlessness, the author has painted a broad, colorful, populous canvas full of the movement and the contrast of that great 'house' that was Victorian society, and the scope of her work is as impressive as its vitality." John Patton
+ Books p2 S 10 '39 750w

"Miss Hewlett is notably fertile in the invention of telling incidents, and she is dexterous too in the craft of interlacing a private story with public history, and manages to convey a deal of information about country and town conditions in nineteenth-century England and also to give a vivid account of the genesis and progress of the Great Exhibition project. True, now and again the coincidences click a thought too conveniently, but at all events they keep the narrative moving." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 25 '39 350w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p7 S 3 '39 900w

"Dorothy Hewlett has turned a very neat trick in writing a full-length Victorian novel in very much the Victorian manner. . . Taken in the spirit of a theatrical revival 'Victorian House' will provide pleasant entertainment for autumn evenings. Many readers will still prefer to turn to the Victorians themselves for such entertainment but as supplementary reading Miss Hewlett can be recommended."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 S 9 '39 330w

"A veracious document, solid but entertaining, to be read comfortably at one's leisure. . . In spite of its slower and even confused moments it improves one's knowledge of England and is well worth reading."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Ag 5 '39 450w
Wis Lib Bul 35:167 O '39

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). No wind of blame. 294p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]

39-33013

Detective story.

Booklist 36:178 Ja 1 '40

"Returning to the mystery fold with a sort of comedy-tragedy of high life in county and other circles, Georgette Heyer rings the bell again in no uncertain terms. . . Don't go elsewhere for truly smart characters, scene and conversation—and plot, if it comes to that." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 N 5 '39 170w

"Some of the purists of the detective novel have complained that Miss Georgette Heyer's detection is not according to the best examples, and indeed it is probably true that she owes much of her popularity to her lively writing and sense of fun. In any case the purist's criticism is not one that applies to her new book. . . The puzzle is both ingenious and fair." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 11 '39 170w

"The trickiness of the murder is the weakness: it is not subtle enough to hoodwink the average reader, but it occupies the authoress for a terrible time, trying to palm off her scientific explanation. But once you resolve to skip the details of detection, the rest of the book will be found very amusing." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:96 Jl 15 '39 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p37 N 12 '39 200w

"For those who like diversion as well as deduction."

+ New Yorker 15:92 N 11 '39 50w

"Method of murder ingenious—if not quite believable. Priceless characters and spate of cock-eyed conversation make chapters hum. Highly enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 N 11 '39 40w

Time 34:87 D 11 '39 50w

"One of the most amusing stories of its kind that has appeared for some time, and one that continues to hold the reader's attention."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 24 '39 300w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Royal escape. 386p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

Charles II, king of Great Britain—Fiction

39-3287

Historical novel recounting the flight of Charles II from Worcester, his many adventures and mishaps while relentlessly pursued by his enemies, and his miraculous escape to France and safety. Bibliography.

Booklist 35:230 Mr 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p9 F 5 '39 110w

Reviewed by Jean Arrowsmith

Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 310w

"Exciting, authentic and extraordinarily fine historical novel." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 F 5 '39 800w

"Miss Heyer makes the King a fascinating figure, courageous, courteous, and charming, if a little short on gray matter. A first-class costume piece."

+ New Yorker 14:82 F 11 '39 60w

"The escape was a feat of daring such as no English monarch, with the possible exception of the fabled Alfred, has ever accomplished, and it provides the historical novelist with a story that whips up its own suspense with artless speed. Miss Heyer is an adept at giving full-bodied reality to such a story. . . She has taken her sources as seriously as would a professor of history. . . Out of their confusion and their waywardness of detail she has built a plain, direct story which moves rapidly from one breathless episode to the next." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 4 '39 480w

"Miss Heyer bases her romance upon a considerable bulk of material; indeed, her tendency is to give her readers too much rather than too little history, and at times her theme and her personages become overloaded with detail. Yet 'Royal Escape' will not be found lacking either in interest or excitement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p625 O 1 '38 210w

HEYER, ROBERT HARRY. Engineering physical metallurgy. 549p il $4.50 Van Nostrand

669 Metallurgy 39-21591

Textbook on engineering metals and alloys for students making their first acquaintance with the subject, as well as for non-metallurgical students. Chapter references. Index.

Booklist 36:105 N 15 '39

Chem & Met Eng 46:786 D '39 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:58 O '39

HEYMANN, HANS. Property-life insurance; can insurance solve the national housing, shipbuilding and industrial problems? [foreword by Richard T. Ely]. 221p $3 Harper

368 Insurance 39-27131

"The originator of the system of property-life insurance, makes a careful analysis of this so-called F.H.A. insurance, intended to provide necessary repairs for buildings and ships and to enable them to be rebuilt when they become too old for further repair. The author shows the strength and weaknesses of this insurance, and believes that it can help solve national housing, shipbuilding, and industrial problems if made a basis for long term private investment." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:226 Mr 15 '39

Reviewed by Dudley Cates

Management R 28:138 Ap '39 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 35:161 O '39

HEYNEMAN, ANNE. William Wigglewhistle; il. by the author. [32p] $1.50 (5s) Scribner

39-30541

"A nonsense picture-story book very appealing to the 6 to 8 year olds. 'Muffet,' the tiny puppy given to William by his Uncle Oliver, is lost and William sets off to find him; the kind-hearted butcher and Mrs. Hammock, the laundress, come along to help him and they are soon joined in their search by a giraffe, a tiger and a seal. After a strange ride in a street car and an ice cream soda all around, Muffet is found." N Y Times

---

"This rollicking record of little William's search for a lost dog will last longer than many picture-story books for small children. It has more to offer: A story that keeps up its interest, a great many colored pictures so full of details that they will be pored over long after the child has learned how the tale comes out." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 O 22 '39 290w

"One long chuckle from beginning to end. Everything in the book is as humorously suggestive as the title. Miss Heyneman has the graphic imagination that makes the good story teller."

+ Cath World 150:374 D '39 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '39

Manchester Guardian sup xi D 1 '39 50w

"The many full-page pictures in gay colors are full of fun and have the carefully worked out detail that children enjoy. They have, too, the lively, forceful action of the comic strip with none of its vulgarity, and the story pleases by its unexpectedness and its cumulative absurdity." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 22 '39 180w

HEYWARD, DOROTHY HARTZELL (KUHNS) (MRS DU BOSE HEYWARD), and HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Mamba's daughters; a play. 182p il $2 Farrar

812 (W) 39-27083

Dramatization of DuBose Heyward's novel of the same name (Book Review Digest, 1929).

Booklist 35:220 Mr 1 '39

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p20 Ap 16 '39 90w

"One lays aside the play with the sense of having met intimately the southern Negro in his actual habit of life. The native poetry of the race is here, both in common speech and in the spirituals which are its equally natural voice." T. H. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 280w

Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 148:597 F '39 310w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

"This play bears evidence of its novelistic origin. It is episodic rather than organically flowing. Yet by and large it is one of the more interesting dramatic offerings of the season. The separate scenes are moving, even poignant, the characters of Hagar and of Mamba are both admirably limned, and the melodrama itself is atmospheric and often thrilling." Grenville Vernon

+ — Commonweal 29:358 Ja 20 '39 300w (Dramatic criticism)

"Unfortunately the story is neither very powerfully imagined nor very dramatically told. The action is obviously suspended from time to time in order to make a place for such scenes as that of the 'love feast,' and in itself is little more than a series of conventional tear-jerking situations. Such material deserves a better framework." J. W. Krutch

— + Nation 148:74 Ja 14 '39 320w (Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 97:315 Ja 18 '39 420w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p18 F 26 '39 120w

Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ap 29 '39 110w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:309 Ap '39 40w

HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Country bunny and the little gold shoes, as told to Jenifer; pictures by Marjorie Flack. [48p] $1.50 Houghton

(W) 39-8350

Easter story for young readers, which grew out of a story the author has told and retold to his young daughter. It is of the little country rabbit who wanted to become one of the five Easter bunnies, and how she managed to realize her ambition.

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p5 My 21 '39 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

Horn Bk M 15:163 My '39 80w

"This is a charming Easter story for children from four to eight. Marjorie Flack has illustrated it with delightful pictures and perfect attention to every detail. Children will delight to find all twenty-one of the little bunnies in every picture where they are supposed to be. Libraries will do well to buy it now and have it ready for next Easter." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 64:469 Je 1 '39 180w

"It is really imaginative and well written. It ought to be read to little children at Easter for many years to come. The colored pictures are just right, too."

+ New Yorker 15:104 My 13 '39 50w

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 30w

HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Star spangled Virgin; decorations by Theodore Nadejen. 230p $2 Farrar

(W) 39-27656

A story of Negro life on one of the Virgin Islands during the days of the depression and the coming of the New Deal.

Booklist 36:9 S '39

"In spite of its shoutingly inappropriate title, 'Star Spangled Virgin' is a gentle, wise and knowledgeable book. The title suggests something for the lesser shelves of the lending libraries—the novel itself is Mr. Heyward at his best, with his warmth of understanding, his gift for simplicity, and his economy of narrative." S. V. Benét

+ Books p4 Ag 13 '39 800w

"Mr. Heyward has a fresh subject, certainly a fresh setting, and one suspects that either he ought to have made the book longer by introducing—with skill of course—more information about the Islands and the background of his story than most of us possess or else he ought to have written a straight comedy about the bewildered and bewildering efforts of Uncle Sam to extend to his expensive and unprofitable new niece portions of his program for relieving economic distress on the mainland. A larger treatment would have made a far more important book and a less solemn treatment would have made a much funnier one." Ann Springer

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 26 '39 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Ag '39

Nation 149:203 Ag 19 '39 200w

New Repub 100:167 S 13 '39 40w

"Since 'Star-Spangled Virgin' is preeminently a light comedy with a shrewd satirical tinge, it seems silly to dissect its social implications. If Mr. Heyward is at times faintly patronizing, if his solution seems too easy and his values a little mixed, that does not, after all, matter greatly. The point is that he has produced in 'Star-Spangled Virgin' an immensely amusing book, with a fresh background and a piquant theme." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 13 '39 950w

"A warm-hearted story of a childlike and appealing people, with a heroine who is large, black, generous, and capable. You will almost certainly see it on the stage as a fitting successor to 'Mamba's Daughters.'"

+ New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 50w

Pratt p23 winter '40

Reviewed by Basil Davenport
Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ag 19 '39 480w

Time 34:63 Ag 14 '39 300w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
Yale R n s 29:x autumn '39 150w

HEYWOOD, JOHNSON. Grinding wheels and their uses; a handbook and textbook on modern grinding and polishing practice and theory; under the auspices of the Grinding wheel mfrs. assn. and the Abrasive grain association. 374p il $3 Penton

621.92 Grinding and polishing 38-34524

"A handbook on the theory and practice of grinding and polishing for shop executives, operators, and students." Cleveland Open Shelf

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '39

N Y New Tech Bks 23:57 O '38

HICKS, GRANVILLE. Figures of transition; a study of British literature at the end of the nineteenth century. 326p $2.50 Macmillan

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. Authors, English 40-669

"Modified Marxist view of William Morris, Hardy, Samuel Butler, Gissing, Wilde, Kipling, etc. Mr. Hicks sees them in relation to the contemporary Socialist movement, which, though it failed to attain its objectives, was instrumental in putting an end to the Victorian spirit." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

"There is nothing in the book of that bitter, unintelligent recrimination one finds all through 'The Great Tradition.' Of course, Mr. Hicks was then writing a challenge to American writers." Alfred Kazin

Books p2 Ja 7 '40 850w

"Perhaps the most interesting thing about 'Figures of Transition' is the author's realization that the relation between literature and society is a complex and baffling matter. Left-wing critics have not always envisaged the complications of this problem, and have sometimes rushed into print with sweeping generalizations that are probably not so. They have also tended to be a little arrogant when these generalizations have been questioned, as if the true milk of the word could in the nature of the case nourish only true believers. Mr. Hicks has avoided these errors. The modesty and good sense of the introductory matter should be commended. . . Mr. Hicks' escaping from the confines of a too narrow interpretation of intellectual history promises much, for his is a mind which is both acute and bold." H. M. Jones

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 30 '39 1050w

Christian Century 57:115 Ja 24 '40 300w

"This is an important and valuable book, clear in conception, beautifully planned, well proportioned, and admirably written."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 20 '40 1000w

"The volume is an excellent study in criticism and new and interesting values emerge from this provocative analysis." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 154:20 Ja 1 '40 150w

"The opening chapter, 'Victorian flood and ebb,' is a well written account of what has by now often been told. Its only defect lies in the disproportionately small space given to a discussion of the middle-class mind compared with that given to its critics. . . The second chapter discusses William Morris; it is well put together and the emphasis is on the right points. . . On Wilde and the decadents Mr. Hicks has some good things to say, particularly in analyzing the inconsistency of the 'art for art's sake' people. The final chapter, on imperialism, has a good discussion of Kipling, but the treatment of Stevenson shows too little understanding of the origins of his art and attitude: a deeper knowledge of his Scottish background and its relation to his work would have helped Mr. Hicks to a fuller understanding of this really quite complex figure." David Daiches

+ — New Repub 102:29 Ja 1 '40 750w

New Yorker 15:119 D 2 '39 40w

"The lamentable inadequacy of this book as a treatment of its avowed subject might be pardoned if Mr. Hicks wrote brilliantly, made gay incidental judgments, or had even written a good book on some other subject: but there is no such consolation. . . For Mr. Hicks, William Morris is an atheist, Tennyson orthodox, Trollope stuffy, Ruskin 'conventional in religion' and W. S. Gilbert 'good-natured'! Beside these gross errors in judgment Mr. Hicks's occasional mistakes of fact are negligible. The best chapter in the book is certainly that on William Morris; but how much better it would have been had Mr. Hicks only seen that which divides Morris's communism from the pure prophecy of Karl Marx." R. E. Roberts

— + Sat R of Lit 21:6 D 9 '39 1050w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 6 '40 950w

HICKS, HERBERT J. Principles and practice of radio servicing. 305p il $3 (18s) McGraw

621.384 Radio (W) 39-27450

"With the use of mathematics reduced to a minimum the student gets a grounding in the fundamentals of radio science before receiving definite instructions for performing all the more complicated servicing procedures. There is a chapter each on public loud speakers and the business side of the subject. More than 200 good diagrams supplement the plainly written text. The author is radio instructor in the Hadley Vocational School, St. Louis, Mo." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Booklist 35:325 Je 1 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39

N Y New Tech Bks 24:28 Ap '39

HICKS, JOHN RICHARD. Value and capital; an inquiry into some fundamental principles of economic theory. 332p $4.25 (12s 6d) Oxford

330.1 Economics [39-14373]

"Professor Hicks's new book . . . proceeds in a single chain of argument from the foundations of value to the causes of the trade cycle. Though many subjects are discussed, unity is preserved by the use of a new method of analysis capable of dealing with several variables. . . The first part deals with the theory of subjective value, the second part with the working of a price-system in many interrelated markets, the third with the foundations of dynamic economics, and the fourth with the working of a dynamic system." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by B. F. Haley

Am Econ R 29:557 S '39 1200w

"It is beyond the scope of a short review to comment in detail on the excellencies and difficulties of this essay. But one thing seems certain—this is one of the few books which mark a stage in the advance of a science."

+ Economist 136:566 S 23 '39 700w

Reviewed by Henry Hazlitt

N Y Times p3 S 3 '39 450w

"This book is the most important original contribution to pure economics since Mr. Keynes' General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money. . . To the prospective reader's question—how difficult is this book? the answer must be 'Pretty stiff.' It demands a good grounding in the technique of economic thought, considerable mental agility, and an acquaintance with at least the broad lines of recent controversy. That hazy entity the General Reader will find his work cut out to tackle it. But let anyone proposing to do so take heart from the answer to [another] question—style; the presentation, with all its abstruseness and almost mathematical severity, is first rate. Logical elegance, the appropriate and economical expression of complex thought-processes, raise competence to the point where it provides a real if austere aesthetic pleasure." Honor Croome

+ Spec 162:310 F 24 '39 850w

"The chapters devoted to the theory of interest are particularly original and stimulating. The treatment is theoretical and rather austere; perfect competition and private enterprise without regard to institutional control are assumed throughout, but the final chapter on the trade cycle contains guarded hints on policy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Ap 15 '39 200w

HICKS, MRS URSULA KATHLEEN (WEBB). The finance of British government, 1920-1936. 392p $4.50 (15s) Oxford

336.42 Finance—Great Britain. Great Britain—Economic conditions. Taxation—Great Britain [38-39578]

"Mrs. Hicks has written a book of great interest, a critical examination of British public finance between the end of the war and the beginning of the new phase opened by rearmament, from which the politician no less than the economic student will profit. There is no other study quite comparable to it in breadth of scope or in the boldness with which recent policy is related to economic theory. Mrs. Hicks begins with an incisive chapter on the

HICKS, U. K.—Continued
Budgets and the Chancellors of the period, and goes on to analyse at length the national expenditure, taxation, and monetary policy and the debt." Manchester Guardian

"Although the author's personal conclusions, other than that she is no endorser of free and easy spending, are not always easy for the reader to come by, her purpose and plan of treatment cannot be too heartily endorsed. Every democratic country could use just such an account of its own post-war period." Alzada Comstock
+ — Am Econ R 29:184 Mr '39 550w

"A remarkable volume of exposition and analysis."
+ Economist 135:183 Ap 22 '39 1000w
Foreign Affairs 17:640 Ap '39
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 20 '39 290w

"Distinction of style is not, for some reason, generally to be expected among economists, and one cannot bear too hardly on its absence in a work dealing with so intractable a subject-matter. But one's eye and ear recoil, and one's mental processes stumble, at the Jungle English and Ribbon Writing which clog too many of its pages. Quite apart from aesthetic considerations it is irritating, when there are so many difficulties intrinsic to the subject-matter, to waste minutes unravelling the convolutions of a cryptic and ambiguous sentence only to discover a perfectly straightforward meaning capable of perfectly straightforward expression. Where the work itself is of no particular value this need not matter; no one need read it. But Mrs. Hicks' book deserves to be read, needs to be read, and no doubt will be read, by all serious students of public finance and of post-War economic history in general. She has ensured for herself a truly impressive fund of respect, gratitude, and irritation." Honor Croome
+ — Spec 162:102 Ja 20 '39 650w

"This review of the public finances of Great Britain from the end of the War to the beginning of rearmament will prove of great value to all students of British economic and social conditions during that period."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p790 D 10 '38 160w

HIGGINS, EARL LEROY, ed. and tr. The French revolution, as told by contemporaries. 463p $3.50; text ed $2.75 Houghton [10s 6d Harrap]

944.04 France—History—Revolution
38-31451

"In this book, Mr Higgins has presented a wide and varied collection of letters, memoirs, speeches, official documents, and recorded conversations coming from those who lived and felt the effects of events during this trying period of French history. The materials are arranged under twenty-nine heads, each of which seems to be a significant chapter in the development of the French Revolution. Under each of these, the reader will find varied accounts as told or written by those of widely different ambitions. The result seems as unbiased as known documents make possible." (Social Studies) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Lingelbach
Am Hist R 45:138 O '39 150w
Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p13 Mr 19 '39 750w
Reviewed by C. W. Thompson
Commonweal 29:500 F 24 '39 360w
New Repub 98:175 Mr 15 '39 60w

"As a contemporary record, with its recounting of opinion, conviction and passion and its gathering together of documents, this historical work is an invaluable mine of information for reference. It has also a quality of sheer fascination: opened almost anywhere, it grasps the reader's attention by some succinct, vivid, and clearly headed paragraph."
+ N Y Times p8 F 26 '39 600w
Pratt p26 summer '39

"As an example of organization of material the book is worthy of the highest commendation. It will be read with a lively interest and with benefit. There are those, however, who will ask themselves to what use such a volume should be put, and who will have grave doubts as to its practical value." J. M. S. Allison
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 13 '39 410w

"Teachers weary of hoping for a new printing of F. M. Anderson's Constitutions and Other Select Documents: France, 1789-1901 (1904) will welcome this volume while regretting that this interesting source material stops with the close of the National Convention in 1795. They may also regret the comparative neglect of economic issues, the absence of any explanatory editorial comments, and the scarcity of clarifying dates. These omissions were no doubt dictated by the desire to let the original actors carry all the story themselves in their own words, but such editorial abnegation seems to this reviewer a questionable advantage." Geoffrey Bruun
+ — Social Educ 3:218 Mr '39 360w
Reviewed by W. E. Martz
Social Studies 30:87 F '39 330w
Springf'd Republican p10 F 17 '39 600w
Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Yale R n s 28:828 summer '39 420w

HILL, FRANK ERNEST. Educating for health; a study of programs for adults. 224p $1.25 Am. assn. for adult educ.

614.07 Public health—Study and teaching
(W) 39-27514

A survey of mass education in health and public hygiene in which "education for health" is defined as including "all education which immediately promotes the physical and mental safety and vitality of mankind," as furnished by public health centers, in radio work, schools, museums, etc. Index.

"The author has done a constructive job and rendered a valuable service from which public health educators and administrators may derive benefit." I. V. Hiscock
+ Am J Pub Health 29:1160 O '39 160w
Booklist 35:382 Jl 15 '39
Boston Transcript p3 Je 17 '39 60w
J Home Econ 31:481 S '39 70w
Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

HILL, GEORGE WILLIAM, and SMITH, RONALD A. Rural relief trends in Wisconsin from 1934 to 1937. 57p $1 Univ. of Wis. press

361.6 Charities—Wisconsin. Unemployment
39-13730

"This monograph is based on 'a series of studies conducted in a sample group of Wisconsin counties selected to represent the relief situation in the rural areas of the entire state' and covers the period 1934-1937. In addition to presenting a factual picture of the rural relief population and the various trends in different types of public assistance, it also contains a statement of the future problems." Am Econ R

"The presentation of facts and trends is excellent. . . It is to be regretted that the authors did not devote more space and consideration to their concluding section, 'What the facts and trends suggest.'" T. L. Norton
+ — Am Econ R 29:841 D '39 170w
Reviewed by Lowry Nelson
Am J Soc 45:629 Ja '40 120w
Wis Lib Bul 35:61 Ap '39

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). Patricia. 317p $2 Lippincott

39-14949

Story of the struggle of Patricia Prentiss, daughter of a wealthy, frivolous family, to find and live a life of inspiration and satisfaction.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 9 '39 70w

"Patricia is quite as priggish as Elsie Dinsmore, but Mrs. Hill's faithful readers will probably forgive that fault and enjoy her mild adventures from public school to engagement party." B. S.
— N Y Times p15 Jl 9 '39 180w
Time 34:54 Jl 3 '39 320w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). The seventh hour. 320p $2 Lippincott 39-2163

Story of a young man's attempt to save from sin his mother and sister, whom he had never known until after his father's death.

"The story is told with Mrs. Hill's customary fidelity to spiritual values." Lisle Bell
Books p15 F 26 '39 100w

"More than sixty of these religious romances have flowed from Mrs. Hill's pen since she began writing, this latest one being as devout and romantic as its predecessors." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p28 F 26 '39 200w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). Stranger within the gates. 328p $2 Lippincott 39-23416

What happens to a sedate but happy family when a college boy brings home a wife, a girl picked up in a road house with a story of hard luck and worse.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p20 O 29 '39 150w
Boston Transcript p1 O 28 '39 100w

"The story stresses the wholesome home life and happily Christian celebrations for Christmas of the Garland family contrasted with the vulgar behavior of Rex's wife. The simple domestic tale achieves its happy ending by the lucky discovery of an unsuspected wickedness in the intruder which reunites the Garlands." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p20 O 22 '39 160w

HILL, HELEN, and MAXWELL, VIOLET. The Vale family; il. by Lois Maloy. 234p $2 Macmillan 39-23862

There were seven of the Vales, not counting their father and mother and cousin Jane. This story of a Washington, D.C., family in the eighteen nineties, describes egg rolling on the White House lawn, a summer at the seashore, the wonders of the Chicago World's Fair, and other excitements of that day. For children of ten to fourteen.

"Putting this family into the nineties does not set it down in some far-away place; at the most it gives the tale a pleasantly foreign flavor. Life not unlike this still goes on. My own pleasure in the book was thus unmarred by the fear that children would not understand it because they had not lived through it, like me. They will understand; they will love it. But I hope they let Mother read it too." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 N 26 '39 350w

"A pleasing story for fourth and fifth grades." Florence O'Gara
+ Library J 64:1000 D 15 '39 120w

"Adding zest to the adventures of the Vale family is the fact that they are based on happenings in a real family, of which Helen Hill was a small member."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 190w

HILL, JAMES. No victory for the soldier. 372p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Collins] 39-4488

An English child prodigy, a pianist and composer who appears in London playing his own symphony at the age of nine, is the hero. John Sebastian Knox was the son of musical, unstable parents, whose merciless exploitation left an indelible flaw in his character. Too confident about his own abilities, yet unsure in his relations with others, John blundered thru life until he finally found a kind of fulfillment in joining in the Spanish civil war.

"Mr. Hill's John Sebastian Knox is a rather fine creation. It is as easy to believe in him and his moods as it is difficult to approve the novelist's conception of him. . . . [But] I felt a sense of strain all through the book." Alfred Kazin
+ — Books p10 F 19 '39 900w

Reviewed by T. L. Cohn
Canadian Forum 19:99 Je '39 180w

"The writing of 'No Victory for the Soldier' is triumphantly lucid, the working life of a musician is conveyed with relentless reality, and a brilliant bitterness illuminates the chapters dealing with the Spanish war. The influence of film technique on Mr. Hill's method is apparent, and he must discipline his bitterness, but he is to be placed high among recent new-comers to fiction." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 30 '38 600w

"Mr. Hill's writing seems to be fused with the life of his hero: both are tense, uncompromising and unsentimental; but both have short passages of beauty and grace. 'No Victory for the Soldier' is a tragedy in which the picture of one genius is so credible that it becomes a picture of genius, universal and timeless." Freda Barry
New Repub 98:258 Ap 5 '39 280w

"In fiction portraits of genius are so seldom really plausible that the success of this newcomer, James Hill, in winning credence for his hero is something conspicuously out of the ordinary. . . . What is remarkable about this book is that one believes unquestioningly in John Sebastian Knox—in his stature as man and musician and in his single-minded passion for his art. He has and demonstrates, without phony histrionics, that quality of spirit which sets genius apart from its fellows. More, Mr. Hill allows him humor, which is a very welcome gift." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p6 F 12 '39 850w

"Some good things in this, but it's uneven."
New Yorker 15:82 F 18 '39 70w

"James Hill's novel fails to be persuasive because the drama of self-sacrifice in Spain seems like a pendant, hung rather perversely upon a story of quite a different sort. By identifying himself with the Spanish cause, the central figure of 'No Victory for the Soldier' seems not to be working out his inevitable destiny but simply to be indulging in a flamboyant gesture. . . . The book is written with complete facility. There is evidence in it of a certain gift for phrase-making. But of the tactics of the novel, the author knows little." J. G.
— + Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 18 '39 360w

"The story is clever and honest, in its own fashion eloquent also. The terse and unemphatic style, innocent of emotional colouring or fine writing, is often impressive, though Mr. Hill relies too much upon bareness of statement as a means of evading difficulties. But what, precisely, are the values of the story? What more does it express than a somewhat complacent view that musicians may be so devoted to music that they become trying and anti-social in their private lives? It is the absence of novelty in this view of the artist-hero that makes one rather tired of him today."

HILL, JAMES—Continued
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p553 Ag 27 '38 700w

HILL, MABEL BETSY. Surprise for Judy Jo; an Apple Market Street story; pictured by [the author]. [64p] map $1.35 Stokes
(W) 39-27730

Two little girls, Judy Jo and her friend Susan, go driving with old Dr Day on his round of calls, and have a full day of surprises and thrills.

Booklist 36:46 O 1 '39

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 40w

"A happy story of one happy, natural day. The illustrations are numerous and attractive, the type clear. It will appeal to second and third grade girls." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 64:999 D 15 '39 60w
Wis Lib Bul 35:188 N '39

HILL, WILLARD WILLIAMS. The agricultural and hunting methods of the Navaho Indians. 194p il map pa $2.50 Yale univ. press [pa 11s 6d Oxford]
970.3 Navaho Indians. Indians of North America—Agriculture. Indians of North America—Hunting 38-18013

"The material here presented includes a description of the agricultural and hunting methods of the Navaho, historic documentation relating to these phases of Navaho life, and the involutions and local variations encountered. Other sections are concerned with the integration of ritual in the various activities of everyday life and with a comparison of Navaho agricultural and hunting methods with those of adjacent cultures." (Pref) Bibliography.

"The present reviewer definitely believes in reviews which are dispassionately outspoken. But, after several extremely careful readings of this monograph, he can find almost nothing at which he can, in all honesty, cavil. It is his impression that Dr Hill's treatment of the ritual aspects of agriculture and hunting is a shade less definitive than the economic and technological." Clyde Kluckhohn
+ Am Anthropol 41:310 Ap '39 700w

Reviewed by G. A. Reichard
Am Soc R 4:754 O '39 400w

HILLIS, MARJORIE. New York, Fair or no Fair; a guide for the woman vacationist; drawings by Cipé Pineles. 206p $1.75 Bobbs
917.471 New York (city)—Description
(W) 39-12976

The author of Live Alone and Like It, tells the Extra Woman, on a solo visit to New York, where to stay and where to eat, when to shop and what to see, how much to spend on a limited budget or how to be extravagant with good sense and taste. Index.

"A woman vacationist can use it longer than most New York guides of the year, and a resident could put most of it to good use."
+ Books p11 Jl 16 '39 190w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 15 '39 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39

"The compact flow of straight and instructive talk is enlivened by bright little sketches of the adventures of Miss R., Mrs. S., etc.—examples horrible or good of the experiences of visiting firewomen. The pet of the lot is Miss Q., a long-suffering aunt . . . [who] rebelled, cashed an insurance policy and went to town: New York. She wound up by writing home for more money and practically getting ready to need a trousseau." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p9 Je 4 '39 600w

HILLYER, ROBERT SILLIMAN. In time of mistrust. 37p $1.50 Harvard univ. press [6s 6d Oxford] 811 39-8201

"A noble ode of hope for the return of the spirit to mankind out of the present despair of money and steel." Forum

"In spite of its use of 'some figures that are common to our speech' today—airplanes, the late hurricane, and so on—it would have spoken to a good many listening people in the 19th century, or in the 18th. And for those who can hear its quiet beauty and welcome its sincerity among their own noise and doubt, it will today also seem a good poem, thoughtfully conceived and finely made." Mildred Boie
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 600w

" 'In Time of Mistrust' is a poem which reveals the faith of a sensitive mind in the indestructibility of good. As such it is a fine human document. As poetry it owes too much to the past, and its faintly mauve phraseology disturbs the modern critical reader."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 10 '39 90w

Reviewed by H. G. Leach
Forum 102:48 Jl '39 20w

HILTON, FRANCIS W. Mañana kid. 274p $2 Kinsey
39-33519

Western story combined with mystery and murder.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p14 D 17 '39 150w
N Y Times p22 F 4 '40 160w

"There is realism in the description of country and characters. The author recently has left his Wyoming ranch, where a number of his previous westerns were written, to live in southern California, scene of his latest story."
Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 160w

HIND, HERBERT LLOYD. Brewing; science and practice; 2v; v 1, Brewing materials. 505p il $12.50 Wiley [50s Chapman]
663.3 Brewing (39-9495)

"The present volume is concerned with materials, and, following an interesting historical introduction, is divided into six main sections devoted to barley, the biochemistry of malt and wort, malt, sugars, hops and brewing waters." Nature

Reviewed by Stephen Laufer
Ind & Eng Chem 17:172 Mr 10 '39 460w

"The book is well produced in large type on good paper; references to many modern papers are given at the end of each chapter, whilst author and subject indexes terminate the volume. The author is to be congratulated on the successful issue of what must have constituted a difficult and laborious task. We look forward with interest to the second volume, on brewing processes."
+ Nature 142:651 O 8 '38 750w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:52 O '39

HINDLE, WILFRID HOPE, ed. We were there, by twelve foreign correspondents [Eng title: Foreign correspondent]. 263p $3 Putnam [10s 6d Harrap]
920 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 39-22005

Twelve British journalists describe their experiences with wars and revolution in Europe and the Far East. Contents: Chinese hot-pot, by O. D. Gallagher; Ordeal in the Mappamondo; or, How to interview Mussolini, by I. S. Munro; A sentimental journey through Palestine, by Arthur Koestler; Czechoslovakia: operation without anaesthetics, by Alexander Henderson; The lighter side, by Douglas Reed; Pilsudski's coup d'état, by Darsie Gillie; One damn' thing after another, by Vernon Bartlett; The Red army in the Ruhr, by F. A. Voigt; Undone by Mickey mouse, by H. D. Harrison; Exit the emperor, by George Steer; Terror in Bengal, by Sir Alfred Watson; With Franco in Spain, by Karl Robson.

Booklist 36:42 O 1 '39

"Most of these twelve British journalists write well, and some of them exceedingly well, about events of world-wide importance. Few of them venture to reveal what these events did to them, how their thinking and perception have been sharpened or what emotional back-fires they have felt. For this reason the book as a whole will appeal chiefly for its story-telling quality and, quite probably, will convince most of its readers that a foreign correspondent's life is the life of Riley—or should we say—of Richard Harding Davis?" Leland Stowe

\+ Books p4 Ag 13 '39 950w

"While many of the personal experiences and anecdotes which they recount are interesting and entertaining reading, the book can by no means be considered as historically important as 'We saw It Happen.'" Pauline Ehrlich

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 450w

"The book is quite as good as its forerunners. Much of it is familiar stuff, for the foreign correspondents have been the publishers' best bet since Vincent Sheean started it all off with his 'Personal History.' But this is all to the good. . . The more of such books the better, therefore—if they are as forthright and vivid as these wide-awake observers have to offer." Carlton McNaught

\+ Canadian Forum 19:159 Ag '39 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:370 Ja '40 10w

"It is indeed a selection of vivid writing by some of the best living journalists, and it would be invidious to name which is the best among them all. I should be unwilling to slight any of my junior colleagues. I read their accounts with sympathy and admiration, and all the time I keep saying to myself, like Ancient Pistol, 'Where is the life that once I led?'" H. W. Nevinson

\+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 30 '39 550w

New Repub 100:167 S 13 '39 40w

Reviewed by T. R. Ybarra

N Y Times p4 Ag 13 '39 850w

"'We Were There' is uneven, somewhat incoherent, frequently inconsequential—but enormously informing and exciting. It is a worthy addition to the numerous journalistic histories of our chaotic world." J. F. Green

\+ — Sat R of Lit 20:14 S 9 '39 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Je 24 '39 350w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. We shall live again. 367p $3 Doubleday

914.37 Czechoslovakia (W) 39-27451

Mr Hindus, author of several books on the New Russia, writes here of Czechoslovakia as he saw it on a visit which began in June of 1938 and lasted thru the terrible weeks of September. A postscript added after March 1939, closes with the words "they will live again!"

Booklist 35:329 Je 1 '39

"A work so earnest and so sympathetic on a subject of importance to all now living, cannot be seriously impaired by a few reservations on style. Mr. Hindus has given us a memorable account of those weeks which profoundly affected the history of our time, and as the events then and since fall into their proper perspective such testimony as his can only grow in value." Vincent Sheean

\+ Books p3 My 14 '39 1100w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p1 My 13 '39 500w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube

Canadian Forum 19:129 Jl '39 490w

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 27 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:166 O '39 30w

"A living, factual, authentic and moving book." Leland Stowe

\+ Living Age 356:496 Jl '39 700w

"The book is a pale shadow of Mr. Hindus's striking studies of the new Russia; it cannot be regarded as a necessary book." W. H. C.

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 6 '39 300w

Reviewed by Julian Bach, Jr.

Nation 148:620 My 27 '39 420w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

New Repub 99:194 Je 21 '39 600w

Reviewed by John Lehmann

New Statesman & Nation 18:287 Ag 19 '39 400w

"What the world has never understood is that these little countries of the European East are not 'artificial' or 'inorganic.' Mr. Hindus's book will help to show that, perhaps more than any other country of modern times, Czecho-Slovakia was a blend of heritage and idea. No doubt he has written a tribute rather than a history, but the tribute enshrines alertness, experience, and a regard for man." G. N. Shuster

\+ N Y Times p1 My 14 '39 1200w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:98 My 13 '39 310w

Pratt p18 winter '40

"This book is one of those rare volumes which combine political insight and social appraisal. It seems to me even more enthralling than 'Humanity Uprooted'—which is something of a record even for Mr. Hindus." H. C. Wolfe

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 My 13 '39 650w

"It would be unfortunate if the good name of the Czechs should suffer from the literary kindnesses of their friends. Mr. Hindus must make the reader apprehensive. For apart from the supposition that he meant it well, it is difficult to discover why he wrote this book. It is uninstructive, superficial, inaccurate, and really not very interesting. It is full of rather pointless incidents." Elizabeth Wiskemann

— Spec 162:966 Je 2 '39 170w

"Although there are probably some inconsistencies in Mr Hindus's picture, the reader will obtain a better understanding of the Czechs from this book, which, nevertheless, is to be regarded as a spirited travelog rather than an exhaustive analysis. Mr Hindus has a light and easily readable style. The account of the author's journalistic and personal experiences during the crisis tends now and then to become trivial. However, Mr Hindus's own temper is as agreeable as that of the Czech people to whom he introduces us."

\+ — Springf'd Republican p7e My 14 '39 1000w

"Mr. Hindus has written an extraordinary book, magnificent in its good points and even where it is weak. About one half of it is devoted to generalizations about the Czecho-slovak people, their problems and their history. Here the story is almost too cleverly, too excitingly told. . . Mr. Hindus redeems himself in the second half of the book, dealing with his experiences in Czechoslovakia during the Munich crisis. In his account of the people of those days of hopes and agony and final collapse, he gives us a brilliant story." J. S. Roucek

\+ — Survey G 28:504 Ag '39 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p274 My 13 '39 800w

Wis Lib Bul 35:164 O '39

HINE, MURIEL. See Coxon, M.

HINKLE, THOMAS CLARK. Buckskin. 247p $2 Morrow

39-21299

Buckskin, a western horse, is the hero. His mother, Black Roan, protected him during the colthood. Altho he was captured several times, Buckskin always got free, until a young cowboy managed to make friends with him. For older boys.

"The Hinkle tales are for young and old. William Allen White reads every one of them 'as quickly as he can lay his hands on a copy,' and the students of Frick Junior High School, Oakland, Calif., have just voted Dr. Hinkle third place in their list of favorite authors. Try this on your outdoor complex." Will Cuppy

+ Books p8 S 3 '39 200w

"The exploits of man and horse make up a simple story simply told that lovers of horses, young and old alike, will relish." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p18 S 17 '39 130w

Wis Lib Bul 35:220 D '39

HINKSON, PAMELA. Seventy years young. See Fingall, E. M. M. B. P.

HINMAN, CHAUNCEY WEED. Practical designs for drilling and milling tools. 171p il $2.50 (15s) McGraw

621.952 Drilling and boring machinery. Milling machinery 38-32798

"An illustrated description and reference book of the principles applied in computing, drafting, and designing of drilling jigs, gages, hand tools, tapping and milling fixtures; concluding with photographic cuts and discussions of heavy-duty drilling and milling tools in operation." (Subtitle) Avoids higher mathematics. Index.

Booklist 35:112 D 1 '38

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '39

HINMAN, STRONG. Physical education in the elementary grades. 523p il $2 Prentice-Hall

371.732 Physical education and training

39-27248

"This book is designed to give the classroom teacher of grades one to six, who conducts physical education classes, a year's balanced program. The material is well organized; the author gives sample semester programs of folk dances, athletic games, stunts, and health lessons. The chapters on story plays and rhythmical activities list Victor records to be used in the musical accompaniment. The book also contains chapters on games and relays, athletic games of low organization, conditioning exercises and stunts, and self-testing activities. Bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by D. B. Treat

Am J Pub Health 29:1361 D '39 240w

Booklist 35:264 Ap 15 '39

HINO, ASHIHEI, pseud. See Tamai, K.

HIRSCHLAFF, ERNST. Fluorescence and phosphorescence. 130p il $1.50 Chemical pub. co. [3s 6d Methuen]

535.3 Fluorescence. Phosphorescence

[39-13333]

"A word about experimental methods, and a brief exposition of indispensable quantum considerations precede a treatment of fluorescent gases and liquids by no means superficial. The sections on quenching phenomena give a truly clear-cut idea of the mechanisms involved. Three subsequent chapters deal sanely with solid phosphors, including a rather full account of the alkali halide problem." Am Chem Soc J

"The undersigned can find only one small pebble to throw. A more complete statement of the possibilities of fluorescence analysis should have appeared among 'Technical Applications.'" G. S. Forbes

+ — Am Chem Soc J 61:979 Ap '39 100w

"The book may, on the whole, be recommended to the general reader. Those already familiar with the subject are likely to discover a number of inadequacies. One feels that the directions of most rapid progress at the present time have not been sufficiently emphasized, and it might have been a good deal wiser to confine the book to one of the more important aspects of the subject." J. T. R.

+ — Nature 143:267 F 18 '39 210w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:23 Ap '39

HITCH, CHARLES JOHNSTON, ed. See Meade, J. E. Introduction to economic analysis and policy

HITCHCOCK, EMBURY ASBURY. My 50 years in engineering; the autobiography of a human engineer [written] in collaboration with Merrill Weed; introd. by Charles F. Kettering. 277p il $3 Caxton printers

B or 92 Engineers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 39-19987

Autobiography of the dean emeritus of the College of engineering at Ohio State University. Mr Hitchcock in his foreword writes: "For nearly fifty years I have been engaged in the practice and the teaching of engineering. . . And if I had my life to live over again I should become an engineer." Index.

Booklist 36:109 N 15 '39

Reviewed by R. F. Legget

Canadian Forum 19:261 N '39 550w

Eng N 123:59 O 26 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 36:16 Ja '40

HITLER, ADOLF. Mein kampf; complete and unabridged, fully annot; editorial sponsors: John Chamberlain [and others; tr. prepared under the auspices of Alvin Johnson]. 994p map $3 Reynal

B or 92 Germany—Nazi movement

(W) 39-27192

HITLER, ADOLF. Mein kampf; the first complete and unexpurgated ed. pub. in the English language [pref. by Ludwig Lore]. 669p $3 Stackpole sons

B or 92 Germany—Nazi movement

(W) 39-27104

"Hitler's 'Mein Kampf,' in the two editions listed above, is now available in English in unabridged form. The abridged translation published here in 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1933] by Houghton Mifflin contained less than half of the German original, which had been issued in two parts, the first volume appearing in 1925 and the second in 1927. . . The edition now published by Reynal & Hitchcock is issued by arrangement with Houghton Mifflin, holders of the copyright in this country. The edition published by Stackpole Sons, who announce that they will pay no royalties to Hitler, was undertaken with the contention that Hitler's copyright is invalid in this country, on the ground that he was a 'stateless' citizen at the time his copyright application was filed." N Y Times

"Readers who expect details of Hitler's own story will find more of them in the editors' notes than in the text. These notes are fairly free from bias and are quite useful. . . The translation attempts to be literal and unfortunately often leaves the reader to guess at Hitler's idea. The work is highly difficult to translate, and on the whole the task has been well done." E. N. Anderson

Am Hist R 45:399 Ja '40 600w (Reynal edition)

Booklist 35:251 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by Dorothy Thompson
Books p3 Mr 19 '39 3100w

"Of the two new editions, the Stackpole translation is far superior in style and accuracy. Hitler's German is usually the bombastic and repetitious language of an orator, but it deserves something better than the word-brew of the Reynal and Hitchcock translation. . . The Reynal and Hitchcock edition does give something essential in its copious footnotes. Most of the time these have been very carefully compiled to interpret a text often baffling to foreigners. Even the annotations are not free from factual errors, however, and the failure to indicate the passages to which they refer adds a bit of confusion to a translation already confounded." R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 25 '39 1250w

"That the style is often turgid, repetitive, at times maddeningly perverse, is of course the fault of the author, and the reader will be grateful to the translators for the notes which here and there briefly correct the more blatant historical falsehoods and misinterpretations." G. M. A. Grube

Canadian Forum 19:93 Je '39 700w (Reynal edition)

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 56:417 Mr 29 '39 1450w (Reynal edition)

"The Reynal version appears to approach somewhat more closely to the feeling of the original German, although both translations show numerous instances where the rendition of individual words or phrases could be improved." U. D. L.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 7 '39 600w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipler, Jr.

Churchman 153:18 My 1 '39 150w (Reynal edition)

Foreign Affairs 17:813 Jl '39 180w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 101:266 My '39 1850w (Reynal edition)

"Unlike 'Das Kapital,' it is devoid of intellectual content or any pretense of rationality. Unlike the Jewish and Christian sacred writings, it is devoid of poetic beauty or ethical catholicity, for its only song is that of fierce tribal fanaticism. . . 'Mein Kampf' differs from most holy writ in that it is vicious, vulgar, and violent. These qualities, however, are but a measure of that cultural degradation of which Hitlerism is the most complete contemporary expression. . . As for the merits of the two versions, both offer competent translations of Hitler's crude German. Both were rushed into print at top speed. Both lack an index, though Reynal and Hitchcock promise one in the second printing." F. L. Schuman

Nation 148:323 Mr 18 '39 950w

"The book must be read, because it still reveals potentialities, if not the precise plans, of Hitlerism. . . The bulk of the book will be new and constantly startling to English readers; moreover, both translations go back to the first edition, much franker than succeeding ones in its revelation of Hitler's mentality, if not of his schemes, and his discussion of the effect of propaganda and terrorism upon the 'happy-driveling German Babbitt.' . . Both translations are fairly good, though constantly differing; both bear evidences of hasty preparation and are frequently careless and inexact. . . Both translations sometimes abandon the attempt to reproduce his 'boners'; where Hitler idiotically says, 'acquit us of all guilt and atonement,' one work has 'blame and guilt,' the other 'guilt and sin.'" Alfred Vagts & Miriam Beard

New Repub 98:170 Mr 15 '39 1350w

"Editorially, the chief distinction between the two editions lies in the fact that the Reynal & Hitchcock edition has been fully annotated, adding some 300 pages to the text itself. These annotations are intended to clarify obscure references in the text, to supply the historical background wherever that seemed desirable, and to relate the predictions and statements of intention made by Hitler in his book to the subsequent course of events. . . The translation used by the Stackpole edition is slightly freer than the other, but both follow the original text closely. On the whole the Reynal & Hitchcock edition leaves the impression of having been more carefully prepared, both as to format and editorial handling."

N Y Times p2 Mr 12 '39 500w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:93 Mr 11 '39 410w

Pratt p27 summer '39

"These new translations will give the American public a new insight into the mind and character of Europe's latest Napoleon. They contain all the torrential verbiage, the racial nonsense, the egocentric emotionalism, and the surpassing shrewdness that was lacking in the abbreviated version. No one who has not ploughed through these wearisome pages can realize the driving importance of anti-semitism in Hitler's philosophy and action; for only after encountering the words 'Jew' and 'Jewish' for the thousandth time does one understand how an embittered, humiliated, and impoverished people were stampeded into National Socialism. In page after page frankly expounding techniques of propaganda and party organization, Adolf Hitler becomes unquestionably the Machiavelli of our age." J. F. Green

Sat R of Lit 19:11 Mr 4 '39 720w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:102 My '39

HITLER, ADOLF. Mein kampf. 2v in 1 567p 8s 6d Hurst

B or 92 Germany—Nazi movement 39-20465

An unexpurgated English translation by James Murphy.

New Statesman & Nation 17:531 Ap 8 '39 850w

Reviewed by R. C. K. Ensor

Spec 162:491 Mr 24 '39 1550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p170 Mr 25 '39 1150w

HJORTH, HERMAN. Forty pieces of fine furniture. 171p pl $2.50 Bruce pub.

684 Furniture. Woodwork 39-14430

"In this attractive book Mr. Hjorth, who is associated with the Saunders Trades School of Yonkers, N.Y., tells how to make finished pieces of small furniture that will compare favorably with factory-built products. Introductory chapters on veneering, simple carving, and wood finishing are followed by forty projects, each with its full-page dimensioned drawing, photograph, bill of materials, and descriptive text. The work is designed for boys and hobbyists who have learned to 'square to dimensions' and to make a respectable mortise-and-tenon joint." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Booklist 35:375 Jl 15 '39

N Y New Tech Bks 23:39 Jl '39

Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

HOADLEY, RAY. How they make a motion picture; phot. by Roman Freulich. 119p $2 Crowell

791.4 Moving pictures (W) 39-27984

Detailed description of the making of motion pictures, which incorporates information on the studio, sets, wardrobe and costumes, makeup, lighting and sound, props, and the making of the animated cartoon. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 36:137 D 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p24 N 12 '39 150w

"Stunning photographs illustrate the clear, readable reporting of this fascinating industry. Good on the animated cartoons. For older children, but they will have to share the book with their parents."

HOADLEY, RAY—Continued
+ New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:59 O '39
"Undistinguished but thorough."
Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

HOBHOUSE, CHRISTOPHER. Oxford; as it was and as it is to-day. 120p il map $3 Random house [8s 6d Batsford]

942.57 Oxford, England. Oxford. University

Historical guidebook to Oxford, England. In alternating chapters the author takes up buildings of various periods, contrasting their first state with the present. The periods considered are medieval, renaissance, reformation, classical, nineteenth-century, and modern. There is one chapter on Oxford and the future. Liberally illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 36:175 Ja 1 '40

"A tightly written, lively and altogether fine book."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 50w

"Mr. Hobhouse has stern views on the Ashmolean and museums generally—'kleptomaniac institutions' that would be better abolished; while, on the theme of female undergraduates—making no allowances whatever for narrow purses—he delivers himself of some exceedingly acid paragraphs. . . But Mr. Hobhouse can be as appreciative as elsewhere he is critical. Not only does he appreciate Oxford itself and the standards with which it has inoculated English life: he writes affectionately and entertainingly of its college buildings. Sometimes, indeed, his enthusiasm is over-done." Peter Quennell
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:562 O 21 '39 800w

"The book is a perfect example of the 'Oxford manner'; it takes certain standards for granted —an unpopular attitude today—and refuses to consider a modest demand on life meritorious. The plan of the book is ingenious and successful." Edward Sackville-West
+ Spec 163:700 N 17 '39 700w

"There is much to be said for this book about Oxford; and something, which will vary with individual knowledge and perhaps prejudice, against it. But its merits are solid. It is, in the first place, rich in illustrations, most of them first-rate pieces of photography. . . In the second place there is Mr. Hobhouse's appreciation of architecture, which is based on a real intimacy with many of the buildings admired or disparaged. Thirdly, the book is so planned that though it makes an excellent, even sumptuous, guidebook, it has none of the guidebook manner."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p596 O 14 '39 550w

HOBSON, SAMUEL GEORGE. Pilgrim to the Left; memoirs of a modern revolutionist. 304p $5 Longmans [12s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

B or 92 Socialism 39-13307

Autobiography of an Irish Socialist, best known to his contemporaries as the originator, with A. R. Orage, of Guild socialism, and as the manager and leading spirit in the National Building guild. Index.

"The record is a tangled skein of mixed anecdotes. Though brisk enough to read, they are not very satisfying to the historical inquirer. The two chapters on the Building Guilds, for instance, leave one without any clear information of what really happened." R. C. K. Ensor
Manchester Guardian p7 D 6 '38 550w

"Pilgrim to the Left is disappointing. Either Mr. Hobson has not taken enough trouble, or his craftsmanship has for the time being deserted him. He succeeds in presenting neither an intelligible portrait of himself nor a clear account of the movements in which he has taken part and the persons with whom he has been brought into living contact. Both of the Building Guild movement and of Guild Socialism generally, his account is jejune and unsatisfying. . . Mr. Hobson is in very much better form when he is dealing with his earlier experiences in the Socialist movement. He gives a lively account of his connections with the Fabian Society, and of his battles there with Shaw and the Webbs." G. D. H. Cole
— + New Statesman & Nation 16:1066 D 17 '38 450w

"It is an intensely personal book, and in this personality lies its value. To read it one must be on handshaking terms with Mr. Hobson. As a mouthpiece of ideas, even as an objective narrator of events, he elicits scepticism. His critical faculties move in a mysterious way their wonders to perform. His judgement of the character and importance of individuals is erratic. . . But when one has read Pilgrim to the Left one has met Mr. Hobson; and that, one feels—though he would no doubt vehemently disagree —is the main thing." Honor Croome
+ — Spec 161:1016 D 9 '38 650w

"This is a remarkable book. Mr. Hobson combines principle with a sense of humour. The resulting blend is one only possible for an Irishman with a long line of Puritan ancestors, and is rich in surprises. . . Apart from its human quality, the book is of exceptional value for the light it throws on the rise of Labour."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p18 Ja 14 '39 400w

HOBSON, WILDER. American jazz music. 230p il $2.50 Norton

780.973 Jazz music (W) 39-27321

Critical analysis, origin and history of jazz music. "[Mr. Hobson's] purpose has been, not to prove that jazz is 'better than Bach' nor to moralize about its 'dangerous' effects as a stimulant, but simply to tell its story and to make its complex, unprecedented rhythms more understandable and hence a greater source of enjoyment." (Publisher's note) An appendix gives a list of thirty phonograph records for the student of this musical form. Index of names.

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39

"Wilder Hobson is the enthusiastic but impartial observer who keenly reacts to that which he describes and who writes in a flexible style, at various times lyrical, humorous and sympathetic. He has no particular ax to grind, and he tries to be fair to all the various 'schools' of jazz, and even takes pains to describe the more commercial aspect of this type of music." Tom Parshley
+ Books p26 Ap 30 '39 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"A clear, intelligent, relevant, and helpful book." A. W. H.
+ Forum 101:vii Je '39 230w

"Mr. Hobson's story is rich in anecdote, resurrects the escapades and personalities of the picturesque pioneers and proceeds to the living with a gusto the success of which may be measured by the fact that at times the reader imagines himself at the scene of action and is constrained to feel that the scene itself is momentous far beyond its cultural significance." A. L. Langley
+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 23 '39 600w

"As a critical guide to jazz players and the music they produce, Mr. Hobson's volume is challenged only by Hugues Panassié's pioneering 'Hot Jazz.' If not as encyclopedic as the Frenchman's study, it is more painstakingly historic and more soundly critical. These are not merely comparative distinctions, but absolute ones; for Mr. Hobson's knowledge of the subject is voluminous and his enthusiasm unlimited." Irving Kolodin
+ Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 22 '39 370w

HOCKETT, HOMER CAREY. The constitutional history of the United States. 417p $3 Macmillan

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history
(39-14964)

The first volume in a proposed three-volume history of the American constitutional system, by a professor of history in the Ohio State university. The period covered in this volume is from 1776 to 1826. Bibliography. Index.

"Although Professor Hockett gives 25 pages to the movement for the convention of 1787, he can spare but 15 pages in which to discuss its work. The result is an entirely inadequate treatment of the writing of the document which is the central feature of his entire three volumes. His discussion of the establishment of the constitution, of the early struggle between Jefferson and Hamilton, and of the beginnings of the persistent problem of states rights is much better." B. F. Wright, Jr.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 17 '39 500w

"The merits of the book are obvious: a simple and logical organization, a style clear though never inspired, accuracy in statement and reasonableness in explanation. For originality, comprehensiveness, critical acumen and philosophical interpretation we shall have to look to the subsequent volumes." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p16 S 10 '39 1100w

"Teachers of the social studies should welcome this book as an aid to their understanding of an important and complex subject. It is probable that few high school students will be able to read it with adequate understanding. It is distinctly a book for mature and thoughtful readers." C. H. Coleman

+ Social Educ 3:587 N '39 600w

HODGES, C. WALTER. Columbus sails; il. by [the author]. 217p map $2.75 Coward-McCann

Columbus, Christopher—Fiction
(W) 39-27985

Legends and stories woven into an account of Columbus' first voyage to America. The story is told as if by eye-witness; a monk, a sailor, and an Indian who returned to Spain with Columbus. For young readers.

Booklist 36:137 D 1 '39

"The author chooses only a few incidents and never falsifies history, but the quality of what he says is delightful and he perceives, as an artist should, what is important." C. J. Finger

+ Books p8 N 19 '39 750w

"There have been many biographies of Christopher Columbus but it has been left to the English artist C. Walter Hodges . . . to present a remarkably colorful piece of writing, reconstructed from historical sources and backgrounds and beautifully illustrated with fine black-and-white drawings and four double page illustrations in color." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '39 250w

"It is good reading and the black and white illustrations are admirable. My own imagination was stirred by the picture of a young English artist of the present day going back to bring Columbus out of the limbo. He has been fortunate in finding an American publisher almost as courageous as the backers of the original expedition. The result is a notable book." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 15:294 S '39 120w

"Columbus emerges as a great and lonely figure following a star. The pictures are as inspiring as the text." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:388 N '39 100w

"Columbus Sails is one of the year's most absorbing and important books. This is due to the author's skillful organization of his narrative, which is told in turn by eye-witnesses of events: a monk, a sailor, and a Christianized Indian. The recaptured flavor of the period, the natural drama of the story, the interesting literary form and fine drawings sum up to a most stimulating book for older children and Young People." Irene Smith

+ Library J 64:843 N 1 '39 100w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 64:1002 D 15 '39 100w

New Repub 101:237 D 13 '39 20w

"The boats in the illustrations are seaworthy and convincing and the book should do well for anyone over eight and under thirteen." Anthony West

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:838 D 9 '39 50w

"The story, like the pictures, is concrete and clear enough for even a child to enjoy, but it is especially for the mature mind to comprehend and appreciate. If this really splendid book was first conceived in terms of youth's responsiveness, it will nevertheless give their elders its richest reward." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p10 N 12 '39 550w

New Yorker 15:84 O 28 '39 20w

"The usually skimpy story is amplified with legendary material and made to come to life by really imaginative writing."

+ New Yorker 15:90 N 25 '39 50w

Reviewed by Katharine Ulrich
Sat R of Lit 21:24 N 18 '39 80w

Reviewed by C. V. Wedgwood
Spec 163:792 D 1 '39 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup ii D 16 '39 50w

Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

HODGES, HENRY GREEN. City management; theory and practice of municipal administration [foreword by Morris Llewellyn Cooke]. 759p il maps $4.50 Crofts

352 Municipal government—U.S. 39-18457

A comprehensive survey of the theory and practice of municipal administration. The author was once General Inspector of Public Works under Morris L. Cooke in Philadelphia. Later he became Director of the Municipal Reference Bureau in Cincinnati's city hall during the period when C. A. Dykstra was city manager. He now teaches at the University of Cincinnati. Index.

"This book will be welcomed by students and teachers of municipal administration, because it seems well suited for text-book purposes. The author has obviously intended the book for this purpose, and he uses numerous charts, diagrams, and illustrations which make more clear what many text-books have treated with word description. . . Those who have criticized other text-books on municipal administration because the emphasis is on the larger cities to the neglect of small cities may make the same criticism of this book." K. P. Vinsel

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:912 O '39 650w

"The author has performed a difficult task in good fashion. In general, he has lived up to the promise in his preface of fearless criticism, but in some cases he has relied on his safe admonition that 'involved controversial questions do not lend themselves to simple answers, which makes this problem more interesting.' His varied experiences make him eminently qualified to write in this field, and the book should aid in the improvement of municipal administration." C. M. Kneier

+ Ann Am Acad 207:221 Ja '40 450w

Booklist 36:36 O 1 '39

Reviewed by E. B. Garside
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 1 '39 700w

Reviewed by H. S. Buttenheim
Survey 76:30 Ja '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:211 D '39

HODSON, HENRY VINCENT. Slump and recovery, 1929-1937; a survey of world economic affairs [issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs]. 484p $4.25 (10s 6d) Oxford

330.9 Economic conditions. Panics. Finance —History 38-36219

"This book, which is founded on the chapters which the author contributed to seven successive volumes of the annual 'Survey of International Affairs' contains a complete account of the period between the two crests of the economic curve which constituted the greatest depression in history. While the international aspects of the economic events recorded have special emphasis, the domestic policies of the larger countries receive attention to the extent that such policies may have affected the general world situation. Events in the United States which have been particularly important in this respect are rather fully treated." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Alzada Comstock
Am Econ R 29:134 Mr '39 280w
Economist 132:369 Ag 20 '38 230w

"It is probably the best synthesis and interpretation of the last decade in world economics that we have."
+ Foreign Affairs 17:437 Ja '39 40w

Reviewed by J. L. Snider
Harvard Business R 17:371 spring '39 110w

"Mr. Hodson has carried out his task with sober responsibility, enormous industry, and a full measure of those qualities which gave distinction to his Economics in a Changing World. He walks cautiously through the maze of events, scrupulously avoiding the pitfalls of post hoc ergo propter hoc or the easy and dramatic explanation of confusion in terms of any single factor. Though he has his mass of facts well in hand, he offers few generalisations; he is self-effacing in judgement and slow to condemn. There can hardly be a better single book of reference for the period covered." Honor Croome
+ Spec 161:274 Ag 12 '38 650w

"Not the least valuable part of the volume is the chapter entitled 'The Background,' which contains a masterly survey in fifty pages of the economic history of the world from 1920 to 1929, when the onset of the great depression revealed the weak foundations of the apparent prosperity."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Ag 6 '38 750w

HOFFINE, LYLA. White buffalo; a story of the Northwest fur trade; il. by E. A. Furman. 284p $2 Longmans

Lisa, Manuel—Fiction 39-24451

Frontier story for boys. Using as a basis the first fur trading expedition to the Northwest in 1807, it records an exciting story of buffalo hunting and Indian fighting.

"The type is larger than in many stories of this sort—happily, for younger eyes are to use it, and in such a story interest keeps the eyes long and steadily upon the page." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 15 '39 400w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 10w
Christian Century 56:1211 O 4 '39 10w

"Neither background, characterization, nor plot is of any great moment but such books have a definite place in providing subject matter of interest, simply written in good English and published in an attractive format, for older intermediate and junior high school boys who frequently have reading difficulties." Miriam Snow
Library J 64:1000 D 15 '39 120w

"Excellent."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 150w

HOFFMAN, ARTHUR SULLIVANT. Fiction writing self-taught; a new approach. 224p $1.75 Norton

808.3 Fiction—Technique (W) 39-27452

"Mr. Hoffman for many years has advised writers who hope to sell their short stories and novels to magazines. His function is that of the coach or trainer. His latest book of advice is aimed at that very considerable group who are practising fiction-writing in private. His counsel is strictly that of a journeyman." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 35:323 Je 1 '39

"Fiction-writing in the view of this book is a trade as definite as that of the plumber or sign-painter, and requires only slightly more imagination, learning, or anything else above the neck. If the amateurs who use his book have the resources of mind and experience and the special qualities essential to successful writing, help can, however, be had from such texts. His picture of the architecture of the short story and of the novel, for that matter, is correct. His methods of self-analysis are sound if they can be applied." W. L. Chenery
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:8 Jl 1 '39 1300w

HOFFMAN, MALVINA (MRS S. B. GRIMSON). Sculpture inside and out. 330p il $3.75; ltd autog ed $7.50 Norton [15s Allen, G.]

730 Sculpture (W) 39-27322

This volume combines Miss Hoffman's reminiscences, with a study of sculpture, outlining methods of modelling and casting, bronzing, enlarging and reducing, etc. Index.

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39

"Miss Hoffman has written an excellent manual which should be of the greatest value not only to serious students of sculpture but also to the general public. . . Not content with an excellent technical manual and with discussions of philosophy and teaching, Miss Hoffman has seasoned her work with some critical judgments of other sculptors, including many of those of the present day. Her comments on the work of Brancusi, for example, are illuminating; and her estimates of the work of Rodin—although coloured by personal considerations—seem to me just. What is most remarkable about these judgments, however, is their extraordinary catholicity. To me it seems incredible that a critic can find so large a field for admirations. It would be interesting indeed to know if there is any sculpture which Miss Hoffman distinctly dislikes." Joseph Hudnut
+ — Books p8 Je 18 '39 750w

"The book may be less universal in its interest than 'Heads and Tales,' for it contains less of the glamour of far-away places. On the other hand, it appeals directly to the human desire to make things; indeed, it is safe to prophesy that it will lead many of its readers into attempting to model and carve. Despite its technical character, it is enlivened by glimpses of people." Wilhelmina Van Ingen
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 360w

"A sculptor is a maker of images not a creator of life. Malvina Hoffman knows sculpture and writes well about it, but in writing about the biology and metaphysics of sculpture she must have slipped, like Alice, through the looking-glass in order to have seen all that she saw." T. C. P.
+ — Cath World 149:628 Ag '39 420w
Christian Century 56:610 My 10 '39 220w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 29 '39 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"Malvina Hoffman is not a profound philosopher, and she has nothing very searching or original to say about the history of sculpture or its æsthetics. On the other hand, as a practical manual of the craft of modelling and carving the second part of the book is excellent. . . To the layman who knows nothing of the elaborate processes by which a statue is made the book will be extremely interesting. If a sculptor could learn his job merely by reading this would be the ideal book for him. It is richly furnished with well-chosen illustrations and diagrams." Eric Newton

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 19 '39 250w

New Statesman & Nation 18:658 N 4 '39 230w

"Of the two sections, it seems to me, the second one, dealing mainly with the craft and tools of that art, is by far the more instructive and thoroughgoing of the two. Here her technical knowledge . . . is truly prodigious and illuminating. It should prove of inestimable aid to the student and professional alike. The first part of the book, however, where Miss Hoffman deals primarily with general principles of art and with the history of sculpture in particular, does not come off quite so well." Dino Ferrari

+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 30 '39 1000w

"The nearly three hundred reproductions drawn from so wide a variety of sources that they must have taken years to accumulate, give the book its greatest value."

+ New Yorker 15:79 Ap 22 '39 120w

"Students professionally interested in sculpture, and those persistently curious readers willing to cope with technical intricacies, must not be discouraged by Miss Hoffman's rather platitudinous remarks, in Part One of this book, concerning sculpture in general. Part Two, comprising three-fourths of the volume, describes the materials and processes of the sculptor, the kinds of knowledge which are indispensable to him, the correct method of making armatures, of enlarging and reducing, of direct carving and of casting,—topics far from dull in the hands of a woman who knows, down to the most minute detail, the 'cuisine' of the art she practices, but never forgets, or allows the reader to forget, that it is an art." O. L.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:30 Ap 29 '39 210w

"This book is eminently readable, again demonstrating that an accomplished artist is more than likely to be able to express himself clearly and attractively in words."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 26 '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p758 D 30 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:110 Je '39

HOFFMAN, PAUL GRAY. Seven roads to safety; a program to reduce automobile accidents; in collaboration with Neil M. Clark [foreword by John W. Darr]. 87p il $1 Harper

629.2136 Automobiles—Accidents. Accidents—Prevention. Highway transportation (W) 39-27323

The president of the Automotive safety foundation here presents a seven-point program for the reduction of automobile accidents. The seven points are: legislation, motor vehicle administration, enforcement, engineering, education, technical personnel training, and research.

Booklist 35:285 My 1 '39

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '39 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

N Y Times p18 Ap 2 '39 320w

"A compact summary of the vital problem of automobile safety, by the president of the Automobile Safety Foundation, together with a program of positive action presented so simply as to have universal appeal."

+ Survey 75:197 Je '39 30w

Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

HOFFMAN, ROSS JOHN SWARTZ. Tradition and progress, and other historical essays in culture, religion, and politics. (Science and culture ser) 165p $2 Bruce pub.

904 History—Addresses, essays, lectures 38-5471

Contents: Tradition and progress; Medievalism and the historical mind; The instrumentalist attack on history; Marxist history and liberalism; A pessimist philosophy of history; Europe and Christendom; The Jacobin heresy; Catholic historical scholarship and the Anglican schism; The property basis of liberty; The church and the totalitarian state; The Catholic mind and modern politics; The return of the church from exile.

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes

Am Hist R 44:943 Jl '39 310w

Cath World 149:635 Ag '39 100w

Commonweal 27:671 Ap 8 '38 30w

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR. The travels of a snail; il. by Zhenya Gay. 141p $1.50 Stokes 39-11408

Akmed, a snail born and bred in Morocco, was destined for some gourmet's table. But he had other desires: he wished to travel. This story for young readers describes the course of Akmed's wanderings until he reached America and became the pet of a little Italian girl.

Booklist 35:366 Jl 1 '39

"This book will be introduced not, I think, to what we call in America 'the great public' but to a comparatively small but most appreciative audience likely to be found almost anywhere that people's reading standards are high. . . There is no satire in all this fantastic pleasantry. As stories of this type for adults are usually the vehicle of satire, and as satire is usually resented by children, its absence should be noted." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 7 '39 400w

"This is a gay story, subtle and somewhat adult in its humor, charmingly written and a joy to read aloud. It will have a difficult time finding its rightful readers because it will not fit the small child who wants an animal story nor the nature lover who takes his science hard. Recommended for libraries with ample funds and for boys and girls of ten and over who appreciate the unusual book not written to pattern." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 64:518 Je 15 '39 210w

"Miss Hoffman has written an unusual story, with atmosphere, humor and perception, and in her imaginative ability to see the world as Akmed the snail saw it, and the consistency with which she tells her story from her snail hero's point of view, she suggests Hans Christian Andersen." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 9 '39 750w

HOFMANOWA, KLEMENTYNA (TANSKA). A girl who would be queen; the story and the diary of the young Countess Krasinska, by Eric P. Kelly and Clara Hoffmanowa; decorations by Vera Bock. 201p $2 McClurg

Krasińska, Franciszka, consort of Charles, duke of Courland—Fiction (W) 39-27806

"When the great trilogy of Sienkiewicz was arousing world-wide interest in the history of Poland, some forty years ago, a historical novel by Klementyna Tanska Hofmanova (1798-1845), based on the life of Francoise Krasinska, consort of the Duke of Courland, and written in the form of a diary, was brought out in this country in an English translation. . . This novel Eric Kelly has now provided with a preface, an introduction, and several supplementary chapters, the whole offered as a book for young people." Books

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 O 8 '39 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 21 '39 150w

"Long enjoyed by older girls who have learned of its romantic appeal, the Journal of Countess Krasinska now appears in a new edition with its historical background supplied by Eric Kelly. Against the darkness of the present time in Poland's history the happy dreams of a beautiful Warsaw belle who had the high ambition of becoming Queen of Poland are particularly tragic. But a new edition was needed; it is attractive and certainly timely." A. M. Jordan

HOFMANOWA, KLEMENTYNA—Continued
+ Horn Bk M 15:388 N '39 60w
Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p12 S 10 '39 400w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 140w
Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

HOGAN, ERLIN. The four funny men; with il. by Inez Hogan. [55p] $1 Dutton
Children as authors 39-16107
Story for the very young, written by an eight-year-old and illustrated by her aunt. It describes the adventures of a little girl, her pet squirrel, and the four very funny looking men who lived on a nearby hill.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p5 Ag 20 '39 250w

"Eight-year-old Erlin wrote the story and her aunt, Inez Hogan, drew the pictures. Between them they have captured much of the simplicity and charm of an old folk tale." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 100w
Springf'd Republicn p7e D 10 '39 140w

HOGAN, INEZ. Mule twins [il. by the author]. unp $1 Dutton 39-20441
Story for very young children about the mule twins and the little Negro boy who trained them to take part in a homemade circus.

"Even babies will like the pictures, and there is more text than usual because side remarks are put into slightly smaller lettering than the narrative. I'd call this a safe summer present for any four-year-old." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Ag 20 '39 300w

"Inez Hogan seems to know so instinctively what details will interest and amuse little children and to be able to describe them so well by word and picture that duplicates and replacements of her books are constantly necessary." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 64:662 S 1 '39 100w

HOGAN, INEZ. Nicodemus and the gang [il. by the author]. [53p] $1 Dutton 39-2713
Nicodemus, the little colored boy who figures in the author's former stories, helps his gang in the building of a club house, altho they are all considerably hampered by the activities of Nicodemus' Little Sister.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 F 26 '39 410w

"The subject of the story is one to appeal to any child who has just begun to feel the urge for organization, although the narrative itself lacks a little of the brisk punch which characterized earlier incidents in Nicodemus's career, but Miss Hogan's illustrations are as full of motion and zest as ever." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 F 26 '39 190w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 280w

HOGBEN, LANCELOT THOMAS, ed. Political arithmetic; a symposium of population studies. 532p maps $9 Macmillan [30s Allen, G]
312.0942 Great Britain—Population. Great Britain—Statistics, Vital. Fecundity. Ability 38-17697
"The volume for which Professor Lancelot Hogben revives Sir William Petty's title has three parts and two purposes. One part of the three consists of seven papers by members of the former Department of Social Biology in London, over which Professor Hogben presided, dealing with quantitative aspects of the population problem. Another part consists of three papers of the same origin, dealing with the recruitment of social personnel. The third part, taking first place in the volume, is an introduction contributed by Professor Hogben himself as 'Prolegomena to Political Arithmetic.' Of the two purposes, one is the direct advancement of knowledge about a particular problem of human society. The other purpose is to raise once more, formally and fully, the issue of method in Economics and other studies concerned with human society and the relation of these studies to Natural Science." New Statesman & Nation

"Each chapter is an interesting, careful, and detailed treatment of the objective information available on its particular subject handled by a competent scholar." F. A. Ross
+ Am Soc R 4:287 Ap '39 250w
Reviewed by Frank Lorimer
Ann Am Acad 203:241 My '39 500w
Foreign Affairs 17:631 Ap '39 10w

"We can bank more on the genius than we need worry about the folly in this ably edited book. One does not often find associated with such well-displayed ability for factual study such a mature insight into scientific methodology, such a gift for finished, terse, and incisively critical prose, such a profound knowledge of the history of science, so much new and important information. This book is a classic in demography, sociology, and economics. It may well prove to be many years ahead of its time as a scientific treatise; fifty years ahead of modern neoclassical thought in its scientific humanism." N. E. Himes
+ J Pol Econ 47:751 O '39 1850w

"The volume will certainly be convenient as a starting-point or a source of data, even for those who are using more advanced methods in the approach to population problems. A book like this should win recruits to these studies, and it would have been still more usable had it contained an index, or even a detailed table of contents. The excellent summaries at the end of most chapters do not compensate for this lack." J. M.
+ — Nature 141:892 My 21 '38 950w

"The seven papers on quantitative aspects of population continue lines of research which by now are familiar to most students of social affairs. . . The three papers of the second section break newer ground. . . These two parts represent solid contributions to knowledge on issues of incalculable importance. But the point—or the spearhead—of Political Arithmetic is to be found in the thirty pages of introduction, in which Professor Hogben carries on his war against the economists, whom he charges with having turned what should be a science into scholastic word-spinning from self-evident general principles. 'Prolegomena to Political Arithmetic' is as brilliant with barbed phrases as anything that Professor Hogben has written, and as weighty and serious of purpose as it is brilliant." W. H. Beveridge
+ New Statesman & Nation 15:796 My 7 '38 1700w

"A volume of fine statistical and intellectual quality."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p363 My 28 '38 550w

HOGEBOOM, AMY. Treasure in Gaspesy; il. by [the author]. 115p $2 Dutton
Children in Canada (W) 39-20727
Short stories about Philippe and his friends, which show the life and customs of the inhabitants of the Gaspé peninsula. Intended to be read to children from the age of four upwards.

Booklist 36:73 O 15 '39
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p15 N 12 '39 240w

"This collection of 20 stories about the customs and habitants of typical places throughout the Gaspe Peninsula is a real addition to the book lore of young children. . . Adorable is the word for the pictures."
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 70w

"She tells charmingly and truly of child life in the quaint picturesque Gaspé Peninsula and we recommend her book for those who can only look as well as for those who can read."
+ Cath World 150:377 D '39 70w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith
Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 90w

"There is less unity in this book than in Marguerite de Angeli's 'P'tite Suzanne,' but there is even more information and much the same sense of a good life lived with zest within the circle of proven ways." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p32 N 12 '39 200w

"The book has enchanting illustrations in color and in black and white by the author, and weaves its facts and legends into a chronicle of the excursions of some small children." P. E. G. Quercus
+ Sat R of Lit 20:24 S 2 '39 60w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 50w
Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

HOGNER, DOROTHY CHILDS (MRS NILS HOGNER). Old Hank Weatherby; pictures by Nils Hogner. 71p $1.50 Oxford

39-8351

Story for young readers about a clumsy, absent-minded farmer, old Hank Weatherby. Hank's patient wife put up with all of his clumsiness in the hope that some day his good qualities would get the upper hand, and sure enough they did.

"There are a great many full-page drawings, almost as many as the pages of nice clear type, and the broadly comic quality of the pictures does not flag. The book is offered to children from seven to ten, and is one that will amuse country and city children alike, something you cannot say of all the funny books." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Mr 26 '39 430w

"If the humor in this comedy of misadventures is applied with a heavier touch than is usual in Dorothy's Hogner's books, it is of the vigorous, active kind for which children look when they demand the funny papers, and it points up an accurate picture of old-fashioned New England farm life with strong high lights, just as do Nils Hogner's amusing illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 30 '39 270w

HOGNER, DOROTHY CHILDS (MRS NILS HOGNER). Summer roads to Gaspé; il. by Nils Hogner. 288p map $3.50 Dutton

917.1479 Gaspé peninsula, Quebec (province) —Description and travel (W) 39-27377

The Hogners' trip to Quebec and the Gaspé peninsula was made in the old Ford car that had previously carried them to the Southwest. Most of the time they camped out at night and came into close relations not only with the farmers and village folk but with gnats and mosquitoes. The motor trip was at the end topped off with a brief boat trip to Labrador and Newfoundland.

Booklist 35:305 My 15 '39

"On the whole, the Hogners didn't have a bad time. This adaptable pair could probably enjoy themselves anywhere, as Mrs. Hogner's good-humored account of this particular journey proves. But 'Summer Roads to Gaspé' is no publicity tout for the quaint peninsula. . . The book is, on the whole—if I may risk a pun in reverse—a pretty pedestrian account of a motor trip, to which Nils' excellent sketches add great zest." F. H. Britten
Books p4 My 28 '39 600w
Boston Transcript p2 My 20 '39 260w

" 'Summer Roads to Gaspé' is a very good travel chronicle, individual and alive. And the quality of life is instantly arresting in Nils Hogner's drawngs, whether the picture shows men of the Gaspé working to wrest a profit from the porpoise (which they shoot), the salmon leaping in the pools of the York River or the cold majesty of the Percé Rock." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p18 My 7 '39 650w
Pratt p24 summer '39

"Mrs. Hogner supplies a light narrative of informal travel, gathering up incidents and impressions for the benefit of readers—or prospective travelers—who want to enjoy themselves without too much mental effort. Mr. Hogner's illustrations have a pleasing quality."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 950w
Wis Lib Bul 35:111 Je '39

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH LANGLAND. Not so long ago; il. by Richard A. Holberg. 132p $1.75 Crowell

39-10759

Describes in story form a little girl's visit to the World's Columbian exposition in 1893, and all her adventures there.

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

"The story keeps clear of the patronizing tone so easy to pass on to children in talking about the recent past; fashions a century old are either charming or ugly, but those of year before last are always comic. But by showing children so much like simple-hearted little girls today, as delighted at a chance to talk through the telephone as they now would be at a glimpse of television, the tale takes on timeliness that gives the differences in garments only an extra touch of the picturesque." M. L. Becker
+ Books p14 My 7 '39 450w
Christian Century 56:582 My 3 '39 20w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p8 Je 26 '39 120w
Horn Bk M 15:225 Jl '39 140w
Reviewed by Florence O'Gara
Library J 64:469 Je 1 '39 110w
Wis Lib Bul 35:220 D '39

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH LANGLAND. Oh Susannah [pictures by] Richard Holberg. 108p $1.50 Doubleday

(W) 39-30376

Susannah was a lively little tomboy, whose home was near Minneapolis in the 1870s. The story is of her work, her school, troubles with the Indians, playmates, and her heroic services on the day her home burned. Later there is a visit to her relatives in Vermont where Susannah tried to learn to be a lady.

Booklist 36:179 Ja 1 '40

"Susannah's experiences with Indians, her sports, her days at school with her chosen friends will vitalize American history for children of nine or ten. . . Mr. Holberg's pictures of little girls in flounced skirts, capes and high boots complete the sense of the period and give point to Susannah's longing for red boots with tassels on them." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:45 Ja '40 130w

"An engaging story. . . An attractive book, well made and well written. Will be popular with fifth grade girls." Marian Herr
+ Library J 65:124 F 1 '40 100w

"Good American story."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 20w

HOLBROOK, STEWART H. Iron brew; a century of American ore and steel. 352p map $2.50 Macmillan

672 Iron industry and trade—U.S. Steel industry and trade—U.S. (W) 39-27657

Popular, anecdotal history of the iron and steel industry in America. Index.

HOLBROOK, S. H.—Continued

Booklist 36:3 S '39

"Holbrook showed in 'Holy Old Mackinaw' that he can use words with great force, in creating character, color, atmosphere, action. 'Iron Brew' has even more steam and punch." James Stevens

+ Books p4 S 17 '39 1050w

"There is always a place for a new study if it is written as literature. . . 'Iron Brew' is mostly original as a book, and has news freshness; but there is a consistent feeling in it, a presentation of a special era, which makes it more than reporting, in spite of a few journalistic flourishes and cliches." I. M. P.

+ Books p22 O 8 '39 350w

"No matter whether he is writing about a new invention, a complicated process, or a mining town, the author's information is fresh and accurate. Careful investigation of newspapers and other primary sources and first hand conversations with old-time miners and steel workers, recorded in a racy and colloquial style help to make 'Iron Brew' a valuable and entertaining book." Daniel Aaron

+ Boston Transcript p15 S 14 '39 650w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '39 400w

New Repub 100:195 S 20 '39 20w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 O 8 '39 1500w

Pratt p12 winter '40

"When the author writes about the mills on the Monongahela, the financial operations of Carnegie, Frick, and Oliver, and the overnight creation of Gary, Indiana, he obviously writes from an inkpot filled by others. These second-hand parts of his book, rapid and glancing as they are, are not always either clear or careful. But the pages on wild-ore trimmers in the Northwest; on boomtown life; on the lusty Cornish, Irish, and German miners of the Marquette, with tales of their exploits, loves, and crimes gathered by Mr. Holbrook in Ishpeming; on the fierce strikes that swept at times across the iron-ranges; on the great disasters in the mines—these are full of new information, of vigorous, salty writing, and of a compelling sympathy." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:19 S 30 '39 550w

"A lusty picture of the iron and steel industry in the United States. . . The author does not neglect to dress up his subject, as may be inferred from some of his chapter headings—'Backwoods Gangster,' 'Rusty Ghosts Are Walking,' 'Red-Bellies Down the Lake,' etc."

Springf'd Republican p12 S 22 '39 260w

"This book attempts to skim the history of iron and steel and turn it into a thriller. Inconsequential antics even of insignificant men, if sufficiently lurid when looked at closely, are treated as a part of the epic of steel. . . On the other hand, genuinely important events are often presented without much of an inkling of their significance. . . Toward the end, the writer turns serious and devotes a couple of chapters to the great strike of 1919-1920 and the organization of the steel workers under CIO auspices. This account is necessarily scanty because most of the space has already been used up in telling the tales of various hell roarers. But you get the impression that if he had thought of it earlier he could have done a good job at writing labor history." J. A. Fitch

— + Survey G 29:40 Ja '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 35:183 N '39

HOLDEN, ANGUS HOLDEN, 3d baron. Ceylon. 315p il map $3 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen, G]

915.48 Ceylon [39-33078]

A volume of travel sketches. The author writes of rest houses and what the traveler may expect of them, of good travel routes, of the "lost cities" and ancient temples, of the legends, history and traditions of the Ceylonese. Index.

Books p8 S 24 '39 180w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 25 '39 20w

"Delightfully written by an observant and humorous traveller." H. P. B. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '39 310w

"The noble Lord is no great shakes as a writer, his style being something of a cross between the ponderousness of a letter to the Times and the facetiousness of an after-dinner speaker. He nevertheless manages to make a readable book about Ceylon, its cities, its countryside, its people, and its monuments." R. H.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:21 Je 17 '39 340w

"[The author's] enthusiasm, his quick eye for the beautiful and his gift of descriptive writing are the distinguishing features of his book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 25 '39 440w

HOLDEN, RAYMOND PECKHAM. Believe the heart. 497p $2.50 Holt

39-31689

Continues the story begun in Chance Has a Whip (Book Review Digest, 1935). The present book is a character study of Hendrick Fillmore's second wife, Leda, a beautiful woman whose first desire is to make other people happy. When Hendrick is killed in an accident his widow is left to cope with his cold, patrician mother, a steel company in financial straits, and the fact that she is to have a child.

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books p6 N 12 '39 700w

"Sad to say, Leda is dull except to the writer, who is so in love with her that he treats her utterly without the irony that would have saved her for the reader." Dorothy Greenwald

Boston Transcript p1 D 2 '39 280w

Reviewed by Eleanor Clark

New Repub 102:92 Ja 15 '40 300w

"It happens, sometimes, that an author creates an entirely different impression from that which he intends. In 'Believe the Heart,' for example, Mr. Holden's intention is clear. He has fallen in love with his heroine, Leda Fillmore, and he believes that the qualities which she exemplifies are somehow admirable and needed. . . To the reader, unfortunately—or at least to this reader—the case appears otherwise. . . 'Believe the Heart' strikes me as a novel with the emphasis in the wrong places. It approaches the fatuous, at times, where it might have stung." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p7 N 19 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:105 N 18 '39 50w

"The success of such a novel depends on two things: the quality of the writing and the reader's interest in the central character. 'Believe the Heart' is well written: the prose is lucid, rhythmical, and firm, with only an occasional passage of showy description; and the spaciousness and leisurely movement in the Great Tradition of novel-writing are pleasant in an age of scurry and fidget. But is Leda worth five hundred pages? Certainly the novel itself hardly warrants the publisher's blurb that she is a 'thoroughly appealing woman.' She not only eats her cake and has it, too, but nibbles generously at other people's pastry as well." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 N 18 '39 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 260w

Time 34:86 N 27 '39 220w

HOLDRIDGE, DESMOND. Feudal island. 244p il map $2.50 Harcourt

918.1 Marajó island, Brazil—Description and travel (W) 39-27249

Marajó is an island, as large as Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, lying in the mouth of the Amazon. Its inhabitants live in almost feudal fashion, large landowners with many retainers and dependents, engaged principally in raising cattle. The author had visited the island early in the 1930s, but this book deals chiefly with the experiences and observations of an extended visit last year.

Booklist 35:268 Ap 15 '39

"Desmond Holdridge combines a zest for living with courage to face the implications of life. He is not afraid to think about what he sees. He loves Brazil. . . 'Feudal Island,' as a personal narrative, is somewhat episodic and disjointed. But from start to finish it is interesting." John Patton

+ Books p20 Ap 2 '39 700w

"For the most part, Mr. Holdridge's account is a convincing narrative of adventures apparently not overdrawn. There are passages of insight into native superstitions and the methods of Amazonian witch doctors. Vividly portrayed are customs of cowboys on this remote island where oxen are often used in place of horses because of the deep mud." R. H. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 16 '39 440w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams

Commonweal 30:222 Je 16 '39 240w

Foreign Affairs 17:822 Jl '39

"While Mr. Holdridge has almost a sentimental admiration for the responsible lords of Marajó and fervently hopes that the day of change may be a long way off, he is not blinded by his emotions, and he writes with force and clarity and a frequent welcome flash of wit about an essentially distressing subject." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 9 '39 650w

New Yorker 15:80 Ap 1 '39 30w

"Holdridge has a quick ear for the turn of dialogue or the sounds a ghost might make when walking through his waste basket; it is important for him to note the exact 'eenk-a-da-unk-a-dunk' of his complaining saddle beneath him. His eye delights to find the view down a crocodile's throat 'esthetically pleasing. In fact the whole animal is a functional joy, without a gadget on it. . .' His nose revolts at the stench of a crocodile wound in human flesh, and his palate enjoys good rum. A man of great sensual gifts is Holdridge, and he imparts them extremely well." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Ap 1 '39 380w

Wis Lib Bul 35:111 Je '39

HOLDRIDGE, DESMOND. Northern lights; il. by Edward Shenton. 240p map $2.75 Viking

910.4 Voyages and travels. Labrador—Description and travel (W) 39-19521

As a boy of eighteen the author bought a small schooner, and with two older men for companions, but with very little equipment or knowledge, sailed from Nova Scotia northwards, along the coast of Labrador to the Button Islands. This account of their adventures in search of gold and bears in country where neither existed is lively and full of humor.

Booklist 36:6 S '39

"Out of his thirteen-year-old notes and his memories Desmond Holdridge has written a realistic and sometimes beautiful narrative." Carl Carmer

+ Books p4 Jl 16 '39 600w

"There was no sense in the Dolphin's trip, no real purpose, and no reason for the wanton risks involved. All this the author, now a professional explorer, points out to his readers. But any who love nautical talk or have had the impulse to sail out of safe waters will enjoy Mr. Holdridge's 'Northern Lights.'" Sarah Chokla

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 300w

New Repub 99:372 Ag 2 '39 50w

"Boys of every age will like this book, because there is so much of the boy spirit, recollected in tranquillity, in it. All sailors of small boats will like it. It will make any one's heart beat faster and take him a long way from city streets." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 16 '39 1300w

New Yorker 15:64 Jl 15 '39 20w

"Throughout the entire story there is a distinct impression that of all the well organized, carefully planned expeditions in which Mr. Holdridge has taken part, none was as much fun as this first one. And strangely enough, for all its vagueness and apparent shiftlessness, it was of value, for Alexander Forbes, who mapped Northern Labrador from the air, acknowledges a debt of gratitude for the information obtained from the log of their voyage. It is a joyous book and well worth reading." M. A. Peary

+ Sat R of Lit 20:13 Jl 15 '39 360w

Wis Lib Bul 35:164 O '39

HOLDSWORTH, SIR WILLIAM SEARLE. Some makers of English law. 308p $3.75 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

923.4 Lawyers. Law—Great Britain. Law—Addresses, essays, lectures 39-8006

"These lectures were given by me as Tagore Professor in Calcutta University in December 1937 and January 1938. My two objects are, first to give some account of the most important of the men whose work entitles them to be reckoned amongst the Makers of English Law, and, secondly, so to connect their biographies with the general history of the law that the book will be a short biographical history of English law." (Pref) Partial contents: Edward I; Renaissance, reformation, and reception of Roman law; Sir Edward Coke; Hale and Nottingham; Blackstone, Bentham, and Austin; Maine, Maitland, and Pollack. Index.

Am Hist R 45:440 Ja '40 50w

"A book unmistakably steeped in the obstinate and virile spirit of the common law and enriched with wise, vivid and full-bodied language." Joseph Calderon

+ Commonweal 29:724 Ap 21 '39 360

Reviewed by F. B. Wiener

Harvard Law R 52:1384 Je '39 1000w

"The book contains plenty to interest the historian who is not a lawyer, for it throws unexpected side-lights on political history. . . It would be wrong on the other hand, to suggest that a book like this is, or can be, of practical use (though it may be of great interest) to the practising lawyer." John Sparrow

+ — Spec 161:1131 D 30 '38 550w

HOLLAND, KENNETH. Youth in European labor camps; a report to the American youth commission [with a foreword by Robert Fechner]. 303p il $2.50 Am. council on educ.

362.7 Youth. Labor camps 39-27731

Account of the various systems in the labor camps of European countries, studying their growth and individual differences for the purpose of developing a sound program in the United States camps. The author visited European camps and worked in some of them during the summers of 1933 and 1936.

"The volume is amply and usefully illustrated and documented but has no index."

Am Soc R 4:913 D '39 160w

Booklist 36:144 D 15 '39

"This report covers its wide field with satisfying thoroughness, even to a survey of labor service for women ('for the most part limited in scope and short-lived') and a résumé of the labor-camp movement in South Africa, Australia and Japan. The book is excellently illustrated with sixty-four pages of photographs, and its systematic arrangement adds to the reference value of its clear and readable text."

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 27 '39 440w

Reviewed by F. S. Brownlee

Social Educ 4:70 Ja '40 500w

HOLLAND, RUPERT SARGENT. The boy who lived on London bridge; il. by Paul Quinn. 321p $2 Macrae Smith co.

(W) 38-35014

England in the days of the Spanish Armada is the scene of this story for young readers. It describes the lively adventures of Giles Lytton, apprenticed to his uncle, who was a goldsmith and lived in one of the houses on London bridge.

Booklist 35:177 Ja 15 '39

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 26 '39 230w

HOLLAND, RUPERT SARGENT. The Château of the swan; il. by Elinore Blaisdell. 305p $2 Farrar

Joséphine, consort of Napoléon I, emperor of the French—Fiction (W) 39-23415

A romantic historical novel for young readers. The time is the 1790s; the scene shifts from the island of Martinique to France. The chief character is a young girl, whose birth is surrounded in mystery. Among others Josephine and Napoleon play their roles in the story.

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 28 '39 200w

Reviewed by Jean Stewart
Library J 64:871 N 1 '39 90w

HOLLINGTON, RICHARD DEMING. Psychology serving religion; a practical guide to life adjustments. 248p $2 Abingdon

258 Psychology, Physiological. Psychology, Religious 38-38256

Dr Hollington, professor of church administration and pastoral counseling in Garrett Biblical institute, has for his purpose "to put into the hands of the average person the scientific knowledge of human life which may be used in understanding and dealing with the personal problems that he may be called upon to solve for himself, or in aiding others." The book is divided into four sections: Genesis of the soul, dealing with the development of personality; Normal adjustment, in infancy, childhood, adolescence, and adult life; Maladjustment; Readjustment. Index.

"One will search long for a better text than Dr. Hollington provides." C. T. Holman
+ Christian Century 56:155 F 1 '39 210w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 153:17 F 15 '39 130w

"The author is an M.D. and a Ph.D. in psychology, and has to his credit thirty years in the pastoral ministry. Together these constitute a high degree of presumption that the writer is competent. Our judgment is that the thoughtful reader will not be disappointed. The book does not aim to make a psychiatrist out of the average minister, but it does look toward making him a wise and understanding 'shepherd of the flock.' . . In fifteen chapters the author adequately covers the whole range of current psychological thinking, particularly as it impinges upon religion. I feel that the book will meet a real need among us older ministers whose formal education ended before the rise of contemporary psychology, and whose busy lives make it difficult to keep abreast of history-making thought." W. R. McNutt
+ Crozer Q 16:67 Ja '39 220w

Reviewed by E. J. Chave
J Religion 19:301 Jl '39 200w

HOLLIS, ERNEST VICTOR. Philanthropic foundations and higher education. 365p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

378.31 Education, Higher. Foundations, Charitable and educational 38-27541

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Am Econ R 29:634 S '39 90w

Reviewed by E. Y. Hartshorne
Am Soc R 4:444 Je '39 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Stabler
Books p17 Ap 9 '39 320w

"The reader is certain to be impressed by the author's objectivity in dealing with his subject. The weaknesses of foundations and the mistakes that they have made are pointed out, but throughout the entire volume there is abundant evidence of an honest attempt to give to all issues impartial consideration. The volume as a whole leaves the reader with a realization that higher education in the United States is deeply indebted to the foundations and that, while they have made mistakes, their effects as a whole have been highly beneficial." G. A. Works
+ El School J 39:790 Je '39 550w

"Professor Hollis has written a good book that should be paralleled, perhaps on a smaller scale, by a study of Philanthropic Foundations and Libraries (college and other)." H. B. Van Hoesen
+ Library J 64:187 Mr 1 '39 1250w

"Dr. Hollis has looked at the situation without astigmatism. He has paid particular attention to foundations' critics. He has examined their charges and has sought reasons for the existence of things complained of. The result is a balanced, informative study set forth in the clean atmosphere of fairness. It is worthwhile for readers whose ears may be somewhat deafened by the warwhoops of left-wing comrades yet cannot be lulled by the dignified inarticulateness of some of the philanthropic boards." S. T. Williamson
+ N Y Times p3 F 19 '39 480w

Reviewed by Harold Goldthorpe
Social Forces 18:305 D '39 800w

Reviewed by D. A. Weaver
Survey 75:127 Ap '39 550w

HOLLISTER, MRS MARY (BREWSTER). Pagoda anchorage; il. by Margaret Ayer. 268p $2 Dodd

(W) 39-22442

Pagoda Anchorage was the harbor of Fukien. This story for girls from ten to fourteen takes place in Fukien in the days of the tea clippers.

Reviewed by Vivian Lundberg
Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 100w
Christian Century 56:1110 S 13 '39 20w

"The family's life in China, the mystery surrounding it, and the solution of that mystery combine to make a fine story which is both realistic and romantic. Mrs. Hollister's knowledge of the country and her sympathetic interest in its people and their problems injects into the story a note of sincerity and actuality which stories of this type do not always possess. Readers of junior high age and above will enjoy it." A. L. Shea
+ Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 150w

"Mary Brewster Hollister is primarily a story-teller, and if her tale verges a little on the melodramatic and turns out a little too neatly for sheer credulity, it is, nevertheless, one of swift movement, with a touch of romance which will appeal to girls from ten to fourteen. It lacks something of the unforced natural quality of her earlier books, yet, like those, it repays reading for its color and multiple details of Chinese life, and this one brings to life those days which to Americans at least will always be one of the most romantic periods in history." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 O 1 '39 450w

HOLLOWELL, LILLIAN, ed. A book of children's literature. 942p $5; college ed $3.75 Farrar

808.8 Children's literature. Children's literature—Bibliography 39-1536

Anthology covering "the whole realm of children's literature." It includes fairy tales, fables, myths and legends, hero tales, animal and other nature stories, realistic stories, and poetry. Reading lists. Index.

Reviewed by Elsie Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 130w

"There is such richness in the content of this book and such an appreciation of literary values that it is a source of power for true understanding of the finest in children's literature. Many high school students interested in general literature cannot fail to find 'reading for fun' in discovering this mine of treasure." M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '39 220w

"'A Book of Children's Literature' has been compiled with taste, knowledge and genuine enthusiasm. It will be useful and full of inspiration for those working with children and it will prove an excellent family reading book for households where books are not readily available. It is unfortunate, however, that the compiler did not include the specific books from which selections have been taken." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 13 '39 400w
New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 20w

HOLMAN, CHARLES THOMAS. The religion of a healthy mind. 210p $2 Round table
201 Psychology, Religious. Mental hygiene (W) 39-19881

Simply written chapters on the place of religion in the creating of a healthy personality. The book is divided into two sections: Factors that menace mental health; How Christian faith promotes mental health.

Booklist 36:81 N 1 '39

"Professor Holman is no fanatic and attributes no magical efficacy to either faith cure or psychiatry. So far is he from being a fanatic that I should say this is one of the most sensible books I ever read about religion." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:1071 S 6 '39 600w

"[This book] should be required reading for all ministers and church-school workers; for all, in short, who try to help people through the difficult and perplexing problems of life. Indeed, it should be read by all those who want to understand themselves a little better. There is scarcely an area of tension in the inner life with which the author does not deal in illuminating and constructive fashion." H. C. Phillips

+ J Religion 20:103 Ja '40 200w

HOLME, GEOFFREY. We were in the ark. 96p il $2.50 (6s) Studio

Fantastic story of a meeting of the animals at The Ark Club, founded just after the great flood. They met to discuss man, his vagaries and what to do about it, but the meeting broke up in disorder. Illustrated.

"The book is full of good drawings and plenty of fun. There are thirty-eight full page portraits of leading members of the club and over sixty other drawings depicting some of the humorous situations at the meeting. For children from eight to eighty, it is the ideal gift book."

+ School Arts 38:5a My '39 100w

"This little fantasy, which should appeal strongly to children, has many really delightful illustrations—serious and charming studies of animals of every kind, as well as caricatures which emphasize the comparisons between man and the beasts."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup sup xx N 5 '38 180w

HOLMES, JOHN ALBERT. Fair warning; with decorations by Henry B. Kane. 101p $2 Holt 811 39-30290

Volume of light verse by the author of Address to the Living (Book Review Digest, 1937). Many of the poems here collected were first published in the New Yorker, Atlantic Monthly, F.P.A's Conning tower, etc.

New Yorker 15:88 N 4 '39 20w

"In 'Fair Warning,' John Holmes lets himself go, and temporarily forsakes both gravity and sanity in favor of a slightly acidulous and wholly enjoyable wit. Because the author's muse is skillfully disciplined in different moods, these poems lend themselves admirably to being read aloud, though the apt illustrations by Henry B. Kane will call for a deal of peeking over the reader's shoulder." E. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 26 '39 350w

HOLMES, JOHN ALBERT, comp. The poet's work. 186p $2 Oxford
808.1 Poetics. Poetry. Literature—Collections 39-11219

Material in verse and prose, concerning the poet and the forces back of his creative writing. Brief introductory essays and notes are supplied by the compiler. Author index.

Booklist 35:346 Je 15 '39

"Like most personal anthologies, this one is miscellaneous and idiosyncratic. . . But a great deal of the material is interesting, and Mr. Holmes's honesty and enthusiasm give the book a charm it would not have had in pedantic hands." Peter Craft

+ — Books p12 S 3 '39 180w

"Stimulating anthology. It is really a whole subway system, a carload of gorgeously assorted passengers riding in the subconscious and never very far from the Grand Central Zone. Here, if you are interested, is what poets really think about; and Mr. Holmes's excellent fraternal comment. He suggests in his preface that editing such a book is a tough job. It is, but the reader doesn't care because to the latter it comes as a succession of happinesses, insights, wisdoms, openings in a western sky." Christopher Morley

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 6 '39 470w

"My disappointment arises from the fact that Mr. Holmes does not seem to have read very widely and that his selections have an air of having been made at random, on the principle of put in your thumb and pull out a plum. Gerard Manley Hopkins, Keats's Letters, Blake, Logan Pearsall Smith, Yeats, Frost, and Virginia Woolf—all appear frequently, but the best things from these writers seem to have been missed. And the book, slight as it is, has been padded with excerpts from Henry James." J. K. M.

— + Cath World 150:118 O '39 350w

"Mr. Holmes has contrived a book that pays poetry the respect of approaching it as an art not completely divorced from the intellect, demolishing much of the present-day poetic voodooism with which poetry is often surrounded. Possibly Mr. Holmes is not profound, but he is stimulating, which, in poetry at least, may be the same thing." John Ritchey

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 17 '39 400w

Reviewed by J. E. Tobin
Commonweal 30:192 Je 9 '39 300w
New Yorker 15:80 Ap 22 '39 30w

"The writer leads a dangerous life, if he is true to himself, according to 'The Poet's Work.' 'Danger may come from an excess of loyalty to some one method, or poet, or audience, to some habit, or party, or subject, till proportion is destroyed.' It is this intimate sort of knowledge which Mr Holmes as a writer shares with his readers and which makes his book of value not only to those who write but to all who would understand better the creative spirit at work with words." E. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 300w

HOLMES, ROGER WELLINGTON. The rhyme of reason; an invitation to accurate and mature thinking. 516p $3.75 (12s 6d); student's ed $3 Appleton-Century

160 Logic (W) 39-12950

Tho intended primarily as a textbook in logic for college students, this book, written in a popular style with frequent use of entertaining examples and problems, is also designed to interest the general reader who likes puzzles, games of skill, etc. The author is associate professor of philosophy at Mount Holyoke college. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:373 Jl 15 '39

Reviewed by D. W. Brown
Boston Transcript p1 Je 3 '39 270w

"This is a college course in logic brought to life, made readable, even fascinating, embellished with games and puzzles which are not mere diversions but are integral with the argument, but still remaining a solid course in logic."

+ Christian Century 56:1025 Ag 23 '39 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"Professor Holmes has written a most entertaining guide to accurate and mature deductive thinking; but the time has gone by when that alone can serve as a guide to life." H. A. Larrabee

Ethics 50:97 O '39 210w

"The book is written with enthusiasm for the subject as the author conceives it, it handles many topics in a satisfactory and sprightly way, and there are doubtless many students and teachers for whom it will fill a long-felt need. . . The literary merit of this book is not as obvious to me as the general editor of the series believes it to be; for I do not think it is a virtue in a text to be weighted with playfulness at the price of failure to exhibit the relevance of general principles of analysis to illustrations and exercises. . . Elementary logic should certainly be taught with spirit and made relevant to students' interests. But is it to be done by filling their heads with misconceptions and unclear ideas?" E. N.

— + J Philos 36:499 Ag 31 '39 650w

"This book exploits, to a fuller extent than others of its kind, the fruitful similarity between mathematical systems and games. But Dr. Holmes appears to forget that there are equally important differences. For mathematics is a kind of language, of enormous significance, and its logical function in human knowledge is in no way comparable to the function of games. A chapter on 'The Structure of Maturing Thought' is regarded by the author as his chef d'oeuvre. This reviewer regrets to report that it is somewhat indigestible. . . It should be added that the humorous tone of the book unfits it to convey a sense of the intellectual labor involved in the distinctions made by logical research." Justus Buchler

— + N Y Times p30 O 1 '39 650w

HOLT, GAVIN, pseud. See Rodda, C.

HOLT, ISABELLA. A visit to pay. 329p $2.50 Bobbs

39-2929

"A love story with two heroines and no hero is the unique impression the reader receives from 'A Visit to Pay'. The story begins and ends with young Peg Morlock—an ugly duckling among the Converse swans—and her love for Martin Sadler, a distant cousin, whom she has been obliged to rescue, since childhood, from the varied buffetings of Fate." Boston Transcript

"Most of the characters in Isabella Holt's 'A Visit to Pay' are emotionally supercharged and equipped with inadequate brakes. Not content to wear their hearts on their sleeves, they toss them around, juggle them, perform coin tricks with them. Emotions are batted back and forth as though life were a game of tennis in which the performers are as tireless as they are agile. In its swift progress and unpredictable transitions, Miss Holt's narrative is exhilarating to watch, even if you are frequently at a loss to decide who is scoring against whom, or to distinguish between the penalties and the points." Lisle Bell

Books p8 F 5 '39 370w

"Miss Holt is too often inclined to introduce new turns of interest, explore them briefly and pass on. Her book is filled with sub-plots and themes, each one of which might be developed into book-length script. Also through the later chapters, one is annoyed by the constant blurring of one character into another." R. G. Cook

Boston Transcript p1 F 11 '39 400w

"Freshness of style, crispness of expression and a quick understanding of the troubles of oddly assorted people give this book a firm hold on the reader's sympathy from its first chapter. . . But its early promise of providing a meaty story as well peters out as the book progresses." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p7 F 5 '39 850w

"With all her intelligence and wit, Miss Holt cannot make her ending compare with her brilliant beginning. The real pleasure of her book is in the characters of Peg, Martin, and Towny, and in the vivacity and observation of her descriptions with which she depicts home life in the suburbs, a career on the air-waves, or coming out in Lake Forest." K. S.

— + Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 4 '39 440w

HOLT, WILLIAM STULL, ed. See Adams, H. B. Historical scholarship in the United States, 1867-1901

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN. Wait for the tide. 307p $2 Penn

39-1204

"Margaret Raye, professor of literature [feared] that she was becoming a fixture in academic life. . . So instead of spending the summer collecting credits toward a Doctor's degree she went to Cape Cod and took a new lease on life—not literature. Miss Holton exposes her to the native philosophy, a Cape Cod liver oil for sagging spirits and spinster habits. The results are amusing, with several salty additions to the author's gallery of Cape originals." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 F 19 '39 130w
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 150w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 280w

HOLTON, VIRGINIA (MRS C. M. HOLTON). The Beeps; the flights and cruises of three Missouri tree sparrows; phot. by C. M. Holton. 192p maps $2 Day

598.2 Sparrows 39-27732

Account of the family of English sparrows by whom the author and her husband were adopted. The birds followed the Holtons across the United States, and out to Manila, and then to China, where Commander Holton was stationed.

Reviewed by D. C. Peattie
— Books p8 Ag 20 '39 400w

"Anyone interested in birds will enjoy this saga of the wandering Beeps. Their adventures and escapades, make this a very amusing book in spite of Mrs. Holton's sweet narrative style." Virginia Fletcher

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 360w

"Those who have something approaching a bird obsession may find the Beeps' adventures more than casually interesting."

New Yorker 15:66 Ag 19 '39 50w
Sat R of Lit 20:22 Ag 19 '39 180w

HOLUB, WILLIAM M., comp. On the humor side. 147p $1.50 Bruce pub.

244 Humor. Religion—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 39-10270

"A collection of jokes and anecdotes, arranged by topic, and intended as an aid to those who preach, lecture, or teach in Sunday school. 'The jokes herein contained concern religion and kindred subjects. Special care has been used to avoid including offensive remarks toward any religion.' " Booklist

Booklist 35:341 Je 15 '39

"Of all the books which profess to provide wit and wisdom ready to hand for needy speakers, this volume of classified 'jokes' and humorous anecdotes is easily among the best. The author has levied upon a multitude of publications both English and American and also upon tradition always with sound judgment and good taste. You may meet many old friends in this collection, but they will be in the company of strangers no less welcome."

+ Cath World 149:383 Je '39 70w

HOLYOAKE, JANET JOY. The memoirs of a boarding kennel; sketches by Angela Malden [Eng title: Mind the dog]. 244p $2.50 Greystone [10s 6d Longmans]

636.7 Dogs 39-27525

The author of this book is the owner and manager of a boarding-house for dogs, with side lines of trimming, selling and raising. Her account of her experiences is made up of anecdotes of individual dogs, funny or sad, combined with considerable information on the best ways in which to run such an establishment.

Booklist 35:344 Je 15 '39

— Boston Transcript p1 Je 3 '39 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 21 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 35:141 Jl '39

HOMER, SIDNEY. My wife and I; the story of Louise and Sidney Homer. 269p il $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Homer, Louise Dilworth (Beatty) (Mrs Sidney Homer). Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-27084

Combined biography of Madame Louise Homer, for many years a Metropolitan opera star, and her composer husband, who was one of her first teachers. The story of their happy home life vies with the account of their years of struggle before Madame Homer became famous.

Booklist 35:222 Mr 1 '39

"Sidney Homer's telling of this story and of that later part of his wife's career which American music lovers remember with pride, follows a delightful manner all his own. Few biographies or autobiographies are so spontaneous and unaffected, and few musical memoirs are so generous in spirit. Not the least of the book's charms are the remarks which Mr. Homer makes by the way, about music, the musical career, and the things which a young musician should know. He does not hesitate to do some frank moralizing when he feels like it, or to name whatever has given him pleasure. He is as enthusiastic as an amateur." John Erskine

+ Books p17 Mr 5 '39 550w

"One of the best of the many recent 'musical' memoirs."

+ Christian Century 56:324 Mr 8 '39 90w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:450 Ap 5 '39 650w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 15 '39 320w

"The accounts of foreign travel and the glimpses of family living make delightful reading. To know that distinction in art can go hand in hand with character and humble service is heartening in these days. It is such a story that this book tells." Gabriel Farrell

+ Churchman 153:49 Ap 1 '39 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39

"There is nothing solemn or pretentious about Sidney Homer's book; it has drama and humor. . . From start to finish 'My Wife and I' is an important piece of Americana because in it the American home and American character are seen at their best. It is a lovely book, for every sentence is informed by a man's devotion to a great singer who is also his wife." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 12 '39 900w

"Mr Homer writes with enthusiasm and spontaneity. At times his honest and unrestrained admiration for his wife, his optimistic description of every occasion as 'grand' or 'wonderful,' and his idealistic moralizing have a naive ring to the hardened reader of today. On the other hand, such buoyancy comes as a fresh wind, pure and wholesome; once again the major key is struck. . . All this is a profound relief from the abnormalities, psychopathic tendencies, fantastic and whimsical ideas sometimes encountered in the careers of eminent musicians." F. G. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 19 '39 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 35:62 Ap '39

HOMES, GEOFFREY, pseud. See Mainwaring, D.

HOOK, SIDNEY. John Dewey; an intellectual portrait. 242p $2 Day

191 Dewey, John 39-27986

"Following a comparatively long chapter on John Dewey the man, the author goes on to summarize the whole of Dewey's work under such titles as philosophy and culture, the nature of ideas, truth, logic and action, body, mind and behavior, standards, ends and means, the good society, the frontiers of education, art as experience, nature and man, and the philosopher of American democracy." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography.

Booklist 36:125 D 1 '39

"In a style of remarkable clarity and strength, Dr. Hook, without ever falsifying Dewey's intent, nevertheless succeeds in sharpening and stressing his central meanings so that they stand out from the surrounding details." E. S. Bates

+ Books p2 N 5 '39 220w

"This little volume will be useful, of course, to those who for any reason can not read Dewey himself, but even to those who are familiar with Dewey's writings it will be rewarding reading, for in addition to a critical, sympathetic, technically accurate exposition, it undertakes a brief account of important current criticisms of Dewey's philosophy and defends this philosophy against them." H. W. S.

+ J Philos 36:695 D 7 '39 150w

Reviewed by Eliseo Vivas

Nation 150:22 Ja 6 '40 900w

Reviewed by Paul Weiss

New Repub 101:206 D 6 '39 140w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt

Sat R of Lit 21:13 N 11 '39 160w

HOOKER, ELIZABETH R. Readjustments of agricultural tenure in Ireland. ltd ed 245p maps $4 Univ. of N.C. press [18s Oxford]

333.5 Land tenure—Ireland. Landlord and tenant. Agricultural labor 39-310

This study considers four major subjects: (1) the program for helping farm tenants buy farms of their own, (2) the rehabilitation programs in the so-called congested districts, (3) redistribution of land through a settlement program, (4) low-cost housing programs for rural laborers. The study was made with the avowed purpose of furnishing United States legislators with information about Ireland's achievements and mistakes. Bibliography. Index.

HOOKER, E. R.—Continued

"Students of agricultural tenure are well aware of the fact that problems and conditions differ so greatly in different countries that a program developed to fit one situation may not be adapted for use elsewhere. Those whose interest in the problem is more casual probably do not always appreciate this fact fully. Because of this it would have seemed worth while for the author to have given some space to the application of the experience of Ireland to a few of the problems in the United States. Lack of adequate interpretation of this kind will limit the usefulness of the book for the general reader. However, students of farm tenure will find in this well-organized book much of interest to them. The author has shown commendable care in citing sources of material." O. B. Jesness

+ — Am Econ R 29:587 S '39 210w
Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 4 '39 110w

HOOPER, JOHN. The circus boat; il. by Charles E. Pont. [47p] $2 Daye 39-19010

In 1836 the Royal Tar, carrying a small circus, burned and sank off the coast of Maine. This story for young readers describes the burning of the boat, tells how the captain, the cook, the cabin boy, and all the animals swam ashore, and what happened next.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 O 1 '39 240w

"The treatment of the subject in terms of both writing and illustration is excellent. . . In format, print and illustration, the book appears to have been written for the seven-to-nine-year-olds. Actually, it is not confined to any age limit. All lovers of Maine may expect to be completely captivated by it. The salt sea flavor, like rain and thunder, cabin boys and giraffes, will always remain unchanged." M. C. Mahoney

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 230w
Horn Bk M 15:222 Jl '39 110w

"Charles Pont has matched the happy-go-lucky spirit of the tale with illustrations which may have something to be desired in drawing, but which are undeniably inspired by a keen sense of comedy and action." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 27 '39 270w

HOOPER, MARION. Life along the Connecticut river; introd. by Charles Crane; photography by Lewis Brown [and others]. 120p map $3.75 Daye

917.4 Connecticut valley 39-27348

Graphic panorama of life along the Connecticut river from its source to the Long Island Sound. There are about 200 photographs, with brief accompanying text.

Booklist 35:305 My 15 '39

"The volume will be sheer delight to any one who knows the country, and don't let those magnificent pictures keep you away from Mr. Crane's prose, which in a characteristic understatement is called an 'introduction.' Mr. Crane's little piece is the best writing I have ever read on the subject of a river I love, and I have read a great deal about the Connecticut." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p7 Ap 30 '39 650w

"The Stephen Daye Press are to be congratulated on their leading book of the season. It is an excellent job in every respect." M. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 29 '39 260w
Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 3 '39 650w

"There is even one photograph of an ugly town—almost the only place on the river which has little to compensate for its drabness. But perhaps the ugly town is needed to fill in the total picture. For the book in its variety makes a real panorama of a rooted and busy America."

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 16 '39 500w

"Finely photographed and accompanied by sensible, unobtrusive text. Not much concession to the merely picturesque, either. First-rate job of its kind."

+ New Yorker 15:78 Ap 22 '39 80w

"It is a particularly good book for anyone who has yearnings to settle in the New England country."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:4 Ap 15 '39 80w

"It is a rare story that can be told of 'Life Along the Connecticut River' and a volume telling the tale in picture form as it appears today brings into focus the chronicle of a stream as stirring as any of the world's famous rivers." W. H. Wright

+ Springf'd Republican p1e Ap 16 '39 3000w

HOOPER, RODNEY. Modern furniture making and design [Eng title: Woodcraft in design and practice]. 160p il $4 Manual arts [12s 6d Batsford]

684 Furniture. Cabinet work 39-14669

"This work shows a variety of treatments for the design and construction of handmade domestic furniture and woodwork, stressing simplicity and the adaptation of furniture to specific purposes and to decorative room schemes. The work is well provided with drawings which should enable architects, designers, draughtsmen, and students to specify or make satisfactory pieces. It is not, however, a textbook on tools, tenoning, doweling, and other such features of cabinet work." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 36:3 S '39
N Y New Tech Bks 23:39 Jl '39

HOOPES, GRACE GERTRUDE. Out of the running [autobiography; with a foreword by Edgar A. Doll and with clinical notes by Winthrop M. Phelps]. 158p il $2 Thomas, C.C.

B or 92 39-2085

"This is the life story of a woman now in the dawn of old age, who began life under a great handicap resulting from injuries received at the time of her birth. . . The author traces her way from early childhood through the experiences of years which were for the most part happy. Incidentally she reveals how religion and science (psychology) have combined to flood with sunshine a life which at its beginning promised only shadow and gloom." Christian Century

Am J Soc 45:296 S '39 40w

"[Written] in delightful English and with an occasional glint of humor. . . Her fascinating story will interest the general reader, but its chief value lies in the encouragement it brings to those interested in the welfare of birth-injured children." R. B. Longwell

+ Christian Century 56:290 Mr 1 '39 100w

"Her mental aptitudes are exceptionally clear, and socially she is alert and keen. Above all, she possesses a marked independence of character. Her writing indicates that she is well informed and widely read and that she is a critical and original thinker on life and its problems, particularly in the matter of religion. She is almost as striking an example as Helen Keller in the power that she displays to turn handicaps in life into stepping stones." J. J. Walsh

+ Commonweal 31:330 F 2 '40 160w

HOOTON, EARNEST ALBERT. The American criminal; an anthropological study; with the collaboration of the Statistical laboratory of the Division of anthropology, Harvard university; 3v; v 1, The native white criminal of native parentage. $10 Harvard univ. press [42s Oxford]

364 Criminal anthropology. Crime and criminals—U.S. (39-3091)

"Most of the recent studies in the fields of anthropometry and race psychology have attempted to investigate several well- or ill-defined racial groups as to their typical behavior in one or more fields. In The American Criminal reference is made to certain reasonably well-defined types of behavior with a view to distinguishing the physical and social characteristics which tend to be associated with each, the behavior patterns being those customarily defined as antisocial. . . The present volume deals solely with the native white criminal of native parentage. Two other volumes are promised—one to cover native white criminals of foreign parentage and foreign-born whites and to deal with the criminal and the civil insane; the other, with Negro and Negroid criminals." Am J Soc

---

"Hooton has performed an admirable service in reopening the old subject of the physical characteristics of criminals. He has accumulated a valuable mass of material, collected under easily evaluable conditions, now in form readily adaptable to various types of technical treatment. He has given us his somewhat naive analysis. These data should be worked and re-worked by other students of criminology and anthropology, well equipped by training and experience to handle materials of this sort. . . Above all, caution should be observed in excerpting from the volume. Some of the tables are tempting. But in the main the materials must be re-worked before they are suitable for popular or lay consumption." F. A. Ross

+ — Am J Soc 45:477 N '39 1400w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 98:140 Mr 8 '39 360w

HOOTON, EARNEST ALBERT. Crime and the man. 403p il $3.75 Harvard univ. press [16s Oxford]

364 Crime and criminals. Criminal anthropology 39-2658

"What Professor Hooton calls 'grim, statistical facts' are being published separately in three large volumes. This book is written 'primarily for persons who are willing to accept, on faith, my conclusions from statistics, without taking the trouble to wade through the statistics themselves.' Its task is to study the physical characteristics of criminals in order to discover whether these are related to antisocial conduct. . . 'Some 15,000 sub-adult and adult male incarcerated offenders in ten states were examined in this study.' . . Speaking briefly one may say that the mass of evidence demonstrates clearly an inferiority not only sociological but physical among criminals." Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman
Am Anthropol 41:504 Jl '39 1950w

"The present reviewer likes Mr. Hooton's book. In fact, he considers it the funniest academic performance that has appeared since the invention of movable type. A four-hundred page 'blurb' is no mean accomplishment. . . But the present volume is inadequate on various counts. The raw data were collected a decade before publication and cannot be checked even by sample. There is no reason, in the evidence presented, to assume that the measured criminals were a valid sample; criminologists are in general agreement that there is no such thing. The author is curiously loose and unclear in the use of his basic concepts. He is not clear, or at least not articulate, as to whether he considers race to be a biological reality or a statistical construct. He has nine different white races and talks of 'pure Italians.' . . One is impressed by the great industry of Mr. Hooton's assistants but regrets that the energy was not directed into profitable channels. A deep emotional bias, a trained incapacity, and a generous research fund may result in monumental works, but they give no assurance that the procedures will be sound or the results valid. But final judgment is suspended until publication is complete." E. B. Reuter

Am J Soc 45:123 Jl '39 1350w

"The work contains a great amount of sociological information, as well as certain random results of great interest, the principal one relating to changes in the body build of immigrants. From the general reader's point of view, Hooton has never written a better book, which is saying a great deal. His own animated diagrams, which at first blush seem as atrocious as he asserts them to be, turn out to be a great aid to following the text." W. W. Howells

+ Am Soc R 4:603 Ag '39 700w

Reviewed by J. P. Shalloo
Ann Am Acad 205:152 S '39 650w

"I am afraid that Mr. Hooton's vague generalizations are likely to do more harm than good. As for eugenics being the panacea for crime and the other ills to which man is heir, one may be permitted some grave doubts. Improving the human race is certainly a laudable objective, but that sterilization is a means to that end is a matter of disagreement even among scientists. . . One expected a better balanced, less biased book from one with Mr. Hooton's distinguished talents." S. G. Kling

Books p14 Mr 5 '39 1050w

"An absorbing study that has occupied the author and his assistants for over 10 years. This genial anthropologist seeks to discover whether criminals are physically different from other people, and his book contains some surprising facts and figures, set forth with the humor and vividness always associated with Dr. Hooton's work." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 14 '39 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 101:vi Mr '39 100w

Reviewed by Max Radin
Harvard Law R 52:1373 Je '39 1350w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 149:472 O 28 '39 700w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 98:140 Mr 8 '39 360w

"One gathers that the author will be surprised and perhaps disappointed if sociologists, welfarers, and the like do not jump upon his pages with cries of denunciation. . . He gaily puts himself on the defensive. But after all, nobody need be, and few will be, seriously disturbed by this very important contribution to the literature of criminology. Most students of the subject will cordially welcome it. . . In this book Professor Hooton leaves out the statistics, and presents his valuable, indeed invaluable, interpretations and conclusions. He manifests always the care and caution of the true scientist, lest he be misunderstood." R. G. Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 11 '39 550w

"A feast of reason and a flow of anthropological data resulting from a twelve-year survey of the American criminal. . . The book is replete with Professor Hooton's particular brand of humor—flashing, timely, caustic. The illustrations demonstrate this ability to blend wit with scientific measurements and sound deductions. Many of the drawings are by the author and are 'Hootonish' indeed." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:1 Ja '39 850w

"Readers of 'Crime and the Man' will enjoy Professor Hooton's clever presentation of an uninteresting subject and especially his entertaining, illustrative drawings." Jay Beck

+ Survey 75:261 Ag '39 600w

HOOTON, EARNEST ALBERT. Twilight of man [with drawings by the author]. 308p $3 Putnam

572 Anthropology. Evolution (W) 39-27801

Collection of addresses and articles by the Harvard anthropologist, author of Apes, Men and Morons (Book Review Digest, 1937). It is his contention that man is an animal "which has forgotten itself;" that the world is becoming mechanized, but the men who make the machines are growing worse. He advises homo sapiens to get a grip on himself, use his intelligence, and in time the race may be saved. Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p18 O 29 '39 1450w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 101:202 D 6 '39 380w

"Professor Hooton, the Bad Boy of Anthropology, is throwing stones and breaking windows again. . . For all his anthropometrical obsession Professor Hooton is what Artemus Ward would have described as 'an amoosin cuss.' In fact he is so amusing, so witty, so trenchant, so epigrammatic that this admirer would rather read him, for all his wrongheadedness, than pundits who are sounder but more tiresome." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ — N Y Times p6 O 1 '39 1250w

"Professor Hooton attacks the race myth vigorously. Human groups are divided, he reminds us, only by trivial differences, little matters of pigmentation, hair pattern, and profile. But if these differences are so trivial, why bother to write about them at such infernal length? Why bother to report to us the latest theory of race division, a theory which (if we are to judge from the last fifty years of anthropology) will only be supplanted by a revised one ten years from now? However, if you'll skip pages 60 to 192 inclusive, you'll find yourself reading some cracking good prose, learning a great deal about the simian basis of the human constitution, and blushing shamefully at the thought that you are a human being." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 15:67 S 30 '39 600w

"Professor Hooton's style varies, according to the audience to which his lectures were addressed, but whether it is facetious or serious, a book which sets forth such deep truths so entertainingly is well worth reading." Ellsworth Huntington

+ Sat R of Lit 21:11 D 16 '39 1000w

"If there is 'not a cough in a carload' of a well-known brand of cigarettes, it is equally sound advertising to announce 'not a dull word in a bookful' when commenting upon Professor Hooton's latest Jeremiad. Made up of recent lectures before diverse groups and of articles which have appeared since 'Apes, Men and Morons,' it is more of the same salty, humorously caustic invective, based upon sound anthropological knowledge that characterizes all the author's literary productions."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 O '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 1000w

HOPWOOD, PERCY GEORGE SAMUEL. A testament of faith; introd. by Rufus M. Jones. (Great issues of life ser) 215p $2 Macmillan

234.2 Faith. Experience (religion) 39-6502

"This is the fourth in a series on the great issues of life, edited by Rufus M. Jones. . . [The author, a] distinguished English Congregational minister . . . offers a reasoned explanation of religious experience. His account of faith as a pathway to reality makes for its validity. He discusses faith on three sides—the feelings, the mind and action. The author shows himself thoroughly grounded in philosophy and familiar with the great literatures as well as a master of theology." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p13 Je 4 '39 450w

"An outstanding book." R. K. Morton

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 20 '39 410w

+ Christian Century 56:743 Je 7 '39 110w

"Dr. Hopwood's book is timely, sane, concise, and modern in its witness to the trustworthiness of faith." W. F. Thompson

+ Churchman 153:16 Jl '39 220w

Reviewed by A. R. Moore
Crozer Q 16:232 Jl '39 140w

Reviewed by W. N. Pittenger
Living Church 101:10 O 25 '39 100w

Reviewed by Wilson Bennett
N Y Times p7 S 17 '39 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p464 Ag 5 '39 380w

HORN, JOHN LOUIS. The education of your child. 208p $3 Stanford univ. press

370 Education 39-12608

This volume for parents about school education covers the years from nursery school thru college. The emphasis is on school subjects, how they should be taught and learned.

Booklist 35:343 Je 15 '39

Reviewed by C. V. Good
El School J 40:309 D '39 500w

"The author goes on record as opposed to progressive education. Yet he gives only brief glimpses of what he conceives progressive education to be. Many will disagree with his definition. Many parents will use this book for sizing up their children's progress in school and for administering remedial work at home. Yet there will also be those who will want to know more of the reasons back of educational procedures than this brief book gives them." W. E. Bain
Survey 75:296 S '39 350w

HORN, MADELINE DAGGETT (DARROUGH) (MRS ERNEST HORN). Log cabin family; il. by Francis McCray. 95p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner (W) 39-30529

Episodes in the life of a pioneer family, living in a log cabin in Illinois. Illustrations in color.

Booklist 36:137 D 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p15 N 12 '39 260w

"The story is interesting, authentic and very well written. Distinguished make up; five illustrations by Francis McCray in soft colors are very pleasing." Marian Herr

+ Library J 65:124 F 1 '40 90w

"A pioneer book which has reality and episodes well chosen to interest younger children."

+ New Yorker 15:88 N 25 '39 20w

HORN, STANLEY F. Invisible empire; the story of the Ku Klux klan, 1866-1871. 434p il $3.50 Houghton

363 Ku Klux klan. South—Social conditions (W) 39-8103

"Narrative account, written by a Southern editor who tries to be fair. The Klan had its origin in boredom—which in a sense is still the main problem in the South—and spread because the time was ripe for it and the Southern temperament fit for it. Mr. Horn covers the Klan's growth, describes its operation in each of the Southern states, and charts its decline, at least in its post-Civil War form. Illustrations, some weird, some just odd." New Yorker

"Mr. Horn has made a brave attempt to reconstruct, from official documents, court reports, newspapers, and the fading recollections of veterans, the inner history of this fabulous society. Yet the task has not been approached with complete objectivity or performed with thoroughness; the result is a history more nearly complete than any which is available, but far from comprehensive." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p8 Ap 30 '39 1200w

Discussion by the author & H. S. Commager
Books p17 Je 4 '39 950w

Reviewed by C. V. Woodward
New Repub 99:341 Jl 26 '39 600w

"Here for perhaps the first time is brought together a detailed account of the Klan, its rise and fall. . . Throughout his history of the Klan Mr. Horn aims to be fair to both sides, however much his sympathies may be with the South. . . There are two reservations to Mr. Horn's 'Invisible Empire.' One is rather fundamental: none of the material essentially exciting as it is, has been presented in half the dramatic and interpretive fashion that would seem to be in order. The other, less important though it is, concerns his source of information, his authority. That remains just about as much a mystery as the membership of the Invisible Empire itself." Francis Brown

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 23 '39 1400w

New Yorker 15:86 Ap 8 '39 90w

"A history that is well organized, thorough, judicious in tone, and interesting throughout its four hundred pages." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Ap 29 '39 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 1500w

HORNER, HARLAN HOYT. The growth of Lincoln's faith. 176p $1.50 Abingdon

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 39-8741

The author's conviction is, after long study of Lincoln's career and writings, that while he cared nothing for creeds and dogmas yet his chief reliance was on God, and his faith grew with the responsibilities of the presidency. Index.

"This book covers familiar ground in a simple, routine way. Yet it has its uses. If one would know the surface story of Lincoln's attitude toward religion, here are the available data presented in small compass and with commendable objectivity." J. H. Holmes

+ — Books p23 My 7 '39 320w

Christian Century 56:159 F 1 '39 60w

Churchman 153:34 F 15 '39 150w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser
Crozer Q 16:215 Jl '39 300w

"This book is a helpful, revealing and well planned little treatise, and one to make the man and his faith more real." R. K. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 10 '39 700w

HORNEY, KAREN, New ways in psychoanalysis. 313p $3 Norton

131.3462 Psychoanalysis 39-5922

This volume by the author of The Neurotic Personality of Our Time (Book Review Digest, 1937) is a study and revaluation of psychoanalysis, with added material and evidence. "The purpose of this book is not to show what is wrong with psychoanalysis, but, through eliminating the debatable elements, to enable psychoanalysis to develop to the height of its potentialities. As a result of both theoretical considerations and practical experience, I believe that the range of problems which can be understood is enlarged considerably if we cut loose from certain historically determined theoretical premises and discard the theories arising on that basis." (Introd) Index.

"There is no question that this book is a pioneering work in bringing sociologists and clinical psychologists into a more fruitful relation. No one desiring to keep abreast of current developments in social psychology can afford to neglect it. It is a pleasure to find that in addition to its stimulating insight and competence the book is marked by a constructive spirit. The necessity for a thoroughgoing criticism of Freud's theory at no point blinds the author to the genius of the man himself or to the debt science owes him." L. S. Cottrell, Jr.

+ Am J Soc 44:997 My '39 1100w

"New Ways in Psychoanalysis is an important book. For years to come, it will probably serve as a standard guide to the newer, more sociological, more realistic Freudianism." J. K. Folsom

+ Am Soc R 4:876 D '39 320w

Booklist 35:263 Ap 15 '39

"The material is presented with lucidity and, if read in conjunction with The Neurotic Personality, should present no difficulties to the lay mind. It is a restrained but nevertheless thoroughgoing criticism of what has seemed to many an inflexible approach and promises great things for future development." J. H. Titus

Churchman 153:26 Ap 1 '39 380w

Reviewed by J. F. Brown
Nation 149:328 S 23 '39 1000w

Reviewed by Karl Menninger
New Repub 102:57 Ja 8 '40 550w

"Dr. Horney, who is an associate director of the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis, emphatically states in her introduction that the purpose of this book is merely to 'eliminate the debatable elements' in Freud's theory. By the time, however, that she has finished her critique the old orthodox 'ways in psychoanalysis' that remain appear rather few in number. Still, what are left seem very much more closely correlatable to science than the others. Dr. Horney's pruning is not only constructive but something that psychoanalysis has been in need of." Livingston Welch

+ N Y Times p15 My 7 '39 500w

"A significant work in its field."
New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 30w

"The book has much in it that would interest psychologically oriented readers, but as a critique it would mean something perhaps only to those who have a professional interest and training in the field. The style is to be commended for its simplicity and clarity." B. D. Lewin, M.D.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 15 '39 330w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 16 '39 240w

Reviewed by Margaret Nordfeldt, M.D.
Survey G 28:505 Ag '39 220w

HORTON, JOHN THEODORE. James Kent: a study in conservatism, 1763-1847. (Am. hist. assn. Publications) ltd ed 354p $3.50 (15s) Appleton-Century

B or 92 Kent, James 39-13988

Biography of an American lawyer, who was born in 1763 and died in 1847. He was at one time chief justice and chancellor of the state of New York. This scholarly study is presented against the background of the social and political conditions of his day. Bibliography. Index.

"An interesting and well-documented biography. . . The author has made little effort either to examine whether judges, including Kent, have had a disproportionate share in fashioning American municipal law, or to determine whether progressive development of the municipal law has been retarded because of precedents established by the conservative Chancellor. Ostentatious display of Latin quotations betrays the author's familiarity with the classics, but contributes little either to enjoyment or understanding of his book." A. L. Powell

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:934 O '39 300w

"This is an excellent work. It embodies much research, carefully used, and is well and interestingly written." F. S. Philbrick

+ Ann Am Acad 207:244 Ja '40 600w

HORTON, J. T.—Continued

"Mr. Horton's biography of Kent nicely combines narrative, analysis and interpretation. It tells us, with brevity and wit, just what we need to know about this moulder of American law. . . And it does all this with an unpretentiousness of manner and a felicity of style sufficiently rare in monographs of this nature to excite our gratitude and admiration." H. S. Commager

+ Books p21 O 1 '39 750w

Christian Century 56:773 Je 14 '39 90w

"Mr. Horton deserves congratulations for his sound scholarship and his lucid style." J. P. Pollard

+ N Y Times p32 O 29 '39 1600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p494 Ag 19 '39 230w

HORVATH, ODON VON. Age of the fish; tr. by R. Wills Thomas. 223p $2 Dial press

39-5472

"The locale is anonymous but it is obviously a fascist one, and the center of interest is a provincial schoolteacher, one of whose students is murdered during a camping trip. The effect of suspense derives not only from the incidents but from the detached and exact manner in which the author describes the conflict between the disillusioned, secretly rebellious teacher and the boys in his charge." Sat R of Lit

---

" 'The Age of the Fish' . . . is one of the very few German novels I have read that masters the totalitarian state as a problem for the writer, and it solves that problem with so unusual an insight that it should become a primer for all writers who have realized that surface realism is no longer enough." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p5 Mr 5 '39 500w

"Von Horvath writes with the dispassionate pessimism of a man who knows beyond the shadow of a doubt that the days of the civilized world are numbered. His bleak, powerful lines will congeal like characters of ice in the minds of even perpetually hopeful Americans. And they will remain there a long time before they melt. . . The book gives no hope—no solution. But one cannot shut his ears against the rising clangor of the tocsin the dead Odon von Horvath sounds." R. W. Seaver

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 11 '39 700w

Reviewed by Robert Vambery

Nation 148:537 My 6 '39 550w

"Odon Von Horvath was a brilliant German writer, considered important by his literary contemporaries, who emigrated from the Nazi fatherland and was accidently killed last year in Paris. This short novel of his very much resembles such a modern American tale as Steinbeck's 'Of Mice and Men.' It is contrived with the same sort of immense cleverness; and, though it has little real psychological or social interest, it points a moral in an extremely telling fashion." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 98:140 Mr 8 '39 300w

"This is a powerfully moving and disturbing book, beautifully written and beautifully translated. Through its muted tones and understatement it achieves more than diatribes shrieked or pounded into the ears of listeners. One is tempted to suggest that 'Good-bye, Mr. Chips' be read along with it. The contrast will give an excellent evaluation of life in a democracy and life in a totalitarian State." R. C. Feld

+ N Y Times p6 F 19 '39 1000w

Pratt p29 summer '39

"This novel holds attention for two reasons: it is an exciting story told with the economy of verse, and it reveals in the writer a versatile, individual, and elusively contradictory mind." I. W. A.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 25 '39 390w

Time 33:69 F 20 '39 360w

HORVATH, ODON VON. A child of our time. 207p $2 Dial press

39-30332

"Von Horvath tells the story of one man who participated in the [Nazi] invasion of an unnamed, small and defenseless country. . . The central character of this novel, the unnamed narrator, says, 'I am a soldier. I'm glad to be one.' . . Toward the end of the novel the soldier begins to see what has happened to him, how he has been betrayed. But we can take only cold comfort from that glimmer of light, for what von Horvath seems to tell us is that it is inevitable that the Germans, while they are whole in body, should follow Hitler wherever he may lead them. On this note the book closes: 'Your children will tell you that this soldier was a common murderer—but don't revile him. Just think, how could he help himself? He was a child of his time.' " N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin

Books p12 N 5 '39 900w

"The superb style illustrates how intense the absolutely simple can be. Not a word wasted, not a word too much. The impact is terrific, like a blow in the teeth or like some innocent but terribly piercing remark of a child." Ann Springer

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 30 '39 360w

Reviewed by Philip Rahv

Nation 149:503 N 4 '39 650w

"This book impresses and moves us by many qualities and charms we admired in 'The Age of the Fish'; it has the same kind of magic realism, which, at certain moments, reminds one of Franz Kafka's prose. Yet I feel 'A Child of Our Time' to be an anti-climax, compared with the earlier book. Its composition is less concentrated, the plot is less dramatic, its characters are not quite so unforgettable." Klaus Mann

+ — New Repub 100:312 O 18 '39 750w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss

N Y Times p7 O 1 '39 1000w

New Yorker 15:69 S 30 '39 30w

Pratt p23 winter '40

"Writing in the first person, the author fails in identifying himself with his simple-minded protagonist, and in the attempt Horvath's sophistication betrays him at times into painful self-consciousness. In this fantasy, however, are reflected the same characteristics of perception and of feeling for atmosphere and scene which appeared in 'The Age of the Fish.' Horvath is able to evoke the sensations of dream and day-dream with all their symbolic insistence and underlying uncertainty in a way which, superficially at least, recalls Walter de la Mare. . . Indeed, the positive qualities of 'A Child of Our Time' suggest repeatedly to the reader that Horvath was less novelist than poet." I. W. A.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 30 '39 350w

Time 34:71 S 25 '39 350w

HOSCHANDER, JACOB. The priests and prophets. 362p $2.50 Jewish theological seminary of Am.

296 Jews—Religion. Jews—History. Priests. Prophets 39-579

"As explained in the Foreword by President Cyrus Adler, to whom the book is dedicated, this is a posthumous work of the late professor of Semitic languages and biblical literature in Dropsie College and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. It has been chosen for publication from thousands of pages of manuscript left by the author. . . It is not a systematic study of prophecy and the priesthood but rather a disjointed presentation of very interesting views on a variety of topics in Old Testament history and interpretation, with special reference to the priesthood in some parts and to the prophets in others. The author's point of view is on the whole conservative and even anti-critical." J Religion

---

"Dr. Hoschander's treatise will have significance for the sociologists as an example of the many attempts made by Jewish and Christian scholars to reinterpret the Hebrew people as a social group functioning in world history. The author's opposition to Biblical criticism, however, puts the volume under a heavy disadvantage; at the same time, his exploitation of orthodoxy will fail to satisfy the orthodox. The book will not contribute anything toward the problem of Israel as the bearer of monotheism." Louis Wallis

— + Am Soc R 3:915 D '38 440w

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 56:1073 S 6 '39 290w

"Hoschander's conservatism is by no means conventional. With all its subjectivism and an occasional homiletic tendency, it evinces great learning. Much use is made of Assyriology, the author's specialty, though otherwise there is practically no use of archeological material. On many points of detail there are statements which make the book richer and more suggestive than this review can indicate. The Jewish Theological Seminary has done well in making the work available." Millar Burrows

+ — J Religion 19:262 Jl '39 1100w

HOSTE, CHARLES DIXON. The partnership of Nazareth. 254p $2.40 (6s) Longmans

232.1 Jesus Christ. Incarnation

"Mr. Hoste in his new book develops the study of the Incarnation which he began with his book 'The Achievement of Nazareth' [Book Review Digest, 1935]. His main line of thought is that the purpose of the Incarnation cannot be achieved without human cooperation; the first stage of the action was the earthly life of our Lord; the second is now in process when our Lord is present by His Spirit in the Church, and this is the stage when human cooperation plays its part." Times [London] Lit Sup

Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 80w

"The book is difficult, and sometimes even obscure."

Times [London] Lit Sup p319 My 27 '39 80w

HOUCK, FREDERICK ALFONS. Man's triumph; with God in Christ. 244p $2 Herder

230.2 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 38-18154

"The prospective reader may well be cautioned against discouragement in perusing the first few pages of this book, in which are given the five famous proofs of Saint Thomas for the existence of God. These arguments make heavy reading for one not accustomed to technical philosophy. But with this obstacle overcome, the author lives up to his confessed purpose of presenting 'some of the more important truths of science, philosophy and theology that affect man's relation and attitude to his Maker.'" America

"Obviously this is a solid book, to be studied and pondered. It should serve excellently as a text for study-club groups interested in religious topics." F. B. McManus

+ — America 60:118 N 5 '38 170w

"Father Houck has done an excellent piece of work, but for a rather specialized audience."

Cath World 148:761 Mr '39 80w

HOUGH, FRANK OLNEY. If not victory. 335p map $2.50 Carrick

(W) 39-30531

Story of Westchester county in the American Revolution, stressing the years 1776 to 1778. The hero is Abe Kronkhyte, a nineteen-year-old Quaker youth. Driven to despair at the conditions of war in his home region Abe deserts his Quaker family and throws himself wholeheartedly into the struggle. At the end of two years he is a valued member of the Continental army.

Booklist 36:134 D 1 '39

"This reviewer does not know how history is taught in the schools today. But if the truth is told, if both sides of the medal are shown, then 'If Not Victory' might well be considered as required reading. For, in spite of the shoddiness of the humanity Hough describes, there was a spark which, properly touched off, threw a light which fired men's hearts and minds. . . Except for a brief incident with a provocative barmaid, 'If Not Victory' is bare of any woman interest. One regrets this, for Molly is an interesting figure." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 N 5 '39 650w

Reviewed by D. C. Thompson

Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '39 220w

"A story so quietly told that its impact remains after the central yarn of battle, capture, escape and final resolve begins to dim, although the narrative itself is good enough to make it a one-sitting book. At the end you'll wonder how the Americans, divided as they were, ever managed to achieve their victory. But most of all this fine, unpretentious novel, devoid of fake historical color, shows you what war can mean to ordinary people caught in its path." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 101:200 D 6 '39 430w

"No one has matched Mr. Hough's picture of what the Revolutionary War meant to the humble noncombatant. This is devastated Westchester, and not devastated Flanders, but the impact is similar. He has put this part of his report together with a factual firmness which would do credit to an army engineer. On the technical side the result is superior to his first novel, smoother and better balanced. It lacks, if anything, only the borrowed excitement of the enigmatic Arnold to equal the popular success of 'Renown.'" Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 N 12 '39 950w

"A sharp, credible historical novel, with lots of battles, the horrors of prison life, and (surprise) no love interest."

+ New Yorker 15:89 N 11 '39 50w

"The great merit of Mr. Hough's book is that it is more than a swiftly-told story of adventure; it is a psychological study as well." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 N 11 '39 550w

HOUGH, LYNN HAROLD. Free men. 240p $2 Abingdon

230 Christianity 39-10000

Series of essays in which the dean of Drew Theological Seminary discusses the importance of Christianity in the twentieth century. Partial contents: The price of Christian literacy; The church and the society of men's minds; The church and contemporary cultural ideals; Loneliness; Making theology available for religion.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p12 Jl 2 '39 350w

"Dr. Hough is a roving reader, perhaps more effective in giving important facts a good presentation than in producing original facts. The lectures are appealing and stimulating." R. K. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 25 '39 200w

"Not many writers of our time handle the essay form as gracefully or as fruitfully as does Dr. Hough. Light flashes from the many facets of his brilliant mind and illuminates a wide variety of themes."

+ Christian Century 56:418 Mr 29 '39 40w

"While these essays reach far down and high up and widely in their social consciousness and deal with great questions, they can be read appreciatively by the laity." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 153:17 Je 15 '39 150w

HOUGH, L. H.—Continued

"This book is an exhilarating experience for the Catholic reader, for it reeks with the spirit of true Christianity. Chapter X, 'Making Theology Available for Religion,' is especially good in its criticism of modern views of God and of Our Lord, and in its uncompromising assent to the full doctrine of the Incarnation and Redemption and the Divinity of the Son of Man. Doctor Hough makes it clear that he has been a deep student of Catholic theology, and that he is no stranger to the philosophia perennis—truly a phenomenon in these days!" T. F. W.

+ Commonweal 30:27 Ap 28 '39 180w

Reviewed by E. W. Powell

Crozer Q 16:236 Jl '39 180w

"From the first essay, 'Free Men,' to the last, 'Aldersgate Once More,' there is a challenging unity beneath the variety of form and subject-matter, a unity rising to its finest challenge in the address on Aldersgate." J. W. Ingles

+ N Y Times p8 Je 11 '39 500w

HOUGHTON, CLAUDE, pseud. See Oldfield, C. H.

HOUSEHOLD, GEOFFREY. Rogue male. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 280p $2 Little [7s 6d Chatto]

(W) 39-27659

Psychological novel depicting an English sportsman of good family and excellent financial standing who is seized with a desire to attempt to shoot an unnamed European dictator. Crossing the frontier from Poland he stalks his prey, but is captured and after hours of questioning is flung over a cliff by his captors. Contrary to their expectations he does not die, and the main part of the story is of his escapes—first to England, and then to save his country from embarrassment, into exile.

Reviewed by Frances Woodward

Atlantic N '39 150w

Booklist 36:9 S '39

" 'Rogue Male' is 'one of the most original adventure tales of recent times, a book with a delightfully dry, bitter tang of intelligent dramaturgy. . . Mr. Household's dish is a pungent combination of dramatic and lyric ingredients. It is exciting to consume. Indeed, the reader finds himself wolfing his excellent fare." William Soskin

+ Books p4 Ag 27 '39 1000w

"Possibly 'Rogue Male' should have been reviewed in the Rogues Gallery department of this family newspaper. It may or may not be a detective story (possibly it is one in reverse); but it is certainly one of the expert narratives of the season." H. M. Jones

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 550w

"The book is well written, but the author's clean-cut style would have been bettered had he omitted a few of his hells and damns."

+ — Cath World 150:633 F '40 140w

"Mr. Household writes admirable English and has a knowledgeable and highly ingenious mind. By the exercise of these gifts he is able to persuade us into believing the incredible, even if we later cast a reflective thought backward to a doubt as to whether our rogue male might not have got away with a less tortuous ingenuity without suffering all the agonies he had to undergo and without committing two murders." J. D. Beresford

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 15 '39 400w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis

New Repub 100:195 S 20 '39 240w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 18:348 S 2 '39 240w

"The author is thoroughly adroit, but what the reader feels is not deftness or 'swift pace,' but a breath-taking, uninterrupted concentration. As a work of the imagination 'Rogue Male' is an almost overpowering tour de force. And in its spare, tense, desperately alive narrative it will keep, long after the last page is finished, its hold from the first page upon the reader's mind. Its deepest and broadest suggestion the reader must find for himself, if he will." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 27 '39 600w

Pratt p23 winter '40

"Those who remember Mr. Household's first novel, 'The Third Hour,' which was a remarkable combination of the adventure story and the novel of ideas, will expect much of this, and they will not be disappointed. It keeps to the level of the pure action-story; but on that level it could hardly be better. One criticism that should be made is that of the motive. . . Apart from that, you are not likely to find a better adventure story." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 S 2 '39 550w

"It is a deft, neat book, written with unusual distinction. Such chinks as do appear in this distinction are, therefore, because of their infrequency, disproportionately disappointing, because they betray a spiritual confusion unlooked for in an otherwise almost impeccable narrative of action." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 163:336 S 1 '39 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p719 D 9 '39 100w

HOWARD, ETHEL K. How we get our food. 111p il $1.25; text ed 88c Harcourt

641 Food—Juvenile literature (W) 39-5824

Textbook for grades three to four describing in prose and photograph the main articles of a child's diet and how they are procured. The six units are: meat, milk, bread, vegetables, fruit, and eggs.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

"On the whole, although the absence of a chapter on sweets is noticeable (how we get our maple, beet and cane sugars and their alluring by-products would scarcely lessen the appeal for a young reader) the book is acceptably comprehensive and a good job all round." Vivian Lundberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 230w

J Home Econ 31:715 D '39 50w

"The photographs illustrating modern methods of growing or producing milk, meat, bread, fruit, vegetables, and poultry are the distinguishing feature of this splendid unit reader, to be used with a basic textbook. . . The subject interest and good make-up offset to some extent the dull, matter-of-fact style of writing. Useful in all collections of children's books, and especially suitable for retarded readers." Dorotha Dawson

+ Library J 64:905 N 15 '39 90w

"Pretty dull."

— Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w

Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

HOWARD, JOHN TASKER. Our American music; three hundred years of it. 2d ed rev and enl 743p il $3.50 Crowell

780.9 Music—History and criticism (W) 39-27495

"The revised and enlarged edition of this well known work is augmented by more than fifty pages of new material bringing it down to date. Unfortunately the index has not been revised to include the supplementary material. The author includes in his survey the whole range of American music, from gutter-ballads of the 'Frankie and Johnnie' type to compositions in the purest classical tradition. Its broad inclusiveness and copious detail make the book invaluable for reference." (Christian Century) For former edition see Book Review Digest, 1931. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:348 Je 15 '39

Christian Century 56:644 My 17 '39 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p19 Ja 28 '40 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 35:142 Jl '39

HOWE, HERBERT BARBER. Jedediah Barber, 1787-1876; a footnote to the history of the military tract of central New York. (N.Y. state hist. assn. ser) 237p il maps $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Barber, Jedediah 39-16119

Biography of a typical small-town successful business man of the nineteenth century in central New York. Bibliography. Index.

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 18 '39 200w

"On the face of it, Jedediah Barber scarcely deserved to be commemorated in a volume running to 175 pages of text. . . His career would not in itself have justified the writing of this biography. The work was well worth doing, however, for as a result of it there is exhibited a life-size picture of the type of ordinary American who contributed so much to the building-up of the United States during the first half of the nineteenth century."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 N 11 '39 130w

HOWE, LEE ARTHUR. Yet we can hope. 164p $1.50 Am. Bapt.

231 God. Faith 39-16212

Twelve chapters on the problem which confronts the Christian of today. The book discusses chiefly the nature and power of Christianity which has often had to face crises in the past, and come thru.

Christian Century 55:1435 N 23 '38 80w

"The author writes well, and his book should have a very wide reading among our church people." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 16:157 Ap '39 60w

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. Holmes of the breakfast-table. 172p il $2.50 Oxford

B or 92 Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1809-1894 39-9347

Long biographical essay on Oliver Wendell Holmes, the forerunner of the modern author. A doctor, he wrote a medical classic on puerperal fever; in Elsie Venner he anticipated Freud; in the Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table he anticipated the modern science popularizer. The book not only gives biographical details of Holmes' life, but also places him as an important figure in the cultural life of the Boston of his day. Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 8 '39 1100w

Cath World 149:760 S '39 350w

"The book is not biography alone. Skilfully woven into the narrative is a thread of critical discussion which should be of real service in defining the ultimate place of Dr. Holmes in literature. And the author's judicious use of quotation—snatches of verse, a few provocative sentences of prose, some heretofore unpublished letters—may well tempt readers to seek out the Doctor's writings themselves, and what's more, to enjoy them thoroughly." Townsend Scudder

+ Commonweal 29:726 Ap 21 '39 400w

"A wise and witty memorial of a rare spirit. . . Such a book, so anecdotal, so perceptive, is likely to sweeten, if it does not outlive, the more solemn studies of the Autocrat, to which, forty-five years after his death, he is inevitably subjected. Surely Mr. Howe's genial brochure is a warning to conduct such post-mortems in the spirit of Holmes's own medical lectures." S. T. Williams

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 23 '39 1400w

"Excellent essay, thoughtful and well written."

+ New Yorker 15:87 Ap 8 '39 40w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

"Mr. Howe's book is written in the tone of quiet authority to be expected of a man who has long been at home in the Autocrat's time and place. Probably no one is better equipped than he to bring before us the 'perpetual undergraduate' of Harvard. . . Without even trying, one would say, to turn up new material or to suggest a novel interpretation, Mr. Howe has written a pleasant account of Holmes which contains few surprises. . . This book is a luxury and a delight, not only in its contents but in the beautiful format exactly designed for it by the publishers." Odell Shepard

+ Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ap 22 '39 450w

"Mr Howe, though a few judgments may be questioned, is to be thanked for having compiled so lucid and responsible a summary of Holmes's life and thoughts. Indeed, the book is in its plan and execution a model 'small' biography written to revive interest today in a figure of yesterday who stands in the front rank of personalities, though not in the front rank of genius."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 9 '39 1150w

Time 33:77 Ap 10 '39 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p492 Ag 19 '39 330w

"This is one book written as it should be written; and were the subject to return and read it (a fancy on which, before Max Beerbohm, he had actually dwelt), he would be conscious of what his distinguished son once called 'the subtle rapture of a postponed power.'" David McCord

+ Yale R n s 28:822 summer '39 550w

HOWE, QUINCY. Blood is cheaper than water; the prudent American's guide to peace and war. 223p $2 Simon & Schuster

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. War 39-8110

"The author of 'England Expects Every American to Do His Duty' [Book Review Digest, 1937] offers another eye-opener. This is a study of the recent growth of the war spirit, of the isolationists, and especially of the two camps of interventionists: the anti-Fascist Democracy Defenders and the Manifest-Destinarians." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39

"A prominent American isolationist who is also an ironist and logician, has written a witty, racy defense of imperialism which will probably enrage every party—isolationists, upholders of collective security, and imperialists most of all. In our enlightened age he will hardly be imprisoned for his insolence, but he does risk a metaphorical pillory. . . As a self-conscious tour de force, [the book] draws its lines more sharply than actuality warrants, neglects patent distinctions, and indulges in deliberate over-emphasis. It should be regarded as provocative satire rather than as sober historical writing. But for all that, it contains a core of sad realism. Among the possibilities of the undetermined future, one of the most likely is that another war, if it comes, will initiate American imperialism on the grand scale here outlined." E. S. Bates

Books p6 Ap 16 '39 1350w

Reviewed by John MacDonald

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 22 '39 460w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 13 '39 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39

"Blood Is Cheaper Than Water will not leave you neutral or undecided on our foreign policy. But even if the side you choose is not Howe's, you will have to acknowledge the brilliance with which he states and presents the issue. You will admire, too, his complete liberation from trite and meaningless slogans, his ability to marshal arguments and build up to a conclusion." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 50:4 My '39 750w

Foreign Affairs 17:810 Jl '39 160w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '39 40w

Reviewed by E. M. Earle

New Repub 99:106 My 31 '39 450w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p21 Ap 23 '39 1250w

HOWE, QUINCY—Continued

"There's more cool, hardheaded analysis and less special pleading here than in most of the books that have recently appeared on the subject."

+ New Yorker 15:106 Ap 15 '39 90w

"This book will be furiously denounced and warmly praised by those who fall within the broad sweep of its thesis. . . Spiritedly, and with malice aforethought Mr. Howe has made a notable addition to our current pamphleteering literature. His pages bristle with debatable assertions which will doubtless be challenged by those publicists whom he sometimes neatly deflates." D. H. Popper

Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ap 15 '39 700w

Reviewed by A. F. Whyte

Spec 163:690 N 17 '39 420w

"'Blood Is Cheaper Than Water' is written with irony rather than fervor, and seems intended to give somebody—in fact, nearly everybody—a 'ride' rather than to present a sober plea for a particular policy. It is a somewhat rambling castigation of war groups and peace groups, and the administration's foreign policy, but its positive conclusions are not clear." E. N. Jenckes

— Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 8 '39 950w

"It is unfortunate that much of the material compiled in this book is presented in such a way as to destroy its real value. The overstatements made and the selected quotations used can only create confusion without in any way helping in a solution of these world problems." W. O'D. Pierce

— Survey G 28:455 Jl '39 460w

Times [London] Lit Sup p558 S 30 '39 1000w

HOWE, QUINCY. Cartoon history of our times.

See Low, David

HOWELL, MRS ELIZABETH (LLOYD). Elizabeth Lloyd and the Whittiers; ed. by Thomas Franklin Currier. 146p $3 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Whittier, John Greenleaf 39-25993

"During his residence in Philadelphia Whittier met through his Wendell cousins a number of intellectual, high-spirited Quakers, both young men and maidens, and among them Elizabeth Lloyd, who became his dear and valued friend. After Whittier and his sister had returned to Amesbury, Miss Lloyd sent them from time to time long accounts of religious, political, and literary affairs in the city and a great deal of domestic news. It is these letters, with a few additions, that have now been skillfully edited by Mr. Currier and published through the generosity of members of the Lloyd family. The collection supplements and in part overlaps a group of letters from Whittier to Miss Lloyd printed in 1922." Books

---

"The letters are valuable for the many insights they afford into the life of the place and period, and also as a record of a high-minded friendship. One word further should be said of the editing, which is a model performance. As in his Whittier bibliography, Mr. Currier shows a mastery of his material that few scholars attain to. Proper names that have elsewhere been misread, since Whittier's hurried writing is at times practically undecipherable, he identifies with convincing precision. . . The text of the letters, as he prints it, is scrupulously accurate to the letter. His headnotes give just enough information to prepare the reader to understand all the pertinent circumstances and allusions." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p25 O 29 '39 650w

Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '39 50w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 N 4 '39 1150w

HOWER, RALPH MERLE. The history of an advertising agency; N. W. Ayer & son at work, 1869-1939. 652p il $4 Harvard univ. press

659.1 Ayer, N. W. and son 39-24938

A history of one of the outstanding advertising firms of the country, N. W. Ayer & Son of Philadelphia, from 1869 to the present. The volume is one of a series of studies in business history issued under the auspices of Harvard university. Index.

" 'The History of an Advertising Agency', is fully documented. It contains many detailed tables, and exhibits of Ayer advertising at various periods. It does not attempt to gloss over episodes that the author regards as regrettable. Even without these evidences of scholarship, and of co-operation by the agency, one who reads the editor's introduction and the author's preface must be convinced that here is a remarkably well balanced history." G. B. Hotchkiss

+ Books p5 D 31 '39 1000w

"Except for the thinness of the social history and the perhaps too uncritical attitude toward advertising itself, one can find little to complain of. The organization is excellent, the writing is direct and easy, if not inspired, and, best of all, the danger of special pleading has been eliminated by the author's obvious disinterestedness and honesty." Ann Springer

+ Boston Transcript p13 O 27 '39 240w

"For anyone engaged in agency or publicity work, or any company executive who has advertising responsibilities, the book is almost required reading."

+ Management R 29:37 Ja '40 320w

"The Hower book is one of the first business histories based on long, slow, hard fact-finding research. The general reading public won't get very excited about it. But every American business man ought to." Paul Hollister

+ N Y Times p30 N 19 '39 1350w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 1 '39 300w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 28:754 D '39 450w

HOWES, DURWARD, ed. See American women

HOWES, ROYCE. Death rides a hobby. 273p $2 Doubleday

39-22926

Detective story.

"Capt. Ben Lucias . . . is one of the most amusing fellows in the business, well worth meeting. Ingenious plot, too." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Jl 16 '39 200w

"Nice book, if the thought of the body doesn't bother you." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 120w

"Candid camera fans will probably get a big kick out of this story, though it may make the more timorous among them a bit apprehensive. Those who know nothing about photography will find it equally exciting, for no technical understanding of the art is necessary to the comprehension of the plot." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 23 '39 140w

Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 15 '39 40w

HOWES, ROYCE. The nasty name murders. 280p $2 Doubleday

39-4163

Detective story.

"As good as a Caribbean cruise, with mental exercise for good measure." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 F 26 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 70w

"This seems to us to be the best of the Ben Lucias stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 F 19 '39 120w

Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 18 '39 40w

HOWGATE, GEORGE WASHBURNE. George Santayana. 363p $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press [16s Oxford]

B or 92 Santayana, George 39-787

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"Despite the emptiness, even perhaps obtuseness, of Mr. Howgate's comments at times, he has done a good deal, it seems to me, to enable general readers to enter into Santayana's work with understanding. His long chapter on Santayana as a literary critic is especially rewarding, and his chapter on Santayana as a metaphysician is particularly successful in making some thorny matters plainer to the general intelligence." Theodore Morrison

+ — Atlantic Ap '39 330w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 29:528 Mr 3 '39 480w

"Santayana was for more than twenty-five years a great personal tradition at Harvard; one wishes Mr. Howgate had shown how and why. There are any number of Santayana's former students about who could have told him enough details to fill out the picture and give it color and meaning. As for the summary statements about Santayana's books, they are relevant and responsible enough but they lack something, and that something can only be described as philosophy. It is not that Mr. Howgate is unaware of the issues involved. As far as he goes he does not go wrong. On the purely literary side he is excellent. . . But he is far less illuminating on the philosophical conflict implicit in all of Santayana, the oscillation in him between rational humanism and escape to Platonism." Irwin Edman

+ — Nation 148:591 My 20 '39 750w
New Repub 98:288 Ap 12 '39 20w

"What Mr. Howgate has failed to do would have been valuable, but what he has done is none the less valuable. Such an analysis and study had for some time been required: and he has brilliantly revealed the underlying unity of which the poet, the critic, the essayist, the metaphysician—Santayana is all of these—are manifestations. To any further study of Santayana this book will be indispensable." H. B. Mallalieu

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:258 F 18 '39 490w

"To one who has traversed both Santayana's own writings and the comparatively small body of critical literature about him, Mr. Howgate's book will afford little beyond what he already knows or has learned from those experiences. For those on the other hand who for one reason or another have not read extensively in Santayana, this book provides in convenient form an organized account of Santayana's extended adventures in criticism, poetic expression, and constructive philosophy. The book will have served a useful purpose if, by means of its well-advised technique of generous quotations and by its restrained enthusiasm and sympathy for its subject, it induces its readers to turn to Santayana's own writings for the genuine intellectual and esthetic enjoyment which they have to offer. For Santayana like Schopenhauer is his own best expositor." M. K. Munitz

+ Sat R of Lit 19:17 F 25 '39 800w

HUDSON, JAY WILLIAM. The old faiths perish; an adventure in the logic of belief. 302p $2 (8s 6d) Appleton-Century

211 Religion and science. Belief and doubt 39-10364

"Study of modern religious faith. Dr. Hudson, who is perhaps best known as the author of the delightful 'Abbé Pierre' stories, is also Professor of Philosophy in the University of Missouri and author of several books on philosophical subjects. In 'The Old Faiths Perish' he has started out with the major premises of science and the processes of scientific thought and has followed the path of reason to the goal of religious acceptance." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by A. C. Dieffenbach
Books p32 D 10 '39 100w

"A thoroughly arousing and stimulating book bristling with unusual turns and thought-provoking statements." R. K. Morton

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 8 '39 360w
Christian Century 57:22 Ja 3 '40 120w
J Philos 36:500 Ag 31 '39 220w

"His book is carefully arranged and tersely and attractively written, and it is stimulating reading. It is also a book of real satisfaction to the mind."

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 9 '39 370w

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Honorable Uncle Lancy. 309p $2 Bobbs

39-3180

A merry satire on American political campaigns, which features a Democratic Senator up for re-election and his three orphaned nieces from Iowa, not to mention the Senator's wife—and manager—and his opponent, a Methodist minister with seven children.

"Miss Hueston's bright narrative hints that political bigwigs are not so bright." Lisle Bell

+ Books p10 F 12 '39 150w

"Romantically and politically the book bubbles with action. As a clever exploitation of all that is outlandish in an American campaign, the story should provide a welcome and amusing relief from heavier and more serious slants on politics." B. S.

+ N Y Times p23 F 19 '39 320w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 180w

HUGHES, RUPERT, comp. Music lovers' encyclopedia; completely rev. and newly ed. by Deems Taylor and Russell Kerr. 877p $2.98 c1939 Doubleday

780.3 Music—Dictionaries (W) 39-27032

"A trade edition, which differs from the above subscription edition only in being bound in buckram, is published by Garden City publishing co., at $1.98. The Music Lovers' Encyclopedia is a new edition of a volume originally published in 1903, revised in 1912 and frequently reprinted. The revision for the 1939 edition was done by Deems Taylor, the well-known composer and critic, and Russell Kerr, associate editor of the Musical Courier. Information is not arranged in a single alphabet but is divided into the following sections: a biographical dictionary of musicians, alphabetically arranged; special signed articles on 35 famous composers; an alphabetical dictionary of musical terms, instruments, etc.; signed articles on special phases of music; very brief synopses of 90 operas 'current in present-day repertoires'; and a table of the pronunciation of the letters of the alphabet in 16 languages. A dictionary of given names, titles, epithets, etc., precedes the introduction." Subscription Bks Bul

Books p17 F 5 '39 60w

"The dictionaries of musicians and musical terms are the meat of the work; some of the short articles are so compressed as to lose clarity. But for an up-to-date book of reference in a single volume it will be hard to surpass." E. B. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 6 '39 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p25 F 26 '39 120w

"Information in the Music Lovers' Encyclopedia is concise and in the main accurate, though occasional errors may be noted; e.g., in the dates of death for certain musicians, such as Borodin and Chaminade; and in the spelling of names, such as Emma Abbott and Bessie Abott, whose surnames are both here spelled Abbot. The short critical essays are well written in a popular, often charming style. . . The Music Lovers' Encyclopedia is essentially a handbook for the personal library of the individual interested in music, but it may also be useful for supplementary purposes in the public library, where its pronouncing feature should be especially valuable. It is recommended."

HUGHES, RUPERT, comp.—Continued
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 10:23 Ap '39 650w
Wis Lib Bul 35:47 Mr '39

HUGHES, RUPERT. Stately timber. 638p $2.75 Scribner
39-27132

A long chronicle novel which pictures life in Puritan New England in the middle of the seventeenth century. The hero is young Seaborn Fleet, and the story relates his adventures not only in New England but also in Virginia and Barbados.

Booklist 35:230 Mr 15 '39

"It is probable that the quality of the novel as such is sacrificed to Mr. Hughes's thesis and his interest in the historical background. The character of Seaborn is sometimes abstract, and his love for Judith conventionally the vehicle for the message. But in its delivery of this message of freedom and in its evocation of the texture of the society which denying it, yet gave birth to it, 'Stately Timber' is a valuable document." Maxwell Geismar
+ — Books p2 F 19 '39 1100w

" 'Stately Timber' is, as we should have expected from Mr. Hughes, a first-rate story, crammed with dramatic incident and colorful characterizations. The picture of the promising village of Boston, circa 1650, is enough in itself to justify a novel of this length. How seriously the action of the story has been retarded by its wealth of scholarly detail must remain a matter of opinion. Undeniably there are times when it seems overladen." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Times p7 F 19 '39 850w
New Yorker 15:82 F 18 '39 50w

"The greatest difficulty is that Mr. Hughes, like Miss Forbes, in spite of his long researches seems to have acquired the background and the costumes but not the spirit of the people who lived with them. It is as though Mr. Hughes had gone to an efficient theatrical agency and had hired a number of adequate moderns for his parts, and had dressed them and had coached them carefully in their lines. He has failed, I think, to give any proper interpretation of the seventeenth century mind." J. P. Marquand
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:13 F 18 '39 1050w

"A remarkably detailed and vivid picture of New England, Barbados and London. . . One criticism that might be made is that the novel suffers from an over-abundance of detail. The author has crammed so much historical data into the story that at times it slows the action."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 480w

HULEN, BERTRAM DYER. Inside the Department of state. (Whittlesey house publication) 328p $3 McGraw 353.1 U.S. State, Department of 39-22454

This book by a New York Times Washington correspondent, contains a historical sketch of the United States Department of state and a full survey of its organization, duties and accomplishments today. "Reporting in newspaper style, Mr. Hulen goes beyond outlines or departmental duties to relate intimate details about personalities who have worked in the massive granite structure on Pennsylvania Avenue not only in his own day but in the last half century—from Secretaries of State on down to 'Eddie' Savoy, the Negro messenger who served under twenty-one Secretaries of State." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"The author is generally well-informed and urbane, and the book is written in an entertaining and readable style. It is descriptive and sympathetic, even laudatory, rather than critical." J. M. Mathews
+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:1090 D '39 400w
Reviewed by Harvey Pinney
Ann Am Acad 207:229 Ja '40 650w
Booklist 36:62 O 15 '39

"Mr. Hulen has done a workmanlike job and to summarize theoretical stands, and how to enliven a somewhat barren subject with much keen journalistic observation."
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 130w
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 S 16 '39 500w
Foreign Affairs 18:374 Ja '40 20w

"A profound analysis of the apparatus handling our foreign affairs is not Mr. Hulen's purpose. His is a job of amiable external examination that should take his book beyond even the extraordinary readership created for it by these extraordinary times." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 102:v O '39 250w
Reviewed by Eliot Janeway
Nation 149:470 O 28 '39 900w

"Mr. Hulen has done a workmanlike job and has produced an interesting as well as valuable book of reference." S. T. Williamson
+ N Y Times p5 O 1 '39 650w
Social Studies 30:336 N '39 10w

"In many respects Mr. Hulen has done a fine job. The limitations of his book are mainly due to the hazards of journalistic writing. For one thing, it is evident that he did not have time enough to get up his historical background. For another, he does not fulfill the promise of his title to give 'inside' information." A. P. Whitaker
+ — Social Studies 31:90 F '40 550w

HULL, MRS EDITH MAUDE. Jungle captive. 278p $2 Dodd 39-17648

Romance of two unhappy people who met in the African jungle while on safari, and after incredible hardships escaped to a new and happier life.

"The story is crammed with savages and slaughter and the romance is as sultry as the setting." Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 30 '39 80w

"The romance has a St. Elmo flavor, with virtue having a very tough time of it and vice —in the shape of Temple—coming to a very bad end, highly melodramatic and quite satisfactory." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 30 '39 300w

"Though blood flows freely along the course of [Mrs] Hull's story, some of the old unblushing magic has gone out of her writing, or else some of the old susceptibility out of her public." K. S.
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 12 '39 200w

HULL, HELEN ROSE. Frost flower. 313p $2.50 Coward-McCann
(W) 39-27000

Study of family life. The central figure is Phyllis Collings, happily married, and mother of two grown children. Twenty years before the story opens Phyllis had had a mild affair with Andy Fulton, which had only served to show her that the man she really loved was her husband. Andy's recent death had recalled him to Phyllis, and on the heels of the news came his vindictive widow to stir up trouble. The story is of a long week-end in which Phyllis holds her own as wife, daughter, mother, and housewife, and saves her family from breaking up.

Booklist 35:190 F 1 '39

"Phyllis is the capable, warm-hearted wife and mother who can manage everything. . . Perhaps she is a little too capable, but any number of women should be able to identify themselves with her. Her story is told vividly, dexterously and with skillful development of suspense. Miss Hull knows the people she writes about and she can present them so that her readers know them, too." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p4 Ja 22 '39 550w

Reviewed by Dorothy Van Doren
Nation 148:242 F 25 '39 170w

"Miss Hull's treatment of the two adolescents and their relationship to their elders is excellent, their irresponsibility and security a significant contrast against the peril threatening them. . . This novel gives Miss Hull added stature as a creative artist. Her writing is delicate and sensitive, her characters distinct and real as individuals. The three generations emerge in separate contours but at the same time are linked in fundamental understanding of kinship." R. C. Feld
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 22 '39 850w

"Charming picture of suburban family life."
+ New Yorker 14:58 Ja 28 '39 40w
Pratt p28 autumn '39

"This portrait of a modern housewife, 1939 vintage, though not perhaps very subtle, is accurate, detailed, and entertaining. The rest of the characters are lightly but adequately sketched. . . The solution of [Phyllis'] problem does not shirk reality, but it does, I think, shirk the deep emotions on which surface realities are based." Phyllis Bentley
+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Ja 21 '39 650w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
Yale R ns 28:viii spring '39 150w

HULL, KATHARINE, and WHITLOCK, PAMELA. Escape to Persia. 274p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cape, J]

39-5009

Sequel to The Far Distant Oxus (Book Review Digest, 1938). Once more the mysterious Maurice leads the Hunterlys thru gay adventures in the section of Exmoor which they label Persia. The American edition is not illustrated.

Booklist 35:312 My 15 '39

"In 'Escape to Persia' much of the happiness has a dreamlike quality, though it begins with an absurdly lifelike bet and takes place in realistic outdoor surroundings. The hero is as mysterious as if he came out of a dime novel. This is a healthy book; I am glad the girls did not have to cut off their hair." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 Ap 30 '39 450w

Reviewed by Elsie Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

"The schoolgirl authors have told another good story and have told it even better than in their first book, which is as it should be. There are cadences in the style of this second book which we do not remember in the first."
+ Horn Bk M 15:167 My '39 360w

"In their sequel to The Far-Distant Oxus, the young authors uphold the promise of their first work, the interest is sustained, the characterization good and the writing colorful and vivid." Jean Stewart
+ Library J 64:332 Ap 15 '39 170w

"A well-told story about ponies and camping which Ransome fans will enjoy—and rightly. Its end foreshadows a sequel to which I for one shall look forward." Amabel Williams-Ellis
+ Manchester Guardian sup xi D 9 '38 50w

"It is a surprising book: solid, practical, full of terse and minute description—and much more adult in feeling than the kind of tale usually supplied by grown-ups. . . But the construction has its weak points. And the authors' first story should be read first, for they are always referring back to it, and never explain." K. John
+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:976 D 10 '38 100w

"The style of 'Escape to Persia' is a constant delight; good as was 'The Far Distant Oxus,' this second book is even better. Impressions come sharply to these young authors, and as they write them down these impressions are still so clear-cut and vivid that the reader, too, sees the sunshine over the land like a sheet of yellow cellophane, the daisy petals in the twilight folded over their saffron cushions, or feels the splash of rain on the hillside." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 19 '39 500w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 180w

"[The] book will succeed simply because it is good and the kind of thing most children enjoy. Many grown-up people will enjoy it too, not only because of its charm, but because it is a document of child life. It is a little more realistic and less romantic than its predecessor, but the suggestion of mystery is not absent."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup sup xxxi N 5 '38 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:117 Je '39

HULL, WILLIAM ISAAC. The rise of Quakerism in Amsterdam, 1655-1665. (Monographs on Quaker history) 346p il $4 Swarthmore college, Swarthmore, Pa.

289.6 Friends, Society of 38-38255

"This volume deals at length with the activities of the early Quakers in the Netherlands, particularly at Amsterdam. It provides a full account of William Ames (not the well-known Puritan theologian), who began 'publishing the truth' in Amsterdam in 1656, and of William Caton, his principal fellow worker. It gives briefer accounts of less important figures associated with these two in spreading the doctrine of the inner light." (Am Hist R) Index.

Reviewed by William Haller
Am Hist R 45:217 O '39 230w

"This monograph rests upon the solid basis of a study of original sources and covers its period with exhaustive thoroughness."
+ Christian Century 56:59 Ja 11 '39 50w

HUNDLEY, WILL M. Squawtown; my boyhood among the last Miami Indians; il. by R. H. Hall. 209p $2.50 Caxton printers

B or 92 Miami Indians 39-14334

Account of the author's boyhood in Squawtown, legally known as the Mississinewa Reservation, and the home of a tribe of Miami Indians who were allowed to remain in Indiana after most of their kinsmen had migrated west of the Mississippi. The author's father went there in 1875 on the invitation of the chief, to see if, by example, white men could teach the Indians better ways of farming.

"There is scarcely any 'story' in the sense of continuous, close-knit plot, in this autobiography . . . but what source stuff it is! . . No library taking Indians at all seriously should overlook this book if boys who use it are to be shown them as their last fires were going out in Indiana." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ag 13 '39 500w

"It is wordy and meandering, ill-conceived and badly executed. A few of the Indian characters emerge in color, but this is the book's only virtue." Patricia Palmer
— + Canadian Forum 19:298 D '39 80w
Springf'd Republican p12 O 20 '39 280w

HUNT, FRAZIER. Little doc; the story of Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the quintuplets. 302p $2 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Dafoe, Allan Roy. Dionne quintuplets (W) 39-27031

The story of Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the quintuplets, fifty-one years old and all but unknown except among the poor folk of rural

HUNT, FRAZIER—Continued
Canada, when he was called upon to perform the miracle of delivering and keeping alive the five famous babies. The book contains hitherto unpublished material about their first twenty-seven hours of life.

Booklist 35:204 F 15 '39

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p17 F 26 '39 360w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 18 '39 180w

"Mr. Hunt tells the whole story in an easy human fashion, and it is such a remarkable story that one may well read it more than once."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 29 '39 440w

"A simple biography of Dr. Dafoe by a journalist friend, with the 'heart appeal' competently played up."

+ New Yorker 14:60 Ja 28 '39 20w

"As his radio-collaborator and journalistic adviser, Frazier Hunt knows the medical sage of Callander better than any of the hundreds of newspaper men who have visited the small backwoods village in the last five years and has succeeded in conveying a far truer picture of both the characters and setting of the amazing drama of the Quintuplets than anything yet published. He tells the story in a simple, straightforward style, and makes it entirely fascinating." Merrill Denison

+ Sat R of Lit 19:18 Mr 11 '39 390w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '39 850w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Little grey gown; drawings by Ilse Bischoff. 168p $1.75 Stokes (W) 39-27733

Libby Ann, a little Quaker girl, had hoped that the dress made from her own lamb's wool would be a bright red. It wasn't; it was grey. The story is about the final fulfillment of Libby Ann's desire.

Booklist 36:46 O 1 '39

"It is in every way easy to read—clear large type, easy, well chosen words, and a story that speaks to a child's own inner life—and the pictures have the same understanding." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 N 12 '39 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 27 '39 70w

"There is the same engaging quality in this story as in Benje's Hat; it is intended, similarly, for children of eight to ten years. The makeup of the book is attractive; the outside is as unadorned as the little grey gown itself, and the print is good-sized." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 64:713 S 15 '39 100w

"Mable Leigh Hunt's Little Grey Gown is one of her finest. Into it she gathers all her knowledge of the gentle Quaker spirit and of a child's feeling. Libby Ann's heartburnings over her pets and her cherished dress made from the grey wool of Alice Fell are inviolable childhood experience, in a story that will be loved." Irene Smith

+ Library J 64:841 N 1 '39 50w

"Only a craftsman of taste and understanding could have written such a story, which instead of being prudish or saccharine, has rather the sweetness and tang of a good apple, and this Mabel Leigh Hunt has done, giving once more substance and character to her nineteenth-century Quaker folk. This is a lovely little book to read and to handle, of a distinguished size and shape, and decorated with Ilse Bischoff's sensitive drawings." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 10 '39 320w

"Pleasant story."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 30w

Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

HUNT, MARIGOLD. A life of Our Lord for children; with il. by William G. Schnelle. 162p maps $1.25 Sheed

232.9 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 39-24329

Simply told story of the life of Christ, written for children, and from the Roman Catholic point of view.

"Reverent yet affectionate, the attitude of this interpreter of the story of Jesus to little Catholic children is such that a young reader whatever his religious training, is likely to be led toward affection and reverence." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 D 10 '39 140w

"Nothing better can be said and nothing better needs to be said of [this book] . . . than that it reproduces the simple charm of the Gospel story. . . It is no small achievement to rewrite the immortal story so often retold and yet to make it as interesting as if this were the first telling."

+ Cath World 150:377 D '39 80w

"The style of the book is that current in English juvenile writing, so colloquial that one seems to hear a Girl Guide recounting events. There is a strange avoidance of characterization, and perhaps the starkness of the narrative would have been relieved by some attention to setting. . . If the book spurs children to read the New Testament frequently for themselves, they will have cause to be forever grateful to Miss Hunt." D. H. Moseley

Commonweal 31:18 O 27 '39 300w

HUNT, MARY. See Altfillisch, M.

HUNTER, ALLAN ARMSTRONG. Three trumpets sound. 156p il $1.50 Assn. press

920 Kagawa, Toyohiko. Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand. Schweitzer, Albert 39-27734

Sketches of the lives and works of three men, Kagawa of Japan, Gandhi of India, and Schweitzer, the German medical missionary in Africa.

Booklist 36:42 O 1 '39

"No one can question the appropriateness of grouping these men. The name of any one of them suggests the other two. Mr. Hunter tells only so much of the stories of their lives as is essential to the understanding of their purposes, principles and personalities. His treatment is rather interpretative than biographical. Upon this splendid body of material the author's own mind has worked with characteristic intelligence and earnestness. The point is that trumpets are supposed to rouse men to action and to advance. Mr. Hunter sees these men not as saints to be revered but as leaders to be followed."

+ Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 70w

HUNTER, DARD. Papermaking by hand in India. 130p $36 Pynson printers, inc, 229 W. 43d st, N.Y.

676 Paper making and trade. India—Description and travel 39-22316

" 'Papermaking by Hand in India' is a continuation of Mr. Hunter's studies of one of the ancient crafts as conducted in the Far East, a companion study to 'Old Papermaking in China and Japan,' 'A Papermaking Pilgrimage to Japan, Corea and China' and 'Papermaking in Southern Siam.' . . Bound in at the end is the feature without which the book would not be genuinely Hunterian—that is, a selection of twenty-seven specimens of contemporary Indian hand-made paper, some of them cut from sheets made under the author's eye in the course of this pilgrimage. . . The author as always, does a thoroughly good job of passing on to his readers what he has seen and learned, enumerating and analyzing the vegetable materials formerly used in Indian papermaking; describing minutely the structure of stampers, vats, and the all-important molds; and explaining the methods of maceration, bleaching, dipping, couching, and drying." Books

"As a report of a hopeless industry carried on by a hopeless people, Mr. Hunter's book makes sad reading; as a study in a technique still important because it underlies all paper-making technology of today, it is a book that will take its place with his other important contributions to a subject close to the interests of all of us. Once more we are reassured by his fortitude, the spiritual force arising from his genuine, passionate interest in the doing well of a common thing. And we are grateful to Mr. Elmer Adler of the Pynson Printers for his co-operation with Mr. Hunter in presenting to us another book of charm and quality." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p13 Jl 16 '39 1100w

"It is a sad picture of India, though an admiring one of some of its people, that Dr. Hunter gives us. Seemingly he has been more moved than in most of his other excursions into his field. The book, however, is anything but sad. Its covering of hand-blocked India print cloth, its handmade rag paper, its beautifully clear type, its photographic illustrations, its high standard of workmanship, are a pleasure to the hand and eye of the veriest layman. And the story is unique. There is no other that covers the field." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 Je 25 '39 650w

"Mr. Hunter's latest contribution . . . can but enhance the already great reputation he has made for himself as the foremost Papierforscher of our time. . . It is to Mr. Hunter's credit that he has been able to extract so much valuable material from the most unpromising sources; and to present it in such unbiassed terms. It is certain that the collection of twenty-seven local specimens which accompany this beautifully produced and illustrated volume could not easily be obtained again."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p519 S 2 '39 330w

HUNTER-BLAIR, SIR DAVID OSWALD, 5th bart. In Victorian days, and other papers. 249p $2.40 (6s) Longmans

824 39-22889

Collection of essays written at various times by the Abbot of Dunfermline. The first part of the book deals with social life in England and Scotland in Victorian days; the second with Oxford in the author's time; and the third is made up of unrelated essays on the lost Inca treasures of Peru, Scottish monasteries, etc.

Cath World 150:254 N '39 140w

"This collection of essays has ample interest and charm to warrant a reader's attention. Such collections seem always to suffer from the fault of repetitiveness; for it is natural that essays, written on different occasions should contain overlapping materials; yet it would be so easy to remove it, and with it an inevitable sense of irritation in the reader. But to insist upon the point would be querulous. Abbot Hunter Blair's reminiscences of Eton and Oxford and Scottish country life during the middle of the last century more than make up for an occasional repetition."

+ — Commonweal 29:558 Mr 10 '39 280w

"Sir David is a delightful raconteur, and his pages are studded with excellent anecdotes."

+ Spec 162:278 F 17 '39 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Ap 1 '39 330w

HUNTINGTON, HARRIET E. Let's go outdoors; il. by Preston Duncan. 89p $2 Doubleday

574 Natural history—Juvenile literature

(W) 39-27660

Photographs in sepia and simple text describe for young readers some of the more common insects and fauna: ants, spiders, bees, lady bugs, grasshoppers, polliwogs, turtles, snails, etc.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

"One of the handsomest photograph books lately offered to children, this introduction to nature study by large-scale pictures comes to them at just the age where clarity of reproduction counts most—from nursery school on for a few years. During this time a photograph can be more useful than any description: fine details that so fascinate a little child, looking at insects or flowers at close range, must come out perfectly if the picture is to be really useful." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 6 '39 150w

"The author wrote the book in answer to her own two children's questions. Here are accurate and interesting facts about the small outdoor creatures of the gardens, fields and woods, told in easy to read words arranged in short lines, so inviting to you who are very young. . . The unusually clear and artistic photographs in sepia tones make this a perfect picture book, one deserving a place on your book shelves, for you will want to refer to it over and over again." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Jl 31 '39 220w

"With scientific accuracy and in language suited to a beginning reader the essential facts . . . are set forth in a factual fashion intended to satisfy children's natural curiosity. The pictures are remarkable for their beauty and the detail shown by the enlargement. They will tempt children living in the country to find out, by reading the easy text, answers to their own questions." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:304 S '39 50w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara

Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 100w

New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 30w

"Mr. Duncan is a photographer with imagination. His photographs, so clear that they almost tell the story without need for words, give to the reader the feeling that he himself, all unobserved, has caught these small creatures unaware, and is watching them as they carry on the business of living. This is a photographic picture book that is beautiful, fresh and unhackneyed in material." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 8 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

HUNTRESS, ERNEST HAMLIN. Problems in organic chemistry. 270p $2.25 (12s 6d) McGraw

547 Chemistry, Organic 38-18248

"A good stiff drill covering all the essential principles of organic chemistry is contained in this little book which lists 835 problems and questions (without answers) ranging all the way from writing the structural formula for tetramethylmethane to synthesizing caffeine from the elements and recommending a contemporary organic chemist for the Nobel prize. The book is the work of an M.I.T. professor who felt the need of something to give his students additional practice in the actual use of principles taught in lectures and the regular organic text-books." Chem & Met Eng

"This book of problems in organic chemistry is designed as a guide for the study of textbook and lecture material. It fills a definite need of the student who, meeting for the first time the myriad facts of organic chemistry, finds that simple memory work is not sufficient. . . A greater selection of questions on syntheses involving several steps could well be included. Furthermore, occasional questions of an experimental nature might serve more closely to correlate laboratory and lecture work. There is no good reason for segregating in laboratory manuals all questions on laboratory synthesis and the result is generally that the student fails to associate practice and theory. These are minor shortcomings, and the book is a distinct achievement in its field. It should be of great value to beginning students, advanced students preparing for comprehensive examinations and teachers." T. L. Jacobs

HUNTRESS, E. H.—Continued
+ — Am Chem Soc J 61:979 Ap '39 320w
Chem & Met Eng 45:560 O '38 180w

HURD, ROBERT. Scotland under trust; the story of the National trust for Scotland and its properties; with a foreword by Sir Iain Colquhoun. 107p il maps $2 Macmillan [6s Black, A. & C] 914.1 National trust for Scotland. Scotland—Historic houses, etc. [39-20622]
The National Trust for Scotland was founded in 1931. This book is mainly an illustrated account of the Trust's properties acquired since then and the work of preservation of the houses and battlefields. Index.

Reviewed by Sarah Chokla
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 240w
Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '39 350w
Spec 163:266 Ag 18 '39 300w
"In every case Mr. Hurd gives a clear and lively account of the property and its associations, and the forty-eight illustrations from photographs are excellent."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Je 24 '39 800w

HURLEY, DORAN. Herself: Mrs Patrick Crowley. 308p $2 Longmans
39-27191
Humorous account of Mrs Patrick Crowley, from Millington, Massachusetts, who won a ticket in the Irish sweepstakes, and had a glorious time in New York city spending the money.

Booklist 35:252 Ap 1 '39
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 Mr 19 '39 230w
"Mrs. Crowley breaking up a May Day mass meeting at the Garden and directing a swing review is a little too much. For the most part, however, the book would be after making a defeated Spaniard forget his troubles." O. O.
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 18 '39 310w
Cath World 149:252 My '39 190w
"If not realistic, the tale is engagingly credible while we are in it, rich in real details, and chucklingly humorous with the absurdities that keep sentimentality a sound way off. Since Mrs Crowley is a strong-minded lady, she speaks her views on many vexations of our day, especially the plight of the Jews, the war in Spain as fought even in New York, and true democracy and Americanism. She has good sense and depth and the charm to make people listen." O. B. White
+ Commonweal 29:670 Ap 7 '39 240w
Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p26 Mr 19 '39 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 240w
Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

HURSTON, ZORA NEALE. Moses, man of the mountain. 351p $3 Lippincott
Moses—Fiction 39-30532
A novel based on the life of Moses. Written, particularly in its dialog, in modern colloquial terms, the story emphasizes those aspects of the Moses legend which have appealed to the Negroes—Moses the great magician and voodoo man.
For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 13:586 My '39

Booklist 36:150 D 15 '39
"In her adaptation of the Bible story Miss Hurston shows uncommon gifts as a novelist. Her characterizations are sure and her use of suspense is admirable. With the materials which her previous work in American and Haitian folk-lore has provided her she is equipped to give us novels of her race such as few of her contemporaries are capable of writing. This reviewer awaits each of her books with eagerness." Carl Carmer
+ Books p5 N 26 '39 500w
Reviewed by M. E. Smith
Boston Transcript p2 N 18 '39 400w
"It is a magnificent story, but it is weak in its interpretation of the ethical contributions of the prophet and in its treatment of the code of laws handed down by him. . . But Miss Hurston presents Moses as a great 'voodoo man,' which is the position given him by the Negro. Her distinctive contribution is her brilliant study of the problem of emancipation, done as perhaps only a Negro could do it. . . Miss Hurston has written a splendid study of slave emancipation. From this point of view her biography of Moses is invaluable." Philip Slomovitz
+ — Christian Century 56:1504 D 6 '39 750w
"It is impossible to say to what extent Miss Hurston has woven many legends and interpretations into one and how often she is making verbatim use of given, but, presumably, only orally extant, tradition. But the narrative becomes one of great power. It is warm with friendly personality and pulsating with homely and profound eloquence and religious fervor. The author has done an exceptionally fine piece of work far off the beaten tracks of literature. Her homespun book is literature in every best sense of the word." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p21 N 19 '39 950w
"The real thing, warm, humorous, poetic."
+ New Yorker 15:91 N 11 '39 20w
"Miss Hurston's approach is as arresting as it is fresh. . . The fancy is whimsical and infectious; the contrasting characters of the shrewdly wise Jethro, the bitterly ambitious Aaron, the voluptuous Zipporah, and the frustrated Miriam are convincing; the setting has the charm of a continually changing panorama. But the whole is less successful than the parts, and the total effect is that of unfulfilled expectation." Louis Untermeyer
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 N 11 '39 650w

HUSSEY, MARGUERITE MALLARD. Teaching for health. 328p $2.25 Prentice-Hall
613.07 Hygiene—Study and teaching 39-19706
"This book considers primarily the conduct of the program of public education in such a way as to provide healthful experiences for the child and the application of the principles of general education to instruction in the field of health. Following a discussion of the historical approach in the development of health education methods, and definitions of health, health education, and health objectives, one finds such titles as: Leadership Organization of the Activities Program for Health, Studying Out-of-School Life, Studying School Life, Studying the Individual, Home-School Coöperation, Technical Teaching, and Printed Materials. There is a brief chapter on the measurement of results and one on units in teaching for health." (Am J Pub Health) Index. Also available at $2.75 from N.Y. university book store. Library of Congress number 38-9128.

"The book is interestingly written, particularly those phases which have to do with the healthful conduct of general education and the needs of the individual child. Perhaps the reader may differ slightly with some of the generalizations." C. E. Turner
+ — Am J Pub Health 28:1128 S '38 380w
J Home Econ 31:259 Ap '39 110w

HUTCHINS, FRANK, and HUTCHINS, MRS CORTELLE. Washington and the Lafayettes; il. by W. Merritt Berger. 211p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Lafayette, Georges Washington Louis Gilbert du Motier, marquis de. Washington, George 39-23401

History of the difficult days of the eighteenth century in America, and of the effects of the troubled times upon George Washington Lafayette, who came to this country after the French revolution. For a time it was impossible to offer the young man the sanctuary he sought, because of the political situation in this country. But eventually he was received as befitted his father's son. Bibliography. Index.

"The book should be enjoyed by parents, and by older children—there are few concessions in vocabulary or style to the younger ones—and the pen-and-ink drawings add greatly to its charm." H. S. Commager

+ Books p6 D 17 '39 700w

Cath World 150:380 D '39 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:388 N '39 80w

"The true story of the American life of the exiled boy is written here, told as it has never been told before and indeed as it has not been generally known before. Almost anyone who reads it will enjoy it and anyone who reads it will remember it." L. P. Latimer

+ Library J 64:713 S 15 '39 240w

"It is a narrative which depends upon a rather slender thread of incidents and because of this and its implicit drama it might easily have been twisted into fiction, but the authors have served history well by sticking rigidly to the facts, many of which have been culled from letters unavailable to the general reader. They have given body to it by a vivid re-creation of life in France and America, with intimate little sidelights on Washington's household, and not the least of its value lies in the moving portrait of Washington in the last trying days of his Presidency and the tender light thrown upon a great friendship." E. L. Bueil

+ N Y Times p10 S 3 '39 450w

" 'Washington and the Lafayettes' is among the season's distinguished books for young people."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 180w

HUTCHINSON, VERONICA SOMERVILLE. The queen's earrings; or, How the Jenkenson family went to the coronation; with il. in color and black and white by Louise Mansfield. (Minton, Balch bk) [72p] $1.50 Putnam 39-39

Story for young readers about an English family of father, mother, and three children, and how they spent the day of King George VI's coronation at Buckingham palace.

"It is pleasant to read and has information worth having, a happy by-product of the great show."

+ Books p11 N 13 '38 330w

"Pictures and story make this fairy tale-like book a fascinating description of this famous event. The author tells us there is a basis of fact behind the story and this adds a further note of wonder and romance." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 F 27 '39 250w

HUTCHISON, DWIGHT. Free for 3 months only [sketches by the author]. 189p map $2 Daye

818 Country life (W) 39-27496

One spring day when her New England conscience became rampant over the required adjectives used in writing advertising copy, the author resigned her job in New York city, and packed herself and four children off to a New England farm. The book is the account of their three months of bliss, spent in gardening, cooking, playing games, sitting in the sun, and just plain living.

Booklist 35:344 Je 15 '39

" 'Free—For Three Months Only' has some excellent bits for children and some excellent bits for grown-ups. Its weakness, as a matter of fact, lies in these virtues, for some of it seems too young for an adult mind and some too old for a young. But whether she is writing of cucumbers, wells, kerosene lamps, or rain, Mrs. Hutchison does it with humor and sparkle." R. C. Feld

+ Books p12 My 21 '39 450w

"This small book, illustrated by the author with funny little sketches, is one of the nicest pictures of country living we have ever known. It is less kitchenish than Della Lutes's books, and without the nostalgic sweetness of 'Northern Summer.' . . Her writing will appeal to all ages. Her only possible fault is her formidable efficiency, which she tries to hide." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 3 '39 750w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 16 '39 480w

"Gentle, appreciative satire on country ways and manners, salted with humor and a really palatable sort of whimsy. Has a special charm, echoed by the author's tiny, rapid, illustrative sketches."

+ New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 60w

HUTTEN ZUM STOLZENBERG, BETTINA (RIDDLE) freifrau von. What happened is this. 287p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hutchinson] 39-27033

How and why Valentine Courtley murdered her husband and the effects of the crime on their children and close circle of friends and relatives.

Booklist 35:205 F 15 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 F 26 '39 190w

"The plot is absorbing and the two young-love stories interesting in themselves and in their bearing on the main theme. It is all told with wit and intelligence, a highly competent performance by a consistently capable writer." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p20 F 19 '39 200w

"The author has tackled a good idea in a competent manner, but like her own criminal she has made one mistake, and that is in the character of Valentine Courtley. It is asking too much of any reader to expect him to believe that she really was as cool and collected as all that, and that she behaved so charmingly in her prison cell; such a woman could not exist. But the other characters could, and they claim respectively the reader's sympathy, pity, admiration or disgust right up to their dispersal after the final tragedy."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p799 D 17 '38 160w

HUTTON, GRAHAM. Survey after Munich [Eng title: Danubian destiny]. 253p maps $2.50 Little [7s 6d Harrap]

940.5 Europe—Politics—Crisis, 1938. Germany—Foreign policy. Europe—Economic conditions (W) 39-27193

Survey of the post-Munich situation in Europe. The author, one of the editors of the London Economist, stresses the economic problem of Germany, and altho he does not prophesy as to Germany's next moves, he does provide the student with material bearing on the situation. Index.

"We are now being flooded by books discussing various aspects of the great betrayal perpetrated last year at Munich. . . Be it known

HUTTON, GRAHAM—Continued
very emphatically that this is the best contribution of the whole lot, original, compact, and loaded with all kinds of economic, social, and political facts which would be hard to find in such a handy form elsewhere. . . It will be worth while for the reader to study carefully Hutton's brilliant reasoning behind his general thesis. One can only regret that he fails to take into account the world-wide aspects of the whole situation." J. S. Roucek
+ Ann Am Acad 203:213 My '39 700w
Booklist 35:249 Ap 1 '39

"American readers, whose great and growing interest in and knowledge of European affairs astonishes the European visitor, will find Mr. Hutton's book in every way worth while." Elizabeth Wiskemann
Books p7 Mr 5 '39 1100w
Cath World 149:245 My '39 300w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 27 '39 650w
Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 153:18 Jl '39 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39
Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:2 My '39 650w
Economist 134:395 F 25 '39 480w
Foreign Affairs 17:639 Ap '39 80w

"Mr. Graham Hutton has earned a reputation as a wayfarer among the political and economic shoals of Danubian Europe. In this new book he combines the functions of map-reader, pathfinder, and amateur strategist with his customary grip of political and economic matters in order to produce a study of the new Danubia so packed with detail that the reader is left gasping." W. H. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 21 '39 500w

"If there is any criticism to be made of this book it is that the facts are rammed in too tightly and have not been organized as carefully as might be desired. But this is an excusable fault in a work which had to be written in haste, and is sufficiently up to date to take in events of last December." Keith Hutchison
+ Nation 148:269 Mr 4 '39 500w
Reviewed by Maurice Hindus
New Repub 98:136 Mr 8 '39 300w
Reviewed by Elizabeth Wiskemann
New Statesman & Nation 17:182 F 4 '39 700w

"If Neville Chamberlain, Lord Halifax, Edouard Daladier and Georges Bonnet have any spare time on their hands they could do worse than to take up Mr. Hutton's factual survey of present-day Europe. Indeed they might find in it some good weapons with which to outmatch Hitler and Mussolini. . . Mr. Hutton's book is a cold dish of facts. There is no salad and no sauce. Unlike some of the books by foreign correspondents which tend to keep one reading far into the night, Mr. Hutton's volume can only be sampled at intervals. But there is nothing in it, perhaps with the exception of a short introductory historical survey, that the student of European affairs should miss." Shepard Stone
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 12 '39 950w
New Yorker 15:79 Mr 4 '39 40w
No Am 247:191 spring '39 80w
Reviewed by E. C. Carter
+ Pacific Affairs 12:316 S '39 450w
Pratt p25 summer '39
Reviewed by V. M. Dean
Sat R of Lit 19:11 Mr 4 '39 600w

"Mr. Hutton's readers will learn a great deal from his book if they make some allowance for the enthusiasm which sometimes leads him to state positively what he can only guess. On the whole, his guesses are very sensible, and they are based on a wide range of knowledge, especially in the economic chapters." Richard Freund
+ Spec 162:310 F 24 '39 750w
Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Survey G 28:337 My '39 90w
Time 34:78 S 18 '39 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p66 F 4 '39 600w
Reviewed by A. W. Griswold
Yale R n s 28:825 summer '39 300w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. After many a summer dies the swan [Eng title: After many a summer]. 356p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Chatto] (W) [39-31416]

Satiric novel about an American multimillionaire with a terror of death. He lives near Hollywood in a monstrosity of a castle, surrounded by priceless works of art incongruously placed, and waited on by a flock of servants, scholars, and others dependent upon his money. His personal physician is working on a theory of longevity, which ties up with some priceless old documents just purchased. In pursuit of evidence of his theory the doctor goes to England, where in a subterranean den under an English country house, the book closes on a note of horror.

Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

"I think I should have preferred to read the theology straight, without the fictional charade by which Mr. Huxley sugars his philosophical pill—this despite the fact that the confectionery of the novel is decidedly entertaining. Those readers who are absorbed in the author's cerebral acrobatics will find plenty of exercise in the book. Others, who seek a meaning more deeply and personally religious, may be disappointed in spite of Mr. Huxley's Christian purpose. . . Mr. Huxley's thesis and his manifestations of learning and wit are impressive. His personality, as it is exhibited in a novel of this nature, is not." William Soskin
+ — Books p2 Ja 28 '40 1400w

"In 'After Many a Summer Dies the Swan' Mr. Huxley forsakes the drawing-room for the lecture platform, or at least a Mr. Propter talks interminably about humanistic ideals, but the impression which most readers will carry away is, I fear, that they are in the hands of a very weary, a very knowing and a very cynical novelist. . . There are spots of good writing in 'After Many a Summer.' If Mr. Huxley had stuck to his theme . . . he might have produced something as powerful as Swift's vision of the Struldbrugs. As it is, the shreds and patches of his novel lie hidden among the gaudy shrubbery of esoteric allusions and long metaphysical disquisitions. Mr. Huxley may be disappointed in his search after the good life, but is that any reason for disappointing readers in search of the good novel." H. M. Jones
— Boston Transcript p1 Ja 27 '40 1100w

"A virile and clever book. . . The pages bristle with all the caustic wit that is such a characteristic of Mr. Huxley and the excursions into philosophy are not less stimulating. The book can hardly be recommended for Sunday school reading." W. P. Sears, Jr.
+ — Churchman 154:17 F 1 '40 130w

"Personally I deplore what seems to me the unnecessary coarseness of the detail here and there, but 'After Many a Summer' is quite the most interesting novel I have read this year." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '39 700w

"After Many a Summer is the record of another spiritual failure; it is Mr. Huxley's petition in moral bankruptcy, and in presenting it he speaks for all those who are too sophisticated to accept the crudities of the established religions and are at the same time too credulous to accept a sceptical philosophy." Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:524 O 14 '39 750w

"This is Mr Huxley's Hollywood novel, and you might expect it to be fantastic, extravagant, crazy and preposterous. It is all that, and heaven and hell too; for Huxley has interpolated his story with practically everything he has learned of the animalistic, humanistic and religious ideas and practices of mankind.

HUXLEY, ALDOUS (all'dŭs)

It is the kind of novel that he is particularly the master of, where the most extraordinary and fortuitous events are followed by contemplative little essays on the meaning of life. . . The story is outrageously good, the essays are reasonable; together they make the peculiar combination of a Huxley novel." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 28 '40 1150w

"An entertaining satire on man's desire to live indefinitely, a good deal of fascinating, last-minute biology, a highly sensational plot that will keep astonishing you to practically the final sentence, much brilliant conversation, some so-so lampooning of Hollywood, and a remarkable literary tour de force—the 'Hauberk Papers,' done in late-eighteenth-century style and a first-rate piece of glossy imitating. Different people get different things out of Huxley's novels. Some read them because they always have an up-to-date finish; Huxley makes you feel in the swim. Others read him for his latest excursions into metaphysics and ethics. Others look for sensational or shocking tidbits and are generally not disappointed. Your correspondent happens to get pleasure out of Huxley's wit and, more particularly, out of his information. Huxley is one of the few English-speaking novelists now operating who actually appear to be decently educated. He is well read and is not averse to exhibiting the fact, always tactfully, always divertingly." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:58 Ja 27 '40 900w

"This is not a novel of action. Its characterizations are after the style of Sears, Roebuck. It is that strange mutt of literature, a novel of ideas. And the idea here is that Time is essentially evil. Satire worthy of Donne or Swift is poured on the merely human, biological quest for long life. The true good is the quest for eternity, realizable now. It is, however, Mr. Huxley's own affair how he chooses to express his ideas. What matters is that he has ideas of the first importance to express." George Catlin

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 Ja 27 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Derek Verschoyle

Spec 163:522 O 13 '39 700w

Time 35:72 Ja 29 '40 650w

"Mr. Huxley's elegant mockery, his cruel aptness of phrase, the revelations and the ingenious surprises he springs on the reader are those of a master craftsman; Mr. Huxley is at the top of his form in this respect. In the cynicism of his view of personal relationships he excels himself; the brutality of his human disgust here is unrelieved."

Times [London] Lit Sup p591 O 14 '39 1400w

HUXLEY, MRS ELSPETH. Red strangers; with 16 plates from photographs by the author. 406p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Chatto]

39-27912

"This is an attempt to describe in fictional form 'the coming of the European to a part of Africa previously untouched by white influence as it appeared to one family of one tribe living in one small district' in Kenya. The tribe are Kikuyu; the period covered is the last fifty years; and the story is in three parts, each with its leading man." Spec

---

Booklist 36:110 N 15 '39

Reviewed by M. C. Hubbard

Books p14 O 8 '39 800w

"Mrs. Huxley, in this brilliant and absorbing work, has done for the dark continent more or less what Pearl Buck did for China in 'The Good Earth.' If the latter book has more 'story,' is more easily read, Mrs. Huxley's wins on points of quality." Charlotte Bassett

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '39 1000w

"Fascinating as story or information. One is struck by the stupefaction, the pathos and futile cunning of the Kikuyu before the Red man's sudden, graceless arrival in his world. Mrs. Huxley writes seriously and with dignity. There are passages of grave and restrained poetical beauty. And though she rightly rejects the enormous but overdone satirical possibilities of her subject, she has a sound eye for the kind of comedy that arises when, say, a Kikuyu discovers capitalism." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 8 '39 180w

"While Mrs. Huxley writes of this primitive life with sympathy and understanding, she is too honest a chronicler to indulge in Arcadian raptures about the idyllic existence of the noble savage; she records the squalor and horror of the degradation that comes of the enslavement of a community to superstition as faithfully as she delineates the simple pleasures of a people unfretted by a too analytical modern consciousness." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Je 2 '39 600w

Nation 149:585 N 25 '39 140w

"An unusually successful attempt to recreate the tribal life of the native by showing it through his eyes, without benefit of white man's interpretation." Nigel Dennis

+ New Repub 100:349 O 25 '39 140w

"Red Strangers is not a jeu d'esprit, but a serious history that needs no epigrams to make it readable. Mrs. Huxley has made a first-hand study of a social earthquake, and the urbanised Kikuyu of the future will owe her their gratitude." John Mair

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:866 Je 3 '39 650w

"A book so richly detailed in its picture of native customs and psychology that it has, despite its author's disclaimers, almost the value of an anthropological study. Few fictional accounts of darkest Africa possess anything like its scope and exactitude. . . 'Red Strangers' is a real achievement, not facile reading, not every one's meat perhaps, but a book of great and special distinction." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p6 S 10 '39 900w

"Keenly observed, with impressive local color, and related with warm understanding."

+ New Yorker 15:78 S 9 '39 40w

"Few novels are simultaneously so engaging and so valuably informative as is this admirable study of African tribal life. Readers of Mrs. Huxley's detective story, 'Murder on Safari,' will be prepared for excellent craftsmanship, but they will hardly expect such erudition, such subtle portraiture of difficult characters, such penetrating observation and understanding of a remote and mysterious way of life as are here exhibited. This is a serious book, a profoundly interesting anthropological treatise, and, at the same time, a warmly human chronicle of people whose lives, for all their outward simplicity, are as psychologically complicated as the inventions of Balzac or Flaubert." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 20:11 S 9 '39 550w

"If Mrs. Huxley, as a novelist, does not bowl us over, she impresses us much more than most contemporary novelists, because she has got something important to say and is unusually qualified to say it. If she is wanting in poetic feeling she is not wanting in good judgement; she does not moralise; and she leaves us with an impression that if she had a part in the government or education of African natives she would make good use of it." William Plomer

+ Spec 162:1058 Je 16 '39 700w

Time 34:72 S 25 '39 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Je 3 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 35:187 N '39

HYAMS, EDWARD S. The wings of the morning. 301p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Duckworth]

39-14381

A satirical fantasy which portrays the chaotic conditions of modern civilization and the inevitable failure of those who would establish utopias in order to delay society's destruction.

HYAMS, E. S.—Continued

"Mr. Hyams's novel is not typical of contemporary fiction, nor is it in the aesthetic sense an outstanding one. What distinguishes it is its subject." Alfred Kazin

+ — Books p6 Je 18 '39 1250w

"The basic idea of this novel is not strange. It is similar to the fear that inspired Geoffrey Household's novel, 'The Third Hour.' However, Mr. Hyams's protagonist seems to us so neurotic, his events so fantastic, his people so often out of character, and his meaning so often unintelligible, that we do not like his book very much, either as a novel or as a commentary on contemporary history." Olga Owens

— + Boston Transcript p1 Je 17 '39 900w

"Doubtless intended to be significant, but too confused to leave the reader feeling anything but giddy."

New Repub 99:232 Je 28 '39 50w

"Mr. Hyams writes with a good deal of élan and originality, but he has much still to learn about the technical business of putting a novel together. He is far from expert at defining character, for one important thing, and he complicates this by naming his people such things as Guthrie and Gethin and Gama and leaving the reader to struggle with it." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 2 '39 800w

"Not very clear."

New Yorker 15:91 Je 17 '39 60w

"Here is a very strange novel—baffling, irritating, and intellectually exciting. It is baffling because the reader is never quite sure what it is about, irritating because one suspects that the author himself is uncertain, but intellectually exciting because of the acute and subtle—sometimes passionate and breath-taking—analyses of the problems of modern man." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:14 Je 17 '39 700w

"The book provides much food for thought, but it leaves the reader bewildered as to just what the writer is trying to tell us."

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 25 '39 470w

Time 33:84 Je 19 '39 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 7 '39 350w

HYERS, MRS FAITH (HOLMES). The library and the radio. 101p pa 75c Univ. of Chicago press [pa 3s 3d Cambridge]

021.7 Libraries and readers. Radio in education. Radio broadcasting. Advertising—Libraries (W) 38-35940

"A report of what has and is being done over the radio by librarians, educational organizations, and institutions, and of various programs to stimulate cerebration, reading, and the use of the library. Types of successful programs are described; present problems are discussed." Booklist

Booklist 35:128 D 15 '38

"If there is any possible criticism of the excellent work Mrs. Hyers has done in her pamphlet, it is that she has been over generous in her quotation from the reports of others. It is to be hoped that with this little volume she has cleared the way for a more personal discussion of her own reactions to the existing problems and experiments of library broadcasting. Whenever she permits her own experience and her own shrewd and practical judgment to show through her dispassionate account, she whets the appetite for more. A selected reading list on the subject is included." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 64:109 F 1 '39 950w

"I cannot see how any librarian who is really interested in radio can help but gain great benefit from the information which Mrs. Hyers gives in the chapters in which she shows what methods can best be employed in working out each of the mentioned activities. Her whole conception of the accomplishments of the educator and the broadcaster, as listed in the well-thought-out Table of Contents, is indicative of the study and research which has gone into this comprehensive booklet. . . Mrs. Hyers has done an exhaustive piece of research work; she has tapped the sources, which must have been hard to find, in an endeavor to give the librarians a practical source book on the art of building radio programs which will not only help further the work of libraries throughout the country but will stimulate the thinking of countless listeners." J. C. Waller

+ Library Q 9:374 Jl '39 800w

Special Libraries 30:241 S '39

HYLANDER, CLARENCE JOHN. The world of plant life [il. by the author]. 722p $7.50 (32s 6d) Macmillan

581.973 Botany—U.S. 39-9514

In simple style, and following an easily understood classification, this book covers the plant life of the United States from Maine to California, and from the bacteria to the giant redwoods. The author is assistant professor of botany at Colgate university. Check list of species, reading list, and index.

Booklist 35:326 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by D. C. Peattie

Books p6 S 3 '39 330w

"The author set out to produce a book for laymen, one which would serve as a guide to interesting plants, native and introduced. That he succeeded admirably is at once apparent." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 3 '39 360w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:61 O '39

"The author of this book hoped to reach two audiences and has really reached neither. For the interested amateur and garden club member it is too technical; for the college student or moderately trained plant scientist it is too superficial. There may be no alternative to this dilemma, and the author begs forgiveness in his introduction for attempting what may be impossible. . . In spite of [inaccuracies] the book has a certain value, for it does contain at least brief notes on the main plant families and larger groups of plants. . . The result is a huge compilation of material which the amateur may not know where to find elsewhere. Another useful feature is the excellent collection of photographs and line drawings, which are so plentiful as to greatly aid students in identifying unknown plants. They are especially helpful, too, because they elucidate a text that cannot avoid some technical terms, and most of these are not defined." Norman Taylor

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 25 '39 750w

New Yorker 15:107 Ap 15 '39 30w

Pratt p12 summer '39

"This book . . . is evidently designed for those not trained in botany, and as an aid to the lovers of woods and fields who are balked again and again in their attempts to identify flower or shrub or tree by means of more technical manuals. But this is no mere popularization. Its usability depends, not upon oversimplification, but upon careful, untechnical, but scientific accounts of each growing thing. The pictures are good and really helpful." H. S. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:21 Je 3 '39 110w

I

I married a Jew. 43p $1 Dodd

296 Jewish question. Marriage 39-8186

The greater part of this small book is the Gentile wife's side of the argument as to how the Jewish problem may be solved, her theme being that the Jews must drop some of their Jewish ways and become real citizens of the countries they live in. In conclusion, however, she answers the question of her friends: "Do Jews make good husbands?" with the affirmation: "The best in the world."

Cath World 149:635 Ag '39 60w
Christian Century 56:611 My 10 '39 100w

I was in prison; the suppressed letters of imprisoned German pastors; interpreted by Charles S. Macfarland [tr. and arr. by Dorothy Frances Buxton and Vincent Brun]. 112p $1 Revell

261.7 Church and state in Germany. Clergy —Germany 39-17791

"Quotations from letters of German pastors, mostly in nazi prisons or in concentration camps. The interpretations include well informed discussion of the policies and broken promises of the reich toward the church, and some record of the author's activities in attempting to represent to the German authorities the unwisdom as well as the injustice of their procedure." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p18 O 15 '39 250w
Christian Century 56:773 Je 14 '39 70w
Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 153:19 O 1 '39 60w

"What a fine thing for the world that a volume of these letters fell into the hands of an English visitor before the publication was discovered and confiscated! Unlike most of the anti-Nazi books we see, which incite to hatred and revenge, this little collection breathes a spirit of resignation, brotherly love and Christian hope. It presents one of the noblest spectacles possible for mortal man, the nobility of Christian suffering." Edward Skillin, Jr.
+ Commonweal 30:282 Jl 7 '39 310w

"This book is not propaganda, but a recital of facts of vital interest to all who are concerned about the survival of real democracy." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 17:78 Ja '40 150w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 8 '39 350w

IAMS, JACK. Table for four; il. by Gregor Duncan. 319p $2 Simon & Schuster

39-8349

Two young married couples, anxious to see Life, leave Pittsburgh and go to Paris. One of the men tries his hand at writing fiction; the other undertakes to support them all by newspaper work. After some rather Bohemian adventures and a love affair which threatens disaster, the party breaks up and one couple returns to the United States.

Reviewed by George Conrad
Books p8 Ap 9 '39 420w
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 60w

"'Table for Four' is so smoothly written, so immensely funny, that it is one of the few books which tempt a reviewer to outblurb the blurb in enthusiasm." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 2 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:79 Ap 1 '39 50w

"The novel is pointed to as being something that the late Thorne Smith, of 'Topper Takes a Trip' fame might have written. If he had written it, the novel would have been funnier and the climax of the Peter-Harriet love affair would never have been halted. Mr Iams walks skillfully along a narrow fence and presents an amusing picture of some phases of the American literary life."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 420w

ICKES, HAROLD LECLAIRE. America's House of lords; an inquiry into the freedom of the press. 214p $1.50; pa 75c Harcourt

070.13 Liberty of the press. Newspapers—U.S. (W) 39-27987

The Secretary of the Interior takes American newspapers to task, claiming that most of them have a tendency to divert public opinion to their own uses. Index.

Booklist 36:125 D 1 '39

"For all the fact that he was wandering far out of his field, Ickes has some good stuff in this collection of horrors. It is a shame he had to mar it with a cloudy viewpoint, a fuzziness of definition, the use of patently unfair insinuations and the worst temper between the Hatfield-McCoy country and LaGuardia's office in City Hall, New York." Stanley Walker
— + Books p4 N 5 '39 2000w

"There is no free institution that doesn't need a constant critical supervision by the people as a whole. The press gets its share, but it is unfortunate that so many of its critics have been men with a particular grievance like Mr. Ickes, who feels that the nation's newspapers have on the whole selfishly resisted the philosophy of the New Deal. The present book has enough invective and enough derision to confirm it as ex parte, however justified much of the critical material may in itself be." Alden Hoag
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 500w

"Newspaper men will continue to cavil at some of Mr. Ickes' details, but many of the main points he makes are important and, alas, too true."
Christian Century 56:1511 D 6 '39 150w
Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 150:131 F 3 '40 550w

"Mr. Ickes has had a thoroughly enjoyable time putting his candid opinions of the newspapers' failings before several audiences. . . . He says that the American press is the best in the world, and he writes his book only to make it better." C. McD. Puckette
N Y Times p4 N 12 '39 750w

"A good many direct hits, and some shots that are pretty wide, but all are worth your time."
+ New Yorker 15:90 N 11 '39 50w
No Am 248:415 winter '40 100w
Sat R of Lit 21:22 D 30 '39 300w
Springf'd Republican p10 N 3 '39 420w
Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 29:34 Ja '40 750w
Wis Lib Bul 35:211 D '39

ILES, FRANCIS, pseud. See Cox, A. B.

INAYAT, NOOR. See Jātakas. Twenty Jātaka tales

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. Our present discontents. 351p $3 (7s 6d) Putnam

824 [39-27194]

"More than 40 weekly articles by this learned independent thinker, many on religious and social topics, but including also a number on political questions, and a defense of rebel Spain." Booklist

Booklist 35:248 Ap 1 '39
Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p12 Jl 2 '39 210w

"Having read everything Dr. Inge ever wrote, I simply cannot understand his attitude to the Spanish situation. . . [However, this is] a volume of wit and wisdom, perception and prophecy, this is a book to buy, to read and reread, and to hold on to as long as you live." H. D. McKeehan

INGE, W. R.—Continued
+ — Christian Century 56:285 Mr 1 '39 600w

"The book's numerous essays cover a wide field. They contain both wisdom and the lack of it, considerable inconsistency and not a little superficiality. One can scarcely regard them as important." T. L. Riggs
Commonweal 31:123 N 24 '39 170w

"When I have said all that can be said by way of expressing disagreements and spotting inconsistencies, let me put it on record that I have read these essays with profit and delight. The Dean is continuously interesting, almost continuously wise, and is as often witty as any man has a right to be." C. E. M. Joad
+ — Spec 161:954 D 2 '38 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p694 O 29 '38 700w

INGRAM, ARTHUR FOLEY WINNINGTON, bp. Secrets of happiness. 114p $1.25 (3s 6d) Longmans

248 Happiness. Christian life

"The Bishop of London gives this as a 'last message' to the city he has served for fifty years—thirty-eight as bishop. His words express the assurance of a simple faith and the wisdom of a richly mature mind. It is a cheerful mind too. As the title indicates, the emphasis is upon the joy of the Christian life." Christian Century

Christian Century 56:1046 Ag 30 '39 60w

"The very plainest commonsense, brought to bear upon the hourly problems of everyday life, marks this very simply conceived and expressed manual. Which does not mean that the pages are slight or adolescent! We can do with a spot of healthy, clear-minded simplicity." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 153:38 D 1 '39 80w

"Many people will be grateful to the Bishop for this attractive book and for its robust, encouraging faith."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Jl 15 '39 550w

INGRAM, REX. Mars in the house of death; drawings by Carlos Ruano Llopis. 377p $2.50 Knopf

39-25146

A tale of bulls and bullfighters in Spain and Mexico. The story follows the brief career of Chuchito, illegitimate son of a Spanish nobleman and a gipsy dancer, from his birth to his death in the bull ring.

Reviewed by William Soskin
— Books p14 O 8 '39 600w

"The tale, somehow, doesn't seem to this reviewer to sum up to make a novel. But many of the sequences and much of the dialogue are brilliantly done; some of them softly done; some of them most pertinent. But most of these occur in the early half of the tale. The rest is melodrama and, so far as this review is concerned, silence." F. T. Marsh
— + N Y Times p7 O 1 '39 400w

"Satisfactory for those who like point-by-point description of bullfights with romance thrown in."
New Yorker 15:77 O 7 '39 30w

"Mr Ingram writes with his customary skill, although handicapped by a plot which seems too carefully manufactured to answer his first purpose. . . The ingredients of Spanish romance are all here, of course, although the players are not always as genteel as might be."
Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 450w

"A colorful, realistic, badly constructed tale, Mars in the House of Death will add more to Ingram's reputation for versatility than to literature."
Time 34:70 O 2 '39 400w

INMAN, ARTHUR CREW. None now are quietly wise. 110p $2 Dutton

811 39-23676

This is the first volume of poetry published in more than ten years by the author of American Silhouettes and Night Express (Book Review Digest, 1926, 1927.)

"Mr. Inman believes that what a poet has to say should be expressed in chosen speech stamped with the coinage of beauty, not in 'dissonants culled from harsh worldliness, and blasphemy, and scrivener's juggling.' Even when he touches upon lighter themes—the thin man in a circus sideshow or an organ grinder—he avoids the obvious approach. Mr. Inman is a poet who understands the yearning of mankind for its missing treasures, and upholds a faith that they will be recovered."
+ Books p29 D 10 '39 200w

"On the whole, these poems grow in meaning and impressiveness with re-reading. They reflect a mind that has studied life rather carefully and that is not afraid to speak out. Pessimist though the author may be, courage—and faith, too—are not lacking." A. M. J.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 280w

INNES, JOHN WARWICK. Class fertility trends in England and Wales, 1876-1934. 152p $2 Princeton univ. press

312.0942 Great Britain—Population 39-2660

"This study has a double objective. One is the accurate account of what are the actual trends in the birth rates of different social classes. The second is to test the accuracy and validity of different measurements of birth rates, trend, and social class (to the discussion of which two appendices are devoted, one on method, the other on the series in correlation analysis). The ultimate problem is the factoring of class patterns of declining birth rates." Am Soc R

"Dr. Innes has made an important contribution to the literature on differential fertility. While the lack of comparable data may preclude the possibility of repetition of his methods in other countries, his study should stimulate researches elsewhere for the testing of the hypothesis of the 'democratization' of the birth rate." C. T. Pihlblad
+ Am J Pub Health 29:1164 O '39 850w
Reviewed by H. A. Phelps
Am Soc R 4:291 Ap '39 230w

"In spite of various inadequacies in the material, the general conclusions concerning the trends of class fertility may stand. If so, then this study represents a valuable contribution to knowledge of the history of population." E. P. Hutchinson
Ann Am Acad 205:203 S '39 550w

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INNIS, HAROLD ADAMS, ed. Essays in political economy, in honour of E. J. Urwick; with an introd. by H. J. Cody. 236p map $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [11s 6d Oxford]

304 Economics. Urwick, Edward Johns. Canada—Economic conditions 38-37468

Contents: Some aspects of corporations, by C. A. Ashley; Overhead costs, time problems, and prices, by I. M. Biss; Adam Smith on value, by V. W. Bladen; Staple production and Canada's external relations, by F. W. Burton; The tariff and Canadian butter, by Agatha Chapman; The Canadian manufacturers' association: its economic and social implications, by S. D. Clark; Monetary theory and politics, by V. F. Coe; Social evolution and modern anthropology, by C. W. M. Hart; Imperfect competition and international trade theory, by O. J. McDiarmid; On the study of politics in Canada, by C. B. Macpherson; The origins and development of fascism, by L. T. Morgan; The arguments for central banking in the British dominions, by A. F. W. Plumptre; Problems of the drought area in western Canada, by W. J. Waines; The economic forces leading to a centralized federalism in Canada, by Leo Warshaw.

Am Econ R 29:126 Mr '39 30w

Reviewed by Eugene Forsey
Canadian Forum 18:152 Ag '38 2350w

INSTITUTE FOR PROPAGANDA ANALYSIS, INCORPORATED. Fine art of propaganda; a study of Father Coughlin's speeches; ed. by Alfred McClung Lee and Elizabeth Briant Lee. 140p il $1.50; pa 75c Harcourt

301.15 Propaganda. Coughlin, Charles Edward (W) 39-27669

"The professional propagandist in general and Father Coughlin in particular are subjected to analysis by specialists in [this] little book. . . The institute has approached in a scientific spirit its task of instructing the American public on how to size up advocacy of causes, and its own individual assumptions and prejudices as well." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 36:2 S '39

Christian Century 56:1077 S 6 '39 130w

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 17 '39 400w

"Here is a small volume of 140 pages which is an incandescent torch for the wanderer in the morass of propaganda. . . A reading of the little book would be wholesome exercise for every American." James Van Zant
+ Churchman 153:17 S 1 '39 80w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
Commonweal 30:590 O 20 '39 550w

"This book, if it reaches enough people, might be an effective preventative or antidote against the increasing influence today of the demagogue in America. Its appeal is general but educators, editors and legislators will find it of especial value." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist 51:4 S '39 550w

Foreign Affairs 18:370 Ja '40 20w

"This clear handbook on how not to believe everything you hear or read is not only usable but very, very timely." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 102:iv O '39 180w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
New Repub 100:192 S 20 '39 1100w

"The book will bear reading not only for its devastating exposure of Father Coughlin's sophistic tricks, but for the help it gives in guarding us against being taken in by other insidious speakers and writers. These are days when the voice of the barbarian is trained to subtlety. It is therefore no time for the honest citizen to be gullible." H. A. Overstreet
+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 O 7 '39 700w

"The analysis is most interesting as a study of a particularly elusive type of propaganda oratory and should prove salutary as a corrective of the subtle poison of mob psychology."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 17 '39 650w

INTERNATIONAL blue book (Who's who in the world). 602p $10 1937-38 H. Ringrose, 225 Broadway, N.Y.

920

"A biographical dictionary of the world's notable living men and women; edited by Hyacinthe Ringrose, printed in English, French, German, Spanish, Italian and other languages." (Subtitle) "The edition of 1937-38, copyright 1937, includes about 800 names, one fifth of which are found in a section labeled 'Too late for classification,' at the end of the main alphabetical list." (Subscription Bks Bul)

"Criticisms made in the review of the earlier edition [Book Review Digest, 1937] apply equally to this latest volume of the series. The same disproportionate emphasis on relatively unimportant persons, particularly on citizens of the United States, appears both in the number of such names included and in the amount of space allotted to them. Many foreign countries are not represented. . . Numerous errors may be noted. . . The International Blue Book, 1937-38, is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 10:3 Ja '39 380w

INTERNATIONAL cyclopedia of music and musicians; ed. by Oscar Thompson [associate ed, G. W. Harris]. 2287p $12.50 Dodd

780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians (W) 38-29077

"In this book, although a general policy of condensation has been followed in dealing with what may be termed the routine of the text, there are many articles of the length and the fullness of detail to compare in scope with those in any similar work of several volumes. A point has been made to list fully the works of important composers, with dates of composition—or of first performance or publication—wherever feasible. In most instances, both a calendar of events and a catalogue of compositions are appended to the longer articles on composers. . . The articles are for reading, not merely for reference. . . Appendix I is devoted to brief synopses of the plots of some 200 operas. Appendix II is a Bibliography of Books on Musical Subjects, listing about 3,500 titles. In some instances, additional bibliographies accompany particular articles. . . It is not by chance that more space is devoted to American composers than they could expect of a lexicon published in England, France, Germany, Italy, or Russia. Because they have failed of proportionate representation in books of similar character issued abroad, the editor has preferred to err on the side of liberality in the factual statement of what they have achieved. Their works, even though mostly in manuscript, are enumerated to an extent paralleled by no other general encyclopedia of music." Editor's foreword

Booklist 35:170 Ja 15 '39

"It follows the general scheme of Grove's 'Dictionary of Music and Musicians' which is in five volumes and an American supplement, and although modernized from time to time was originally published in 1879 in England. This excellent and indispensable dictionary has served as the chief large reference work in English for many years. The Thompson cyclopedia, convenient in form, entirely modern and American in its point of view, should make a valuable supplementary resource for the library of the professional, the teacher, student, journalist and ordinary concert goer." Douglas Moore
+ Books p5 D 18 '38 650w

"The International Cyclopedia is happily free of the besetting sin of many compilations of its kind. Some dictionaries of music and musicians are hardly anything but rewrites of previous volumes, and they carry over the errors made by earlier encyclopedists. This volume has evidently been edited with conscientious honesty and with freshness of vision. The result is that it takes front rank among American contemporaries." H. H. Taubman
+ N Y Times p17 F 19 '39 750w

"As the first American musical reference work on such a scale, this Cyclopedia is a landmark in our development as a music-loving nation. Twenty years ago it could not have been published. Twenty years hence it will have been superseded, one hopes, by works of more consistent and scrupulous scholarship. Meanwhile it will have given real help to many seeking information which they would not know how to find elsewhere." Arthur Mendel
+ Sat R of Lit 19:18 D 31 '38 700w

"Certain discrepancies may be noted in the bibliography at the end of the book. . . The listing of books under both author and subject has not been thoroughly done. . . These shortcomings assume comparatively little importance in view of the vast amount of useful and interesting information in the International Cyclopedia of Music. Besides concise, significant information for quick reference in the form of short articles, the volume gathers together in monograph form a great deal of biographical, critical and historical material on musicians and musical subjects otherwise to be found only after a search of many volumes on musical theory, history and biography. Though the style differs with the individual writer the treatment of this material is characteristically clear and readable. The International Cyclopedia of Music is recommended."

INTERNATIONAL cyclopedia of music and musicians—Continued

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:20 Ap '39 700w

INVERARITY, ROBERT BRUCE. A manual of puppetry. 2d ed 222p il $2 Binfords

791.5 Puppet plays 38-29058

Instructions, illustrated with many line drawings, on the making and dressing of puppets. Includes information on puppet history, supplies, and contains a bibliography.

Booklist 35:170 Ja 15 '39

"A fine working guide covering the fundamental and many special and individual details about the making of marionettes, shadow, and hand puppets. Also, unusually full notes about obtaining sound and light effects, with many descriptive and working drawings."

+ Horn Bk M 15:173 My '39 130w

"Mr. Inverarity's Manual of Puppetry, already familiar to students in an inconvenient mimeographed form, reappears this year as a regular book with many additions and revisions, and strengthens its position among the standard works on puppet-making and play production. The work has not lost its chatty scrapbook style which can make even a detailed description of how to string a chorus amusing." Walt Crane

+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:232 Mr '39 110w

IONIDES, STEPHEN ARCHIGENES, and IONIDES, MARGARET LOUISE. Stars and men. 460p il maps $4 Bobbs

520 Astronomy (W) 39-31023

This book by two amateur astronomers deals with the uses mankind has made of astronomical studies and findings. There are chapters on time, seasons, the calendar, navigation, astrology and cosmology, as well as others on the sun, and the moon, stars, planets, eclipses, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:145 D 15 '39

"The Ionides, father and daughter, must have had wonderful fun writing 'Stars and Men.' And the reader who can be persuaded to take the book once into his hands will have just as much fun reading it. It is a new kind of astronomy book, a rambling, discursive, good-natured book, free of all pedantry, and pleasant to meet." Marian Lockwood

+ Books p12 Ja 7 '40 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:51 O '39

"It is a book which recommends itself for family reading, on long Winter evenings or around a Summer campfire. And it will supply plenty of information about astronomy and man's history, as they have been joined together since the earliest days."

+ N Y Times p3 D 17 '39 320w

New Yorker 15:84 O 28 '39 20w

" 'Stars and Men,' while written with considerable skill, would have been much more readable if the authors had stuck more closely to the question at hand. To illuminate a discussion with flashes of imagination, to draw witty comparisons, to saunter through paragraphs mingling sober facts about the moon's phases with quotations from 'Alice in Wonderland,' these are all desirable and praiseworthy and the stuff of which good writing is made, but they must be done in such a way as to appear right, obvious, and unstrained; above all, they must not distract the reader from the subject under discussion." G. R. Harrison

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:4 Ja 27 '40 500w

"From internal evidence both as to subject matter and treatment, this book was written because the authors could not help writing it. Their approach to astronomy is that of the amateur in the true sense—one who pursues a subject for the love of it. With the enthusiasm of true hobbyists, therefore, they would tell others of their findings, and the whole book savors of the zeal characteristic of those who would win converts to a highly prized avocation. . . So far as the facts of astronomy are concerned, the authors admittedly derive most of their information second-hand as they do not pretend to have advanced the frontiers of knowledge of the universe through any research of their own. The accuracy of the assertions made, however, has been checked by professionals and few errors of statement are to be found."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 D '39 280w

IRVINE, HELEN DOUGLAS. See Douglas Irvine, H.

IRVINE, WILLIAM. Walter Bagehot. 303p $4.50 (12s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Bagehot, Walter

"Walter Bagehot's outward life was not very eventful, and his present biographer tactfully recognizes the fact by not devoting more than a small section of his volume to it. Bagehot was born in 1826, the son of a banker, attended University College, London, wrote a series of brilliant letters for an English paper on Louis Napoleon's coup d'état on a visit to Paris, learned the banking business with his father, while he also wrote literary, biographical, and religious essays, married a Miss Wilson, daughter of the owner of the London Economist, eventually became editor of that paper, stood for Parliament three times and was each time defeated, and then wrote the volumes on which his reputation rests: 'The English Constitution,' 'Lombard Street,' 'Physics and Politics,' and 'Economic Studies.' He died in 1877 in his fifty-second year." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Irvine's review, detailed and painstaking, is admirably clear and written with zest. He reads convincingly between the lines of Bagehot's work, and, while remaining the impartial critic, succeeds in presenting it in so interesting a light that he should tempt many to make, or to renew, acquaintance with it." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 18 '39 360w

Reviewed by H. B. Charlton

Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '39 390w

"Everyone has his own pet criterion of select intelligence; and since mine is a proper appreciation of The English Constitution I opened Mr. Irvine's study of Walter Bagehot with keen anticipation. Not only did I want to know more about my Victorian hero; I was also curious to learn what an American professor would make of him. Unfortunately, the answer is—not very much. . . By treating the literary and religious essays as the centre of his work, Mr. Irvine has given an absurdly lopsided picture of Bagehot's significance. All the same, Walter Bagehot is worth reading, if only because it contains a number of quotations from his lesser works." Richard Coventry

— + New Statesman & Nation 18:462 S 30 '39 1400w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p17 Ja 28 '40 1000w

"Though Mr. Irvine sometimes slips into academic pedantry, he writes for the most part with a light and graceful touch, and with occasional flashes of wit. His critical judgment is remarkably sound, and he weighs Bagehot the literary figure quite justly." Henry Hazlitt

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 D 16 '39 600w

"One of the shrewdest of modern critics has chosen Walter Bagehot as being the most characteristic representative of the Victorian age. Mr. William Irvine is content to treat him as a brilliant and many-sided writer. His approach is both biographical and critical; and it is the only fault of an otherwise admirable work that he dwells too little upon the actual facts of Bagehot's easy and enviable career. Three chapters are devoted to his youth, and only one to the achievements of his mature years; while the rest of the book is given to a critical discourse on his writings. It would have been better to tell more of the period of Bagehot's fame, when he was known as a prosperous banker, an influential journalist and a brilliant talker." Christopher Hobhouse

+ — Spec 163:381 S 15 '39 1400w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 650w (reprinted from Times [London] Lit Sup)

Times [London] Lit Sup p538 S 16 '39 2000w

IRVING, ROBERT LOCK GRAHAM, ed. The mountain way. 656p $3 Dutton [10s 6d Dent]

796.52 Mountaineering. Literature—Collections 39-27085

An anthology in prose and verse about mountains and mountaineering.

Booklist 35:220 Mr 1 '39

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas

Manchester Guardian sup xiii D 9 '38 120w

New Yorker 14:83 F 11 '39 30w

"Mountaineering has produced more good writing in English than all other sports put together. . . There is enough familiar and unfamiliar writing here to satisfy anyone who can digest anthologies at all; the arrangement in seven sections according to mood and theme gives Mr. Irving an opportunity for some useful brief introductions, and the preliminary notes on a few mountaineering terms smooth away the bergschrunds and the seracs from the path of those who think that an alp is a mountain and that gendarmes are guardians of the law." Michael Roberts

+ Spec 161:sup 16 N 18 '38 550w

IRWIN, MARGARET E. F. (MRS J. R. MONSELL). The bride. 401p $2.50 Harcourt [8s 6d Chatto]

Montrose, James Graham, 1st marquis of—Fiction. Louise Hollandine, countess palatine, abbess of Maubison—Fiction 39-27804

Historical novel dealing with the Stuart cause from January, 1649, when Charles the First was executed, to May, 1650, when the Marquis of Montrose was executed in Edinburgh. Montrose is the hero; the heroine is Princess Louise, the lovely, unpredictable daughter of Elizabeth of Bohemia.

Booklist 36:68 O 15 '39

"The story of the gallant Montrose as Miss Irwin tells it takes us back to that world of heroic romance in which men both in their lives and in their death contrive in each least act to reveal the very mettle and the fiber of their greatness. Lord Tweedsmuir, who knows far more of English history than I do, regards Miss Irwin's series as 'a marvellous piece of historical reconstruction.' The facts may well be here in literal, careful detail. But the spirit is unmistakably that of romance with a capital R." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p10 O 8 '39 600w

"In a quiet way, devoid of all swashbuckling gestures, Margaret Irwin continues her story of the ill-fated Stuart family. Faithful in every detail to known facts, the warmth of her sympathies humanizes her tale to the point of the hero-worship found in all her books." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 950w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 19 '39 160w

Reviewed by E. S. Hertell

Churchman 153:39 D 15 '39 70w

Reviewed by H. C. White

Commonweal 31:190 D 15 '39 500w

" 'The Bride' is a book to enjoy and dream over. Miss Irwin's cultured, powerful English is almost perfectly suited to tell such a story as this and gives in her reproduction of conversations the effect of a living language without any tiresome straining after what might or might not have been the precise idiom and pronunciation of the period. Add to this that the instrument is put to its best use by translating the concepts of a vivid imagination into speech and no more is necessary to commend an unusually fine book." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 7 '39 550w

" 'The Bride' is something more than a brilliant piece of historical reconstruction. Margaret Irwin has lived so long and closely with these people that her descriptions have almost the ring of first-hand experience, gaining reality not only from what she says but from what she knows and does not think it necessary to say." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 O 8 '39 850w

New Yorker 15:77 O 7 '39 60w

Pratt p23 winter '40

"In this gook this great man [Montrose] lives and breathes. All the glamour of that dramatic and romantic time is here, but no falsification of history." L. C. Hearn

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 O 21 '39 350w

"In Miss Irwin's book, form and artistic purpose are coolly imposed on learning, subduing it imaginatively to make it reveal and illuminate a particular story and particular people." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 163:106 Jl 21 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 8 '39 650w

"The difficulty with this book, in which every character is historical, is that it is doubly unhistorical; there is, first, a presiding love affair that is almost pure invention and there is, further, a reading of motives and personalities in seventeenth-century England that is dashingly partisan. In the result 'The Bride' is neither history nor fiction. Faithful to record in externals, it breathes the same hero-worshipping spirit as the earlier books and a still more exalted and precarious romanticism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Jl 8 '39 900w

Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

ISAKOFF, JACK FEIN. The Public works administration. 166p $2; pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill.

353.8 U.S. Federal emergency administration of public works 38-28745

"In this . . . monograph, the author sets for himself the task of analyzing 'the functioning of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, more commonly known as the Public Works Administration.' Further, he notifies his readers that he is interested 'chiefly in the organization and policies of the establishment as a problem in public administration'; that little consideration has been given to the 'broader economic, political, and legal problems except as they conditioned the actual administration of the establishment's functions'; that the reader 'will fail to find an analysis of the functions of public works expenditures in the economic order.' . . The author presents in successive chapters the general organization and functions of the P. W. A., its important administrative problems, its financing and allotments, its administrative policies, and in a recapitulatory chapter he plays the rôle of critic." Am Pol Sci R

ISAKOFF, J. F.—Continued

"The vividness of the description and analysis in the book might have been increased if, without violating scientific accuracy and frigidity, other personalities besides that of Mr. Ickes could have been referred to, and if there had been more citation of concrete cases and decisions." W. B. Catlin
Am Econ R 29:600 S '39 440w

Reviewed by J. P. Comer
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:308 Ap '39 650w

"This study might well serve as a starting point in discussion organizational policies and forms; but only as a starting point—much more detail and much more critical analysis would be necessary. One also feels the need, after five years of public works projects under P.W.A., of a thorough study which will include and correlate both the administrative and the economic aspects. . . The author has done a large amount of tedious research through administrative and executive orders, official bulletins, press releases, and reports. The study is well documented, and a bibliography is appended." H. M. Teaf, Jr.
+ — Ann Am Acad 204:211 Jl '39 450w
Harvard Law R 52:871 Mr '39 180w

ISELY, BLISS. Blazing the way west. 286p il maps $3 Scribner

977 America—Discovery and exploration. West—History. French in the U.S. Canada—History. Mississippi valley 39-30827

A popular account of French explorers and fur traders and their achievements in opening up Canada, the Mississippi valley and the far western parts of North America. Index.

Reviewed by H. N. Smith
Boston Transcript p3 N 18 '39 230w

"This is no dry history, although it sticks to the facts; it is a vivid galloping tale, packed with tingling adventure and high romance. The reproductions of rare paintings, maps and monuments add to its charm and usefulness." K. C. K.
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 N 2 '39 550w
Springf'd Republican p10 S 29 '39 850w
Wis Lib Bul 36:15 Ja '40

ISHERWOOD, CHRISTOPHER. Goodbye to Berlin. 317p $2.50 Random house [7s 6d Hogarth]

39-16412

Six short stories or sketches of life in Berlin in the last years before Hitler came to power. Tho written in first person by one calling himself Christopher Isherwood, according to the author's statement, the material is not to be regarded as autobiographical. Contents: A Berlin diary (Autumn 1930); Sally Bowles; On Ruegen island (Summer 1931); The Nowaks; The Landauers; A Berlin diary (Winter 1932-3).

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
Books p10 Mr 12 '39 1050w

"The structure is loose; the writing direct if immature. Isherwood intended these sketches as little more than a notebook for an ambitious novel he had conceived. Realization of the project would require months of reworking, synthesis and emotional vitalization. Taken as it stands, however, the book documents a violent and decisive period too little known by Americans, and one not without a potential parallel in our future history."
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 22 '39 120w

"Mr. Isherwood has a very deft pen and an observant eye. If he tells us little about Berlin, he makes us live and feel very fully with a curious assortment of human beings, which is an experience always worth having." Max Reiner
+ Canadian Forum 19:29 Ap '39 210w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '39 120w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder
Living Age 356:498 Jl '39 130w

"Judged solely as art, the six pieces, including fragments of a diary, are vague and uneven, and as personal impressions they are overegoistic and too lacking in the saving grace of humour. . . Fortunately before the end there is a study of Jewish family life entitled 'The Landauers,' and this is Mr. Isherwood as we expected him. Almost with a stroke of the pen he makes the outpourings of the Nazi fanatics seem not only mean but pygmy." Thomas Moult
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 24 '39 280w

Reviewed by Klaus Mann
Nation 148:473 Ap 22 '39 850w

"Christopher Isherwood's prose is a perfect medium for his purpose. It has the 'transparency' which the Russians praise in Pushkin. The sentences all get you somewhere almost without your noticing that you are reading them; the similes always have point without ever obtruding themselves before the object. You seem to look right through Isherwood and to see what he sees. I hope that 'Goodbye to Berlin' will have a success that will induce the publishers to reissue 'The Last of Mr. Norris' and to bring out other books of Isherwood's." Edmund Wilson
+ New Repub 99:51 My 17 '39 650w

"Isherwood's style of writing appears simple and colloquial, for which reasons many readers are likely to overlook its most remarkable quality: its exactness. He never uses a cliché. I think the extraordinary effect of life which he achieves is due almost entirely to his power of expressing exactly his observations. Every detail seems true because each is the result of a sharp verbal focus in his mind. The writing of Goodbye to Berlin could not, I think, be better." David Garnett
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:362 Mr 11 '39 1400w

"When it comes to the actual merits of 'Goodbye to Berlin,' they seem, though they exist, to be very definitely minor. Mr. Isherwood skims lightly and subtly over the most intangible of surfaces. Though he does, it is true, convey something of the hysteria, the tension, the breakdown of morale which preceded Hitler's rise to power, his book as a whole seems incommensurate in force with the importance of its theme. He limits himself too much to the frothy scum of Berlin society. He is too apt to expend his wit on comic trivialities. For what it is—a book of casual sketches—'Goodbye to Berlin' suffices well enough." E. H. Walton
— + N Y Times p23 Mr 19 '39 700w

"A pitying and understanding book."
+ New Yorker 15:85 Mr 18 '39 70w

"Mr. Isherwood combines an uncanny accuracy of observation and ability to convey his impressions with a universal sympathy almost unknown in English literature." Basil Davenport
+ Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 15 '39 500w

"Mr. Isherwood has brought to something like perfection the laconic and unemotional selectiveness of the camera. He swings his lens and refrains from running commentary. . . For this relief much thanks. It is a beautiful, quick way of record, and the care and passion which lie behind its present state of accomplishment deserve the highest praise. For the manner of Goodbye to Berlin, therefore, there can be nothing but praise, but whether the content is consistently worth the beautiful work expended is a question. Certainly I think that looked back on as a whole it is—the impression left of the rakish, feverish tragedy of a doomed city is grave and clear—but while reading the book one was wearied sometimes by sustained close-ups of small neuroses." Kate O'Brien

+ —Spec 162:364 Mr 3 '39 650w

"It may be [the] confusion of aim that accounts for the inferior stuff in the book—for instance; the story of 'Sally Bowles,' which is a flat failure and a rather tasteless one. . . So, though to a lesser extent, with the story 'On Ruegen Island.' The rest of the book, however, is another matter. Mr Isherwood's is a genuine talent, though perhaps he nurses it in too careful and single-minded a fashion. The opening and concluding diaries have substance and strength, and 'The Nowaks' and 'The Landauers' are both acute and telling pieces of work."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p133 Mr 4 '39 500w

ISSLER, MRS ANNE ROLLER. Stevenson at Silverado. 247p il $3.50 Caxton printers

B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis 39-4127

An account of Robert Louis Stevenson's stay in the Napa valley in California, upon which he based his Silverado Squatters. The author has identified people and places mentioned in the book, and has collected verbal recollections from any survivors of that time.

"The Stevenson fan will find, in the midst of many lugubrious trivialities a few facts of interest in relation to a crucial moment in the author's life. The native of Napa County, California, will bask in the deserved praise of the beauties of his neck of the woods. The common reader is likely to get lost in the rambling banalities of detail and style." E. B.
— + Canadian Forum 19:167 Ag '39 150w

"It is a pleasant book, this, to add to one's shelf of Stevensoniana, and it fits well into its own little place."
+ N Y Times p9 F 12 '39 500w
Spec 162:1146 Je 30 '39 140w

Reviewed by Hildegarde Fillmore
Survey G 28:551 S '39 140w
Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 110w

"While not a necessary book for all libraries, it should be added to larger collections where it will supplement other Stevenson biography. A timely book, too, with San Francisco in the foreground, and should be an influence in turning many of this summer's tourist cars in the direction of the Napa Valley."
+ Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

J

JACKS, GRAHAM VERNON, and WHYTE, ROBERT ORR. Vanishing lands; a world survey of soil erosion [Eng title: Rape of the earth]. 332p il map $4 Doubleday [21s Faber]

631.45 Soils. Erosion. Conservation of resources (W) 39-23020

A world wide survey of soil erosion, its causes and effects, followed by discussion of possible means of stopping it, and the necessary social and political readjustments. The authors "were already known as responsible for a publication of the Imperial Bureau of Agriculture, summarising the information available about soil erosion in the [British] Empire." (New Statesman & Nation) Index.

Booklist 36:84 N 1 '39

"As in any vigorous and provocative book, one may quarrel with many pages. . . [However] further sharpshooting may be left to the reader of this excellent and important book. He will find it clearly and literately written." P. B. Sears
+ Books p13 S 10 '39 550w

"This book comes both opportunely and importantly. It is a dramatic analysis of the peril our nation faces from dust and floods. . . Sober and serious as the work is, the authors have given their chapters so great a measure of human interest and have so energetically presented their conclusions that it is possible to say this book may well become the spur which will cause America to begin to save itself from famine, to take the steps which will prevent our great nation from becoming another poverty-stricken China." W. H. Clark
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 700w

"As is usually true of surveys of this sort, 'Vanishing Lands' contains much repetition and could have been condensed into a much shorter volume, but the definitive and vividly told history of the earth certainly will open new vistas of thought for many readers." H. B. N.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 1 '39 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39
Foreign Affairs 18:371 Ja '40 20w

"The volume is one of supreme importance and merits the most careful study." R. N. R. Brown
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 18 '39 350w

"The book is excellently produced; the illustrations alone are capable of telling most of the story." A. D. H.
+ Nature 144:647 O 14 '39 550w

"This book packs a wallop that is as unsettling in its own way as a jab from the left hand of Joe Louis. Not that it is especially well-written; it isn't. Not that its repetitive technical detail about broad-base terraces and Nichols terraces and strip-cropping and the use of the black locust tree in controlling erosion is particularly fascinating. No doubt these facts are to be had in any number of pamphlets put out by Mr. Wallace's willing Department of Agriculture. But what you would never find in a mountain of pamphlets is the particular philosophy of history that emerges from the facts assembled for 'Vanishing Lands.' If even half of what the Messrs. Whyte and Jacks have to say is true, then practically all our publicists, sociologists and economists, are, if not moon-struck idiots, at least vain wanderers in the dark." John Chamberlain
+ New Repub 100:108 Ag 30 '39 1250w

Reviewed by Daniel Hall
New Statesman & Nation 17:796 My 20 '39 1150w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:46 Jl '39

Reviewed by Francis Brown
N Y Times p5 Ag 20 '39 1200w

"This book is much more than the now familiar jeremiad on man's abuse of the soil. Though not the most easily read, it is easily the best informed, the broadest gauged, and the most stimulating analysis of the tragedy of soil erosion that has yet appeared." J. H. Bradley
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 13 '40 750w

"It is to be hoped that the recent literature on the subject has created a favorable attitude toward soil conservation. Here is another book which will prove invaluable because not only is the situation in the United States revealed but also that of other parts of the world."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 Ag '39 450w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Survey G 28:759 D '39 700w

"We have only one quarrel with the authors of this book: some of the writing does suggest that they have read rather too much American journalism about erosion and have become at times unable to resist the violent phrase and the overcharged word."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p228 Ap 22 '39 1200w

JACKSON, HOLBROOK. The printing of books. 285p il $5 Scribner [15s Cassell]

655 Printing. Books [39-883]

"Mr. Holbrook Jackson turns from the wider subject of bookmanship to the narrower field of typography and gives us not a technical

JACKSON, HOLBROOK—Continued
manual but a series of essays on the aesthetics of printing. . . . The main theme is the art of printing from the point of view of readers and authors rather than that of printers, and the material is divided into three sections, containing respectively a plea for readability rather than 'fine' printing; an appraisal of the influence, often unconscious, of authors on their printers; and, last, a collection of articles germane to the subject which have appeared for the most part in select periodicals devoted to the pronouncements of the high priests of typography." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"It is a relief to find a book on printing written from the standpoint of the reader and author, and written by one who has lived observantly and reflectively through the whole modern period of the revival of printing. We are not surprised to find that the historian of 'The Eighteen Nineties' looks at the printing of the present day with historical perspective, and reports upon it soberly but with full employment of that gift of witty and epigrammatic expression gratefully remembered by readers of 'The Anatomy of Bibliomania' and 'The Fear of Books.'" L. C. Wroth

\+ Books p13 Jl 16 '39 500w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 22 '39 110w

Reviewed by G. P. Winship
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 8 '39 700w

"'The Printing of Books' is practically an informed and informal history of typography in England since the pre-Raphaelites with particular emphasis on the ethics and esthetics of printing. Mr. Jackson's dicta on these questions are, gracias à Dios, neither startling nor revolutionary, for his critical mind has sifted out the chaff of new movements and callow enthusiasms. What he has saved are the sound kernels of good taste and common sense that will resprout in every generation in spite of tares. His book has a charm, interest and intimate knowledge that will make an irresistible appeal to any one who is type-conscious." E. L. Tinker

\+ N Y Times p2 Jl 2 '39 1200w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins
Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 25 '39 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p43 Ja 21 '39 1200w

JACKSON, JOHN HAMPDEN. Finland. 243p maps $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Allen, G]

947.1 Finland—History (W) [39-2453]

History of Finland which includes a study of its economic and social policies, its people, daily life, and cultural achievements. The author is a British student of international affairs. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Jackson is enthusiastic about Finland, but enthusiasm does not clog his processes of thought nor interfere with his clarity of expression. He looks at his subject, moreover, in the round. . . Students of present-day civilization will do well to read his careful and excellent book."

\+ Books p13 S 17 '39 180w

Foreign Affairs 17:817 Jl '39 20w

Manchester Guardian p7 N 25 '38 400w

"With sympathetic strokes Mr. Jackson paints a picture of 'Suomi'—as the Finns call their beloved native land—that will stick long in the memory of all who dip into his pages." T. R. Ybarra

\+ N Y Times p3 D 31 '39 1000w

"The general reader will find most to interest him in Mr. Jackson's account of Finland as it is to-day."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 21 '39 350w

JACKSON, JOHN HAMPDEN. Short history of the world since 1918. 480p maps $3; students' ed with title: Postwar world, 1918-1939; $2 Little

909.82 History, Modern. European war, 1914-1918—Influence and results (W) 39-24591

Revised and enlarged edition of the author's earlier work The Post-War World (Book Review Digest, 1935). New material includes chapters on Hitler's Germany and the Roosevelt administration, and two chapters under the heading World Survey, dealing with Internationalism vs Nationalism. Index.

Reviewed by W. C. Langsam
Am Hist R 45:193 O '39 90w

Books p30 Ap 30 '39 50w

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson
Commonweal 30:52 My 5 '39 300w

Foreign Affairs 17:805 Jl '39 10w

Reviewed by R. J. Sontag
Sat R of Lit 20:26 Ap 29 '39 440w

Wis Lib Bul 35:112 Je '39

JACKSON, JOSEPH HENRY. Tintypes in gold; four studies in robbery; decorations by Giacomo Patri. 191p $2.50 Macmillan

364 Brigands and robbers. Crime and criminals—California (W) 39-15541

Narratives of the lives of four California bandits of Gold Rush days and later. The first was Black Bart, a dapper little man with a passion for holding up stage coaches with the dramatic words, "Throw down the box!" The other three are: Rattlesnake Dick, Dick Fellows, and Tom Bell.

Booklist 36:2 S '39

"One doesn't need to be a Native Son to enjoy this account of early road-agents. If crime is your meat, it's your book. As for mystery, the tale of Black Bart is more absorbing than most whodunit fiction. All sound history, too. The distinguished book critic of 'The San Francisco Chronicle' writes just as smoothly as he speaks over the air, never once raising his voice, and one scarcely realizes the large amount of 'action' one is getting in the present book until it is finished, which will likely be in one sitting." S. H. Holbrook

\+ Books p5 Jl 2 '39 1200w

"This offering from Mr. Jackson falls short of being a serious and worthwhile contribution to Americana for the period of the golden days of California, but it is mildly entertaining. The author's frivolous writing and failure to exhaust his opportunities for original research, are two good reasons for classifying the book as unimportant." Topliffe Sawyer

— \+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 29 '39 150w

Christian Century 56:857 Jl 5 '39 60w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 12 '39 170w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:v Ag '39 150w

New Repub 99:230 Je 28 '39 50w

"Aside from the manner of writing, which shows a combination of scholarship, enthusiasm and understanding, there is evidence in this book of a notable gift for the organization of material. There are comparatively few pages, but in the characters he has chosen Mr. Jackson has covered as much ground as though he had elected to write an omnibus volume on the subject of California desperadoes." E. F. Allen

\+ N Y Times p8 Jl 2 '39 750w

New Yorker 15:87 Je 24 '39 40w

"A very charming job of writing Mr. Jackson has done. He knows his early California history well. He has explored the records carefully and given excellent organization to the facts. He writes humorously, zestfully, never resorting to coyness as some of the experts in murder stories have been apt to do. He has claimed a corner of the field of violence all to himself, writing of it like a gentleman, a scholar, and a judge of good brigands." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 Jl 8 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 90w
Time 34:54 Jl 3 '39 400w

JACKSON, ROBERT WYSE. Jonathan Swift: dean and pastor. 195p $1.50 Macmillan [6s S.P.C.K.]

B or 92 Swift, Jonathan

"One does not need to be a practising Christian to recognise a certain justness in Dr. Jackson's complaint that the religious aspect of Swift's life and writings has been largely overlooked by his biographers and critics. The Dean—and Swift was Dean of St. Patrick's for over thirty years—has been neglected at the expense of the 'Drapier, Bickerstaff and Gulliver.' . . . Dr. Jackson's book is an attempt to remedy this neglect by concentrating on Swift's 'quiet life-work,' as parish priest and dean, and to this end he has purposely omitted any account of his literary, political and domestic activities except in so far as they bear on his work as a clergyman." Spec

Christian Century 56:1078 S 6 '39 120w

Reviewed by Austin Clarke
New Statesman & Nation 18:408 S 16 '39 300w

"In discussing Swift's religious life and in analysing his religious beliefs, Dr. Jackson writes with authority. . . It is regrettable, in view of the type of reader most likely to read this book and accept its views, that once off the subject of religion Dr. Jackson writes with neither authority nor sufficient or precise knowledge of his facts." John Hayward

— + Spec 163:333 S 1 '39 700w

"Straightforward and affectionate book. . . The uninformed reader should be warned that Dr. Jackson is occasionally misleading and inaccurate when he treats of matters that lie outside the immediate scope of his subject."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p500 Ag 26 '39 800w

JACKSON, WILLIAM CHAPIN. You'll dance in Tahiti. 272p $2.50 (10s 6d) Putnam

919.62 Tahiti 38-30818

Account of a visit to Tahiti and neighboring islands of the South seas, with descriptions of scenery and native types.

"This is an enjoyable human book, friendly and happy-spirited, and it is written clearly and without pretense."

+ Books p44 N 13 '38 190w
Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '39

"This account has neither literary nor scientific pretensions, but is a naive and good-humoured account of personal experience. . . Mr. Jackson's pages convey his enjoyment of his trip and his appreciation of the Polynesians and their way of life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p79 F 4 '39 70w

JACOB, NAOMI ELLINGTON. Straws in amber. 407p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Hutchinson] 39-4486

Sally Brightman and Maurice Morris were born on the same day and in the same London neighborhood. As they grew up each decided on a stage career. From the time when they were seven Maurice had adored Sally, and the adoration lasted thru separation, quarrels, Sally's addiction to drink, her marriage and divorce, until each had achieved success, and in their thirties were finally married.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p10 Mr 26 '39 550w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 1 '39 110w
Christian Century 56:546 Ap 26 '39 160w

"Here is a story of the music-halls, more than a little sentimental, not always credible, unashamedly dependent upon coincidence, despising neither the melodramatic nor the hackneyed, and for the most part dealing with types instead of characters; but it is put across with immense verve, by a story-teller with every technical trick of the trade at her fingertips, and with a profound knowledge of her setting. As in a music-hall turn, the material is crude, and direct in its appeal, but the sheer virtuosity of the performer flouts the judgment of gravity and brings down the house." E. F.-B.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 D 17 '38 440w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p5 S 16 '38 340w

"Here is an excellent subject in a setting Miss Jacob knows, the ups and now mostly downs of English vaudeville. But she is so lush, her dialogue so manufactured and her sentimentality so triumphant that this is the caricature of the book that might have been written."

— + New Repub 98:260 Ap 5 '39 40w

"On the human side we have the homely pathos of 'little' people which has always been a characteristic feature of Miss Jacob's work. The heart-sickening tragedy of ordinary bereavement, the quiet happiness inherent in maternity and unaffected and unassailable family love are portrayed here with contagious conviction. . . But, with all this, 'Straws in Amber' is, in another respect, oddly disappointing. There is in it, despite the attractive realism of its episodes, a softening of fiber in some of the characterization that detracts considerably from its literary value." J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 19 '39 500w

"Naomi Jacob, being both actress and novelist, is well equipped to write a romance of stage life which makes use of the theater and its people as more than a mere background. The nervous tension of life behind the scenes, the clash of temperament on temperament, and the general attitude compounded partly of real wit and partly of swagger with which these men and women meet a life demanding of them that they be constantly amusing, do much to keep the novel entertaining while the somewhat tenuous story unrolls." G. G.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 4 '39 280w
Times [London] Lit Sup p595 S 17 '38 180w

JACOB, NAOMI ELLINGTON. This porcelain clay. 389p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Hutchinson] (W) 39-27735

The central character of this novel of English life is Louis Silver, whose boyish joke about being a Jew was accepted as fact. Thruout the years Louis became more and more hardened until the loss of a beloved sister, of his wife, and then of his money, brought him to a saner outlook on life.

Booklist 36:44 O 1 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p10 S 17 '39 360w
Christian Century 56:1078 S 6 '39 40w

"The first part of the story is well told, but the subsequent unraveling of his marital and spiritual tangles is slow, repetitious, and far from convincing." L. B. Salomon

+ — Nation 149:474 O 28 '39 210w
New Repub 100:280 O 11 '39 40w

" 'This Porcelain Clay' is ingenious, provocative and readable. In spite of its theme, it is first and foremost a story, designed to keep the reader absorbed in the lives of the characters it portrays." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p21 S 10 '39 700w

JACOB, N. E.—Continued

"Absorbing and incisively told."
New Yorker 15:78 S 9 '39 50w

"The first part of the book is excellent as Miss Jacob brings the clever, cold, ambitious boy to manhood. She writes here with crisp authority. The last part is sentimental enough to bring any harassed reader complete escape from reality." R. L.
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 9 '39 320w

"Miss Naomi Jacob is always interesting and human and her latest book brings out admirably her gifts of characterization, her fundamental kindliness of judgment, and her power in the evocation of atmosphere."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Ap 1 '39 200w

JACOBS, JOSEPH. Molly Whuppie; il. by Pelagie Doane. [44p] $1.50 Oxford 39-27805

A newly illustrated edition of the English fairy tale about clever Molly Whuppie and the giant.

Booklist 36:76 O 15 '39

"It is questionable whether many libraries would feel justified in spending limited book funds for one single story from a collection already on their shelves. It is better recommended to parents for the bookshelves of the individual child." E. G. Mullan
Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 90w
Wis Lib Bul 35:192 N '39

JACOBS, LEWIS. The rise of the American film; a critical history. 585p il $4.50 Harcourt
791.4 Moving pictures (W) 39-32345

"The author traces the film from its commercial beginnings in 1896 to the present time, investigating and evaluating it as an industry, as an artistic medium, and as a social force." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Picture, name and general indexes.

Booklist 36:172 Ja 1 '40

"What errors or faults appear in 'The Rise of the American Film' are due in part to the conditions under which a pioneer writer on the subject must of necessity work. That Mr. Jacobs has succeeded to a large extent in sidestepping the more obvious pitfalls and has produced a book which must be recognized as the best so far in its field is due to his thoughtful conception of the problem as a whole." D. B. M. Emrich
+ Books p21 N 19 '39 900w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Laine
Boston Transcript p1 D 2 '39 550w

"It is not possible in a short review to do this book justice. One may object to certain estimates of personalities or certain evaluations of achievements, one may regret that there is no special survey of movie acting or movie criticism in what is otherwise so complete a work, but the important fact is that we have here a comprehensive, up-to-date history of the movies which sets a very high standard. Comments on more than a thousand film plots, an almost complete bibliography, an index of films, and forty-eight pages of characteristic stills make the book especially valuable. It is to be highly recommended to movie worker and moviegoer alike." Franz Hoellering
+ Nation 149:626 D 2 '39 600w

"There are some notable qualities about this book which set it apart from—and above—the work of other writers who have undertaken the story of the American film. The first of these is the evidence of conscientious and exhaustive research into primary sources. Of equal importance is the arrangement of the material and the interpretation of each scrap in terms of influence on the development of the film. Another is the careful documentation, the very full bibliography, and the three indices—general, picture and name—all of which combine to make the book invaluable for reference. And a fourth is the vividness and lively pace with which a critical history of the screen's first half century has been made to move from beginning to end." R. G. Doyle
+ N Y Times p6 D 31 '39 1400w

"Through all [its] complexities Mr. Jacobs has skillfully threaded the narrative of the film's growth in technique and treatment. Especially valuable are his notes on directors: analyses of the work of the prominent figures in each decade. . . If the very current chapters (1937-1939) of Mr. Jacobs's work seem overburdened and kaleidoscopic, it is owing no doubt rather to lack of a time perspective than of understanding." Arthur Rosenheimer, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 D 16 '39 550w

Reviewed by George Beiswanger
Theatre Arts Mo 24:149 F '40 950w
Wis Lib Bul 36:14 Ja '40

JACOBS, MELVIN CLAY. Winning Oregon; a study of an expansionist movement. 261p $3 Caxton printers
979.5 Oregon—History. U.S.—Territorial expansion 38-36019

A study of the economic, social and political forces that resulted in the addition of Oregon to the United States. Bibliography. Index.

"This book is a valuable contribution to an understanding of the American occupation of Oregon. Its chief weakness is its effort to prove that Oregon was won by the pioneers. Such a thesis is not tenable. . . This book contains a wealth of apt quotations from contemporary accounts, chiefly newspapers, that well illustrate public opinion throughout the Union concerning the Oregon question." R. C. Clark
+ — Am Hist R 45:170 O '39 190w

Reviewed by Phileo Nash
Canadian Forum 18:384 Mr '39 130w

Reviewed by W. N. Sage
Canadian Hist R 20:74 Mr '39 650w

"A solid, scholarly volume, more of value to students than of popular appeal." K. C. K.
Christian Science Monitor p18 O 26 '38 550w

JACOBSON, ERNST LUDWIG HARTHERN (ERNST HARTHERN, pseud). Home at last; tr. by Kenneth C. Kaufman. 278p $2.50 Bobbs
(W) 39-8611

Story of Palestine today. The hero is a young German, whose mother was a Jewess. In Palestine, in the land of his mother's forbears, he finds his real peace as he learns the importance of winning a living with his own hands.

" 'Home at Last' was written before the recent London Conference of Jews and Arabs, from which both went home with the same curse on their lips. But it's still a good novel, even if it may seem as quaint next year or so as the Czech national anthem." David Tilden
+ Books p2 Ap 16 '39 950w
New Repub 98:388 My 3 '39 50w

"Mr. Harthern knows what he is about every step of his way. It is not a 'popular' novel he has written; but it should prove to be in our democracy a popular one." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 23 '39 500w

"A sincerely felt and moving story. . . The style has a Biblical quality."
+ New Yorker 15:85 Ap 8 '39 90w
Pratt p29 summer '39

"In this calm, beautiful, and disturbing novel Mr. Harthern writes with an imperturbable quiet that is like an echoing board, heightening the strength and dignity of his characters as well as the looming dangers of their new home." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 8 '39 380w
Times [London] Lit Sup p231 Ap 22 '39 220w

JACOBY, NEIL HERMAN. Retail sales taxation; relation to business and consumers, and administrative problems. 370p $3.50 Commerce clearing house

336.27 Sales tax 38-32431

"Students of taxation will find in Professor Jacoby's scholarly and well-documented volume an account of the development of retail sales taxation in the United States and an analysis of the principles and problems of this form of taxation. . . Professor Jacoby finds the retail sales tax an inequitable impost that lays regressive burdens upon consumers. He believes that its collection costs are higher than those of property taxes and as high as or higher than the collection costs of personal income taxes yielding equivalent revenues, after allowing for the costs to the taxpayers of complying with the law. . . Professor Jacoby accepts the thesis advanced by Professor Simons that taxes should lessen the inequality of incomes while providing revenues. Retail sales taxes are deficient on this score and are also contrary to ability to pay, although the author concedes that ability to pay may be immeasurable." (Ann Am Acad) Selected bibliography. Index.

"Professor Jacoby has written a readable history of a revenue that has grown rapidly in importance among the states, and presents an able analysis of the principles and problems of retail sales taxation. . . The analysis of the shifting of retail sales taxes could have been improved, in the reviewer's opinion, by a more adequate demonstration of the argument that these taxes may rest, in the long-run upon others than consumers and by indicating how the taxes react differently upon prices under decreasing, constant, and increasing costs. The reader may be confused by the author's use of the term 'sales tax' to refer to a general sales tax or a retail sales tax after he has been told that sales are either selective or general." A. C. Buehler

\+ — Am Econ R 29:192 Mr '39 370w

Reviewed by A. G. Buehler
Ann Am Acad 203:253 My '39 360w

JAEGER, WERNER WILHELM. Paideia: the ideals of Greek culture; tr. from the 2nd German ed. by Gilbert Highet. 420p $3.75 Oxford [15s Blackwell]

370.938 Education, Greek. Civilization, Greek. Greek literature 39-29614

Historical study of "the shaping of the Greek character, as a basis for a new study of Hellenism as a whole. . . [It] describes the foundation, growth, and crisis of Greek culture during the periods dominated by the heroic and by the civic or political types of personality, that is, during the archaic and the classical epochs. It ends with the collapse of the Athenian empire." (Pref) Index.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 27 '40 600w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon
Commonweal 31:18 O 27 '39 600w

"This volume is intended for the general reader and is based upon quotations from the original documents of Greek literature, excluding references to the immense quantity of books and articles which have grown out of interpretations of the evidence. It is a brilliant summary of the traditional point of view; but it is strangely literary for these days, when archeology has made such great advances. It will be found useful chiefly by those who wish to have a general view of the contents of the most important works of Greek literature." C. D. Burns

\+ Ethics 50:229 Ja '40 300w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman
New Statesman & Nation 18:59 Jl 8 '39 700w

"Much more than a contribution to knowledge, this is a work of profound understanding. The original German version has been highly esteemed by scholars since its appearance in 1933, but it was unlikely to attract the wide audience that it deserved in English-speaking countries. Professor Highet's translation is fluent and versatile. . . This book is both a brilliant achievement of classical scholarship and a convincing defence of Greek humanism. It would be well if its publication in English were of epochal importance." W. B. Stanford

\+ Spec 162:1048 Je 16 '39 850w

"The book is indeed a work of supreme importance. Like Professor Zimmern's 'The Greek Commonwealth,' it gives a coherent vision of Greek civilization considered from a new angle, and, like 'The Greek Commonwealth,' it has beneath the surface that latent intensity of enthusiasm which is constantly exciting the reader to new syntheses of his own. It does not prescribe attitudes; it stimulates inquiry; so that, leisurely though the book may at first sight seem, there are few chapters of it that do not seem capable of indefinite expansion."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p283 My 13 '39 1050w

JAMES, FLEMING. Personalities of the Old Testament; with a foreword by Julius A. Bewer. 632p maps $3 Scribner

221.92 Bible. Old Testament—Biography 39-25408

A commentary on the Old Testament set forth by means of interpretations of the lives, acts and writings of some of its outstanding personalities—Moses, Joshua, Samuel, David, Solomon, and many of the writers of the prophetic books. Indexes.

Boston Transcript p5 O 7 '39 310w

"With careful scholarship and skillful literary craft Dr. James lifts the great personalities of the Hebrew nation out of the mass of writings of the Old Testament and presents them to us as human beings fashioned out of their environment and made great by their religion. As to the scholarly background of the book, the reader is impressed from the very first." W. R. Cremeans

\+ Christian Century 56:1204 O 4 '39 500w

"For church school teachers, students, and the clergy this book is an answer to those who emphasize the destructive side of modern criticism, while to laymen it should be an inspiration to see the relevance of the Old Testament for today. One might differ with the author on separate points of criticism, but as a whole the work is well-balanced and helpful." R. C. Batchelder

\+ — Churchman 154:17 F 1 '40 170w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken
Living Church 101:5 D 6 '39 70w

JAMES, FRANK CYRIL. The growth of Chicago banks. 2v 672;673-1469p il map $8 Harper

332.1 Banks and banking—Chicago 38-33677

"The preparation of these two volumes was made possible through the generous sponsorship of the First National Bank of Chicago. . . The two volumes contain a record of great epochs and movements in banking beginning with pioneer banking in Illinois over a hundred years ago. The study describes the growth of America's second largest money market, whose giant banks have been among the foremost in the country. . . However, Mr. James's study is not limited to Chicago; but, for recent decades especially, it is virtually a history of national monetary and banking developments with special reference to Chicago's part therein." (Am Econ R) Index at end of volume two.

"In this living picture of banking developments there are so few shortcomings that it seems almost ungracious to mention them. The reviewer was troubled at times, however, by the rather informal way in which some of the characters step on the stage. Players in this drama need no introduction to many readers,

JAMES, F. C.—Continued
but others unfamiliar with these personalities may find it confusing to have such men as John J. Mitchell, long head of the Illinois Trust Company or George Woodruff, of the National Bank of the Republic, presented with the brief introductions given to them by Mr. James. Those interested in the development of branch banking may well regret the author's failure to recount more fully the part played by Chicago bankers in the dramatic fight against branch banking in the 1920's." H. H. Preston
+ — Am Econ R 29:398 Je '39 1200w

Reviewed by Avery Craven
Books p16 Jl 23 '39 300w

"In an interestingly and forcibly written two-volume study Professor James has provided us with a scholarly account of the development of credit institutions in Chicago. . . Whether one agrees with Professor James's forecasts of Chicago as a serious competitor of New York City or not, there can be no disagreement that he has made a distinct contribution to banking literature. It is hoped that his study may serve as the forerunner for others pertaining to the development of regional credit centers." B. H. Beckhart
+ J Pol Econ 47:421 Je '39 1100w
Special Libraries 30:66 F '39

JAMES, HARLEAN. Romance of the national parks. 240p il map $3 Macmillan 917.3 National parks and reserves
(W) 39-12313

"Miss James tells the story of national parks, tracing their growth and the trend of congressional legislation during the past 60 years since President Grant, in 1872, signed the bill which set aside the Yellowstone country 'as a public park or pleasuring ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people.' The author, who is executive secretary of the American Planning and Civic association, is acquainted with national park work and with men who helped to develop this idea." Springf'd Republican

---

Booklist 35:378 Jl 15 '39

"I can never find enough good books on the parks, and I am delighted to have one so up-to-date as Miss James's. About one-half of her work is devoted to the parks themselves and a few of the monuments. Miss James disappoints me in her account of the parks I have seen; she is so brief, and her information is so much dryer and less popular than the pamphlets they hand you for nothing as you go into the parks. She does, however, whet my appetite to see those parks distant from me, and still unvisited. But this is less from anything she says about them than from the superb and plentiful photographs." D. C. Peattie
+ Books p11 Ag 13 '39 410w
Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:43 Jl '39

"It is an impressive and straightforwardly written story. And its pictures make us realize how worth while all the work of conservation has been and how our people have a treasure forever in the people's parks." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p5 Je 11 '39 800w
Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 1 '39 80w
Springf'd Republican p10 My 30 '39 900w
Wis Lib Bul 35:142 Jl '39

JAMES, MARQUIS. Mr Garner of Texas. 158p il $1.50 Bobbs
B or 92 Garner, John Nance 39-23400

A brief, friendly biography of the vice-president of the United States, written by the biographer of Andrew Jackson and Sam Houston. Index.

"Perhaps some day Marquis James may write of Garner when Garner isn't running for office; and that will be a book worth a dozen of this." G. W. Johnson
Books p18 O 8 '39 450w

"Nothing is said of Mr. Garner's presidential aspirations, but the book is manifestly available as campaign character sketch, if not 'campaign biography.' It's manifestly, also, a considerable comedown from 'The Raven.'"
Sat R of Lit 20:21 S 30 '39 160w

JAMES, MRS MAY WINSOR (HALL). The educational history of Old Lyme, Connecticut, 1635-1935; pub. for New Haven colony hist. society. 259p il $3 Yale univ. press
370.97465 Old Lyme, Connecticut. Education—Connecticut 39-18819

"This book, based on extensive study of manuscripts and printed records, shows some of the changing aspects of life in one of the oldest towns in Connecticut from early to modern times. While the primary object has been to indicate how changing conditions have affected and directed education and schooling, the author has, nevertheless, included much social, political, and religious history." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This is one of those carefully documented studies of a little corner of the American commonwealth which will be interesting to New Englanders, and is not without its importance to students of American history. . . [It] is a source book which if read imaginatively gives one a very real sense of the factors which have combined to leave the governments and the school systems of Old Lyme and its fellow New England settlements, even after three centuries, a vitality and a flavor somehow distinct from anything observable elsewhere today in either the New World or the Old." Peggy Hitchcock
+ Books p34 D 10 '39 200w
Christian Century 56:880 Jl 12 '39 100w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 30 '39 600w

JAMES, NEILL. Petticoat vagabond among the nomads. 350p il map $2.75 Scribner 919.8 Lapland—Description and travel
(W) 39-20057

Description of the author's travels in the region north of the Arctic circle inhabited by the Laplanders. Much of her traveling was done driving reindeer, as she followed the Laplanders on their migrations or attended reindeer roundups.

"The author writes with hearty enthusiasm for everything from the most scientific method of gutting codfish to the phenomenon of a fragile white cyclamen blooming north of the Arctic Circle. In presenting her accumulated findings she seldom aims at any reflection of a mood or impression but packs each paragraph solid with good hard facts fit for a guide book. Miss James seems to be fresh as a daisy at the end of 15,000 miles but we confess to staggering slightly under the weight of information." Muriel Chatain
+ Books p4 Jl 16 '39 650w

"Miss James has written in a lively vein, and the reader is carried by her buoyant personality from one adventurous chapter to the next." Newell Hare
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 360w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39
New Repub 100:28 Ag 9 '39 40w

"It is a fascinating book which will get under the skin of anybody with the slightest taste for wandering and which establishes Neill James as a foremost travel writer and a discerning student of peoples." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 16 '39 850w
New Yorker 15:64 Jl 15 '39 30w
Pratt p19 winter '40

"Miss James imparts both her knowledge and her zest to this good-sized, informal, and well-illustrated volume, avoiding the temptation to which too many 'vagabonds' succumb, of either exaggerating her discomforts or minimizing them into a joke." Agnes Rothery

+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ag 12 '39 460w
Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 20 '39 600w
Wis Lib Bul 35:164 O '39

JAMES, POWHATAN WRIGHT. George W. Truett; a biography; with an introd. by Douglas Southall Freeman. 281p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Truett, George Washington
39-5997

An authorized biography of the president of the Baptist World alliance, who for forty-two years has been pastor of the First Baptist church, Dallas, Texas. Index.

"The author is a Baptist clergyman who married one of Dr. Truett's daughters. He has managed to gather much interesting information, and he tells a few excellent and revealing anecdotes, but his prose suffers from an offensive eloquence which, alas, is so often characteristic of the Southern preacher. This namby-pamby ecclesiastical style of worshipful writing succeeds in making the highly estimable Dr. Truett out a much less attractive figure than he really is. While authorizing his adoring son-in-law to write his biography, Dr. Truett might have taken a little time off and given him some lessons in the effectiveness of restraint. Dr. Truett deserves something better than this." Stanley Walker

— + Books p15 Mr 19 '39 470w

"Naturally, I who have enjoyed a life-long friendship with the mighty preacher who has held the adoring affection of the Southern Baptist millions thrill to the vivid recitals of this book. On the other hand, I must commend the author's severe and sustained efforts at restraint, because inevitably for this writer, as well as for the members of the largest local Baptist church in the world and for the rest of those who live under the shadow of the irresistible personality of this religious genius and most saintly man, there is the wish for no qualifying words, only supreme superlatives." J. M. Dawson

+ Christian Century 56:451 Ap 5 '39 600w

Reviewed by L. P. Powell
Churchman 153:17 My 1 '39 270w

Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 16:235 Jl '39 180w

"As Dr. James says, George Truett is known above all else as a preacher 'and doubtless will be remembered chiefly as such.' But the story of his earnest and energetic beginnings, and of his long pastorate, has a stimulating quality not only of the noble service of religion but of a vigorous Americanism, which is felt throughout this excellent biography."

+ N Y Times p15 My 14 '39 480w

JAMES, WILL. The dark horse [il. by the author]. 306p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 39-32121

Story of two thorobred horses: one with a long pedigree, the other a "thorobred wild horse." The scene is the western United States.

Booklist 36:177 Ja 1 '40

"In telling—rather than writing—a straight story in a straightforward way, Will James achieves a method the most deliberate of stylists might envy. Its tone, pace and cadence belong to the range. Its soft drawl, faintly tinged with melancholy, the unhurried tempo of unlimited space, provide the precisely proper medium for a story—by far his best since 'Smoky.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p4 D 17 '39 450w

"One good reason why the horse will survive in this mechanized age is that Will James continues to write about him with a storyteller's skill and an expert's authenticity, and without sentimentality. This new book contains an apparently artless story with a slight and easily credible plot. It is mostly about the personality of two horses." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p40 D 10 '39 500w

"Not to be missed."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

"Will James is artist as well as author, and there are three dozen of his vigorous illustrations in the book, two dozen of them full-page. By this time the public must have become used to the author's idiosyncrasies in the field of syntax and spelling; but it's hard on linotypers and proofreaders, as various casualties testify."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 26 '39 250w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). The captain's wife [Eng title: Farewell, night; welcome, day]. 335p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cassell]

(W) 39-17100

Character study of a woman, Sylvia Russell, which follows the course of her life from young womanhood to death. Sylvia, the daughter of Miss Jameson's earlier heroine, Mary Hervey, rebels against her mother, marries a man below her station in life, rapidly progresses to the point where she both hates and despises her husband. She has three children but fails to give them happiness or strength.

Reviewed by Frances Woodward
Atlantic S '39 500w

"It is a bitter and penetrating study of womanhood that Miss Storm Jameson has etched here. Much in it must necessarily touch and disturb her readers. It is far too close to the unspoken truth to be dismissed as merely fiction and, while this author resorts to no showy tricks, there is an uncompromising—almost photographic—honesty about the picture of life which it presents, which is profoundly compelling." Iris Barry

+ Books p4 Jl 30 '39 800w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 5 '39 750w

"It is not a pleasant story, and its heroine is not a pleasant creature, partly perhaps because one never quite penetrates her emotions. Nevertheless one reads to the end with a detached kind of interest."

Christian Century 56:1024 Ag 23 '39 120w

" 'The Captain's Wife' is often more like a case history than a novel. Miss Jameson's individual turn of phrase, together with her relentless exposure of Sylvia, might have combined to form a powerful narrative; but the repetitive incidents and unrelieved gloominess weaken the potential strength of the book. The story is, nevertheless, an important unit in the history of the Hervey family, in so far as it shows the devastating effect of selfishness and pride." M. W. S.

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 19 '39 440w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 21 '39 400w
New Repub 100:168 S 13 '39 40w

"In spite of [its] desperate triviality the book holds the attention because the stupid woman is drawn with a loving malice and the Russell household with which the book is concerned is so entirely loathsome—it is the same fascination which impels a crowd to collect round a nasty accident. Mrs. Russell is quite the most unpleasant character to be found in a novel recognisable as a modern novel." Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 18:149 Jl 22 '39 420w

" 'The Captain's Wife' is strong because the emotions evoked are deep and concentrated. It is weak—judged conventionally, as a novel meant to stand by itself—because Sylvia Russell's life, like all human life, remains an enigma past any novelist's unraveling. Because—that is to say, it attempts too much. None of Storm Jameson's novels is less clear than this. None lays on the reader's heart so profound a sense of pain and frustration." Margaret Wallace

JAMESON, STORM—Continued

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 30 '39 900w

"A dour story of a passionate, obstinate, self-centred woman, the wife of an English sea captain. At the end you will know Mrs. Russell as daughter, wife and mother better than you know most of your friends. Because you know her so well, you may like her a little; you will certainly pity her, along with her lumpish husband and her poor frustrated daughter. Miss Jameson has the clever novelist's knack of selecting significant detail."

+ New Yorker 15:59 Jl 29 '39 80w

"'The Captain's Wife' is one of those numerous English novels, all too many, alas, which show the most competent writing, characterization, and background, but present a series of incidents with no real plot, climax, or meaning. The reason for this is 'The Captain's Wife' so completely violates Aristotle's rule for tragedy, that the action should be single, complete, and of a certain magnitude, as also that it should have a beginning, middle, and end." Basil Davenport

— + Sat R of Lit 20:13 Ag 5 '39 470w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 13 '39 320w

Time 34:63 Jl 24 '39 220w

"It is an almost sternly told story, though full of undertones of grief and tenderness. If it has not the completeness, the rounded illusion of life that one might hope for, that is owing to the fragmentary type of construction. A novelist who like Miss Jameson, builds from the roots of character and composes experience into a philosophy of life thrives on a fuller and more continuous style of narrative; the translated film technique she has adopted here cramps her powers, more particularly in the later half of the book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p435 Jl 22 '39 750w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). Here comes a candle. 281p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cassell]

(W) 39-27001

The story centers in New Moon Yard once the open court of a beautiful old seventeenth-century house in Soho, now cut up into a café, a night club, and a tenement. New Moon Yard is inhabited by a motley assortment of people—a cabinet maker, two prostitutes, an aged German anarchist, an aviator, a young advertising copy writer, and "Pop" a scavenger in garbage cans. Over all, from the beginning, hangs the forboding of the fire which inevitably breaks out.

Booklist 35:190 F 1 '39

"Miss Jameson is singularly successful in showing her pattern at the start, yet steadily tightening the suspense as you wait to see how it will involve the motley crew she has chosen as her characters. . . To have maintained a balance through such kaleidoscopic elements is an achievement of no mean order. 'Here Comes a Candle' is an exciting and vivid story. Its readers will not soon forget it." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 Ja 29 '39 850w

"Any experienced novel reader could plot the action of 'Here Comes a Candle' with considerable accuracy, from Chapter Three, and a person who had never read a novel at all could tell from page two, that the house was going to go up in smoke. . . As the story progresses, although there are far too many principal characters in far too short a book to allow for much real development, it takes a definite pattern, and the latter half is at least more interesting than the first, if not more convincing." Luella Creighton

— + Canadian Forum 19:28 Ap '39 490w

Christian Century 56:290 Mr 1 '39 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '39

"The book is written with all Miss Jameson's power of insight, vivid, and at times almost revoltingly graphic." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p7 S 30 '38 400w

Reviewed by Norah Hoult

Nation 148:275 Mr 4 '39 320w

"The characters are sharp and well chosen; so that while none of them seems very important one way or another, the cumulative effect is one of somber and forceful reality."

+ New Repub 97:380 F 1 '39 50w

"As fine a piece of pure story-telling as Storm Jameson has ever given us." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 29 '39 950w

New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 20w

"Miss Jameson has reveled in her odd setting, her motley characters, and all the grotesque contrasts in her crazy-quilt pattern. And the reader can have a good time too. 'Here Comes a Candle' is vivid, lively, plausible; it is also more picturesque than profound. Miss Jameson makes life in a tenement seem more variegated and colorful than it actually is." H. J. M.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 28 '39 400w

Time 33:66 Ja 30 '39 200w

"Miss Jameson's novel depends for its effect upon the verisimilitude of the human material. It is her people who matter most, and they are alive and individualized from the moment they are first flashed on to the screen. What is called character-drawing is nine-tenths, or only a little less, of almost any novel, and here as in all Miss Jameson's work, it is a searching and almost stubborn humanity that prods the reader into seeing with her eyes. There is something else besides an unfailing instinct for character in this new novel of hers—a quiet and perhaps slightly satirical sadness and also the sense of an impending doom."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 8 '38 500w

JAQUES, MRS FLORENCE (PAGE). The geese fly high; il. by Francis Lee Jaques. 103p $3 Univ. of Minn.

598.41 Geese. Ducks. Game and game birds

39-27917

Similar in style to the author's Canoe Country (Book Review Digest, 1938). This is an account of a visit made by the author and her husband to the Rainey wild life sanctuary in Louisiana, and to the White River bottoms in Arkansas. The trip was made in January, and the object was to study water birds. Copiously illustrated in black and white by J. L. Jaques.

Booklist 36:108 N 15 '39

"It is a hearty, outdoors book, full of wind and sky color, full of feeling for things and places, full of the right sort of love for birds. Sportsmen will revel in its informality and action. Ornithologists will thoroughly enjoy its illustrations as well as its tirades in miniature on such matters as the whiteness of little blue herons. Mr. and Mrs. Jaques won a host of admirers with their beautiful book 'Canoe Country.' 'The Geese Fly High' will win them many more." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p20 N 26 '39 400w

"Francis Lee Jaques is the best bird-portraitist working in America today. If this is in the nature of reckless statement, it is, at least, less recklessly applied to him than to another. . . Mr. Jaques has long been appreciated by bird-students. The publication of 'Canoe Country' last year and this companion volume now are his introductions to a wider public. . . Mrs. Jaques's text, like her observation, is artless and fresh. She observes in an instant, never coolly, and with like spontaneity sets down both her observation and her reaction to it." L. J. H., Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 9 '39 300w

JATAKAS. Twenty Jātaka tales; retold by Noor Inayat and pictured by H. Willebeek Le Mair. 138p $2 McKay [5s Harrap]

398.3 Folklore—India (W) 39-7582

Twenty tales retold in simple fashion from Buddhist legends, each tale inspired by kindly deeds and thoughts.

Booklist 35:367 Jl 1 '39

"A collection combining entertainment and incentive to good deeds and manners. Coming at the fairy-tale age, they will be all the more likely to attract a little girl by the characteristic illustrations, in line and in color, of one of the most graceful of fairy-tale artists. The dreamy, gentle quality of the pictures brings out the goodness in [the] stories." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 My 7 '39 300w

Reviewed by E. D. Briggs
Library J 64:469 Je 1 '39 70w

"This is an excellent volume to round out the legend and folklore collection in school and public libraries and one that will prove useful for story-telling and reading aloud." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 Jl 9 '39 120w
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 20w
Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 11 '39 60w
Wis Lib Bul 35:115 Je '39

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Selected poetry. 622p $3.50 Random house

811 (W) 38-28958

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by Benjamin Miller
Christian Century 56:288 Mr 1 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Sherman Conrad
Nation 148:651 Je 3 '39 700w

Reviewed by Frajam Taylor
Poetry 55:30 O '39 1250w
Pratt p23 spring '39

"Mr. Jeffers's great virtues are the ability to tell a story and to sustain tremendous rhythms for long periods. His curious verse-form, a development of Whitman's, is perfectly suited to narrative. In his descriptions of scenery he is always effective. What he lacks is restraint (yes, let's admit that Nature is unrestrained) and, above all things, humor. One does not mean by 'humor' a sense of fun, but a sense of balance of design, of (let us brave the answer to Objection A) proportion. Some day someone is going to laugh right out in meeting." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:19 Ap 22 '39 700w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Democracy; with an introduction by Saul K. Padover. 291p $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton-Century

321.4 Democracy 39-13184

Collection of excerpts from letters and other writings of Thomas Jefferson, expressing his opinions on political and social ideas. Select bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Padover has gone through Jefferson's works with care and he has arranged his selections with intelligence. The book affords an excellent introduction to the thought of America's greatest politician, and, with the possible exception of Madison, greatest political thinker."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 17 '39 210w

"Jefferson on democracy always makes good reading."

+ New Repub 99:196 Je 21 '39 30w

"The book is expert, skillfully arranged, logical, and (not its least merit) interesting. . . Dr. Padover's book will prove a stimulating surprise to those who think that Jefferson somehow belongs to the eighteenth century." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 20:15 Jl 1 '39 800w
Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

JEFFERY, MARY PAULINE. Dr Ida: India; the life story of Ida S. Scudder. 212p il $2 Revell

B or 92 Scudder, Ida Sophia. Missions, Medical. Missions—India 38-35258

Life story of Dr Ida Scudder, president of the Medical College for women, at Vellore, India. The book incorporates a sketch of medical work for women in India, where the law of purdah forbids a woman to receive medical attention from a male physician.

Boston Transcript p3 N 19 '38 40w

"It is a human interest story as concerns both the doctor and her patients, and is good propaganda for support and enlargement of medical missionary work for women."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 13 '39 480w

JEFFRIES, CHARLES JOSEPH. The colonial empire and its civil service; with a foreword by Lord Harlech. 259p map $3 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies. Civil service—Great Britain [39-856]

"This book is an attempt to tell the story of the development of the British Colonial Service, and to describe the Service as it is to-day. . . While this account is based partly on official documents, and partly on information gained in the course of practical work at the Colonial Office, it must not be taken as in any sense an official pronouncement, or as expressing the official point of view. . . The chief purpose of this book is to interpret the recent changes in relation to the historical and geographical background to show how and why they came about, and what has been their practical effect." (Introd) Index.

Reviewed by J. R. Hayden
Am Pol Sci R 33:516 Je '39 450w
Foreign Affairs 17:641 Ap '39 10w
Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 5 '38 650w

"The author has had a difficult task, but has succeeded admirably in condensing into the pages of a comparatively small volume an immense amount of matter that concerns the Colonial Service." G. E.

+ Nature 143:43 Ja 14 '39 900w

"Not only will the book be useful to all who are interested in the Colonial Empire but it is a mine of detailed and valuable information for all who may consider the service as a possible career for themselves, their children or pupils. The book is competently indexed and provided with a map. Lord Harlech has contributed the foreword."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Jl 30 '38 330w

JEFFRIES, GRAHAM MONTAGUE. See Graeme, B., pseud.

JEFFRIES, JOSEPH MARY NAGLE. Palestine: the reality. 728p maps $8 (25s) Longmans

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem 39-17705

"Mr. Jeffries gives a full and detailed account of the Arab case against Zionism from a time well before the Balfour Declaration till a point just before the publication of the Woodhead Report. His work is fully documented, containing indeed many documents not generally known, which are quoted more or less in extenso." Spec

---

JEFFRIES, J. M. N.—Continued

"Inasmuch as the Palestine question entered an entirely new phase on May 17, 1939, and as no attempt has been made in this work, presented to the American public on August 25th, to deal with this new aspect, I am afraid that these 728 pages of an admirably written book must be considered solely in the light of a mammoth introduction. If they be read in this sense, a careful study of their message will more than repay the student of history." P. C.

+ — Cath World 150:246 N '39 420w

"This book is undisguised propaganda. . . The account on the cover innocently suggests that, if the evidence and argument are accepted, 'the book alters everything in respect of Palestine.' But the bias is so obvious that the book is likely only to convince the converted." N. B.

— Manchester Guardian p9 Ap 28 '39 330w

"This work, though its style and manner occasionally betray it as the work of a journalist, is a serious contribution to contemporary history and deserves a place beside Mr. Antonius' Arab Awakening [Book Review Digest, October, 1939] and it can only be hoped that the two authors will between them succeed in opening the eyes of the world to the force of the Arab claims. Both have done their work admirably, and it will not be their fault if they fail." G. R. Driver

+ Spec 162:1136 Je 30 '39 900w

"Mr. Jeffries's book may somewhat surprise many of those who have hitherto been content to accept the Zionist theories and assurances without question, and will greatly annoy and provoke rejoinder from others."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Ap 1 '39 650w

JEKYLL, GERTRUDE, and JONES, SYDNEY ROBERT. Old English household life. (English countryside ser) 120p $3 Scribner [7s 6d Batsford]

914.2 England—Social life and customs 40-490

"The facts of early village life in England are interestingly set forth by the authors with profuse illustrations of buildings, room arrangements and quaint objects. Necessity, of course, called forth the ingenuity to create the chests, stools, tables and cooking kettles for daily use, but as time went on, the esthetic urge of individual craftsman enhanced the beauty of everyday objects. Household equipment, like speech, differed in different localities, but the center of the home, whether cottage, farm or manor house, was the hearth, from which was developed the present-day fireplace." Boston Transcript

Books p17 Ja 14 '40 120w

"The book is scattered through with much homely lore and many an anecdote." Josephine Bassett

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 180w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West

New Statesman & Nation 18:722 N 18 '39 300w

"The chapters do not cover the whole vast range of the subject, but they are sufficient, as was said above, to appeal to the opponents of life as it used to be, and assuredly to fill the laudator with fresh enthusiasm, as well as with better information."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p518 S 2 '39 300w

JENKINS, BURRIS ATKINS. Where my caravan has rested. 241p $2 Willett

B or 92 39-31566

Autobiography of a mid-Western preacher—for more than thirty years pastor of the Kansas City Community church—who has also been a newspaper man, college professor, university president, war correspondent, novelist, and politician.

"Jenkins has a better story to tell in his autobiography than he ever had in any of the half-dozen novels he has written as recreation from his work in the ministry, and some of them were pretty good tales too. He is himself a more interesting character than any he has created on paper, and his versatility is such as no writer of fiction would dare to ascribe to a person in a story for fear the character would ravel out into unrelated strands of personality. . . Considered as a piece of literature, this autobiography might be criticized as being written rather loosely, with too much facility and not enough attention to style. . . But spontaneity and intimacy have their values too, which may be worth what they cost in the sacrifice of form." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:1240 O 11 '39 900w

Reviewed by James van Zant

+ Churchman 153:21 D 1 '39 200w

JENKS, DONALD, ed. Paintings on parade; a pictorial handbook of the world's masterpieces. 289p $1.50 Hale

759 Paintings. Painters 39-14601

Small photographic reproductions of famous paintings from Giotto to John Singer Sargent. The arrangement is by schools—Italian, Flemish, German, French, Dutch, Spanish, English, and American; with a chronological arrangement under each school. Each artist is given a short biographical note, and usually something of interest about the painting of each picture. Index of artists and pictures.

Booklist 36:39 O 1 '39

"The effect of such an arrangement, for its special audience, is better than it would have been with more critical text."

+ Books p15 Ag 27 '39 190w

"The book is clearly designed to be popular in appeal, and it will not interest the specialist, who would be likely to find fault with the selection of material and, in some instances, with the descriptive matter. But the novice for whom the book is intended will doubtless find something to entertain him, if he is not overwhelmed at the outset by the number of paintings presented to him and by their small size. It is to be hoped that the latter limitation will inspire him to search further for better reproductions and more detailed discussions." Wilhelmina van Ingen

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 15 '39 180w

Reviewed by E. A. Jewell

N Y Times p19 Ja 7 '40 160w

"The arrangement of the material, as well as its selection, is not always successful, and some of the reproductions are too small, and the sketches too brief. There is, of course, no attempt at a comparative study of the schools or an analysis of the paintings. The volume serves, though somewhat imperfectly, as an introduction to art for the general reader."

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 31 '39 170w

JENNINGS, BURGESS HILL, and LEWIS, SAMUEL RICHARD. Air conditioning; principles and practice. 467p il $4 Int. textbook

628.8 Air conditioning 39-8552

"Written for upper-class university students and for practicing engineers, this work assumes some knowledge of elementary thermodynamics and of engineering principles. Although the calculus has been used for certain derivations, it is not essential to a good understanding of the text. Emphasis has been placed on basic principles rather than on empirical methods. There are many practical problems both solved and unsolved; 150 illustrations and diagrams; and references at some of the chapter endings. Mr. Jennings is Associate Professor of Mechanical Engineering in Lehigh University, and Mr. Lewis is an engineer of note." N Y New Tech Bks

Eng N 123:79 Jl 20 '39 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:19 Ap '39

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Next to valour. 320p map $2.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Hamilton, H]

(W) 39-27453

This long historical novel traces the story of James Ferguson, whose father died at Culloden. With his mother and sisters, James left Scotland in 1745 and went to live with an uncle in the province of New Hampshire. The wiry little Scotchman, trained to scouting by an Indian, took part in the French and Indian war, survived a disappointment in love, and after the fall of Quebec discovered that he had won a new and more lasting love.

Booklist 35:332 Je 1 '39

"There is substance and force here, in a glowing tale. The real protagonist is the country and its pioneers. Whether Jamie is settling, scouting, starting a sawmill, lost and wounded and beset by savages, or fighting in the war, his own adventurous career is the frame for a far greater adventure, to which the reader's attention holds fast." John Patton

\+ Books p4 Je 11 '39 1050w

"'Next to Valour' has faults. Coincidence plays too large a part in its development; coming events are ponderously hinted at; scenes of domestic conflict are not too well handled. But against these one can set the fact that Mr. Jennings has written an absorbing historical novel of war in colonial New England that is worthy to take its place in what might be called the Scott-Cooper-Roberts tradition." D. C. Thompson

\+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 24 '39 650w

Christian Century 56:975 Ag 9 '39 120w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 10 '39 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 30:302 Jl 14 '39 240w

"The writing, without showing any particular distinction, runs with an easy fluency, achieving the momentum that is essential to successful narrative. . . 'Next to Valour' would, undoubtedly, be a much better book if the narrative were cut down by at least a third; yet its very unrestrained exuberance is a manifestation of the vitality of its youthful author's talent." Wilfrid Gibson

\+ — Manchester Guardian p7 My 19 '39 420w

Nation 149:154 Ag 5 '39 250w

"A poorly organized novel, and overlong, but the background is excitingly new."

\+ — New Repub 99:140 Je 7 '39 50w

"Mr. Jennings has failed with his book. He has simply failed to realize that with so much priceless material at his fingertips he did not need to gild the lily. He could have made a better book by cutting the bulk of this one by at least one-fourth. . . If Mr. Jennings will strain the Dumas and Stevenson (not to say the pulps) as much as possible out of his system and then continue in this field he will be fairly certain to give us some adult historical fiction in the future. He has done well enough to entitle the present volume to a respectable place on any one's 'escape' shelf." R. L. Duffus

\+ — N Y Times p3 Je 11 '39 1550w

"Rather pleasant, but long."

New Yorker 15:94 Je 10 '39 40w

Pratt p28 autumn '39

"This is a pedestrian historical novel in the Kenneth Roberts manner but lacking, unfortunately, Roberts's gifts of characterization and vivid narrative. The material is exciting enough . . . but the thread of narrative on which the material is strung is thin and conventional, and even Rogers fails to come alive." S. V. B.

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Je 17 '39 230w

"'Next to Valour' is apparently a first novel and further illustrates the facility with which other writers are employing the model popularized by Kenneth Roberts. Coming from the pen of an established author it would be a commendable piece of work. As a first effort—if it is such—it is notable."

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 11 '39 750w

Time 33:88 Je 12 '39 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p301 My 20 '39 210w

Wis Lib Bul 35:146 Jl '39

JERGER, JOSEPH AMBROSE. Doctor—here's your hat! the autobiography of a family doctor. 279p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-8516

Reminiscences of an Australian-born Englishman, whose medical education was acquired in the United States, and who has spent most of his years of practice in Waterloo, Iowa, and Chicago. The author calls his book "a case history in defence of the family doctor!"

Reviewed by David Tilden

Books p8 F 19 '39 1100w

"The whole book is readable, most doctors do tell a good story, our only complaint is that it is all so familiar."

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 180w

"There is at present a vogue in medical autobiography, but this lively and human book, with its wealth of adventures engagingly told, should at least hold its own." G. F.

\+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 25 '39 190w

Reviewed by K. John

New Statesman & Nation 18:800 D 2 '39 600w

"It is smoothly written . . . sincere, and genuinely interesting. It could be more heartily recommended if bookshelves generally were not already crowded with records of doctors' experience."

\+ N Y Times p27 F 19 '39 440w

New Yorker 15:68 F 25 '39 20w

"In the long line of medical autobiographies Dr. Jerger's book rates a high place. . . Quite apart from its thesis, Dr. Jerger's book has that quality which may perhaps be the very thing which has brought about the amazing public response to the current tendency of medical men to express themselves in popular and personal terms. The quality, in Dr. Jerger's case, is a reduction to almost tabloid form of story after story which, at the same time that it has the compelling humanness of sympathetically observed fact, possesses also the vital germ of imaginative fiction." Raymond Holden

\+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Mr 18 '39 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p464 Ag 5 '39 460w

JEROME, EDWARD COLUMBUS. The problem of the Constitution. 224p $2.50 Longmans

342.73 U.S. Constitution. U.S.—Constitutional law 39-25262

In this volume the author attempts to clarify the theory "that a present great need in the United States is for a logical rather than a purely legalistic interpretation of constitutional guarantees. These guarantees, he insists, are easily ascertainable if the Constitution is regarded and accepted as inflexible. . . Mr. Jerome graphically arrays the opposing schools of thought. On one side is the school committed to rigidity and establishment. Those of this school oppose interpretations or amendments which attack or tend to destroy some right, privilege or immunity guaranteed by the Constitution. On the other side, he finds those whom he classifies as proponents and advocates of constitutional political theories. We must, he insists, separate constitutional law from constitutional politics." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"The layman, although he may be inclined to feel flattered as he reads, will not get, at first, as much from the book as the reader who has given some previous thought and study to the subject. The author has contributed generously to a discussion of fundamentals. His conclusions are, in the main, important if we are all to keep before us the chief objective—human freedom and the protection of inalienable human rights." F. L. P.

JEROME, E. C.—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 31 '39 500w

"The author's lucid argument has much the same interest and utility, without the difficulty, of a game of chess." R. B.
Harvard Law R 53:362 D '39 150w

JESSEE, DANIEL EDWARD. Baseball; il. by Katherine C. Tracy. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 92p $1 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball (W) 39-27225

"This book has been printed from the plates of The Book of Major Sports edited by William L. Hughes [Book Review Digest, 1938], with the exception of the photographic illustrations which were supplied through the courtesy of The Free-Lance Photographers Guild." (Publishers' note) Index.

Booklist 35:273 Ap 15 '39
Reviewed by J. R. Sharman
School R 47:553 S '39 90w
Wis Lib Bul 35:110 Je '39

JEWELL, EDWARD ALDEN. Have we an American art? designed and with an article on E. A. J. by Merle Armitage. 232p il $2.75 Longmans

709.73 Art, American 39-24566

In a series of informally written chapters the art critic of the New York Times attempts an answer to the question in his title, beginning his discussion with comments on the critical reviews of two exhibits of American art, one held in Paris, one in London, in 1938. Index.

"Mr. Jewell has started writing on a great theme. He does not develop it far, only enough to start us thinking. He never fully answers the title of the book, for it involves the problem of what are the qualities by which one recognizes an American art and also whether in the art and science of this day of easy communication there is such a thing as nationality. He includes much data that will be of no interest in a few years but the theme is one around which a great history of art should be written." Margery Ryerson
+ Books p10 Ja 21 '40 300w

"The author's conclusions are sane and, on the whole, optimistic, which is good to hear, since who should know better than he the proverbial 'trend of the times' in the art world?" A. M. Maginnis
+ Boston Transcript p13 S 29 '39 380w
Reviewed by Constance Rourke
Nation 149:528 N 11 '39 420w
Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
New Repub 102:27 Ja 1 '40 120w

JOECKEL, CARLETON BRUNS, ed. See Chicago. University. Library institute. Current issues in library administration

JOESTEN, JOACHIM. Rats in the larder; the story of Nazi influence in Denmark [Eng title: Denmark's day of doom]. 270p $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Gollancz]

948.9 Fascism—Denmark. Germany—Foreign relations—Denmark. Denmark—Foreign relations—Germany (W) 39-27086

An examination of the economic and political relationships between Nazi Germany and Denmark, ending with a warning to England and France concerning Hitler's real designs in the Scandinavian countries. The author is a German-born journalist who has lived for several years in various Scandinavian capitals, an exile from his native land. Index.

Booklist 35:221 Mr 1 '39

"This is no mere journalistic scare story, and the author concludes with a sound and constructive remedy." J. B. Phillips
+ Books p4 F 26 '39 1000w
Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p3 My 13 '39 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ap '39
Economist 134:566 Mr 18 '39 260w
Foreign Affairs 17:813 Jl '39 30w

"Mr. Joesten's facts we are unable to check, but his style is rather intemperate, as though history must be as thrilling as a detective story." H. G. L.
Forum 101:iv Ap '39 480w
Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 148:382 Ap 1 '39 700w
New Repub 98:112 Mr 1 '39 30w
Reviewed by M. H. Bach
New Statesman & Nation 17:508 Ap 1 '39 750w
N Y Times p9 Jl 23 '39 480w

"Speaking for Denmark alone, and writing in a breezy style which conceals telling thrusts at that country's political leaders, Mr. Joesten acquaints us with some rather alarming realities. . . Swayed by his antipathy to fascism and a sincere concern for democracy, Mr. Joesten attempts to rally the Danes to a defense of their rights and their national integrity. . . Yet there is much to be said in extenuation of the present Danish policy, disastrous as its ultimate effects may be. The League of Nations has gone; and the spirit of martial resistance was not precisely in evidence anywhere when Czechoslovakia, another small state, was subjected to German pressure." D. H. Popper
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:16 F 25 '39 490w

"This is a singularly mischievous book. Mr. Joesten's exaggerations are so palpable, and his conclusions so far-fetched, that he has not only destroyed his own case, but gravely embarrassed all those conscientious and patriotic Danes who have tried for years to make their fellow-countrymen realise the traps into which their Government's foreign policy was leading them. Mr. Joesten's book seems to have been written in a fit of bad temper: the Danish Government have made him angry—therefore they must be punished. I have no doubt that Mr. Joesten has been gravely provoked. . . But he is not the first to suffer from official pressure; and if he had only kept a cool head he might have written an extremely useful book. For the full story of Nazi pressure upon Denmark, of the arrogance of the German Legation in Copenhagen, still has to be told." T. G. Barman
— Spec 162:136 Ja 27 '39 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 21 '39 390w

JOHANSEN, DAVID MONRAD. Edvard Grieg; tr. from the Norwegian by Madge Robertson. (Am. Scandinavian foundation. Publications) 400p il $4 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Grieg, Edvard Hagerup 39-27004

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"Authoritative, thorough and workmanlike as 'Edvard Grieg' is, it suffers occasionally from a heavy style and from awkwardness in introducing illustrative and documentary material, especially the quotations from Grieg's compositions discussed in the text. But the flaws, it must be admitted, are trifling. 'Edvard Grieg' is an excellent biography." Roy Lamson, Jr.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 25 '39 380w
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 29 '39 600w

"This is one of those rare musical biographies which should appeal equally to the layman and the musician. The author's admirable style, the sympathy and understanding which he brings to his subject, and his frequent quotations from the charming and vivacious letters of Grieg, combine to make the book as readable as it is enlightening. While avoiding technical detail, the author traces the evolution of Grieg's music with intimate knowledge and critical acumen." Gilbert Chase

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 F 25 '39 360w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 2 '39 650w

JOHN, KATHERINE (GOWER) (MRS ROMILLY JOHN). The Prince imperial. 392p $3.50 (10s 6d) Putnam

B or 92 Louis Napoléon, prince imperial of the French 39-14474

Biography of the son of Napoléon III and Eugénie, known as the Prince Imperial, who was born in 1856, and was killed in Africa in 1879.

"Mrs. John, who is evidently a born novelist, is also a careful historian. Her facts are accurate; her judgment—with a pardonable bias for the young hero—very well balanced." Albert Guerard

+ Books p4 Je 11 '39 1200w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 140w
Manchester Guardian p3 S 12 '39 330w

"Mrs. John can't make any of this important, but she has it well in hand and gives it all a good deal of charm."
New Repub 99:168 Je 14 '39 50w

"Mrs. John's long biography does him more than justice. It is an extremely readable book and makes an exhaustive survey of its subject-matter; but it is not improved by some touches of unfortunate slanginess." Peter Quennell

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:433 S 23 '39 1000w

"Mrs. John, writing with fluency but without distinction, has succeeded in giving a full-dress biography of the Prince Imperial that includes, as well, a fairly faithful picture of the times, She is somewhat one-sided (to this commentator's mind) in her portraiture. obviously detesting Eugenie more than Eugenie deserves to be detested and admiring Napoleon III more than Napoleon III deserves to be admired." Herbert Gorman

+ — N Y Times p9 My 28 '39 1450w

"Mrs. John expends considerable writing talent on an inconsiderable personage. The background is well done."
New Yorker 15:100 My 27 '39 50w

"As his biographer, Mrs. John has not played up the tragic side of his career. She has, to be sure, rather fallen for the glamor of a Prince Charming, but with a smile at her own self-indulgence and with plenty of humorous quips at the expense of her humorless hero. She is obviously halfway in love with him, his period, even his family, but she is too sane and too bright to be sentimental about them. Instead, she presents them with a deft irony that is both depreciative and affectionate." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 20:14 Jl 15 '39 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p536 S 16 '39 500w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Capital punishment. (Reference shelf) 262p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

343.2 Capital punishment (W) 39-22859

"A general discussion of the subject, with statistical data about capital crimes and capital punishment both here and abroad, is followed by selected arguments for and against capital punishment. . . Both sides of the case are here presented by experts." (Christian Century) Bibliography.

Booklist 36:70 O 15 '39
Christian Century 56:1110 S 13 '39 100w
Survey 75:391 D '39 30w
Wis Lib Bul 35:183 N '39

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Chinese-Japanese war, 1937-. (Reference shelf) 257p 90c Wilson. H.W.

951 Chinese-Japanese war, 1931- 38-27963

Following the summary of arguments and a bibliography are a selection of representative discussions covering the background of the struggle, the case for China, the case for Japan, and the Far Eastern policy of the United States.

Booklist 35:100 N 15 '38
Christian Century 55:1339 N 2 '38 60w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 11 '39 100w
Foreign Affairs 17:449 Ja '39 10w
Pacific Affairs 12:210 Je '39 230w
Wis Lib Bul 34:196 D '38

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. The United States and war. (Reference shelf) 179p 90c Wilson, H.W.

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Defenses. War (W) 39-13855

"A compilation of informed expressions of opinion on all sides of such questions as American foreign policy, neutrality, war referendum, national defense, the place of air forces in modern war, the prospects in the Far East, and the peril to religion in the present world situation. To these are added a concise summary of the arguments and a copious bibliography." Christian Century

Booklist 36:13 S '39
Christian Century 56:772 Je 14 '39 60w
Pratt p7 autumn '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:140 Jl '39

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. United States foreign policy: isolation or alliance. (Reference shelf) 307p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 39-27153

A handbook for debaters intended, however, to be of use to the general reader interested in the subject. The book contains a collection of articles dealing with various aspects of the question—shall the United States enter into alliances with other states to fight fascism or shall she remain isolated? Included also are bibliographies and a summary of debatable points. Index.

Booklist 35:234 Mr 15 '39
Christian Century 56:187 F 8 '39 40w
Foreign Affairs 17:633 Ap '39 10w
Pratt p7 autumn '39
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 26 '39 170w

JOHNSON, ALAN CAMPBELL. Anthony Eden; a biography. 362p il $3 Washburn [15s Hale]

B or 92 Eden, Anthony. Great Britain—Foreign relations (W) 39-27134

An uncritical biography of this young English politician presenting an analysis of his background and policies. The book does not include the American visit of last fall. Index.

Reviewed by Frederick Kuh
Books p3 F 26 '39 1600w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 50w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '39 40w

JOHNSON, A. C.—Continued
Reviewed by W. F. Thompson
Churchman 153:27 Ap 1 '39 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39
Foreign Affairs 17:641 Ap '39 10w

"Mr. Campbell Johnson's book would have been a great deal more useful if it had contained less of Mr. Johnson and more of Mr. Eden. But in spite of this defect, Anthony Eden contains many of the relevant facts and some useful quotations, though far too few, from Mr. Eden's speeches. The material is sufficient at least for a discussion of the Myth of Eden." R. H. S. Crossman
New Statesman & Nation 16:1096 D 24 '38 1550w

"This volume is timely and well written. It tells people what they want to know about a popular favorite whose name is a household word. It appears to be assured of a wide public. But it will be realized that appraisal of a career in the making is, in the nature of things, impossible. We have here no more than a clear and readable record of an unfinished symphony." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 12 '39 1600w
New Yorker 15:68 F 25 '39 10w

"His biographer, a publicist and politician under thirty years of age, writes with accuracy, thoroughness, and an admiration verging on hero-worship. . . Despite his comprehensive study of Mr. Eden's career, the author never really answers the questions which the British electorate is asking every day." J. F. G.
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 18 '39 300w
Springf'd Republican p8 F 23 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p762 D 3 '38 650w

JOHNSON, ANNA (FRENCH) (MRS OLIVER JOHNSON). The making of a minister's wife. 268p pl $2.50 Appleton-Century
B or 92 (W) 39-20407

"The making of a minister's wife is the long, slow molding of a woman's life by human beings—friends, family and parish." The author of this account describes her early life, her years as a minister's wife, the hardships of raising a family on a paltry salary, and her own attempts to help out the family budget by speaking engagements.

Booklist 36:7 S '39

"Mrs. Johnson has no literary style, and pretends to none. Her narrative is chatty, informal, episodic, wholesomely sentimental." J. H. Holmes
Books p11 S 3 '39 300w

"This book is a footnote to American history; here, in miniature, are the qualities which, multiplied tens of thousands of times, have made the country. To read it is to be reassured about American women. It might well be read by the young ministers' wives to whom it is dedicated, and also by students in theological schools everywhere. But more than that, it ought to be read by all who want to lay hold of a real life, lived to excellent purpose, with no glory except the life itself, and the keeping life going." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript pl Ag 19 '39 500w

"Fortunately she has not gone literary; the realities are neither concealed nor distorted by any striving for artistic effect. There is unlimited sincerity and an artistry adequate for the purpose in this autobiography. One gathers that the author would say that she learned how to be a minister's wife by being one, but one cannot escape the conviction that she was extraordinarily good material for that educational process."
+ Christian Century 56:953 Ag 2 '39 130w

"The sort of a book that one sits up late at night to read, and that one puts down with a sigh of regret when it is finished! Compared to the epic of Anna French Johnson's life, Ulysses seems a loafer. Her story is simply told; but dramatic, vivid with remembered detail, lit with smiles, and shadowed by tears. A tenderly appealing autobiography, The Making of a Minister's Wife, offers no theology but does not lack philosophy acquired by an intelligent human being during a very active and varied life." E. C. Thompson
+ Churchman 153:6 S 1 '39 230w

"This is the chronicle of a courageous and sensible family."
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 6 '39 360w
Wis Lib Bul 35:165 O '39

JOHNSON, BYRON LAMAR. Vitalizing a college library. 122p il $2 A.L.A.
027.7 Libraries, University. Stephens college, Columbia, Missouri. Library 39-27522

"The practices and implications of a seven-year experimental library program at Stephens college, a junior college for women in Columbia, Missouri. One of the chief features there is the wide distribution of library materials to departments and dormitories in order to make them easily available to students at all times." Booklist

Booklist 35:341 Je 15 '39

"Strange as it may seem, the most important word in the title of this discourse on library service at Stephens College is also the shortest. The book very definitely concerns a college library and the list of implications so hopefully presented for the benefit of other colleges does not warrant using the definite article, even in the mind of the author, who warns the reader against the uncritical adoption of the Stephens College library program. . . Libraries, if they are to find their proper place in the college program, must be judged carefully and realistically lest their place in the sun be exaggerated to their detriment. It is possible that Mr. Johnson, in his pardonable enthusiasm for a very admirable library experiment, has unwittingly allowed such exaggeration to find a place in this volume." L. C. Merritt
Library Q 9:520 O '39 1050w

JOHNSON, CARL GUNNARD. Forging practice. 136p il $1.50 Am. tech. soc. [7s 6d Tech. press]
672 Forging (W) 38-30388

"A practical treatise on hand forging of wrought iron, machine steel, and tool steel; drop forging; and heat treatment of steel, including annealing, hardening, and tempering." (Subtitle) "Forging, written by J. L. Bacon and revised by C. G. Johnson, was [published in 1933; Book Review Digest, 1933]. Forging Practice uses a small portion of that book, but it is essentially a new publication, covering recent developments in forging methods and metals." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:136 D 15 '38
N Y New Tech Bks 23:56 O '38
Pratt p14 spring '39
Special Libraries 30:98 Mr '39

JOHNSON, ENID, and PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. Ho for Californy! decorations by Anne Merriman Peck. 243p $2 Harper 39-20772

A boy's story of the days of the California gold rush. Timothy Worth and Peleg Adams, Quakers from Nantucket; a mysterious Englishman, Terry, and his companion, Juggles, are the chief characters. They sail for California, suffer many privations, eventually reach Sacramento, and aid in the building up of this new country.

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39
Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 31 '39 270w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:390 N '39 60w

"A well-written and authentic story, containing good atmosphere and characterization and a vivid picture of the times. The part of the story dealing with the trip across Panama is particularly well done. For grades seven, eight, and nine." Marian Herr

+ Library J 64:871 N 1 '39 130w

"Great relief from the usual covered-wagon trip West; characters develop and the story is told in a simple, straightaway style."

+ New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 50w

JOHNSON, GAYLORD. How Father Time changes the animals' shapes [il. with drawings by the author and with photographs]. 185p maps $2 Messner

575 Evolution—Juvenile literature 39-17776

"This book describes, how, through millions of years, the animals of today developed their characteristic shapes. Here are the latest views of Science about the growth of the elephant's trunk, the lengthening of the giraffe's neck, the amazing change of crawling lizards into flying birds, the loss of all the horse's toes but one, the change of a fish's fins into the feet of the first walking land animal, and many other startling transformations made by the slow magic of Father Time." Publisher's note

---

"With the device 'Father Time the animal sculptor' I quarrel; it seems to me an unnecessary complication, especially as Father Time constantly appears as a pudgy little chap with a bald head and a beard like Peter Cooper's. So sweeping a story, told with such vivacity, would have held a child's attention without putting everything into the hands of this inadequate little gnome." M. L. Becker

+ — Books p8 Jl 2 '39 350w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 19 '39 70w

"This is an excellent book for boys who are a little too young for the books of Raymond Ditmars. It will prove a fine introduction to the subject." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 160w

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. America's silver age. 280p il $3.50 Harper

973.5 U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865. Clay, Henry. Webster, Daniel. Calhoun, John Caldwell (W) 39-10254

Considers the history of the United States from about 1800 to 1850 as evidenced in the statecraft of three men: Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, and John C. Calhoun. Index.

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

"Americans will do well to read this book. It is easy reading in spite of the complex field with which it deals. Its historical errors are serious and should be checked. Yet the sum total of its impressions are remarkably sound and stimulating. Furthermore Mr. Johnson has not hesitated to apply to present-day conditions the lessons taught by this period. His observations are keen and his inferences sobering. He finds many parallels which might prove valuable in these later but equally troubled times." Avery Craven

+ — Books p5 Ap 30 '39 1950w

"As we were saying 'America's Silver Age' is our favorite book of the spring season; and the fact that we think the author is about sixty per cent wrong in his opinions, attitude, or point of view only emphasizes the intrinsic merit of the book, its peculiar claim to consideration. . . It is written on that high level of literature and intellect where disagreement becomes rationally possible." I. M. P.

+ — Books p10 My 21 '39 750w

" 'America's Silver Age' does not pretend to be a work of vast erudition or of original research in the usual sense of the term. Mr. Johnson is content to accept the biographies of his men as he finds them; his business is to interpret what he finds. But if he is not in this sense a research historian himself, he is the cause that research is done by other men. For Mr. Johnson really takes history seriously. . . Accordingly, he not only makes history lively, he makes it live. And the professional scholar and research-worker, in consequence of the appearance of a book like this, will be compelled to go back to his original sources, check them over, and see whether the facts are in harmony with Mr. Johnson's interpretation." H. M. Jones

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 1150w

Cath World 149:630 Ag '39 440w

Reviewed by C. V. Woodward
New Repub 101:176 N 29 '39 550w

"The value of Mr. Johnson's book is not in its scholarship, its originality or its depth, but in the spirited style, the sympathetic attitude, the realistic approach, the good humor and intelligence of the presentation. The narrative is not well balanced, the argument not well sustained, but the drama is unfailingly interesting." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 30 '39 1050w

"Shrewd, witty, and highly readable."

+ New Yorker 15:124 Ap 29 '39 40w

"This is a controversial book upon a controversial period. There is much in it to inspire dissent as well as assent. But it gets beneath the surface of events. It is full of ideas. It is alive and interesting. It is written with force and pungency. And it contains some lessons of current value to our democracy." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 My 20 '39 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

JOHNSON, IRVING, and JOHNSON, HARRIET ELECTA (SEARCH) (MRS IRVING JOHNSON). Sailing to see; picture cruise in the schooner Yankee. 223p il maps $3.50 Norton

910.4 Voyages around the world. Yankee (schooner) 39-27195

Description of the second voyage around the world of the schooner Yankee, illustrated with some 300 photographs taken by members of the crew. All the members of the crew were amateurs except the cook. Among their ports of call were: Easter Island, the islands of the Galapagos group, Pitcairn, Cape Town, South America, the Windward Islands, and home to Gloucester.

Booklist 35:250 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by Lincoln Colcord
Books p21 My 7 '39 350w

"The modern Magellan who capitalizes on the still widespread yearning for adventure at sea must be more than an able skipper. . . The Johnsons combine the necessary qualities. That the captain is an excellent seaman, the success of his voyages testifies. Mrs. Johnson is not only a notably efficient manager, but she can spin a thrilling yarn, as this book and its predecessor prove. And now it appears that the skipper, and his youthful crew of pleasure-bound circumnavigators, were something out of the ordinary as cameramen." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 18 '39 350w

New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 20w

"The book is a zestful record of marine adventure, with scenic beauty and anthropological interest thrown in."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 5 '39 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p722 D 9 '39 200w

JOHNSON, JOSEPHINE WINSLOW. Paulina; the story of an apple-butter pot; il. by the author. 56p $1.25 Simon & Schuster

"This story for children is of the not unusual type of fantasy in which household utensils come alive. . . The iron pot in which apple-butter is cooked revolts against her humdrum existence and in the midst of the regular cook-

JOHNSON, J. W.—Continued
ing—perhaps because it was done, against precedent, on a warm day—bounces off the fire to freedom. Paulina, as she names herself, hatches a brood of little pots out of a pile of discarded nails, and forms the nucleus of a community." Books

"I would once have thought this unlikely to catch a child's fancy, but I have long since learned, from friendship with farm children, the peculiar fascination they find in kitchenware as toys or objects of fantasy. A tale in which the kitchen battery takes on legs and features has always, in my experience gone over better with children on an actual American farm, than fairy stories of the accepted type." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 D 24 '39 240w

"An almost unbelievable production from a gifted writer, full of horrid coyness." Ruth Page
— Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 50w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN LOSSING. Barney of the North; il. by [the authors]. 114p $1.75 Harcourt 39-27665

Barney, a Newfoundland dog, is the hero of this story for young readers. Barney's greatest achievement was the saving of three lives during a bad storm in the Bay of Fundy.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

"The Johnson illustrations keep on improving: the dogs were always just right and now the human beings have limbered up. If elders in the family get a look at these pictures of Barney, they may read the story for the sake of some remembered Newfoundland whose lively image they might be." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Jl 23 '39 500w

"Pleasant story giving interesting information of both dog and country in a readable, though at times, an uninspired manner. Make-up similar to other books by these authors with illustrations that are especially good. Can be read by fourth graders, but all dog lovers will enjoy it." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 64:871 N 1 '39 100w

"There is interest and lively adventure in the tale as well as understanding of dog nature and the fine relationship between a dog and his master that is suggested makes this an excellent book for the boy or girl who owns or hopes to own a dog. The drawings are the finest the artist has made." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 S 24 '39 400w
Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 50w
Wis Lib Bul 35:190 N '39

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN LOSSING. The story of Rickey; il. by [the authors]. 89p $1.75 Harcourt
(W) 39-4590

Amusing story of the adventures of an Airedale puppy on a farm. For grades three to four.

Booklist 35:254 Ap 1 '39

"There are no children on this farm and very little human life in the pictures; their world is that of farm animals. How vibrant with interest such a world can be, a city child on the farm for a summer can tell you. Such children will respond to Rickey's story." M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 5 '39 420w
Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p13 Je 29 '39 30w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p8 Je 26 '39 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39
Reviewed by E. D. Briggs
Library J 64:469 Je 1 '39 80w
New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 20w
Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p10 Ap 2 '39 240w

"The 18-point type will make young readers want to try this charming dog story, and the many pictures—one opposite every page of text—will almost tell the story to nonreading small people."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 120w
Wis Lib Bul 35:114 Je '39

JOHNSTON, MYRTLE. The rising. 341p $2.50 Appleton-Century [7s 6d Murray, J] 39-9646

After spending his youth in America, and taking part in the Civil war, Wolfe Darragh returned to his native Ireland, to take part with other Fenians in the Rising against England. The climax comes when the Irish patriots, armed only with pikes, charge the British artillery.

"Compared with the strong sense of reality in modern Anglo-Irish fiction at its best, 'The Rising' is just a little slick and shape-conscious. Wolfe Darragh is too dark, too perfect, too compelling a hero (perhaps the youth of the novelist peeps out most manifestly there); and some scenes, such as the card-drawings to choose who is to shoot the informer, are a bit melodramatic." Horace Reynolds
Books p8 Ap 9 '39 750w
Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 90w

" 'The Rising' well bears out the promise Miss Johnston gave with 'Hanging Johnny,' which was written when she was still in her teens. . . The craft of this novel is expertly managed; the gradual concrescence of its many moods and the rapid acceleration of its pace, from a beginning as static as Saint Columkille's prophecy to the desperate bloody end, are unequaled in recent Irish prose."
+ Nation 148:680 Je 10 '39 170w
New Repub 98:316 Ap 19 '39 50w

"Miss Johnston has brought such a fine and revivifying imagination to the telling that every incident, every scrap of conversation, stands out starkly and excitingly illuminated. Even if it were not for another notable factor in Miss Johnston's equipment her new book would make good reading, which is rare at the present time, when writers imagine that history tells itself and that dry bones will live without the creative breath. But here there is another, and also, among Irish writers, unusual factor, the capacity for realistic appraisal in viewing the age-old conflict." Norah Hoult
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 2 '39 1000w

"Told with the mixture, usual in Irish novels, of poetry, intrigue, and violence, but interesting anyway."
+ New Yorker 15:79 Ap 1 '39 20w

"Miss Johnston's novel of the Fenian Rising of '67 is a swift-moving, well-written account which must appeal to the novel reader rather than the historian; which is as it should be." Donagh MacDonagh
+ Sat R of Lit 19:13 Ap 8 '39 330w

"In the swift excitement of the story, which is packed with dramatic interest, character is never ignored. This is Miss Johnston's strength as a story-teller of the heroic type. There is, too, a gallant love interest that helps to make this a first-rate piece of work in its kind."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p191 Ap 1 '39 390w
Wis Lib Bul 35:167 O '39

JOHNSTON, RALPH E. Stagecoach trail [il. by Cameron Wright]. 213p $2 Crowell 39-23297

Dan Curtis, the hero, lived with his father and mother at a lonely stagecoach station on the old overland trail, some seventy-five years ago. This story for young readers describes the people and animals who used the trail and the part played by Dan in all this coming and going.

"The author's apparent love for that section of the country and his details of pioneer life there are more important than the slender plot. However, the book has action enough to satisfy the demands of fifth and sixth graders for 'going west' stories and convincing enough local color to please their more particular teachers." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 120w

"No one, young or old, should miss this tale."

+ Living Church 101:7 D 13 '39 50w

JOINT COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AND THE NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION. By way of introduction; a book list for young people; Jean Carolyn Roos, chairman. 130p il pa 65c A.L.A.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography (W) 38-29070

"This browsing book list replaces the list, Recreational Reading for Young People, issued in 1931 by the American Library Association. . . . The list of 1,200 books, chosen chiefly from adult fiction and readable nonfiction based on reading interests of youth, has been arranged under broad reading interests and annotated from the reader's viewpoint. Many out-of-print titles have been wisely included. The format is most attractive with section-head illustrations, quotations, and readable type. It is unfortunate that a number of cuts have been used from books which are not included in the list, especially since titles of the books are given and the illustrations are such as to awaken real interest." Library Q

Booklist 35:167 Ja 15 '39

"The range of subject matter and titles is excellent. The list should be widely useful to young people, librarians, and teachers, and suggestive not only for browsing but for buying." M. P. Harrington

+ Library Q 9:237 Ap '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:57 Ap '39

JONES, ARNOLD HUGH MARTIN. Herods of Judaea. 271p il maps $3.50 (8s 6d) Oxford

933 Herod, House of. Palestine—History [38-16083]

"Mr. Jones's account of the Herods gives due place to both general and particular interests. On the one hand, students of Christian beginnings will find the incidents of Christian interest set in strict contemporary perspective; while students of the Roman Empire will find here a clear narrative, better reading than Josephus and based on a thorough knowledge of the sources of the history of Judaea from the time of Pompey to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in A.D. 70." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The story is told in sober and dignified language. There are maps, genealogical tables, an index, and several full-page illustrations, but there are no notes, citations, critique of sources, bibliography, or references to other scholars and their often divergent views. The general reader is not supposed to be interested in such things, and to some extent this assumption is probably correct. Something may be said in favor of relegating footnotes to an appendix, but to leave them out altogether does not seem advisable." Nathaniel Schmidt

+ — Am Hist R 44:585 Ap '39 750w

"Now that Whiston's Josephus is no longer to be found in every small library, as it was half a century ago, Mr. Jones's learned and well-written account of the historical setting of the Gospels and Acts will be new to many readers. . . . Mr. Jones has grappled successfully with the complications of the Herodian pedigree, and his sketch-maps are new and very useful."

+ Spec 160:686 Ap 15 '38 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p320 My 7 '38 1100w

JONES, BESSIE JUDITH. See Mumford, E., pseud.

JONES, EDGAR DE WITT. This great business of being Christian. 113p $1.25 Harper

248 Christian life. Preaching 38-33916

This little book is an exultant confession of faith in Christianity as a way of living. Its five chapter headings are: This great business of being Christian; The grand adventure of preaching; The audacious enterprise of prayer; The expanding horizons of Christian unity; The eternal quest for God.

"Dr. Jones's [pages] have a gusto which is contagious. This being a Christian is 'great business'; preaching is a 'grand adventure'; prayer is an 'audacious enterprise'; Christian unity has 'expanding horizons'; God is an 'eternal quest.' What this author states in words, he straightway proves in his own spirit. It is no wonder that Dr. Jones is one of the most successful, influential, and beloved of American preachers." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p14 D 18 '38 110w

"The book is tonic for the discouraged minister and the languid layman and a prophylactic against the deadly disease of defeatism in the church. If this is considered as Dr. Jones' valedictory as president of the Federal Council of Churches, it is a message worthy of the occasion. But in a larger sense it is no farewell."

+ Christian Century 56:187 F 8 '39 250w

Churchman 153:34 My 1 '39 70w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt

Crozer Q 16:148 Ap '39 120w

Reviewed by A. W. Fortune

J Religion 19:302 Jl '39 300w

Reviewed by W. N. Pittenger

Living Church 101:12 S 20 '39 60w

JONES, EDITH KATHLEEN. Hospital libraries. 208p il $2.50 A.L.A.

027.662 Hospital libraries 39-27135

This volume replaces an earlier book on the same subject (Book Review Digest, 1923). "This new book retains only a few paragraphs of the old material and is up to date on practices and objectives in hospital library work. It describes existing hospital service in different types of institutions and illustrates the principles of book selection by citing specific titles. Appendixes include a Veterans administration report with records and charts on the effect of reading on hospital patients, a bibliography, cost data, and sources of book information. Illustrated with photographs of equipment." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:236 Mr 15 '39

"An attractive, concise little book." Anne Farrington

+ Library J 64:461 Je 1 '39 500w

"Miss Jones's book will serve as a guide to hospital librarians, physicians, and nurses, and it will prove interesting to laymen. To hospital librarians who have recently entered the profession it will, no doubt, be an incentive to develop high standards; and it will probably inspire all hospital librarians to further development of bibliotherapy. Reference notes in the book prove that bibliotherapy has been recognized by outstanding physicians as a means of rehabilitation. This fact will probably lead to the organization of more hospital libraries." Sadie Peterson-Delaney

+ Library Q 9:351 Jl '39 300w

Pratt p5 autumn '39

JONES, ELI STANLEY. Along the Indian road. 248p $1.50 Abingdon [6s Hodder]

266 Missions—India. India—Religion

(W) 39-29455

Sequel to the author's The Christ of the Indian Road. In it the author continues the study of missionary work in India. Contains a chapter on Gandhi and his refusal to accept Christianity.

Booklist 36:168 Ja 1 '40

"Any book from the pen of E. Stanley Jones always has a wide and eager reading by Christian people throughout the world. This latest product will not disappoint the mass of readers, but some of the more critical will feel that it is too much like the others, and some will think that Dr. Jones is making too much of a distinction without a real difference in his attitude toward the Madras Conference. . . To read this book is to be inspired anew with a faith that has sent a great soul around the world with the unique message of Christ and one lays it down with the feeling that Christianity not only has the solution of the world's needs but that it is the only real hope being given to the world today." W. R. Cremeans

+ — Christian Century 57:183 F 7 '40 420w

"Dr. Jones' warmly personal knowledge of India's problems gives this book a quickened modernity. The chapter on 'Clogged Channels' ought to be pondered by all who are interested in church unity. . . For personal religion as much as for the true missionary viewpoint, this little book provides valuable material." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 154:17 F 1 '40 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p752 D 30 '39 240w

JONES, GROVER, and McNUTT, WILLIAM SLAVENS. There were giants. 255p $2 Mill

39-6117

Western story of the days when certain "giants" were pushing the railroads westward, against the opposition of other "giants," the ranchers.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p20 Mr 26 '39 180w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 29 '39 30w

JONES, INIGO, pseud. The clue of the hungry corpse. (Arcadia house publication) 270p $2 Godwin

Detective story.

"The author's writing manner, except for a few backslidings into fancy prose, struck us as a cut above the standardized brittle style now employed by most of the ribald school, and his criminous lingo is inspired. Try the pseudonymous Mr. Jones for amusing wickedness." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 S 24 '39 130w

"There is a little of everything in this story; it is a hodge-podge of excitements, inexpertly handled." Kay Irvin

— N Y Times p20 S 24 '39 130w

"Couple of clever tricks explained at end, but characters are overdrawn and plot pretty phony. Not so much."

— + Sat R of Lit 20:36 O 14 '39 50w

JONES, JENNIFER. Dirge for a dog. 277p $2 Doubleday

39-14797

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p20 My 7 '39 120w

"A good mystery with a bad solution." Marian Wiggin

— + Boston Transcript p3 My 6 '39 90w

"A story of more than ordinary merit. Jennifer Jones will be recalled as the author of 'Murder-on-Hudson,' another Daisy Jane Mott story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 7 '39 200w

"Some amusing dialogue, but not much else."

— + Sat R of Lit 20:18 My 6 '39 40w

JONES, JENNIFER. Murder al fresco. 277p $2 Doubleday

39-31530

Detective story.

"Taken in the right spirit, this should provide the self-baffler with an average puzzle and other fun—especially Daisy Jane." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 S 17 '39 150w

"The murders are not too involved, but the solution is most ingenious. The fact that none of the victims is particularly likable only makes the story more pleasant." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '39 90w

"This story gets under way somewhat slowly but it is worked out with skill and logic, and is a thoroughly enjoyable yarn." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 S 17 '39 200w

New Yorker 15:84 S 16 '39 60w

"Killer rather shadowy and final placing of guilt bit too suddenly inspired. In other respects well-wrought and highly suspenseful. Above average."

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:18 S 9 '39 40w

JONES, MARY GWLADYS. Charity school movement; a study of eighteenth century Puritanism in action. 446p il maps $7 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

370.942 Charity schools—Great Britain. Education—Great Britain [E38-258]

"The movement for national education in the British Isles is customarily considered a nineteenth century phenomenon and is associated with the growth of radicalism, of belief in progress, and of the new factories. Miss Jones wants to date the beginnings of the movement in the seventeenth century, when the first charity schools were set up in Wales. She sees it as continuing throughout the eighteenth, with hundreds of schools established and hundreds of thousands of children taught to read, and merging with, indeed providing the structural organization for, the successful educational societies of Bell and Lancaster. This is her major thesis, backed by wide study in little known or used printed and manuscript sources." Am Hist R

"At times, Miss Jones suggests that the growth of radical thought, the increase of more precise knowledge, and the religious revivals left an influence upon education, but she makes no effort to correlate them with the charity-school movement. The unsatisfactory character of such generalizations, the too frequent repetitions, the occasional disorderliness of organization, all of which mar an otherwise very useful book, are not attributable to her lack of industry or of understanding, for she possesses both. They are rather the result of spreading the actual writing of this book over a number of years. Materials long a-gathering and ideas long a-forming should be brought and held to sharp focus in writing a book." Stanley Pargellis

+ — Am Hist R 44:609 Ap '39 850w

"Miss Jones' book is a model of careful research and clear statement. . . The bias of the book is evident. The eighteenth century is the Age of Benevolence and Hannah More is its prophet. . . There is a gloomier side than this to the story of youth and poverty in the Industrial Revolution, but, within its premises, Miss Jones' scholarship is admirably sound, and she has made a real and valuable contribution to social and educational history."

+ — Economist 130:168 Ja 22 '38 200w

"This book is both informative and exceedingly stimulating, both for the historian of the eighteenth century and for the student of education." Basil Williams
+ Eng Hist R 54:132 Ja '39 950w

"Everybody interested in social history, and indeed everyone who wants to know what ordinary people were like in the eighteenth century, should read this excellent book. Miss Jones deals with a subject about which little has been written, and she has discovered and used with admirable effect, new and important sources of knowledge." Barbara Hammond
+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 18 '38 500w

"For most readers the main attraction of this book will undoubtedly lie in the light it throws on the problem, universal in character, of the social functions of education and the causes that lead to its use for culture on the one hand or political propaganda on the other. But historians will find much more than this to interest them in the fruits of the scholarship that Miss Jones has brought to bear on her subject." T. H. Marshall
+ New Statesman & Nation 15:448 Mr 12 '38 1050w

"This is an admirable book, a work of literary distinction as well as of scholarship." A. P. Wadsworth
+ Spec 160:190 F 4 '38 550w

"Miss Jones, as a historian, is not concerned with the movement's literary reflections, but gives an admirably full and documented account of its development. The publishers with justice claim that this is the first study of the subject, and it is difficult to imagine that a second will ever be necessary."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p86 F 5 '38 850w

JONES, MATT BUSHNELL. Vermont in the making, 1750-1777. 471p map $4 Harvard univ. press

974.3 Vermont—History. New Hampshire grants 39-14447

"Matt Bushnell Jones, former president of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company deals with a period of history that not only is full of drama but is not so remote from contemporary affairs as might be hastily assumed. The drama, typified in the public mind by the exploits of Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Boys, arose in a conflict of jurisdiction between New Hampshire and New York, which involved land speculation and a contest over land titles. The ghost of that controversy was not finally laid until 1932." Springf'd Republican

---

"Mr. Jones's study is sober, cautious, and sound. Barring a tendency towards sentences without adequate terminal facilities, it is likewise readable." H. M. Jones
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Jl 15 '39 250w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 5 '39 650w

"This interesting study of the beginnings of Vermont shows the careful and accurate scholarship of a man trained in the hard school of business not to make stupid and foolish deductions, but to verify, weigh, and prove all points beyond a reasonable doubt. If there is any more evidence on the points Mr. Jones has discussed, it is hard to see where it is going to be found. It can safely be said that in his earlier chapters the final word has been written on the controversy over the New Hampshire grants." J. D. Phillips
+ New Eng Q 12:556 S '39 750w

"Mr. Jones's 'Vermont in the Making' is an authoritative and important account, based in great part on study of original documents, and combining a lawyer's knowledge with the political analysis of an able and impartial historian. Although its style is objective and matter-of-fact, its well-organized narration communicates essential details and relevant backgrounds in a manner to interest and enlighten the general reader, as well as the student of history."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p582 O 7 '39 130w

JONES, OLIVIA MARY, comp. Inspired youth. 332p $2 Harper

248 Children—Religion. Oxford group movement 39-94

"Being true stories of childhood and youth as they are finding an approach to God, compiled from hundreds of accounts of incidents in many lands, and with the cooperation of scores of parents and teachers during 1935-1938." Subtitle

---

Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 20w
Christian Century 56:90 Ja 18 '39 70w

"A valuable case book for the aid and encouragement of those dealing first hand with the developing mind and sensitive soul of the young."
Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 7 '39 90w

JONES, PHILIP COWELL. The church school superintendent. 112p $1 Abingdon

268 Sunday schools 39-9928

A book on the work of the church school, written from the angle of the superintendent or pastor, and dealing with such phases of the subject as courses of study, training of teachers, school records, etc. The author is associate minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York city.

Booklist 35:323 Je 1 '39
Christian Century 56:547 Ap 26 '39 20w
Churchman 153:35 Je 15 '39 110w
Reviewed by W. R. McNutt
Crozer Q 16:308 O '39 100w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. The flowering of mysticism. 270p $2.50 Macmillan

149.3 Friends of God 39-25823

Historical study of those fourteenth century Christian mystics who came to be known as the Friends of God. Index.

"The Flowering of Mysticism contains much historical information and a large number of testimonies culled from the writings of the mystics. But Catholics will not find in it a satisfactory explanation of mystical experience." F. A. Harkins
— + America 62:413 Ja 20 '40 260w
Booklist 36:143 D 15 '39
Reviewed by Miles Hanson, Jr.
Boston Transcript p5 D 2 '39 650w
Reviewed by A. W. Nagler
Christian Century 57:178 F 7 '40 750w

"A gracious and scholarly contribution to the history of Christian Mysticism." W. H. Jefferys
+ Churchman 153:22 D 15 '39 290w

"Dr. Jones has given an illuminating and scholarly account of the Fourteenth Century Friends of God. . . As a Quaker he appears not only to understand them but to feel at home with them. These great exponents of mystical experience, at a time when liturgical life, with its emphasis on the social 'Body of Christ,' was at a low level, are interesting souls—wandering stars from the full orbit of vital sacramental Christianity—but that they interest us does not mean that they convince or help us in these days of bankrupt individualism in religion." Richard Flower, O. S. B.
+ — Commonweal 31:270 Ja 12 '40 420w
Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken
Living Church 101:7 D 6 '39 40w

JONES, SAMUEL SHEPARD. The Scandinavian states and the League of nations. (Am. Scandinavian foundation. Publications) 298p $3 Princeton univ. press [14s Oxford]

341.1 League of nations. Scandinavia—Foreign relations 39-8287

An account of the relationships of Norway, Sweden and Denmark to the formation and operation of the League of nations. The book includes a study of the make-up of the League and how it functions. The author is director of the World peace foundation, Boston. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by O. J. Faines
Am Hist R 44:910 Jl '39 420w

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
Am Pol Sci R 33:541 Je '39 280w

Reviewed by E. C. Bellquist
Ann Am Acad 204:179 Jl '39 750w
Foreign Affairs 18:165 O '39 20w

"There is something very moving in this story of their activities before and at Geneva, where they tried bravely to act as 'an ever-alert conscience to the Great Powers.' It is a story told here for the first time, and told with a fitting quiet conviction." M. L. Elting
+ Forum 101:vii Ap '39 150w

"The Bibliography and Index—so often open to severe criticism in books of this kind—are well done and deserve commendation for accuracy and clearness. The work, as a whole, forms a valuable contribution to the historical literature on the Scandinavian nations." J. C. M. Hanson
+ Library Q 9:380 Jl '39 1600w

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming
Pol Sci Q 54:631 D '39 500w

"[The book] is in every way a thorough, scholarly and informative piece of research within its scope. Like almost all such productions, it is provided with detailed footnotes and fortified with an extensive bibliography."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 27 '39 280w

JONES, SAMUEL SHEPARD, and MYERS, DENYS PETER, eds. Documents on American foreign relations, January 1938—June 1939. (v 1) 582p $3.75 World peace

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations

First issue of a publication which is to appear each September and will "include those papers by which the responsible officers of the United States Government have given direction to its foreign relations for the year ending June 30 preceding." (Pref) The present volume covers the period from January 1938 to June 1939. The arrangement is topical, with explanatory notes where needed.

Booklist 36:144 D 15 '39

"An excellent reference book. But it is more than that; it is living history speaking for itself." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 154:19 Ja 1 '40 70w

JONES, TOM BARD. An introduction to Hispanic American history. 577p il maps $3.50 Harper

980 Latin America—History 39-16835

"This book is intended to be only what its title implies—an introduction to Hispanic American history. It has been written with the beginning student and the general reader in mind; thus, its purpose is mainly to stimulate interest in a fascinating, but little-known, field and to provide a foundation for further study." (Pref) Index.

New Repub 99:316 Jl 19 '39 20w

"The book is in general so excellent an introduction to the subject of which it treats that minor adverse remarks are gratuitous. Much more important is the fact that, save for an occasional well-merited whack at some types of colonial priests and lay colonials, there is almost none of the traditional Anglo-Yankee anti-Spanish venom." P. A. Means
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 9 '39 850w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. After the verdict. 295p $2 Appleton-Century

39-8348

During the progress of a studio party, Janice Boyd accidentally shoots her drunken stepmother while attempting to wrest a pistol from the woman's hand. After some delay the coroner's jury returns the obvious verdict but Janice feels she cannot remain in her home and flees to New York. There in time she fashions a new way of life and in the end learns to face her old neighbors.

Booklist 35:332 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p17 Ap 9 '39 210w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 1 '39 180w

Reviewed by L. M. Field
N Y Times p7 Ap 9 '39 440w

"Engagingly sentimental yarn. Satisfactory."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 8 '39 40w
Wis Lib Bul 35:146 Jl '39

JORDAN, EMIL LEOPOLD. Americans; a new history of the peoples who settled the Americas; il. by Edward A. Wilson. 459p maps $3.50 Norton

325.7 Immigration. America—Discovery and exploration. America—Foreign population. Ethnology—America. U.S.—Foreign population (W) 39-12975

Beginning with the claim that: "Every human being that ever lived in America has been an immigrant or the descendant of an immigrant," the author relates first the story of the coming of the Indians and the civilization they brought with them and developed in various parts of the two continents. The next section deals with the various European colonial migrations: Spanish, French, Dutch, English; the next with the coming of the Negro and the Chinese; and the following with the immigration waves of the nineteenth century. A final section shows how these various races have been blended into two new human types —the Latin American and the North American. Index.

Booklist 36:230 F 15 '40

"It is right and proper that a book of this sort should be somewhat uncritical in character. Mr. Jordan, particularly when dealing with the peoples who came to America in the last three centuries, emphasizes their merits and not their defects. . . But on the whole it is a good book, and particularly for young people in school should serve a useful purpose." Allan Nevins
+ Books p6 My 21 '39 800w

Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 190w

"A colorful and picturesque book. . . The treatment is popular rather than scientific."
Christian Century 56:644 My 17 '39 80w

"The reader who accepts Dr. Jordan as a picturesque and romantic writer will find enjoyment in a picturesque and romantic book. It would be a mistake to seek well-digested or valuable information in these pages, or even to place complete reliance upon their accuracy of detail; but they have a quality of far-flung and glowing interest which should be its own reward. . . This book, in short, is not addressed to scholarly consideration or use; it is not meant to be. But it has its own sufficiently definite purpose; and the popularity it may well receive will not be undeserved." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p6 My 28 '39 1250w
New Yorker 15:95 My 20 '39 30w

"Mr. Jordan's method of presentation is impressionism. His strokes are broad and his material slight. . . He has fallen into an occasional error of fact and sometimes hazards generalizations of dubious soundness. The book on the whole, however, summarizes in an interesting manner the more significant conclusions of contemporary scholarship." R. H. Gabriel

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:7 Je 10 '39 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 18 '39 850w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Survey 76:28 Ja '40 220w

JORDAN, NINA R. Homemade dolls in foreign dress; il. by the author. 246p $2 Harcourt

649.55 Dolls. Handicraft (W) 39-27666

Instructions for making dolls, and doll costumes representing fifteen different foreign countries, and for constructing little houses and animals of the same lands. The materials used are simple and easy to procure. Contains diagrams and drawings. Grades four to eight.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

"These are really mannikins. . . Little children find them the answer to a problem confronting all owners of dolls' houses. . . Older children will use these flexible figures, with their carefully patterned clothes and accessories, in educational projects at school. Grown-ups can find a place for them in displays." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 24 '39 200w

Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 30w

"The book is decidedly practical but it would probably be more useful as a gift to an individual child than as an addition to a school or to a public library." Miriam Snow

Library J 64:806 O 15 '39 120w

"Described simply and clearly."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 180w

Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

JORDAN, PHILIP FURNEAUX. There is no return. 350p $3 Harper [8s 6d Cresset]

910.4 Voyages and travels. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [38-19603]

"The personal travel diary of the diplomatic correspondent of The London News Chronicle. In an impressionistic fashion he describes furious airplane trips all over the map, two spells with the Spanish Loyalists and interviews in Washington with everybody from President Roosevelt to Dorothy Thompson." New Repub

"The book is uniformly well written, although at times the author seems to parrot the style of Ernest Hemingway, and there are faint aromas of warmed-over Dos Passos. Apparently Mr. Jordan's purpose in writing this volume was not so much to inform his readers of anything in particular as to satisfy his own desire to jot down scattered events in his life which might have found a more suitable resting place in the pages of a diary." Julian Bach, Jr.

Books p17 Ap 30 '39 550w

Boston Transcript p1 My 6 '39 90w

"This is a book for those who like indignant company and a mordant wit." V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 15 '38 400w

New Repub 98:387 My 3 '39 40w

New Statesman & Nation 15:966 Je 4 '38 650w

"Another foreign correspondent makes a gleaning, in this book, from his professional and personal experiences. . . But 'There Is No Return' has its own quality of difference, and even in being completely personal it defies mere classification in a group. It is a book which is deeply—sometimes very bitterly—felt, which has its individual twists of sometimes wry humor. . . Storm Jameson has said that it is 'alive and precise'; the author's degree of precision may be a matter of opinion, but from cover to cover his book is undoubtedly alive."

+ — N Y Times p20 Ap 30 '39 500w

"Amazing men have peopled the life of Philip Jordan, and great scenes have framed them. The promises of his chapter headings are not always upheld in the tales to follow, but the prime writing and the keen vision make his book noteworthy." H. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 My 13 '39 330w

Spec 161:80 Jl 8 '38 130w

"The publishers of these travel sketches—some of them reprinted from newspapers and periodicals—introduce the author as 'one of the most widely read journalists in England.' He was, he tells us, once greeted by Cunninghame Graham with, 'You and I must be the only two militant atheists in this horrible hotel.' . . His readers may supply his sketches with the connecting thread that is otherwise lacking by surmising that the narrator has been drawn as an unkind caricature of a Left-wing extremist and that it is for that reason that Mr. Jordan insists that the book, though written in the first person, is not autobiographical."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p372 My 28 '38 420w

JORDAN LLOYD, DOROTHY, and SHORE, AGNES. Chemistry of the proteins; introd. by Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins. 2d ed 532p il $5.50 Blakiston [21s Churchill]

547.8 Proteins [38-34074]

"First published in 1926, this authoritative work, now nearly doubled in size, retains its main plan of treating the subject under the two headings of constitutional and of physical chemistry indicating as far as possible the bearing of these aspects on general biochemistry, physiology, and pathology, but omitting applications to technology and industry which were discussed in the first edition. There are bibliographies at the chapter endings, and good indexes. The senior author is Director of the British Leather Manufacturers' Research Association." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is perhaps the simplest introductory treatment in this field at present available in any treatise. The latter parts of this book include a discussion of much of the recent work on the physical chemistry of the proteins. Though comprehensive, the inclusion of old and new material in juxtaposition leads to a lack of clarity and simplicity. The bibliographies appended to each chapter are very useful." E. J. Cohn

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:219 Ja '39 350w

"Besides being a lucid and concise survey of the present state of protein chemistry, the volume includes exhaustive lists of references, and there can be no doubt that it will be even more welcome than its predecessor. The authors' treatment of the subject is sufficiently but not unduly, coloured by their own views to make interesting and provocative reading, and in the words of Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins's introduction, 'even the specialist . . . may well find as the result of reading this book that the fertile mating of facts, which for him were previously disconnected, has yielded him a progeny of happy suggestion' for research.' " J. B. Speakman

+ Nature 143:222 F 11 '39 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:11 Ja '39

JORGENSON, THEODORE, and SOLUM, NORA O. Ole Edvart Rölvaag; a biography. 446p il $4 Harper

B or 92 Rølvaag, Ole Edvart 39-27381

The authors of this biography of the Norwegian-American college professor, author of Giants in the Earth (Book Review Digest, 1927) were colleagues of Rölvaag at St Olaf's college. Their work is based to some extent upon diaries and autobiographical fiction and a partly completed memoir. The book is a detailed analysis of the growth of Rölvaag's mind thru the years up to his ultimate realization of his own particular brand of expression. Index.

JORGENSON, T., and SOLUM, N. O.—Cont.

Booklist 35:306 My 15 '39

"A sound, forthright piece of work." R. A. Cordell

+ Books p6 Ap 30 '39 1350w

"Every shred of evidence has apparently been turned over with scholarly devotion; and if a genuine synthesis is missing, it is partly because the authors have included too much undigested autobiography and not enough material on the Norwegian immigration itself or the so different native American literature of the prairies. But they have furnished many of the essentials for final understanding, and they have lifted the great immigrant author from biographical and critical limbo." John Bovey

+ — Boston Transcript p3 My 6 '39 320w

"Professor Jorgenson, now head of Rölvaag's department at St. Olaf, and Miss Solum have done a sincere and intelligent piece of work, although it lacks lightness of touch and is overloaded with long quotations. They leave the reader wishing to know a little more about the external and social aspects of Rölvaag."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 27 '39 550w

"This biography is slow and compelling, as he was himself, and careful in its criticism. It might have been interesting to see its subject related to the immortal Joe Hill, to Sandburg of the second generation and to the American realists in general. Nevertheless, Rölvaag won't have to be 'done' again." Jerome Mellquist

+ New Repub 99:80 My 24 '39 330w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p5 Ap 16 '39 1450w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

"A labor of devotion and also one of distinguished scholarship. . . The book is really more a critical estimate than it is a biography. Since it deals with an extraordinarily interesting mind, rather than with an eventful life, the emphasis is appropriate. Erring perhaps on the side of academic thoroughness in the close attention given to casual papers, it rises, toward the end, to genuine distinction in its just and never slavish estimate of Rölvaag's real significance." James Gray

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ap 15 '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 35:102 My '39

JOSEPH, F. J. Amateurs in arms. 280p $2.50 Carrick [7s 6d Cassell]

39-3403

A novel dealing with the sub rosa traffic in arms carried on in Paris during the Spanish civil war.

"Mr. Joseph has made a very good thing out of a tale of plots and plotters that is as realistic as it is complicated, that is both a careful study resulting from an intimate knowledge of the business and the situation and a swiftly moving and exciting story." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p12 F 19 '39 550w

"The book was intended, no doubt, as an objective satire, and as such it succeeds; but the author's focus is too limited. He leans too heavily on the object of his satire. He keeps picking at the bone after the meat is gone. The reader grows a bit weary of the seemingly endless chain of intrigue, and wishes that Mr. Joseph had fulfilled the promise made in the characters he so boldly and engagingly outlined and in the delightful humorous touches found here and there." Regina Madden

— + Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 360w

Commonweal 29:586 Mr 17 '39 130w

"The author, who, it seems, is an experienced journalist writing under a nom-de-plume, has taken as his subject a vast, complicated, underhand armament deal, and presented its devious technicalities with the lucidity of a legal reporter. He introduces no uplift, no explicit satire and very little personality, but describes the biology of the business underworld with the professional detachment of a screen commentator recounting the life of the newt. . . Amateurs in Arms is not a book for every taste. The personal element is very slight. . . But to all the secret admirers of clever dishonesty, to all those who prop up their Times and read five thousand words on the latest action for slander or fraudulent conversion, it will appeal as a brilliant, instructive, slyly humorous dossier of the shadier side of capitalism." John Mair

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:884 N 26 '38 600w

"A quick-moving, well-handled tale of international intrigue and utter rascality, in which is collected the choicest lot of double-crossers and chiselers ever to appear between book covers. They are vultures almost without exception, the majority owing no loyalty to anything or anybody except their own selfish interests. . . Mr. Joseph's attitude toward the whole appalling proceedings is entirely lacking in sentimentality or moralizing, which makes it all the more effective." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p7 F 26 '39 600w

"F. J. Joseph's book includes a certain leavening of undoubted truth. It is blurbed as a novel based on the true but secret facts of the illegal arms traffic in connection with the Spanish war. Most of it turns out to be, however, a rather involved and dull series of episodes in the lives of petty swindlers and racketeers." J. B.

Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 25 '39 170w

Social Studies 30:239 My '39 20w

"Astonishing though the story may appear to the uninitiated there can be little doubt that it fulfils the author's claim that it is based on the true facts about the methods of the arms traffickers for the Spanish war."

Times [London] Lit Sup p774 D 3 '38 130w

JOYCE, JAMES. Finnegans wake. 628p $5 Viking [25s Faber]

39-11411

"The new, two-hundred-thousand-word novel by the illustrious author of 'Ulysses' . . . is one of the latter-day abstract fictions in which the writing is not so much about something as that something itself. As in its relatives, in 'Finnegans Wake' the style, the essential qualities and movement of the words, their rhythmic and melodic sequences, and the emotional color of the page are the main representatives of the author's thought and feeling. The accepted significations of the words are secondary. Indeed, the language approaches a condition of privacy. It is composed to a great extent of sonorous neologisms reassembling syllables and wisps of words derived from Irish, English, and American dialects and languages as related to English as Norse, French, German, and Italian are; and of portmanteau-words, etymological puns, Hibernicisms, and other humorous ambiguities." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Richard Aldington

Atlantic Je '39 750w

Booklist 35:347 Je 15 '39

"As one tortures one's way through 'Finnegans Wake,' an impression grows that Joyce has lost his hold on human life. Obsessed by a spaceless and timeless void, he has outrun himself. We begin to feel that his very freedom to say anything has become a compulsion to say nothing." Alfred Kazin

Books p4 My 21 '39 1800w

"While some of the neologisms are nothing more than the word-play of a clever schoolboy, others are inspired and replete with surprising associations, laid layer upon layer. It is one of the most allusive books ever written, full of themes which recur throughout and lead nowhere in the end. So many of the allusions are desperately obscure, so many pages dull and turgid, that the experience of reading is far less stimulating and more disappointing than that of 'Ulysses.' The average reader will require an index, glossary, and commentary more involved than that provided for the earlier book." L. R. Lind

Boston Transcript p2 My 20 '39 1050w

Reviewed by Earle Birney

Canadian Forum 19:125 Jl '39 750w

"To those readers who enjoy immersing themselves in a sea of both recognizable and manufactured words, James Joyce's book may be recommended. It is safe to say that its appearance on living room tables will be no indication that its owners have read it. It is too difficult a task for that. The book is at once baffling and yet conveys an impression of strange and unusual beauty. The bafflement arises from a form of writing in which the meaning of the book lies somewhere beyond the words and is, possibly, to be found in the sources of the words used. The beauty arises from the strange and haunting music of its prose and from the rewarding, flashing beauty of the occasional evocative passages which emerge like clear melodies set against literary dissonances." Barry Byrne

Commonweal 30:279 Jl 7 '39 750w

Discussion by Barry Byrne

Commonweal 30:456 S 8 '39 390w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 102:158 O '39 750w

"Mr. Joyce's 'Finnegans Wake,' parts of which have been published as 'Work in Progress,' does not admit of review. In twenty years' time, with sufficient study and with the aid of the commentary that will doubtless arise, one might be ready for an attempt to appraise it. The work is not written in English, or in any other language, as language is commonly known. I can detect words made up out of some eight or nine languages, but this must be only a part of the equipment employed. This polyglot element is only a minor difficulty, for Mr. Joyce is using language in a new way." B. I. Evans

Manchester Guardian p8 My 12 '39 650w

"The most frightening thing about the book is the feeling, which steadily grows in the reader, that Joyce himself does not know what he is doing; and how, in spite of all his efforts, he is giving himself away. Full control is being exercised over the minor details and the main structure, but the compulsion toward a private universe is very strong. . . Joyce's delight in reducing man's learning, passion, and religion to a hash is also disturbing. . . The book's great beauties, its wonderful passages of wit, its variety, its marks of genius and immense learning are undeniable. It has another virtue: in the future 'writers will not need to search for a compromise.' But whatever it says of man's past it has nothing to do with man's future, which, we can only hope, will lie in the direction of more humanity rather than less. And there are better gods than Proteus." Louise Bogan

\+ — Nation 148:533 My 6 '39 2000w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Repub 99:203 Je 28 '39 3400w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 17:788 My 20 '39 550w

"How in two thousand words or less, is one to review a book which even a cursory examination shows to be unprecedented, a book of considerable length by a thoughtful and tremendously equipped man who has spent sixteen years writing it? The only thing one can do is to indicate the value of the work and to show a way of approaching it with lessened perplexity. . . On the tale of Anna Livia the riverwoman, like flotsam and jetsam, are carried the names and deeds of remembered people, and histories and legends. A reading of this episode will give one, I think, a sense of Joyce's idiom and of the direction of this formidably original book. . . Even if [the reader] does not understand all that is on any one page he will find sentences lovely in their freshness and their beauty and sentences that one can chuckle over for months. We have novels that give us greatly a three dimensional world: here is a narrative that gives a new dimension." Padraic Colum

N Y Times p1 My 7 '39 1550w

"One of Joyce's most earnest commentators, Eugene Jolas, declares that his master wants nothing less than to 'hammer out a verbal vision that destroys space and time.' In a sense, the attempt is successful, but since time, space, and the individual are the loci, as it were, of human interest, Joyce is forced to forgo all attempts at appealing to our sensibilities. Even if you could understand 'Finnegans Wake,' you would not be moved by it. A god, talking in his sleep, might have written it. The only attitude a god could well have toward human affairs is irony, and dehumanized irony seems to me the keynote of every one of these strange pages. . . Can any reader who, like myself, is neither linguist nor polyhistor get anything out of such a book except a feeling of savage frustration? Not much, I think, but something." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:88 My 6 '39 3000w

Pratt p28 autumn '39

"In the face of the wit and mysterious poetry with which the book is strewn, and all the reasons for foreseeing its future greater intelligibility, we close it without a great feeling of enthusiasm. Livelier, more ingenious, and denser of verbal texture than Gertrude Stein's and Kenneth Burke's somewhat similar productions it distinctly is. The Jabberwocky-like 'ballads of Perce Oreille' interspersed amid the prose are certainly delightful. But for all its evidences of Joyce's profound philology, his style lacks the strong root-feeling of the language. It is cold and cerebral in comparison with that of a veritable 'radical' like Gerard Manley Hopkins. The pressure of passion and driving necessity frequently seems absent. And too often we have the sense of repletion and a mark overshot." Paul Rosenfeld

\+ — Sat R of Lit 20:10 My 6 '39 1350w

Discussion by Faugh an-Ballagh Faugh

Sat R of Lit 20:9 Je 3 '39 900w

Discussion by Paul Rosenfeld

Sat R of Lit 20:9 Je 10 '39 950w

Reviewed by Derek Verschoyle

Spec 162:820 My 12 '39 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 4 '39 600w (Reprinted from Times [London] Lit Sup)

"Finnegans Wake is a difficult book—too difficult for most people to read. In fact, it cannot be 'read' in the ordinary sense. It is perhaps the most consciously obscure work that a man of acknowledged genius has produced. Its four sections run to 628 pages. . . There is not a sentence to guide the reader in interpreting it; there is not a single direct statement of what it is about, where its action takes place, what, in the simplest sense, it means. . . As a gigantic laboratory experiment with language, Finnegans Wake is bound to exert an influence far beyond the circle of its immediate readers. Whether Joyce is eventually convicted of assaulting the King's English with intent to kill or whether he has really added a cubit to her stature, she will never be quite the same again."

Time 33:78 My 8 '39 1450w

"Mr. Joyce has turned everything upside down. He has twisted ordinary words into something different merely because he seems to like them better in Jabberwockian form. Far-fetched literary, philosophical, journalistic, or music-hall references which have leapt into his mind thrust themselves into the middle of his nouns and adjectives. His language twists and turns with every vivid idea that interrupts his own thought and must needs be reproduced for the reader. The result is what the sur-realists appear to aim at—an uprush of words and images from the subconscious imagination—we hear shouts of laughter or lamentation, shrieks of gaiety and sorrow, low mutterings of reflection, explosions, yet all set down with a kind of cold-blooded matter-of-factness so far as the translator, namely the author, is concerned. A sympathetic and patient reader can get stimulation and entertainment out of such literature. But he will only get from it a fraction of what was in Mr. Joyce's mind."

JOYCE, JAMES—Continued
Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 6 '39 1050w

"If so many of the people guyed in this book are coarse, drunken, criminal, hypocritical, hypercritical, self-deceiving or ridiculous, the author presents it all with so much gusto and animation, and with such aloof psychological disinterestedness as to make us feel that he is not in the least concerned about the goodness or badness, ugliness or beauty, of his exceedingly remarkable world, but merely concerned to know that it is like that—you must take it or leave it. The author's delight in the presentation of the succession of lively images that pass before his mind's eye is what counts."
Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 6 '39 900w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
Yale R n s 28:vi summer '39 230w

JUDAISM and Christianity. 3v v 3, Law and religion, ed. by Edwin I. J. Rosenthal. 248p $5 Macmillan [10s 6d S.P.C.K]

296 Christianity and other religions—Judaism. Jews—Religion

"Two volumes of lectures in the series 'Judaism and Christianity' have been published already [Book Review Digest, 1937], and the present volume is described as the third." (Manchester Guardian) Contents: Primitive origins of law in relation to religion, by J. Murphy; Law and religion in Babylonia and Assyria, by T. Fish; Law and religion in Israel, by H. Wheeler Robinson; The law and Pharisaism, by R. Travers Herford; Jesus, Paul and the law, by T. W. Manson; Law and religion among the Samaritans, by Edward Robertson; Law and religion in Islam, by H. A. R. Gibb; Medieval Judaism and the law, by E. I. J. Rosenthal; The scholastic attitude to the law, by Vincent McNabb.

Reviewed by S. W. Baron
Am Hist R 45:358 Ja '40 350w

Reviewed by M. A. Canney
Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 13 '39 300w

"The Archbishop of York, in an appreciative foreword to this important volume of essays, very properly remarks that it serves a double purpose. First it enables modern English people to appreciate their dual debt to Judaism and to Christianity. Secondly, it helps to clarify some elements in the idea of Law, a grasp of which is again becoming of vital importance to civilization. Based upon a course of nine lectures, recently delivered under the auspices of the Semitics Department of the University of Manchester, it is thus a timely and a scholarly contribution to its theme."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 28 '39 1150w

JUDD, CHARLES HUBBARD. Preparation of school personnel. 151p $1.50 McGraw

370.73 Teachers, Training of. Education—New York (state) 38-28755

One of the reports of the Inquiry into the character and cost of public education in the state of New York. This report deals with the problems of normal schools and teachers colleges and their relationships with the State education department. Index.

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by E. W. Knight
Social Educ 3:433 S '39 110w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). Pioneer girl; the early life of Frances Willard; il. by Genevieve Foster. 80p map 50c Rand McNally

B or 92 Willard, Frances Elizabeth—Juvenile literature 39-27137

Story of the early life of Frances Willard, beginning with the journey from Oberlin, Ohio, to Janesville, Wisconsin, when she was seven, and ending with her eighteenth birthday. For young readers.

Booklist 35:237 Mr 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 My 28 '39 280w
Christian Century 56:291 Mr 1 '39 20w
Horn Bk M 15:171 My '39 90w

"The book is apparently intended to interest children eight and nine years old in its heroine as a person, but there is much in it that would not appeal to children of that age. Frances Willard does not seem a likely subject for so juvenile a biography, and the interpretation of her childhood in the light of what she later became seems at times factitious." Alice Monroe
Library J 64:332 Ap 15 '39 130w
New Yorker 15:106 My 13 '39 70w
Wis Lib Bul 35:115 Je '39

JUNG, CARL GUSTAV. The integration of the personality; tr. by Stanley M. Dell. 313p il $3 Farrar

137 Personality. Psychoanalysis

"The chapters in this volume were originally written as lectures given at the Eranos Meeting at Ascona, Switzerland. A number of scholars from different fields of knowledge meet there annually to discuss certain topics of human interest. My contributions represent the psychological aspect of the problems under discussion, and turn upon a question of peculiar interest—the so-called process of individuation." By individuation the author means "the psychological process that makes of a human being an 'individual'—a unique, indivisible unit or 'whole man.'" (p3) Index.

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p18 D 3 '39 750w

Reviewed by H. J. Forman
N Y Times p6 Ja 21 '40 1100w

"While much of this book is heavy going, the first and last chapters, 'The Meaning of Individuation' and 'The Development of the Personality,' are entirely comprehensible to the lay mind and well worth consideration. The intervening chapters, 'A Study in the Process of Individuation,' 'Archetypes of the Collective Unconscious,' 'Dream Symbols of the Process of Individuation' and 'The Idea of Redemption in Alchemy' comprise the material which may perhaps appeal only to those deeply interested in Dr. Jung's unique ideas on the symbolism of dreams."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 D '39 180w

JUNG, LEO, ed. Judaism in a changing world. 304p $3 Oxford

296 Jews 39-16202

Contents: Major aspects of Judaism, by Leo Jung; The challenge to the rabbis as interpreters of Jewish law, by Isaac Unna; The challenge to Jewish education, by D. D. Pool; The challenge of science, by M. L. Isaacs; The challenge of Jewish-Christian relations, by M. W. Lampe; Jewish-gentile relations (considered from the Jewish viewpoint) by Bernard Drachman; An epistle on tolerance by a 'rabbinic zealot,' by O. Z. Fasman; Judaism—a sociological approach, by M. H. Farbridge; The challenge of Eretz Israel, by Paul Goodman; The challenge to Israel, by Isaac Breuer; The challenge of Biblical criticism, by A. Cohen; Judaism—a psychological approach, by H. R. Gold; Judaism and western civilization, by Salis Daiches; Reason and mysticism, by Eli Munk; Some modern challenges to Jewish marriage, by Moses Jung.

"On the recommended list." L. W. Burch
+ Christian Century 56:1205 O 4 '39 350w
Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm
Ethics 50:243 Ja '40 130w
Reviewed by John Cournos
N Y Times p14 S 17 '39 440w

K

KAEMPFFERT, WALDEMAR BERNHARD. Science today and tomorrow. 275p $2.50 Viking

504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures (W) 39-27864

Eighteen chapters on the social aspects of science, written for the layman, by the science and engineering editor of the New York Times. Partial contents: A star explodes; Birth and death of the moon; Life in the solar system; Explorers of the atmosphere; The mystery of the atom; Can the laboratory create life? Evolution since Darwin; Carrel; Electric immortality; Democracy and the machine.

Booklist 36:84 N 1 '39

"The present collection of essays is most welcome. They are serene in outlook, simple and conversational in style, full of names and facts and adventures.' Mr. Kaempffert is a first-class story teller, poetic and sensitive, so that—believe it or not—these accounts of progress in science make excellent reading aloud. In any group with intellectual interests they would provide many an evening's conversation." Gerald Wendt
+ Books p18 O 1 '39 750w
Reviewed by R. M. Chisholm
Boston Transcript p2 O 21 '39 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '39

"The bulk of the book is good reading, but the last chapter surpasses the others in value. It is there that the author shows the results of his long interest in the social aspects of science. It is brief but full of thought-provoking suggestions." W. M. Agar
+ Commonweal 31:103 N 17 '39 240w

"Because of the author's grasp of his subject and the simplicity of his style the book makes excellent reading." H. H. Darby
+ Nation 149:531 N 11 '39 420w
New Repub 100:321 O 18 '39 60w
Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 101:202 D 6 '39 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:62 O '39

" 'Science Today and Tomorrow' is so well written that one is tempted to set down a few superlatives and advise the reader to get the book promptly. It is indeed the work of one of the most skillful, accurate and persuasive scientific journalists now writing. What but skill is it that makes a book full of technical detail read like a novel?" W. M. Malisoff
+ N Y Times p2 O 8 '39 900w

"There are eighteen essays, all superior."
+ New Yorker 15:78 S 23 '39 50w

"Seldom does a popular book on the science of the present and future so successfully combine readability and lucidity with accuracy." G. R. Harrison
+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 O 14 '39 450w
Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 O '39 400w

"This eminently readable and exciting book is a challenge to all who are seriously concerned with what is happening to the world in which those masses have to live, in a manner of speaking. We should urge it even more upon the scientists." B. C. Gruenberg
+ Survey G 28:758 D '39 300w

KAGAWA, TOYOHIKO. Meditations on the Holy Spirit; tr. by Charles A. Logan. 167p $1.50 Cokesbury press

231.3 Holy Spirit 39-27196

Meditations on the Holy Spirit, the spirit of truth, as revealed in the life of Christ and the Acts of the Apostles. The translator of these chapters by the Japanese evangelist has known Dr Kagawa since 1903.

Booklist 35:244 Ap 1 '39
Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 1 '39 140w
Christian Century 56:159 F 1 '39 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39
Pratt p7 spring '39

KAHN, FRITZ. Our sex life; a guide and counsellor for everyone; tr. from the German by George Rosen. 459p il $6 Knopf [30s Heinemann]

612.6 Sex. Sexual hygiene 39-16079

"Dr. Kahn has had twenty-five years' experience as a physician and he wrote this book, he tells us, because he has had such tragic experience of the suffering caused by ignorance of sex in the young. When asked by patients for a book that could be given to the average intelligent layman and woman he could find none quite suitable, so he proceeded to compile what is really a complete encyclopaedia of sex information or, as he puts it, a guide through sex life. . . Every aspect of sexual life and its perversions and aberrations is discussed frankly and in detail, and there are numerous illustrations to clarify various points." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by R. L. Dickinson, M.D.
Survey 75:196 Je '39 280w

"Although there is, perhaps, nothing new in this book it is an interesting and important contribution to literature on the subject of sex. . . Although the style is, in many places, rather sentimental, Dr. Kahn's sincerity and knowledge are unquestionable, and the book could be given to any intelligent young person without danger."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p471 Ag 5 '39 180w

KAIN, RONALD STUART. Europe: Versailles to Warsaw. (Reference shelf) 456p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

940.5 Europe—History. Europe—Politics (W) 39-29416

"This volume attempts to provide background material for an understanding of the European war and of the positions and policies of all the European countries with respect to that portentous struggle. . . Emphasis is placed upon the post-war history of the turbulent old Continent and its virile peoples, upon the internal developments and external relations of each country that determine or influence its attitude toward the present conflict. Numerous excerpts from authoritative speeches, writings and news reports are incorporated with the aim of presenting as many points of view as possible. . . The concluding section contains a general survey of the events leading up to the declarations of war by Great Britain and France upon Germany, and of the views of these governments and of leading statesmen and writers concerning the issues at stake and the responsibilities for the resort to arms." (Pref.) Chronology. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

"This 456-page volume in the 'Reference Shelf' series is a big money's worth of modern European history. The title is a little too comprehensive. For most of the nations treated it does not go back to Versailles, but is concerned with the more immediate backgrounds of the present war."

KAIN, R. S.—Continued
+ Christian Century 56:1512 D 6 '39 50w
Living Age 357:496 Ja '40 110w
Wis Lib Bul 36:15 Ja '40

KAINS, MAURICE GRENVILLE, and MCQUESTEN, LEAVITT MEAD. Propagation of plants. 555p il $3.50 Judd
631.53 Plant propagation 38-27936

"A complete guide for professional and amateur growers of plants by seeds, layers, grafting and budding, with chapters on nursery and greenhouse management." (Subtitle) The book replaces the out-of-print volume Plant Propagation (Book Review Digest, 1916).

Booklist 35:94 N 15 '38
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 Je '39
Reviewed by M. A. H. Tincker
Nature 143:180 F 4 '39 850w

"It is a comprehensive text and reference book covering many phases of the subject and is so arranged that it will be equally useful to amateur and professional propagators, and to teachers and students." F. F. Rockwell
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 27 '39 140w

KAISER, GEORG. Vera [tr. by R. Wills Thomas] [Eng title: Villa in Sicily]. 276p $2.50 Alliance bk. [7s 6d Dakers]
39-31687

Years after his supposed death at Tannenberg, Boris Tscherski writes the story of his life, why he chose to disappear, and why he will not return, in a letter addressed to his first wife, a letter written after he has come face to face with her twice and she has not known him.

"As a dramatist Kaiser's achievement was always to lay bare the anatomy of suffering and there is more than a suggestion of his profound talent for symbolism in 'Vera.' But here the puerility of the theme gets in his way; when he succeeds, and he succeeds brilliantly in several scenes, it is despite his material. And the worst of it is that his book is fiberless. It breathes so weary an air of resignation that 'Gar's' almost impassioned submission to fate becomes a little silly." Alfred Kazin
— + Books p10 N 19 '39 900w
Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 N 14 '39 300w
New Repub 101:241 D 13 '39 60w

"It is a depressing story, which offers no relief from misery." John Cournos
N Y Times p30 N 12 '39 650w

"Possibly the novel has lost in translation but it is hard to believe that even in the original German it can be other than banal." A. L.
— Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 6 '40 200w
Time 34:92 N 13 '39 300w

"It is a rather empty and chaotic story, in which touches of what may be a sort of large emotional symbolism are too vague to make up for the generally intense ado about nothing."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p657 N 11 '39 260w

KALAB, THERESA. Kokwa, a little koala bear; pictures by [the author]. [29p] $1.50 Longmans
(W) 39-23753

The adventures of a little Australian koala, told in prose and picture for young readers.

"We have some excellent pictures of circus animals as well as of the always delightful little tree-bears, who of course carry off the show so far as little children are concerned. The mother-and-baby groups are irresistible." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 D 24 '39 200w
Cath World 150:374 D '39 40w

"That the koala bear is an appealing creature Theresa Kalab's illustrations clearly show. But the story of the little bear's adventures is less successful. The text lacks the convincing spark that brings characters and situations to life. Since there are few stories about koala bears, this one may fill a need until something more nearly satisfying comes along." M. F. Potter
+ — Library J 64:805 O 15 '39 40w

"The story is slight but accurate, and the engaging drawings on nearly every page make this a very pleasing animal picture book. Because of the simple style and large type this will appeal to the less able readers." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 D 31 '39 130w
Reviewed by R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 40w

KALASHNIKOFF, NICHOLAS. They that take the sword. 717p $3 Harper
(W) 39-21785

Long novel presenting the stages in the development of one Sergei Kuskov, born a farm boy in Siberia. The story follows his career as agitator and terrorist in Czarist Russia, up to the time of his exile by the Soviet in the early days of revolution, and closes as he approaches the shores of the United States.

"It is a singularly and pleasantly unmodern career and story Mr. Kalashnikoff tells, chiefly because he did not function with the machine-made, doctrinaire mental quality of the streamlined revolutionists of our own day. . . The result is a book that belongs in none of the humdrum categories—a huge narrative with all its glandular juices flowing generously, an intensely human odyssey of modern revolutionary life." William Soskin
+ Books p3 S 10 '39 1450w

" 'They That Take the Sword' is surely required reading for all who are trying to keep abreast of today's events, though the narrative itself is exciting and stimulating enough for those who merely want a novel based on almost modern history. The style is simple and lucid; the typical Russian understatement is moving, even harrowing at times." O. E. Schoen-Rene
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 23 '39 500w
Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss
Churchman 153:17 N 1 '39 180w

"It is a refreshingly dispassionate account of the protagonist's life as student, idealist, revolutionary and terrorist, told very humbly and sorrowfully in the hope, as the preface says, that other potential revolutionaries, like the author idealistic and uninstructed, may not be moved to 'take the sword.' It is one of the saddest books I have ever read." J. G. E. Hopkins
+ Commonweal 31:229 D 29 '39 300w
Reviewed by Michael Sayers
New Repub 100:249 O 4 '39 360w

"Coming at this moment of political temper and distemper this writing will soothe no nerves. It is inflammable material more likely to confirm prejudices, both conservative and socialistic. . . The author writes with obvious sincerity, strength and conviction, and political idealists of all shades of opinion may find an object-lesson in this book. The average reader will find a story of more than common excitement, and a human document of rich and incisive historical comment." Stanley Young
+ — N Y Times p2 S 10 '39 1150w
Pratt p23 winter '40

"Whatever the proportions of fact and fiction in the chronicle of Sergei Kuskov, revolutionist, Russian patriot, and human being, 'They that Take the Sword' is meticulously authentic in its background. . . To this reviewer and to others who happen to be keenly interested in the historical conditioning of present-day Russia, Mr. Kalashnikoff's novel is especially fascinating as dramatized history. But for the average reader it will be no less absorbing as a rich and crowded human narrative, peopled with vivid and unusual characters." Eugene Lyons

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 S 9 '39 700w
Time 34:91 S 11 '39 300w

"They That Take the Sword is absorbing reading, for all that it is not in the great Russian tradition. Emotion, and an active, generous, simple nature dull the details of what is in outline a remarkable story of revolution and war." Robert Littell

+ Yale R ns 29:viii winter '40 200w

KALECKI, MICHAL. Essays in the theory of economic fluctuations. 154p $1.75 Farrar [6s Allen, G]

330.1 Economics. Business cycles [39-17014]

"These essays, which are addressed to the professional economist rather than the general reader, present a synthesis of three important currents in modern economic thought: the doctrine of imperfect competition, the Keynesian theory and the ideas of the Swedish school. Though formally independent, the essays constitute a whole. The last essay contains a theory of the business cycle which demonstrates clearly the inevitability of periodic crises when investment is expanding." Times [London] Lit Sup

"If one discounts Mr. Kalecki's tendency to oversimplify the evidence and overvalue the empirical validity of his inferences, the essays emerge as interesting and imaginative first approaches to the problems involved. It is to be hoped that the author will pursue his studies beyond the range of preliminary hypotheses into a more thoroughgoing mastery of the empirical complexities of the problem." Simon Kuznets

+ — Am Econ R 29:804 D '39 700w

Reviewed by H. F. Fraser
Ann Am Acad 207:235 Ja '40 500w
Economist 136:404 Ag 26 '39 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Ap 1 '39 130w

KANGUK. Kanguk, a boy of Bering strait, as told to William Albee; il. with Eskimo drawings by Kanguk, himself. 116p $2 Little

Eskimos—Juvenile literature (W) 39-27621

Story and pictures describing child life among the Eskimos of the Bering Strait region.

Booklist 36:16 S '39

"It is an Eskimo book, one that a small boy will find thrilling and a grown man valuable. 'Ivory is like an Eskimo,' said Mazonna. 'It never lies.' The story of Mazonna's son has the ring of truth." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 24 '39 400w

"[The drawings] are reputedly primitive, although they exhibit a sense of perspective quite foreign, ordinarily, to such drawings. However, the detail in the drawings might have been drawn by a child, although again the essential in the picture is not selected at all from a child's, or from a primitive's, standpoint, but from that of an American adult. Psychology aside, a very interesting children's story."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 100w

"Told in the first person, the narrative gives a trustworthy account of a race whose wits are sharpened by necessity to provide a bare living for their kind, who have deep feeling and respect for each other but little regard for the white man and his ways." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:298 S '39 100w

"[Mr. Albee] has translated the story as nearly as possible as it was told to him. It is written in the first person and retains colloquialisms and native words. The story has enough excitement and adventure to make it appeal to children from eight to eleven on its own account. An older reader will feel the power and simplicity of life among these Eskimo people." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 100w
New Repub 101:237 D 13 '39 30w

"There is no doubt about it, the story of Kanguk is for grown-ups as well as for children. For one who wants to learn something of the life of the Eskimo, that simple people who have built a culture so suitable to their bleak environment, the stories will not only be entertaining but revealing. And the pictures are good examples, so the art critic says, of primitive art." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p8 N 12 '39 480w
New Yorker 15:88 N 25 '39 30w
Time 34:52 S 4 '39 230w

KANTER, ABRAHAM HERBERT, and KOHN, ABE SAMUEL. —And the stutterer talked. 236p $2 Humphries

616.87 Stammering 38-38759

In fictionized form the authors discuss the problem of the stutterer, tracing the story of Bill Wheeler from babyhood thru bitter school and college days and various quack cures to final relief in a New York city hospital clinic.

"In general, the book fulfills quite well the purpose of focusing attention upon the prevalence, the importance, and the lack of dependable treatment available to stutterers. Because there are no references, no indication of the amount or quality of the research upon which the conclusions are based, and a failure to isolate more adequately the various factors which presumably led to the successful cure, the book has limited scientific value for psychologists. The authors were not attempting a scientific treatment, however, and judged as a popular book written upon an involved psychological subject, it is more acceptable than most of them." L. M. Baker

Am J Psychol 52:500 Jl '39 400w

"In the early scenes there is a fictionized and not altogether believable tone to the account, but when Billy grows up and comes to New York to study at the Hospital for Speech Correction the book swings from the somewhat excessive pity of the first half to a very interesting analysis of the personality difficulties which result from stuttering. Billy's slow and painful progress is outlined carefully, to its final encouraging result. The book should be helpful to parents and teachers, who must deal with this problem, and the second half should be extremely useful and cheering to stutterers themselves."

+ — Books p10 Ja 1 '39 190w

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. Valedictory; il. by Amos Sewell. 93p $1 Coward-McCann

(W) 39-27324

That night in May when the class of 1922 graduated from Shelldrake high school, was also Ty Morley's last night as janitor. As he prepared the auditorium and later listened to the exercises, Ty recalls a dozen incidents when he had come into personal contact with this and that pupil, when his understanding heart and homely wisdom had influenced some child's behavior, even tho "he couldn't talk to them like the minister or their parents."

Booklist 35:290 My 1 '39

"MacKinlay Kantor has fashioned a tender, restrained and resonant story, which touches the reader's heart and speaks to his mind in its utter naturalness. Ty Morley is alive and unforgettable. And as he looks at the school and the boys and girls whose friend he has been, we see their personalities and their problems and beyond that their neighborhood—the very substance of the American commun-

KANTOR, MACKINLAY—Continued
ity. If some readers will compare 'Valedictory' with the English 'Mr. Chips,' others will find in it something of the quality of Thornton Wilder's 'Our Town.' But it is always itself: it evokes and epitomizes a bit of significant reality in a rare and lovely story of an old man and a small town school." John Patton
+ Books p3 Ap 23 '39 800w

"It seems right that the American counterpart of Mr. Chips should be a public school janitor—and public school in the American sense, not the English. American small-town life is bone and fiber of MacKinlay Kantor's 'Valedictory,' a short story that by its simplicity, reticence, and art that conceals art, as much as by its concern with a school, inevitably reminds the reader of James Hilton's 'Good-bye, Mr. Chips,' but is nevertheless quite different; individual and unique." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 13 '39 400w

"A charming character study. . . The excellent illustrations by Amos Sewell are realistic enough to bring back the indefinable scent of that 'reddish sweeping compound' which school janitors always used on their wooden floors. And they are well suited to the sweet and homely story." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 23 '39 400w

"Mr. Kantor tells his little story with delicacy and warm sympathy. Extremely happy reading, intended, it would seem, for the Mr. Chips market."
+ New Yorker 15:122 Ap 29 '39 70w

"Somewhat ostensibly a 'tear-jerker,' this short story is handled pleasingly by a writer already widely known for many longer books. It should be deservedly popular with simple people. Amos Sewell's illustrations fit harmoniously into the text." W. R. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:31 Ap 29 '39 120w
Wis Lib Bul 35:113 Je '39

KAPLAN, MRS BETI ENID (STREIFF) (ENID WELLS, pseud). Living for two; a guide to homemaking. 435p il $3 Kemp
640 Home economics

A book of advice, chiefly of a practical nature, for the bride-to-be and the bride. Chapter one gives an outline of what the bride-to-be should do, week by week during the last three months before the wedding. Following this are chapters on the buying of linens and clothes and furniture, planning the wedding and the honeymoon. Part two of the book considers the problems the bride must meet, marketing, cooking, housekeeping for two. Index.

Booklist 36:38 O 1 '39
Springf'd Republican p6 S 18 '39 280w
Wis Lib Bul 35:163 O '39

KARINTHY, FRIGYES. A journey round my skull; tr. from the Hungarian by Vernon Duckworth Barker. 288p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Faber]
616.83 Brain—Tumors [39-8521]

This portion of the autobiography of an Hungarian man of letters covers nine months of his life only, from the time he first began to suspect he was ill—he heard the rumblings of non-existent trains each evening at seven o'clock—until, after a series of false diagnoses and much agony, he finally recovers after an operation on his brain.

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
Books p2 O 1 '39 1050w

"There are few, indeed, who have come through an operation such as the author of this book endured and survived to tell the tale, and probably none who could have told it with greater skill." R. A. Chace
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 360w

"The story is told in an impersonal, objective way, so that at times it reads more like a scientific statement than a record of personal suffering. As a moving and skilfully presented account of a perilous adventure it may be too strong meat for some queasy stomachs, but it should find many appreciative readers, both lay and professional." G. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '39 300w

"To judge from A Journey Round My Skull, Frigyes Karinthy may well be a writer as interesting and original, say, as Italo Svevo. . . Let us hope that Mr. Vernon Duckworth Barker, a personal friend of Karinthy, who has translated admirably the present volume, will be encouraged to give us some of his other work. Meanwhile, A Journey Round My Skull is, what the publishers claim for it, a very remarkable book." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:180 F 4 '39 1050w

"This book is both a human document and a piece of authentic literature, not devoid of humor." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p8 Ag 27 '39 600w

"This extraordinary book . . . is a 'true' horror story, written in a brilliant, often beautiful style. . . The quality of the writing is far more distinguished than that of most novels, and as a horror story it unfolds with devilish ingenuity. The character of the hero is charming and provocative, and the translation is quite surprisingly good. Nevertheless it can be recommended only with reservation and to those of the steadiest nerves." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.
+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 Ag 26 '39 600w

"Karinthy had been trained as a doctor, and his medical knowledge, combined with a reporter's curiosity, enabled him to bring to the study of his own case an informed detachment which make his descriptions astonishingly effective. As well as being a brilliant imaginative record of an illness, the book is also a very revealing autobiography."
+ Spec 162:278 F 17 '39 240w

"The book is not without imaginative quality and is well written in its way, but it can hardly avoid giving the impression of a literary exercise. And it may be doubted whether every experience is suitable material for a literary exercise."
Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 18 '39 350w

KARLFELDT, ERIK AXEL. Arcadia borealis; selected poems; tr. with an introd. by Charles Wharton Stork [il. with water-color decorations by Hilma Berglund]. ltd ed 145p $3.50 Univ. of Minn. [16s Oxford]
839.71 38-29059

First collection in English of the poems of a Swedish poet who died in 1931. "Erik Axel Karlfeldt rose from a poor country boy of the wilds to an accomplished scholar, the head of the Swedish Literary Academy. Known as 'the Robert Frost of Sweden,' he wrote of the landscape, the animals, the plants, the people of his native Dalecarlia—a province familiar to Americans through the paintings and etchings of Anders Zorn." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 35:171 Ja 15 '39

"Karlfeldt . . . has perhaps neither the scope nor the intensity of Yeats, and he opposes the peasant position to the aristocratic position, but the usual comparison with Robert Frost is not really accurate. It is in the complication of his treatment that he surpasses Frost and approaches Yeats. His poems are rich and steady, as few modern poems have been, and the variety of his diction, the breadth of his sympathy, his consistent excellence in the poems of this book ought to secure for him a considerable public in America." Peter Craft
+ Books p12 S 3 '39 150w

"In spite of a reference to Robert Frost on the jacket, some of the poems seem to me to recall one of the best of our light versifiers, Guy Wetmore Carryl. Others, of course, are much more serious. All have gusto and color." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 20:16 My 6 '39 110w

"Mr. Stork has kept to the metre and rhyme scheme of the originals and, although here and there the result is slightly artificial, on the whole the verse runs easily and convincingly. The translator is helped by the similarity in character of Swedish and English poetry, and the flowing simplicity of Karlfeldt's style, which changed little, except in increased mastery of stanzaic patterns, throughout his career."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 18 '39 110w

Wis Lib Bul 35:100 My '39

KARRER, PAUL. Organic chemistry; tr. from the latest German ed. by A. J. Mee. 902p il $11 Nordemann [45s Imperia bk. co, 26 Bloomsbury st, London, WC 1]

547 Chemistry, Organic 39-12559

"This textbook by Karrer, which is now in its sixth German edition, has been widely adopted throughout Europe in the teaching of organic chemistry. . . The English translation, based on the fifth German edition but with the incorporation of the corrections and additions of the sixth German edition, will, therefore, be welcomed. . . The aim of this text, which is of medium size and scope, is to provide a survey of the ever increasing body of theories and facts in organic chemistry. Especial attention has been paid to the description of methods of synthesis and to the determination of the constitution of organic compounds. The problems in stereochemistry are well discussed." Ind & Eng Chem

"Its freedom from insistence on any particular brand of theory and the general avoidance of speculation give to the book a quality which is at once reserved and substantial, and this doubtless has contributed to its wide appeal. Graduate students and advanced undergraduates can find here a reliable source of information, and thorough study of the book should provide a sound foundation of fact and a background sufficiently broad for the judicious consideration of special topics and special theories." L. F. Fieser

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:756 Mr '39 350w

"The book is very readable, well-translated, and attractively printed. The factual material impresses one as having been prepared with great care with the objective of keeping the student of organic chemistry informed of the older, as well as of the newer, important discoveries and advancements in organic chemistry. This text will undoubtedly meet with the favorable reception which it unquestionably deserves." Roger Adams

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:215 Mr 20 '39 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:36 Jl '39

KASSEL, ALFRED. I went native in Tahiti; il. by W. Wolff. 189p $3 Smith, Richard R.

919.62 Tahiti 39-25862

"Tells in free verse about the 'amorous, glamorous Tahitians' and the American 'popaa' (white man) who was tired of the 'white man's world' and found peace in a hut on the beach with a native girl. The charms of the native girls and the excitement of their dancing are duly celebrated, but the nature reader is likely to find a more potent lure in the author's account of the food. . . Mr Kassel also relates legends and superstitions and describes a church service and other phases of native life, whether or not affected by the white men's customs and beliefs." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by Sarah Chokla

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 100w

"In spite of the plethora of writing which we have already had from Tahiti, the book has originality and simplicity in its text, as it has boldness in its black and white and brown illustrations. And Al Kassel has succeeded in being unpretentious in free verse."

+ N Y Times p33 O 29 '39 550w

"Mr Kassel's irregular verses have some facility and occasionally suggest the atmosphere of a scene, but retain for the most part an unadorned realism, which imparts the feeling of prose rather than poetry. A certain vigorous crudeness characterizes the illustrations."

Springf'd Republican p6 O 16 '39 300w

KASTNER, ERICH. Eleven merry pranks. See Eulenspiegel. Eleven merry pranks

KATZ, DANIEL, and SCHANCK, RICHARD LOUIS. Social psychology. 700p il $3.75 Wiley [18s 6d Chapman]

301.15 Social psychology 38-17213

"The first part of the text deals with folkways, mores, institutions, and the forces producing uniform and variant behavior. . . The second part attempts to describe the psychological foundations for social behavior and social processes—the nature of responses, of motivation, mechanisms of interaction and language. . . The third part contains the material on personality development and integration. . . The fourth part of the text is [an] orientation to basic problems of sociology and public affairs." (Am Soc R) Indexes.

"If the first three parts could be properly interconnected, if Part IV could be dropped or really well done, if well-selected child development materials could be inserted, and if important contributors could more equally share the honors with the Allports and E. B. Holt, the text would be superfine. Even with these shortcomings noted, it is a good book. It appears to me to be the first social psychology written by psychologists which really takes sociological material and contributions into account, and gives a well-balanced perspective of both the psychological and sociological approaches." W. C. Reckless

+ — Am Soc R 3:902 D '38 490w

Nature 143:618 Ap 15 '39 210w

Pratt p6 autumn '39

KAUFMAN, CHARLES. Fiesta in Manhattan. 313p $2.50 Morrow

39-27138

Two naive young Mexicans suddenly uprooted from their beloved homeland find themselves living in the Latin section of New York city, which stretches between 110th and 125th streets. Juan finds himself unable to support his Elena and tries desperate methods. The end is tragedy.

Booklist 35:231 Mr 15 '39

"A story of exciting, colorful and humorous incident. If the prose flushes purple a little too exuberantly, it achieves a precision, glow and cadence pleasant in contrast with the flat-footed journalese novel readers usually have to put up with." J. H. Friend

+ — Books p2 Mr 12 '39 600w

"It is a sad story, and will not serve the purpose of diverting us from thoughts of misery and horror, but is entirely credible. And since fine craftsmanship demands recognition, whatever the object in which it is displayed, Mr. Kaufman must be congratulated on a very able first novel." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '39 220w

New Repub 98:232 Mr 29 '39 50w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 18:461 S 30 '39 150w

" 'Fiesta in Manhattan' is so good a novel that it is difficult not to overpraise it. Many a first-rate novelist, jealous of a well-earned reputation, would be proud to call this book

KAUFMAN, CHARLES—Continued
his own. . . A deeply poignant story, beautifully told." R. C. Feld
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 12 '39 850w
New Yorker 15:94 Mr 11 '39 60w

"A series of flat, highly tinted sketches, romantic in style and as amusing as they were meant to be. The book's strongest quality is perhaps its capture of the fresh, alien slant; New York does have a strange tint here, filtered through the perceptions of the amazed and critical Mexicans." N. L. R.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 11 '39 220w

"Inevitable, apparently, to all such novels is the dash of Latin melodrama at the end. But the book is sharply written, sympathetic without being sentimental; and in conviction, if not in humor, it gains more than it suffers by comparison with Steinbeck's Tortilla Flat, its West Coast counterpart."
+ Time 33:78 Mr 13 '39 250w

"In outline the story may seem rather inconsequent, and in point of fact its uncertain pattern is a principal weakness. . . But the Spanish-Indian atmosphere, with its superstition, its nostalgic ritual, its scraps of gringo philosophy and its ingenuous politics, is caught very sympathetically, and there are minor character studies that illuminate the scene with comedy."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p575 O 7 '39 330w

KAUFMAN, GEORGE S., and HART, MOSS. The American way. 155p $2 Random house
812 (W) 39-27325

"A panorama of American life from the days of McKinley to the present time. [The play] tells the story of a German immigrant who rises to wealth and respect in his community, loses his son in the war, and his fortune later in attempting to support the bank of the man who had befriended him, is killed at a Nazi meeting, and finally is buried amid the tears of his townspeople." Commonweal

Booklist 35:287 My 1 '39
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p11 Jl 23 '39 60w
Reviewed by T. H. B. Robertson
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 22 '39 180w

"The American Way presents a pageant of national life that will have wide appeal, though to the few it may appear over-noisy and obvious. The warning of the dangers underlying our democratic ideals is also warranted." E. V. Wyatt + Cath World 148:728 Mr '39 470w (Dramatic criticism)
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 Je '39

"It tells the story very simply and perhaps naively, but it tells it with a wealth of sympathy, and in the early scenes with nostalgic longing. The ideal of 'The American Way' is the ideal of the America of Lincoln, though not of Mr. Browder or Mr. Fritz Kuhn—perhaps also not that of Mr. Heywood Broun. It is a sentimental America certainly, an America that never could completely exist except in the ideals of its lovers, but enough of it did exist and still exists to make us willing to live for it and if need be die for it." Grenville Vernon + Commonweal 29:441 F 10 '39 410w (Dramatic criticism)
Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch
Nation 148:157 F 4 '39 700w
Reviewed by John Anderson
Sat R of Lit 20:14 Ap 29 '39 300w

KAUFMAN, GEORGE S., and HART, MOSS. The man who came to dinner. 195p il $2 Random house
812 (W) 39-29456

A farce seemingly built up around the figure of a well-known dramatic critic. A visitor in an Ohio household falls on the doorstep and is taken in by the unsuspecting family. The forced guest takes over his host's house and proceeds to run it to suit himself.

Booklist 36:174 Ja 1 '40

"It is swift, hilarious, vulgar and positively savage in its burlesque of one of Broadway's best known figures. The skill with which the entrance of this figure is built up, the enormously comic things he is made to say, comic in their colossal rudeness, the barbed parody of this incredible creature's sentimental style when broadcasting, are all the work of dramatic craftsmen entirely masters of their medium and delighted with what they are doing." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p8 Ja 21 '40 90w
Reviewed by L. S. Wellstone
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 50w
Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 150:339 D '39 500w

"This is another Kaufman-Hart success. They seem to flow in as regularly as the tides, and if they are unimportant in the realm of literature or psychology, they are theatrical entertainment at its height." Grenville Vernon
+ Commonweal 31:47 N 3 '39 350w (Dramatic criticism)
Dramatic criticism by Stark Young
New Repub 100:368 N 1 '39 370w
Dramatic criticism by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts Mo 23:851 D '39 850w

KAULBACK, RONALD. Salween. 331p il maps $3.75 Harcourt [15s Hodder]
915.15 Salween river. Tibet—Description and travel (W) 39-12573

Account of an eighteen-months' expedition into the mountains of Tibet, taken by the author and John Hanbury-Tracy. The objective was to discover the source of the river Salween, the black river of Tibet. In this the explorers failed, but they did succeed in mapping a large expanse of new territory, and collected data on some Tibetan flora and fauna. An appendix gives a list of animals, birds, reptiles, and flowers they observed. Index.

Booklist 36:42 O 1 '39
Reviewed by John Patton
Books p2 Jl 30 '39 800w
Reviewed by R. A. Chace
Boston Transcript p13 Ag 4 '39 450w

"A cheerful and entertaining account of an arduous journey."
+ Christian Century 56:1025 Ag 23 '39 160w

"The writing is much less stiff in manner than most of its kind and the story is indeed very readable." V. S. Pritchett
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '39 40w

"The story's the thing, and it is told so vividly that every page is interesting. There is always some amusing sight or little adventure which is told with gusto, and we hardly take in at first the dangers and hardships of this journey or the courage and endurance of the author and his 'bearded pard.'" W. H. D. Rouse
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 24 '39 600w
Nature 144:1076 D 30 '39 300w
New Repub 99:343 Jl 26 '39 40w

"Ronald Kaulback's account of the expedition is a valuable contribution to geographical literature. But to the general reader the book will owe its interest to the intelligent and often amusing appreciation of the Tibetans to whom the expedition was variously indebted. Ronald Kaulback has studied the Tibetan language, and his own very practical aims have yet gained him 'the friendship of eminent monks and magicians. The photographs add greatly to the book's interest."
+ New Statesman & Nation 16:1102 D 24 '38 100w

" 'Salween,' while hardly comparable to Sven Hedin's monumental works on Asiatic exploration, is nevertheless highly informative, and is written in such an easygoing sort of way that the reader has the feeling that he actually shares in the adventure. For it is primarily as adventure that the author looks upon the long trek, and his zest in the lark is made contagious." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 23 '39 1000w

"Mr. Kaulback's temperament seems to be just right for this sort of work and his ability to present the story of his activities in an interesting manner makes his book easy and stimulating reading in spite of the geographical difficulties which will confront the lay reader." R. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:22 Ag 12 '39 230w

Reviewed by Michael Spender
Spec 162:62 Ja 13 '39 190w

Time 34:60 Jl 24 '39 350w

"Cheerful and extremely workmanlike narrative. . . Mr. Kaulback does not overwhelm us with his facts, but they are all there. The result is an authoritative and beguiling picture of a spectacular and unknown region of High Asia."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p770 D 3 '38 850w

Wis Lib Bul 35:164 O '39

KAVANAGH, PATRICK. The green fool. 350p $3 Harper [10s 6d Joseph, M]

B or 92 (W) 39-27139

This autobiography of a young Irish peasant-poet gives an engaging picture of the Irish countryside and life in a small village near Dublin.

Booklist 35:229 Mr 15 '39

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel
Books p15 F 19 '39 600w

Reviewed by Mary Manning
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 360w

"It is somewhat disconcerting to observe, by internal evidence, that the Catholic Faith means little more to this thoroughly indigenous Irishman (born and bred in a Catholic atmosphere) than a fond memory of 'Star of the Sea.' Patrick Kavanagh's 'Green Fool,' none other than himself, has written a pleasant and interesting book about one level of modern Eire." B. M. O'R.

+ — Cath World 149:120 Ap '39 340w

"He writes from the soil up, and without going into the pantheistic Celtic raptures of the townee. Here and there, a false literary note perhaps, but Mr. Kavanagh has it in himself to be one of the rustic masters. He is good enough as it is to make one tremble for his development." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 3 '38 200w

"[The] book does not pretend to be a novel and certainly it is eminently readable. But someone—if only the editor's copyreader—should have told him to not be so desperately cute and quaint in spots. Mr. Kavanagh writes good lyrical verse and has naturally not been able to keep some of the purple out of his prose. . . He has a fine ear for speech rhythms, as good an eye for significant detail, and on the rare occasions when he brings humor into his narrative, it is honest and real." Harry Sylvester

+ — Commonweal 29:586 Mr 17 '39 420w

"The method is realistic and objective, the author making no attempt to idealise either himself or those with whom he comes in contact, and if this leads now and again to a somewhat disconcerting passage it also creates an impression of truth." Forrest Reid

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 21 '38 330w

New Repub 98:147 Mr 8 '39 40w

" 'The Green Fool' has both beauty and sharpness in it. Much of it is written in dialogue which reads fast: the eye rapes the short-paragraphed page. The writing is fresh, strong and gay. Unlike the Irish peasant plays and novels, this autobiography poses no problems. It takes its tensions from the impact of life on a frank and unashamed mind. It is, in the dialect of its county, a domn fine book." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p4 F 26 '39 950w

New Yorker 15:84 F 18 '39 20w

Pratt p26 autumn '39

Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 25 '39 380w

"Mr. Kavanagh's lyrics are for the most part slight and conventional, easily enjoyed but almost as easily forgotten. His prose is distinctive, possessing great vitality and braced on every page by some memorable image or observation. The Green Fool is a book of so many qualities that it is difficult to write of it with restraint. It is, of its kind, almost perfect; and the kind is worthy. It is a book which no one who opens can fail to read with pleasure." Derek Verschoyle

+ Spec 160:1022 Je 3 '38 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 120w

Time 33:80 F 27 '39 140w

"Mr. Kavanagh writes with humour and vivacity of his early experiences as apprentice to the shoemaker's last, ploughman and farm labourer. His book is unequal and hasty at times in its conclusions. But he conveys vividly to us the sense of a traditional life which has not entirely passed."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p680 O 22 '38 450w

Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The chameleon. 299p $2 Dutton

39-2717

Mystery story.

"Mr. Keeler's tales strike some people as plain loony; others swear by him. If you find yourself at a loose end, why not look into the matter? One thing we can and will say—he's different." Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 12 '39 150w

"We still don't like them. This one starts in where 'The Mysterious Mr. I' stopped. And it left us just about as confused as the previous one." Marian Wiggin

— Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '39 70w

"Here are more adventures of the man of many names and many identities—the same man whose protean antics began in 'The Mysterious Mr I.' . . The interest of both stories lies almost entirely in the ingeniously goofy explanations Mr. Chameleon gives for each of his many identities. The two books represent Mr. Keeler at his best, if you like him; at his worst, if you don't." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 F 5 '39 240w

"You know what it's all about—maybe—on last page, and the rest is sheer—but, dammit, interesting—lunacy. Delirious."

Sat R of Lit 19:18 F 4 '39 40w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The man with the magic eardrums [Eng title: Magic eardrums]. 305p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Ward, Lock]

39-31047

Detective story.

Booklist 36:178 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p18 N 5 '39 90w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 50w

"There is enough puzzlement for a dozen mystery stories, but one coherent plot would be more to the purpose." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p28 N 5 '39 200w

Sat R of Lit 21:19 N 4 '39 40w

KEELER, H. S.—Continued

"A mystery surprise melodrama with novel as well as unpleasant elements, worked into a plot that is baffling and full of suspense. . . The plot is tangled, but exciting, and, granting the extravagant chain of incidents, is well and ingeniously developed."

Springf'd Republican p7e D 24 '39 120w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. Y. Cheung, business detective [Eng title: Cheung, detective]. 317p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d; 3s 6d Ward, Lock]

39-14612

Detective story.

"As usual, the author is more than generous with fantastic material, and his admirers will hardly grudge the extra four bits charged for the show." Will Cuppy

Books p14 Je 4 '39 80w

"Either Mr. Keeler is improving or we are catching on to his way of writing—we think it's the former—for we found this product quite entertaining. Mr. Keeler has obviously been reading Confucius. He also may have reviewed the Charlie Chan stories. Whatever he has done, his plot is infinitely cleared, his people don't float around in a fog of unreality, and he has even consented to throw in a perfectly plausible romance." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 200w

"In writing this story Mr. Keeler has drawn on an imagination that has few equals, and he has managed to curb his tendency to wordiness, with the result that 'Y. Cheung: Business Detective' is much more closely knit than have been most of his other tales." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p6 Je 4 '39 180w

"Typical Keeleranza of brain befogging erudition, fantasy, some (strangely) pretty sloppy writing, and info.-swiping device that is really unique."

Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 10 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 2 '39 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p558 Ag 27 '38 110w

KEELER, SISTER MARY JEROME. Catholic literary France from Verlaine to the present time. (Science and culture ser) 268p $2.75 Bruce pub.

840.9 French literature—History and criticism. Roman Catholic literature 38-21515

A volume of critical essays on the Catholic writers of modern France. Contents: Survey of the field; Paul Verlaine; Joris-Karl Huysmans; Paul Bourget; René Bazin; Henry Bordeaux; Émile Baumann; François Mauriac; Francis Jammes; Louis Mercier; Charles Péguy; Ernest Psichari; Louis Le Cardonnel; Paul Claudel; Henri Ghéon; Women writers. General bibliography. Index.

"Within the limits set by the author the book is a complete record and, as a piece of criticism, it is both sympathetic and honest."

+ Cath World 148:510 Ja '39 210w

" 'Catholic Literary France' is not a work of literary criticism but rather a chatty compendium of biographical bits, summaries of the plots of plays and novels, and quotations from various critics liberally sprinkled with warning against Gallic frankness. Yet it is well to have these writers called to our attention." E. S.

Commonweal 29:51 N 4 '38 80w

KEENAN, EDWARD P. Burden light. 134p il $1.75 Kenedy

"Father Keenan describes in fictional form the rectory-life of a supposedly typical week, in day-by-day form. One must confess that an amazing number of critical events are all packed into one seven-day period. . . 'The Burden Light' attacks no deep problems; it does illumine that combination of humanity and dedication and vocation on which are based the lives of run-of-the-mill, 'all-priests' of God." Commonweal

"A delightfully human story. Quickly, with a sure touch, Father Keenan reaches down into the hearts of his three clerical characters, and writes revealingly of their joys and sorrows, of the humor and pathos that is bound up with humdrum clerical duties. The book deserves a wide circle of readers, lay as well as clerical." R. A. Hewitt

+ America 60:503 F 25 '39 250w

Cath World 149:253 My '39 140w

"This altogether charming little book, in the tradition of 'My New Curate,' deserves an enthusiastic reception by those who like to read about clerical life. To call it a novel is, in a sense, inaccurate. . . It is written in a direct, pleasant, easy style. In our times it is truly refreshing to be forced to realize that there are such men—thousands of them—who go quietly, sometimes humorously and heroically, about their daily tasks with little thought of 'what the Swede intends, or what the French.' " H. B.

+ Commonweal 29:473 F 17 '39 180w

KEHL, GEORGE LOUIS. Principles of metallographic laboratory practice. 359p il $3.50 (21s) McGraw

669 Metallography 39-4033

"This work, by an instructor in Lehigh University, attempts to bridge the gap between theoretical physical metallurgy and its practical application in the laboratory. The statement of principles has in many instances been supplemented by explicit recommendations and precautions so that many important manipulations may be properly executed. The topics are: preparation of specimens for microscopic examination, etching of specimens, metallurgical microscopes and photomicrography, the principles of photography, macroscopic examination of metals, hardness testing, special metallographic tests, pyrometry and pryometric practice, and thermal analysis. There are numerous practical tables in the appendix." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by E. S. Johnson

Chem & Met Eng 46:431 Jl '39 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:25 Ap '39

KEIR, ALISSA. So you want to open a shop; with a foreword by Margaret Cuthbert. (Whittlesey house publication) 216p il $2 (10s) McGraw

658.8 Retail trade (W) 39-7744

After a preliminary chapter devoted to general advice on how to manage a small business enterprise, the bulk of the book contains chapters on: Tearoom; Gift shop; Beauty parlor; Bookshop; Flower shop; Knit shop; Dress shop; Interior decorator; Lingerie; Real estate; Hat shop. Index.

Booklist 35:302 My 15 '39

J Home Econ 31:482 S '39 50w

KEIR, DAVID LINDSAY. The constitutional history of modern Britain, 1485-1937. 568p $5 Van Nostrand [15s Black, A. & C]

342.42 Great Britain—Constitutional history. Great Britain—Politics and government [39-2486]

History of the government of England from the accession of Henry VII in 1485 to the year 1937. The author is a lecturer in English constitutional history at Oxford university. Index.

"Mr. Keir packs an amazing amount of information into his pages without sacrificing the clarity of his presentation. It is a book which bids fair to become the standard brief treatment on modern constitutional development." Edgar McInnis

+ Canadian Hist R 20:52 Mr '39 220w

"Keir's volume has quite remarkable qualities in sheer organization. Its proportions (granted the defensibility of very brief treatment of the fascinating, if relatively uninfluential, years 1640-60) are an almost arithmetically precise and justifiable allocation of space in terms of persistent relevance, and it is welcome to note that to Keir the consequences of parliamentary institutions in colonies are highly relevant. It is odd to find him ignoring completely the work of W. P. M. Kennedy, but thanks to the Cambridge History of the British Empire and the indefatigable Berriedale Keith, his facts about his country's empire, past and present, are more accurate than is usual among British historians. Incidentally, his knowledge of, and respect for, American scholarship are considerable." J. B. Brebner

+ Columbia Law R 39:1461 D '39 1000w

"Mr. Keir has given us a very careful sketch of British constitutional history from the Tudor dynasty. He has correlated his theme with the general current of political and social history, has summarized with skill and accuracy a very large number of relevant facts and arguments, and has provided a sound commentary on all the important constitutional developments of the period. It may perhaps be suggested that for the ordinary student of history the work would have been of still greater value if some less important detail had been sacrificed to find space for a fuller investigation of such questions as that of ship-money." A. B. Keith

+ — Eng Hist R 54:317 Ap '39 1450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 28 '39 500w

KEITH, MRS AGNES (NEWTON). Land below the wind; sketches by the author. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 371p map $3 Little

919.11 Borneo (W) 39-27988

The American wife of an English official in North Borneo is the author of this humorous account of life in that island. For more than four years after her marriage she struggled with servants, housekeeping, learning Malay, traveling in the jungle, and has emerged with good sportsmanship and humor intact.

"Humor, charm, an unpretentious wit—these are all qualities present in this book, which first of all must be called eminently readable on every page. For myself, I found it most clearly unusual, however, not in its pictures of Borneo nor even in its details of the author's life, interesting as these were, but in the passages which deal with animals. I am not naturally a great lover of animals, and yet I found all too short the chapter entitled 'Their Private Lives.' I think it quite unsurpassed in the literature of its subject, and I wish it could be made into a book." P. S. Buck

+ Atlantic D '39 750w

Booklist 36:131 D 1 '39

"Funny and sensible, untrammeled by any reticence, Agnes Newton Keith had a grand four years. The book she wrote about them won the $5,000 Atlantic Non-Fiction Prize Contest and deserves it." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p3 N 12 '39 1150w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 6 '40 600w

"The later chapters describe journeys in the jungle under conditions of hardship as often as pleasure, but everywhere Mrs. Keith was buoyant and light-hearted and gives us a charming record of places and people in Borneo. She can be informative but never boring, critical but never banal: she has the faculty of mingling sufficient trivial incidents with more serious narrative to lighten the whole and make a delightful volume of travel. There are several charming sketches and a useful map." R. N. R. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '39 270w

Reviewed by Beryl de Zoete

New Statesman & Nation 19:50 Ja 13 '40 220w

"This chronicle from the farthest wilds is a book of sustained and unaffected originality. It is marked by wit and warmth and curiosity rather than by excitement. There is nothing in it that is smug or stereotyped. It is grand reading from beginning to end." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 N 12 '39 1100w

"Her book is charming rather than informative, and loosely written, with an attractive, playful irony floating through its pages. The illustrations are home-made and very progressive-school-child, but may be ignored without any offence, I am sure, to Mrs. Keith." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:87 N 11 '39 700w

Pratt p19 winter '40

"In the latter part of the book the Mrs. Keith of the jungle expedition is not the person who, with laughter and courage, had taken hardships in her stride. . . Had this break in her bright armor occurred early, it would be understandable. The pity is that a book so beautifully high-spirited should, even for a moment, have slipped out of gear. But it is only an unfortunate bump in an otherwise smooth and delightful road. Mrs. Keith's book is charming and possesses that quality a good book must have; it brings us into intimate contact with the writer." Kathrene Pinkerton

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 N 11 '39 750w

"One of the year's most refreshing books of adventure and observation."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 12 '39 1100w

Time 34:88 N 13 '39 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p751 D 30 '39 900w

Wis Lib Bul 36:15 Ja '40

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Air workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 2d ed 56p il maps $1; school ed 80c Harper

629.13 Aeronautics (W) 39-27400

"One of a series called 'Picture Fact Books' which aims to give young readers a bird's-eye view of some of the more modern industries. This title, with a very brief text and with many pictorial charts and photographs, gives concise information about: Rise of Aviation, Air Workers, Training for Air Work, and Special Jobs for Pilots." Library J

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by M. F. Potter

Library J 64:614 Ag '39 70w

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. News workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper

070 Newspapers. Journalism (W) 39-27401

"One of the titles in the Picture Fact series, showing what goes into the making of a newspaper; the types of jobs available, training, possible advancement, and salary figures. Many pictorial charts and photographic illustrations." Library J

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

"Excellent vocational material. For junior and senior high school students." Marian Herr

+ Library J 64:564 Jl '39 50w

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Nurses at work [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 57p il $1; school ed 80c Harper

610.73 Nurses and nursing (W) 39-27402

"Interesting facts about nurses and their work in private practice, in doctors' offices, as visiting nurses, in public health work, in hospitals, or other institutions. Many photographs, tables of statistics, and graphs clarify the brief text." Library J

Booklist 35:335 Je 1 '39

Reviewed by E. D. Briggs

Library J 64:614 Ag '39 70w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Arizona. 278p $2 Harper

(W) 39-19899

Story of Arizona in Civil War days. The heroine is Phoebe Titus whose chief assets were a good business head, a steady hand on the trigger, and the ability to make excellent pies.

Booklist 36:44 O 1 '39

Books p8 Ag 13 '39 370w

"A neat, fast-moving story, spiced with the usual Kelland brand of sharp, humorous repartee." M. P. Johnson

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 290w

"This romance, odd and uncouth though it be, is pleasing and genuine; the story is packed with suspense, and the action is violent enough to satisfy the most avid thrill-seeker." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 12 '39 550w

"It is reported that Mr. Kelland has collected material for further stories of early Arizona. This comes under the heading of good news. Not in years, perhaps never, has he turned out a novel so sound and readable as this." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 27 '39 650w

"Good old hokum in cowboy dress, and highly entertaining in Mr Kelland's hands."

+ New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 60w

Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 12 '39 200w

Time 34:60 Ag 21 '39 250w

Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Skin deep. 268p $2 Harper

(W) 39-3294

Farcical tale of an earnest young astronomer who inherits from his aunt a fashionable beauty salon, Dimity Sprig, Inc., and for two years is forced to run it.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p9 Ja 22 '39 230w

"A lively and entertaining story. It has humor as sophisticated as the customers of Dimity Sprig, plus plenty of amiable satire on the beauty business. It is not a mystery story, but one plain murder and several fancy crimes are thrown in for good measure." Jean Arrowsmith

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 28 '39 180w

"With so much going on, the story skips all dull moments." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 22 '39 250w

Pratt p29 summer '39

"In spite of repeating a familiar formula Mr. Kelland manages to write an uproarious book. You will finish reading it very quickly and you will find you have been laughing immoderately most of the time." R. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 21 '39 140w

KELLER, JULIUS. Inns and outs; ed. by James R. Crowell. 250p $2.50 Putnam

B or 92 New York (city)—Hotels, restaurants, etc. 39-8102

Reminiscences of a New York restaurateur who in fifty years rose from a humble job of opening oysters in Fulton market to proprietorship of a noted inn on Long Island.

"Mr. Keller faced hunger before he heard about ethics, and when he finally did hear of ethics it is apparent that he was not greatly impressed. His tales of bribery, of money-making operations outside the law, of giving refuge to criminals, of using political pull to keep would-be reformers under control, are told simply and not as revelations or confessions. Behind them is merely the artless desire to be amusing, to be interesting, to tell the facts of how one poor boy made the long, hard climb up from the breadline to gain a handsome stake in our national prosperity. As such it is mildly reminiscent of Ring Lardner's shudder-story, 'Haircut.'" Robert van Gelder

N Y Times p8 Mr 19 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:96 Mr 11 '39 30w

KELLEY, FRANCIS CLEMENT, bp. The bishop jots it down; an autobiographical strain on memories. 333p il $3 Harper

B or 92 39-27547

Memoirs of the Roman Catholic bishop of Oklahoma City and Tulsa. He records his memories and experiences, both lay and ecclesiastical, with common sense and humor. Index.

Reviewed by D. M. O'Connell

America 61:237 Je 17 '39 700w

Booklist 35:363 Jl 1 '39

Reviewed by M. J. Ahern

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 8 '39 800w

"'Catholic bishops are human,' wrote Bishop Kelley when commenting on his elevation to the episcopacy. And that is the distinctive charm of his book; it is so very human." S. A. B.

+ Cath World 149:498 Jl '39 700w

"It is an informal, entertaining and edifying narrative."

+ Christian Century 56:677 My 24 '39 90w

"This is a delightful and completely absorbing book. Its happy candor reveals the distinctive, natural qualities of the author, and the published portrait seems inadequate compared to the unconscious self-delineation written in these memoirs." Barry Byrne

+ Commonweal 30:189 Je 9 '39 480w

"The Bishop has a shrewd mind, a good eye for character and a sense of humor."

New Repub 99:316 Jl 19 '39 50w

"It is an exceptionally fine piece of autobiographical writing." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 30 '39 950w

"A warm and sympathetic book."

+ New Yorker 15:100 My 27 '39 40w

Wis Lib Bul 35:145 Jl '39

KELLY, BLANCHE MARY. The sudden rose; an essay on the unity of art. 183p $2 Sheed

701 Esthetics. Art 39-8036

"In this book Dr. Kelly's thesis is that as art in general is merely 'the reduction of the meaning of life to terms of beauty' and as the greatest single expression of beauty is 'the Christian revelation as preserved and interpreted by the Catholic Church' that revelation is at the root of the greatest art, in whatever form that art may exist." (Cath World) Index.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 24 '39 110w

"Reading this book is an exhilarating experience, for it revivifies in one that sound instinct for beauty which is natural to all men but which tends to become deadened under the impact of that ubiquitous ugliness, vulgarity and indecency, which beat upon one from all points. . . Dr. Kelly disclaims artistry. This reviewer would remind her that rhetoric was one of the seven liberal arts, that the essence of rhetoric was expression of thought, that perfect expression of thought depends upon a judicious combination of sense and sound, of sensitive selection and delicacy of reticence, and that in all these things she satisfies the critical faculty, and that whether she knows it or not, likes it or not, artist she is and that is that." T. F. W.

+ Cath World 149:114 Ap '39 450w

Reviewed by J. E. Tobin

Commonweal 30:569 O 13 '39 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p15 Ja 13 '40 130w

KELLY, ERIC PHILBROOK. A girl who would be queen. See Hofmanowa, K.

KELLY, MRS FLORENCE (FINCH). Flowing stream. 571p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-27667

Reminiscences of an American woman journalist, who when she retired in 1936, had spent fifty-six years in newspaper work, thirty of them on the New York Times. Index.

Booklist 36:7 S '39

Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books p11 S 10 '39 800w

Reviewed by M. E. Prim
Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '39 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Feld
N Y Times p5 Ag 13 '39 1250w

"To the general reader, the book will be not only a vivid human document, but an inside story of American newspaper work and women's part in it during the epoch that began with the Civil War and ended with the World War. . . The conclusions that Mrs. Kelly has drawn from her long experience, she states in her last three chapters, critiques on 'Women in Journalism,' on 'Three Journalists of Genius' and on 'Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow in Newspaperdom.' The criticism in these chapters is that of a wise and intelligent woman, who has looked on the world with kindness and understanding, and whose life has been crammed as full of activity as it is possible for any woman's life to be." Mary Lee

+ Sat R of Lit 20:15 S 2 '39 750w

"In some respects Mrs Kelly is slightly dogmatic in opinions—as, for instance, as to the competence of particular editors, the ways of book publishers, or the standards and qualities of book reviews. Nevertheless, anything that she has to say deserves serious attention. As a personal narrative 'Flowing Years' has vividness and significance." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 12 '39 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 35:165 O '39

KELLY, WILLIAM ANTHONY, and KELLY, MRS MARGARET (REUTHER). Introductory child psychology. (Science and culture ser) 413p il $2.75 Bruce pub. [12s Coldwell]

136.7 Child study 38-12274

"This book, according to the authors' foreword, is intended primarily for use in Catholic colleges and teacher-training institutions, as well as for Catholic parents. Thus we observe that 'Catholic Philosophy has been appealed to throughout the volume in order to interpret the findings of modern psychology in the light of Catholic faith and tradition. The substantial foundation of the book is the principle that the child is a compound of body and soul, endowed with a free will, responsible for his actions, destined for eternal life. The spiritual, volitional, and moral training of the child has been emphasized thoroughly as the most important part of the parents' and teachers' task in guiding and directing the child.' " Am J Psychol

Reviewed by P. L. Whiteley
Am J Psychol 52:149 Ja '39 450w

"A book which is a vast collection of superficially covered topics, of definitions of technical terms never again referred to, of generalizations, of preaching, and of material presented in so brief a manner—such as the excerpts from the Stanford-Binet Scale—that it can only be confusing to the reader who is not already familiar with it." Ruth Byrns

— Commonweal 28:480 S 2 '38 360w

KELSEY, VERA, and OSBORNE, MRS LILLY DE JONGH. Four keys to Guatemala. 332p il maps $3 Funk

917.281 Guatemala. Indians of Central America (W) 39-27597

In this combination of guidebook and study the authors divide their work into three sections: Indian Guatemala; colonial Guatemala; and the republic of Guatemala. The first section is given over to a study of the Indian tribes and their customs, their costumes, arts, and crafts. The second section takes up the history of the country. Section three deals with Guatemala today, its economic outlook, arts, sports, etc. Contains guidebook information about some 200 cities and towns. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:378 Jl 15 '39

"Here is a useful and thoughtfully compiled book about a country which is steadily—and deservedly—gaining in popularity with Americans. . . But 'Four Keys to Guatemala' is more than a travel or a guidebook. It is a serious, well organized and not-too-heavy-to-hold volume, which may well be the standard encyclopedia on Guatemala for a number of years to come." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p9 Ag 13 '39 900w

"Perhaps every tourist who goes to Guatemala from now on will have a copy of 'Four Keys to Guatemala' in his trunk. And when he arrives in that exceedingly disappointing hole, undoubtedly he will feel that something's the matter with the place—it's so different and dirty and disorganized—so different from his literary guide. But unquestionably everyone likes to browse through such neutral volumes before going to bed. 'Four Keys to Guatemala' is just as good as Carpenter and Frank any day. I shouldn't be astonished if it became a non-fiction best-seller." E. B. Garside

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:384 Ja '40 10w

"The material is conveniently arranged and well indexed, so that the book has a high reference quotient. It also has some of the better characteristics of a guide-book and the photographs with which it is illustrated represent great technical skill and good taste. And, bearing the imprimatur of the Geographical and Historical Society of Guatemala, it may be accepted as authoritative." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 16 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 6 '39 1600w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams
Survey G 28:757 D '39 100w

KEMP, HUBERT RICHMOND, ed. Canadian marketing problems; ten essays. 152p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [11s 6d Oxford]

658.8 Marketing. Canada—Commerce [39-25981]

"The essays on various marketing topics contained in this volume are based upon material presented in a series of lectures given at the University of Toronto under the joint auspices of the Department of Political Economy (course in Commerce and Finance), the Department of University Extension, and the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto." (Introd) Contents: The commercial policy of Canada, by K. W. Taylor; The statistical basis of marketing policy, by Herbert Marshall; Marketing Canadian goods abroad, by H. Laureys; Retailing from the consumer's point of view, by Walter Thompson; Improving merchandising and marketing methods through research, by D. R. G. Cowan; New problems in advertising and steps towards their solution, by Henry King; Some aspects of resale price maintenance, by C. A. Curtis; The farm market, by John Martin; Recent developments in co-operative marketing, by J. E. Lattimer; Some aspects of the pricing problem, by H. R. Kemp. Index.

Reviewed by H. T. Hovde
Ann Am Acad 206:192 N '39 500w

"Of these ten essays, three (Mr. Laureys', Mr. Thompson's and Mr. Cowan's) will be of interest almost solely, and one (Mr. King's) mainly, to those professionally engaged in advertising and selling. Of greatest general interest is Mr. Taylor's essay on "The Commercial Policy of Canada.' It is not only a useful, concise and very well written survey of past policy and the reasons for it; it has also some very penetrating comments on the probable determining factors in future policy." E. A. Forsey

KEMP, H. R., ed.—Continued
Canadian Forum 19:124 Jl '39 1200w

KENNEDY, EDWARD D. Dividends to pay. 288p $2.50 Reynal
338.7 Corporations—Finance. Corporations—U.S. U.S.—Economic conditions
(W) 39-29704

Study of the "prosperity" era prior to 1929, the subsequent depression, the effects of the present price policies of the large corporations, etc. The author was formerly an editor of the financial section of Time, and has written a series of corporation stories for Fortune. Index.

Booklist 36:126 D 1 '39

"This book should be widely read. The regrettable carelessness at points is outweighed by keen understanding of the modern corporation. A sprightly style of writing makes this statistical exposition really enjoyable reading for even the most lay of laymen." Russ Nixon
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 750w

"This book is not a utopia or another New Deal. It is an analysis which has all the marks of sober, honest research, and ought to be read in preparation for the next political campaign."
+ Christian Century 56:1441 N 22 '39 150w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 149:556 N 18 '39 550w

"For several years [the author wrote] most of the financial section of Time. . . And since Mr. Kennedy, though he is no longer one of Mr. Luce's employees, got a large part of his information and understanding while he was, I feel that I am not stretching sources too far in calling 'Dividends to Pay' far and away the finest piece of work that has ever come out of Time, Inc." Fred Rodell
+ New Repub 100:374 N 1 '39 1550w

"This book has been acclaimed as extremely important by some reviewers because it presents a thesis that, if true, would admittedly be rather startling. The author's ominous 'discoveries' turn out to rest, however, merely on his own statistical errors. When these errors are duly corrected, the main thesis of the book disappears, and all that is left is the author's quite extraordinary bitterness when he discusses successful business men." Henry Hazlitt
— N Y Times p3 O 15 '39 1650w

"Mr. Kennedy has given a somewhat dramatic title to his book, which attempts to clarify the underlying causes of business depression and recovery. At many points the argument is presented with force and wit, and with a great appeal to the average reader; but, on the other hand, to the business man, who may be searching for a more sober analysis, much of the book will seem less convincing." Howard Sachs
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 N 25 '39 800w
Wis Lib Bul 36:12 Ja '40

KENNEDY, MARGARET (MRS DAVID DAVIES). The Midas touch. 530p $2.50 Random house [8s 6d Cassell]
(W) 39-27326

A study of two men, father and unrecognized son, both with unusual ability to turn all they touch to gold. The story, with many characters and scenes, follows roughly the younger man's adventures during his first year or so in England (he was born and bred in China)—his love affairs, his queer financial successes, his meeting with the great Corris Morgan, their growing intimacy, and finally their death together.

Booklist 35:290 My 1 '39

"There is a love-story in the novel. There is some compassion, a good deal of irony; there is always zest. This is an exceedingly interesting tale. It is written with finesse and coherence, and it has real originality and sagacity and is not lacking in suggestiveness." Frank Streight
+ Books p10 Ap 16 '39 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Ap '39

Reviewed by M. L. Elting
Forum 102:v Jl '39 80w

"Exercising a wise discretion, Miss Kennedy gives almost nothing of financial operations; she draws character firmly in a novel of some irregularity of pattern and diffusion of interest. The writing has both precision and liveliness, but despite that debonair son of a missionary Evan Jones I cannot feel that the people of this novel were worth writing about." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 N 8 '38 500w

"There's material for five novels here, all combined in one smooth, delightful plot. In the way of entertainment, there's everything a reader could want."
+ New Repub 98:388 My 3 '39 50w

"The Midas Touch is a crowded narrative with festoons of fairly credible characters and no particular distinction." Desmond Shawe-Taylor
— + New Statesman & Nation 16:736 N 5 '38 110w

"Margaret Kennedy's latest novel can scarcely fail to delight all who read it except those who insist that an author shall keep on duplicating an early success. It is, without a doubt, Miss Kennedy's finest work since 'The Constant Nymph,' but it is almost entirely different except in its supremely competent workmanship. While it is not to be described as a satire, it has satirical overtones. It is a mature book, but, though it is without the gay irresponsibility of youth, it is young in feeling and sympathy." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 9 '39 850w

"The catastrophic ending impresses me as forced and unsatisfactory, but the narrative movement of the rest of the book is as slick and well timed as a Jack Benny show. None of it's very probable, but you won't mind that, for the improbabilities are hidden miles deep under Miss Kennedy's wit, the subtle interlockings of the plot, the variety of her characterization, and the smooth surface of her civilized prose." Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 15:83 Ap 8 '39 270w
Pratt p28 autumn '39

"The book [is] one of the most successful diversions of the season. However, it leaves the reader with an uneasy feeling that it was meant to be something more, and that it does not succeed in reaching that goal, or even in precisely defining it." Basil Davenport
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ap 8 '39 390w

"Miss Kennedy's The Midas Touch, in spite of tragic developments, is essentially a comedy of modern London life—of exploiters and the exploited. With the exceptions of Tom Jekyll and his wife, the characters are a pretty worthless lot, and Tom only comes in towards the end. But they are presented with a liveliness that atones for much. Particularly good is the portrait of Mrs. Carter Blake, the professional clairvoyante." Forrest Reid
+ — Spec 161:824 N 11 '38 160w

"Miss Kennedy's is accomplished craftsmanship. There are some very entertaining passages, with here and there a sprightly acidity of tone, and the Lydia episode is deftly worked out and is not wanting in pathos."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p713 N 5 '38 370w

KENNEDY, MRS RUTH WEDGWOOD. Alesso Baldovinetti; a critical and historical study. 259p il $15 Yale univ. press [67s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Baldovinetti, Alesso 39-2438

Critical and historical study of the life and works of a minor Florentine painter of the fifteenth century. Index.

Reviewed by W. G. Constable

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 22 '39 700w

"Mrs. Kennedy's book is more than a satisfactory monograph on Alesso Baldovinetti, for it offers a most penetrating general study of Florentine painting during the years from 1440 to the end of the quattro-cento. For the first time we have a comprehensive tracing of the career of Domenico Veneziano . . . and that of his three great pupils, Piero della Francesca, Andrea dal Castagno and Baldovinetti." Justin O'Brien

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 5 '39 1200w

"This book is probably the most beautiful of the year; certainly it sets a new standard for American publications on art. The splendid make-up of the volume introduces some novelties, such as the use of large numbers for notes, and running titles at the head of each page. A happy combination of superb photographs, excellent engravings, and perfect paper seems to have solved the difficult question of illustrating this kind of book. The number of illustrations is prodigal. . . The writing is lucid and filled with apt phrases and illuminating comparisons with modern painters. While the book is scholarly in every sense of the word, it might well interest the layman in its exposition of the art historian's methods, which are more than a little akin to those of the writer of scientific detective stories. It would be well if the American public had more books of this quality." G. H. Huntley

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Mr 11 '39 380w

KENT, MRS LOUISE (ANDREWS). Paul Revere square. 366p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 39-24450

Modern love story with the Beacon Hill section of Boston and the hills of Vermont for localities. It is the story of the poor young cousin from the country who inherited the family money, and the complications which followed.

Booklist 36:112 N 15 '39

"It is avowedly and unashamedly a light novel, and, though some of the caricatures may cause a bit of wincing, no fundamental sentiment need cause even a Bostonian shudder. In the end selfishness and even light-mindedness are left in the lurch and virtue is rewarded." Mary Ross

+ Books p12 O 8 '39 600w

"As Bostonian as Symphony on Friday afternoon, or fish-balls for Sunday breakfast; as Vermontese as maple sugar, green hills, and white barns—that's 'Paul Revere Square.' If you like comparisons, Mrs. Kent is a neat cross between Ann Bridge and Angela Thirkell. Her Beacon Hill alone will make her novel obligatory for many New Englanders. She has such a warm appreciation of true aristocracy in places and people; such awareness for what is sham. Her amused tolerance of traditions and customs; her wholesome love of the beautiful; and her gift. for deft characterization, make her writing tremendously pleasing." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 30 '39 900w

"Although the Princess Lobanov and sundry others of Nicholas Joceleyn's predatory relatives are exposed by a pen dipped in acid, Diana and all the rest make a gay and intelligent group whom it is a pleasure to know. The Boston background is exceptionally well portrayed, as are the few scenes laid in Vermont; but most of the characters, although typical of the best in each of these locales, are to be found in every community. They possess a fundamental goodness and gentleness which cannot fail to arouse affection for them on the part of the reader. Authors, like Louise Andrews Kent, who have this talent for creating in fiction warm and living individuals, surely merit enthusiastic response." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 4 '39 600w

"The novel is amusing at times, has some really charming descriptions of Vermont at various seasons, and an entertaining account of a race on skis which brings about the downfall, materially and metaphorically, of the Bostonian the author most dislikes." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p23 O 8 '39 500w

"An agreeable modern story. Mrs. Kent looks on the bright side of Vermont and is charitable toward the foibles of the Hub."

+ New Yorker 15:77 O 7 '39 30w

" 'Paul Revere Square' is a pretty romance. Except for the ease with which its characters arrive at Tuckerman's Ravine, it might be almost any city instead of Boston. The Vermont scenes are truer. As one follows young skiers from Boston to the Hinterland, one seems to emerge from unreality into reality." M. L.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 O 21 '39 250w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 360w

Wis Lib Bul 35:216 D '39

KENT, MADELEINE. I married a German. 349p $3 Harper [12s 6d Allen, G]

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Social life and customs (W) 39-27197

An Englishwoman who married a German socialist describes her five years in Germany from 1931. She started out with a strong leaning toward German culture, which was gradually wrested from her as she viewed the struggles of her friends against the rising tide of Nazidom.

Booklist 35:249 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by Iris Barry

Books p3 Mr 5 '39 750w

Christian Century 56:387 Mr 22 '39 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39

"One of the most convincing accounts of life in contemporary Germany so far published. . . For the sociologist the earlier chapters in which the author describes from the point of view of a normal day-to-day observer the processes of political disintegration which paved the way for Hitlerism are perhaps the most revealing." Mary Stocks

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 16 '38 330w

Reviewed by Mildred Gilman

New Repub 98:229 Mr 29 '39 330w

Reviewed by Alan Pryce-Jones

New Statesman & Nation 17:140 Ja 28 '39 650w

"Madeleine Kent's book does not even touch the level on which Mrs. Waln's prose moves along serenely. Yet it is in some ways just as memorable. One might term it a study in the collapse of the insubstantial; and, of course, it lacks any reference to forces of goodness or beauty upon which a new Germany might some time conceivably be built. . . When she speaks of the purge of 1934, in a chapter likely to retain value as a historical record, it is primarily to say that the massacre left the Germans limp and resigned. This chapter, like the book as a whole, is written with acrid power." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 5 '39 650w

"A stronger and more persuasive version of the anti-Nazi message contained in Nora Waln's recent 'Reaching for the Stars.' "

New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 40w

— Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 11 '39 380w

"The veracity of her account is astonishing—every detail is so recognisable to anyone who has tasted the amenities of life in a German middle-class family. . . For a sensitive, independent and vivid picture of what living in Germany is like today, one could not do better than read this book. It ought to be translated into every European language, particularly German, and prescribed for their Christmas reading to every member of the Cabinet." A. L. Rowse

KENT, MADELEINE—Continued
+ Spec 161:1012 D 9 '38 750w

"Her bitter resentment is not offensive, it does not reveal a narrow hostility but rather the anger of a disappointed friend. Her book does not end on a hopeful note, but there is a heartening quality in this denunciation of terror, unfair trials and inhuman laws. This bitter testimonial can produce in the reader as wholesome a reaction as any 'emotion recollected in tranquillity.'" A. M. Ascoli
+ Survey G 28:347 My '39 290w

"The author of this very interesting and unusual book has writing talent and a gift of observation, combined with a readiness to generalize about Germany in almost Teutonic fashion."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p750 N 26 '38 490w
Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

KENT, ROCKWELL, ed. World-famous paintings; critical material [ed] with the assistance of Robert Heller. 100 pl $2.95; lea'tte $3.95 Wise
759 Paintings (W) 40-2299

Reproductions in color of one hundred famous paintings, with editorial comment on each. A listing of the principal works of the artist accompanies each picture. Alphabetical index of pictures.

Booklist 36:234 F 15 '40

"The reproductions, all in color, are not uniformly persuasive but they afford reasonable versions of the pictures chosen and constitute a highly interesting picture gallery. Considering its inexpensiveness the book is surprisingly well made. . . In his preface Mr. Kent is characteristically pungent." Royal Cortissoz
+ — Books p3 D 17 '39 200w

"A handsome volume. . . Mr. Kent was assisted in the commentary which accompanies the pictures by Robert Heller. They avoid emphasis upon personal likings in the course of their larger task of conveying useful information, yet their descriptions are never dry in their objectiveness. They know that the essence of art resides in intangibles, and succeed in giving intimations of those qualities that can never be reduced to factual terms." E. C. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 13 '40 450w

"This rather casual selection of generally poor color prints from a hundred more or less well-known paintings would seem merely a bargain for an unfastidious art-lover, were it not for Rockwell Kent's introduction and running commentary on the plates. . . Mr. Kent carries off his task as commentator with gusto, providing a varied and always interesting continuous performance." F. J. M., Jr.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:21 Ja 13 '40 300w

"An informative and critical commentary accompanies the pictures. It was written by Robert Heller and Mr Kent, and parts of it have a laconic and suggestive quality, though the comment at times deals more with the subject or with social history or with psychology than with the painting itself. English painters are extensively represented, and Americans, apart from Whistler and Sargent, meagerly."
Springf'd Republican p10 D 21 '39 220w

KENT, RYLAND. After this. 245p $2.50 Harper 39-29721

An allegorical fantasy. One bright Sunday afternoon in the middle of the Indian ocean, a steamship is blown up and all souls aboard are lost. The story follows a number of them, in groups of two or three, in their adventures after death, led by the mysterious Guide, a Hindu doctor of philosophy.

"As a presentation of the inner problems of the soul, the task of religion in men's hearts, the book has insight. But the vehicle, or framework, of the narrative is unfortunate." J. H. Holmes
+ — Books p12 O 29 '39 550w

"The author has handled his difficult task with great skill. The story is really interesting, and in spots amusing. (Amusing, that is, when he means it to be amusing; never amusing because absurd.) The difficulty is to give sufficient plausibility to the rather naturalistic earthly setting of the celestial life." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 56:1378 N 8 '39 550w
Reviewed by G. F. Taylor
Churchman 153:39 D 1 '39 50w

"It is much easier to start one of these tours de force of the imagination than to finish it—so Mark Twain and many others must have learned. Ryland Kent at least is in good company if the end of his story does not match its beginning. The note of instruction slowly but completely gains dominance over the story itself. Hannah More might have been startled by Ryland Kent's methods. She would have understood his intentions perfectly, and probably she would have sympathized with them." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Times p18 N 12 '39 700w

KENYON, MRS JOSEPHINE (HEMENWAY). Healthy babies are happy babies; a complete handbook for modern mothers. (Atlantic monthly press bk) rev ed 330p $1.50 Little 649.1 Infants—Care and hygiene. Children—Care and hygiene 38-27937

Revised edition of an authoritative handbook for young mothers on the care, health, feeding, and training of children during their first three years. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934.

Booklist 35:101 N 15 '38

"A valuable handbook, as it follows closely and painstakingly each progressive step, not only in the birth and the beginning of life for the child, and his care and training to the end of the third year, but also the pregnancy period of the mother."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 21 '39 50w
J Home Econ 31:185 Mr '39 40w

KENYON, THEDA. Scarlet Anne. 312p $2 Doubleday
811 Hutchinson, Mrs Anne (Marbury)—Poetry (W) 39-3794

The heroine of this long narrative poem in blank verse is Mistress Anne Hutchinson of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, Puritan mystic and feminist, who fought for freedom of speech and religious belief.

Booklist 35:248 Ap 1 '39
Reviewed by R. P. T. Coffin
Books p10 Ap 23 '39 750w

"It is not the business of novelist or poet to be literally accurate, and though some fault might be found with Miss Kenyon's interpretation of this historical conflict, she is entitled to the rights and privileges of imaginative literature. Anne is quite a triumphant figure, but Miss Kenyon's sympathies are so thoroughly enlisted on her side that the opposition is made unattractive." H. M. Jones
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ja 28 '39 1000w

"Miss Kenyon is a scholar in poetry, a teacher of poetry appreciation. She uses varied forms intelligently, but it has taken feeling as well as disciplined intelligence to maintain so well the beauty and the urgency of so long a poem." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 8 '39 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Ap '39
Forum 101:240 Ap '39 60w

Reviewed by Austin Warren
New Eng Q 12:796 D '39 800w

"Already a scholar and lyric poet of standing, this more ambitious piece of sustained poetry proves Miss Kenyon a scholar and poet in a wider field. . . The poem is finely dramatic: the lyrics scattered through it have an authentic old English ballad charm. Anne, with her lovers and haters and followers, is a clearly drawn and very moving figure. The poem's pattern is excellently woven against a background of sound, careful scholarship and research." Margaret Widdemer

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 29 '39 850w

Reviewed by Christopher La Farge
Sat R of Lit 20:18 Ag 19 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 13 '39 390w

KEPPLER, VICTOR. Life of color photography; the eighth art; with a foreword by Bruce Barton. 266p col pl $10; de luxe ed $12.50 Morrow

772 Color photography. Photography, Commercial 39-759

"A magnificent large volume full of historical and technical data, including up-to-the-minute news on the most recent color processes. Thirty-one excellent color plates." New Yorker

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 25 '39 600w
New Yorker 14:55 Ja 7 '39 30w

"There is a useful chapter giving working directions for making carbro prints, illustrated by colour reproductions showing nine different steps in the process. The book should be of particular interest to commercial and portrait photographers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Jl 15 '39 240w

KERBY, PHILIP. The victory of television. 120p il $1 Harper

621.388 Television (W) 39-29457

Popular account of the growth and development of television, up to the present, describing technical achievements, uses, and commercial possibilities. Index.

Booklist 36:170 Ja 1 '40
+ N Y Times p28 D 10 '39 290w

KERCHNER, RUSSELL MARION, and CORCORAN, GEORGE FRANCIS. Alternating-current circuits. 510p $4.75 Wiley [23s 6d Chapman]

621.3 Electric currents, Alternating. Electric circuits (W) 38-25670

"This book is primarily written as a textbook for courses in alternating-current circuits as offered to junior electrical engineering students by most engineering colleges. It is assumed that the student has finished the usual courses in differential and integral calculus, or at least has some knowledge of differentiation and integration. An endeavor has been made to arrange the material in a logical sequence so as to lead the student gradually from the simple to the more complex analyses in alternating-current circuits." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 35:80 N 1 '38

" 'This is a very useful book indeed on a rather hackneyed subject, and it may be described in such terms because while its scope is broadly that of many other books on the subject of a. c. currents, the treatment is particularly clear and orderly and there is a nice co-ordination of text, mathematics and illustrations which cannot fail to appeal to students.' "

+ N Y New Tech Bks 23:54 O '38

KERN, MRS CORINNE (JOHNSON). Nursing through the years. 340p $2.50 Dutton

610.73 Nurses and nursing (W) 39-15807

Reminiscences of a trained nurse who completed her training in 1899. Each chapter is the story of a case in her long career of nursing.

"The story is simply and sincerely told and will interest lay readers as well as professional members." Margaret Strong

+ Am J Pub Health 29:1165 O '39 320w
Books p14 Je 25 '39 250w

"These are incidents of a nurse's observation, glimpses of lives that she has touched. They are varied, human and interesting. . . The note of sheer human nature, as well as human interest, is sympathetically struck throughout the book."

+ N Y Times p11 S 17 '39 280w

"She writes easily and freely—at times vividly. . . But to the reader 'in the know,' most of her tales are too highly seasoned to carry conviction. Indeed her slick use of sentimental clichés and the atmosphere of melodrama with which she surrounds every incident, suggest a probation period in the pulp factories from which the author has not quite graduated. It is doubtful if the modern trained nurse will approve this method of dramatizing her profession. But undoubtedly the book will find a large audience among the many who are irresistibly drawn to every romanticized version of hospitals, sickness, and death." M. S. U. (M.D.)

— + Sat R of Lit 20:19 Je 24 '39 200w
Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 27 '39 550w

KERR, ANNIE B. So gracious is the time; il. by Kathleen Voute. 90p $1.25 Womans press

Christmas stories 38-33406

Stories showing the Christmas customs of nine nationalities represented in the United States.

Churchman 152:4 D 15 '38 10w

"This book is likely to delight any youngster and provide his elders with suggestions for the celebration of the happy season."

+ J Home Econ 31:401 Je '39 50w

KESTEN, HERMANN. Children of Guernica [tr. by Geoffrey Dunlop]. 268p $2.50 Alliance bk. [7s 6d Routledge]

39-10125

Guernica in the Basque country of Spain is the scene of the first part of the story. A peace-loving pharmacist, his wife, their seven children, and their father's brother, are huddled together during an air raid. When the raid is over, the father and several of the children are dead. The story continues with the adventures in France of the remaining members of the family.

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh
Books p8 Ap 9 '39 650w

Reviewed by Patricia Palmer
Canadian Forum 19:127 Jl '39 480w
Christian Century 56:676 My 24 '39 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

"Hermann Kesten, author of several brilliant novels and literary essays, often seems to laugh about serious matters. Sometimes the reader almost gets the impression that the author approves of Uncle Pablo's cynical ideals. But in reality Kesten is a moralist disguised as a grim joker. His book is neither bitter nor frivolous; is it frivolous to notice the grotesque elements in a tragedy? There are plenty of reasons, these days, to cry about human beings, and to laugh at them." Klaus Mann

+ Nation 148:505 Ap 29 '39 650w

"Herr Kesten has somehow missed fire, and what was obviously intended to be a coherent tragedy turns out no more than an excellent variety programme of the old-fashioned kind. . . But whatever its intentions, Children of Guernica makes admirable entertainment; the icing is so sparkling we can well ignore the cake." John Mair

KESTEN, HERMANN—Continued

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:328 Mr 4 '39 410w

"No doubt there are incidents in 'Children of Guernica' which will irritate some readers as a surrealist painting might. Often it stops just short of absurdity. Uncle Pablo is an incredible character if you try to understand him literally, and the rape of Innozentia as described is an incredible scene. Neither of them, however, fails of its intention. The reader, whether he likes the novel or not, probably will be a long time forgetting Carlos." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 16 '39 650w

"The first two-thirds of this is a closely knit, poignant, and fast-moving story. . . After that it breaks up a little, but if you want to feel air raids in your bones, better read it."

+ — New Yorker 15:78 Ap 1 '39 50w

Reviewed by James Benét

Sat R of Lit 19:13 Ap 22 '39 400w

"I thought it poor stuff, but there is a graphic description of an air-raid which may possess a topical interest. . . I cannot think Children of Guernica was worth translating, or indeed ever would have been translated but for the present European muddle." Forrest Reid

— + Spec 162:418 Mr 10 '39 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 7 '39 550w

Time 33:92 Ap 17 '39 90w

"As a novel, this story just tails away, and some may condemn it accordingly. But then in life itself so much has little appreciable beginning or ending that Herr Kesten may be forgiven when his matter is so moving and unusual, if not in itself, at least in the telling. The confusion and stupidities of the civil war are convincingly described, the short character sketch of Herr Perkonigg is magnificent, while the translation is moderately good."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p191 Ap 1 '39 270w

KETCHUM, PHILIP. Death in the night. 257p $2 Phoenix

Detective story.

"We can't put our finger on the spot, but at some point he overdoes himself and the whole thing becomes unbelievable. The action all occurs in the night, attended by the usual scarey shadows and cries. There are boats blazing on a bottomless lake, secret passages and a conclusion which is definitely a gyp for the reader." Marian Wiggin

— Boston Transcript p3 Je 17 '39 70w

"This is not a Grade A mystery—not by some lengths—but it will do to pass an idle hour or two when there is nothing better to read." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p7 Je 11 '39 90w

Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 10 '39 40w

KEUN, ODETTE. I think aloud in America. 337p $3 (12s 6d) Longmans

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American [39-6466]

The author, bored and bowed down with the Fascism, Communism, and Nazism of Europe, set her hopes upon America. Once in this country she found some of her hopes dashed; others thoroly vindicated. In her witty account of her visit she writes of her findings, of her judgments on our civilization, and ends on a note of hope.

Reviewed by R. C. Feld

Books p16 Mr 26 '39 1250w

Reviewed by W. C. Brown

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 1 '39 270w

"It is a provocative and stimulating book, particularly in its well-founded strictures on the uncritical myths whereby many Americans contrive to see themselves upside down and inside out. Her criticisms are rapid, impatient, often flamboyant, but by no means superficial. The few pages on American education, for example, are worth many a ponderous volume." L. A. MacKay

+ Canadian Forum 19:97 Je '39 350w

"I doubt if Miss Odette Keun will gain the votes of many Americans, except the intelligent few, for her book is the most brilliant analysis of that country which I have read for years. It is true that she does not touch upon the Middle West or the coast, but her analysis of the Atlantic seaboard is superb. She brought with her a matchless equipment for looking at the American scene. A feminine eye, a love of humanity, a Latin ancestry, and a wide cosmopolitan knowledge have gone to the making of Miss Keun, analyst. . . Everyone who is interested in the Great New World must read Miss Keun's book." A. G. Macdonell

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 3 '39 750w

"To my mind this is a stimulating and very honest book." Norah Hoult

+ Nation 149:178 Ag 12 '39 550w

"Inconsistent, monotonously vituperative and often trivial, this 349-page treatise on the character of New York, Washington and the American people nevertheless contains information of value."

New Statesman & Nation 17:514 Ap 1 '39 300w

"One closes this book without being finished with it. It has gone 'ping' at us—like some modern pictures—for its salient points are so uncluttered by tradition. Its highly colored defects are the qualities which will excite universal controversy at the dinner table and stimulate the circulation of the sluggishly complacent." N. S. Colby

N Y Times p4 Ap 9 '39 1300w

Pratt p23 autumn '39

"Odette Keun has fluency, verve, and dauntless courage in pronouncing judgment on what she observes, and as a result her book is generally interesting and sometimes affronting. She has a provoking habit of communing with herself through the medium of an imaginary character with whom she debates the pros and cons of her own attitudes and beliefs, and she has no hesitations as to the correctness of the conclusions at which she arrives." A. L.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 22 '39 230w

"Madame Keun has achieved the miracle of writing a book on America that is devastatingly frank and critical, indeed harshly critical, while at the same time making plain her real affection and admiration for the American people. Only in her account of New York does she reverse the proportions of the pleasant and the unpleasant, her dislike of that city even leading her to statistical extravagances. . . Yet when most unkind, if not unjust, Madame Keun is still a shrewd observer and critic. . . If the severity of the attacks against American women and American politicians seems excessive, it is only just to say that Madame Keun can praise with as much vigour and skill as she can condemn." D. W. Brogan

+ — Spec 162:270 F 17 '39 800w

"As a whole, Mrs Keun's reasoning is keener than her observation. If she had stopped to trace all phenomena back to their causes, she would have explained some things she dislikes—sleeping cars, for instance—instead of merely complaining about them. To be sure, she reasons almost excessively about the way in which Americans have 'ruined' their country by ruthlessly exploiting its soil and natural resources. But the consequent 'unsightliness' is surely somewhat exaggerated in extent."

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 24 '39 1000w

"It is, most of this, rather childish, if occasionally amusing. But it cannot disguise the fact that Miss Keun is a woman of both experience and perception. She has insight, however often her shudders of anger may force it out of focus."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p109 F 18 '39 600w

KEVIN, J. C. G., ed. Some Australians take stock [essays]. 241p il maps $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

330.994 Australia—Economic conditions. Australia—Politics and government 39-16539

"Ten contributors (nine born in Australia) here competently discuss questions of concern to that country. Nearly all exemplify Australia's tendency to export her talent, deplored by Mr. J. V. Connolly, who urges the arrest of the process by generous emoluments at home." Manchester Guardian

Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '39 310w

"Should be placed on the 'must' list of all who wish to understand what is happening in Australia today—and yesterday! While the volume . . . is ordered according to no carefully considered plan it is nevertheless a most valuable compilation." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 2 '39 300w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). The great tradition. 477p il $2.50 Messner [8s 6d Eyre]

(W) 39-31789

Story of a German-American in post-war Germany and Europe. Hans Christian Marlowe von Hohenlohe seeks to follow the "great tradition" of his aristocratic German fathers, but when the true nature of Hitlerism is revealed to him, he finally is forced to turn to the tradition of his American mother-land.

"Apart from its sheer narrative and human values, 'The Great Tradition' is highly interesting as a fictional form in which the various elements of Europe—an ideological evolution and dissolution are allowed to speak in their own defense. The followers of Hitler and the followers of Franco, the Jews and the Catholics, the Communists, the aristocrats of Andalusia and the resolute neutrals of Holland—they all contribute to the debate which is a sort of obbligato to the chaos of events." Lisle Bell
+ Books p12 N 19 '39 550w

Reviewed by Regina Madden
Boston Transcript p2 N 25 '39 280w

"Mrs. Keyes is a serenely competent storyteller, and she documents sparingly but significantly." Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '39 340w

"For all its moments of interest and excitement, 'The Great Tradition' is at best a little painful. That it is conscientiously documented, seriously intended, is true, but, alas! does not help." E. H. Walton
— + N Y Times p7 N 12 '39 750w
Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 9 '39 240w

"There is excellent story-telling in this novel, and the author knows the life of East Prussia well enough to make her picture of Schönplatz absorbing and convincing. But a drastic reduction in the dialogues and descriptions of the Spanish scenes would have saved the story from dragging out to an unwieldy length."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p627 O 28 '39 360w

KEYES, MRS HELEN (JOHNSON). Conquering tomorrow. 131p $1.50 (5s) Appleton-Century

170 Woman—Social and moral questions. Middle age. Success 39-27327

A little book of inspirational advice dedicated to the "fifteen million women in the United States who are forty-five years old and older." Partial contents: Patterns for happiness; Keeping up with contemporary thought; Recovering from youth; How important are happiness and health? Defeating failure; Bending in the wind.

Booklist 35:283 My 1 '39
Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Jl 15 '39 80w
Wis Lib Bul 35:98 My '39

KIELY, MARY FRANCES. O'Donel of destiny; pictures by Victor Dowling. 227p $2 Oxford

B or 92 O'Donel, Hugh Roe (W) 39-23667

The O'Donel of this fictionized biography for young readers is Hugh Roe O'Donel, godson of King Philip of Spain, in the time of Queen Elizabeth. According to an ancient prophecy, Hugh was to lead the clans of Ireland in a troubled time. Twice he was captured and imprisoned in Dublin castle, and twice he escaped, and was crowned King of Ireland for a few years. He finally died in Spain where he had gone to ask help.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

"Based upon a sound foundation of historical fact, it is enlivened so skillfully by the play of imagination in dialogue and description, that the interest of the young reader will never flag. A word of praise may well be added for the illustrations by Victor Dowling, numerous, picturesque and alive."
+ Cath World 150:379 D '39 80w

"Excellent as have been some of the previously published stories about this Irish prince, in this new book we have a rarely fine tale of romance and chivalry, and a vivid addition to historical material of Elizabethan times. The illustrations in black and white, by Victor Dowling, strongly in the tradition of Howard Pyle, seem completely harmonious with the medieval setting." M. A. Whitney
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 28 '39 200w

"Here is a book for boys and girls that arouses our jealousy. We wish Miss Kiely had put the results of her intelligent research into a full-sized biography. As it stands her story is a contribution both to juvenalia and Irish History; her prose has rhythm and her adjectives can turn a sentence into a picture." E. V. Wyatt
+ Commonweal 30:482 S 15 '39 300w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
Commonweal 31:132 D 1 '39 20w

"Careful historical study went into this well-made biography, but it is somehow less gripping than Jeannette Nolen's Red Hugh of Ireland, which is in less attractive format." A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 15:303 S '39 80w

"Mary Kiely has accomplished for Irish history a little of what Eric Kelly has done for Polish. There is the same high enthusiasm for the past of a gallant country and the same ability to picture the clank of armor and the wave of banner. But here is a book of biography rather than a book of fiction, a biography that ten- and twelve-year-old boys will read much as they do their adventure stories." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 100w

KIERKEGAARD, SØREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseuds). Fear and trembling; a dialectical lyric; tr. from the Danish by Robert Payne. 192p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

198.9 39-23889

"Briefly the book may be described as an extended meditation of the philosophical, ethical, and religious problems presented by the story of the temptation of Abraham to sacrifice Isaac." Manchester Guardian

KIERKEGAARD, S. A.—Continued

"An exceedingly provocative and readable book."

+ Christian Century 56:825 Je 28 '39 270w

Reviewed by Mother Mary Maude
Living Church 102:12 Ja 3 '40 450w
Manchester Guardian p8 Je 6 '39 600w

"The highest passion of mankind is faith; the greatest urge to sensible action is belief. Though completed ninety-six years ago, this book is indispensable today, for it is a matchless discussion of these two related virtues: faith and belief." A. W. Porterfield

+ N Y Times p15 Je 25 '39 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p292 My 20 '39 240w

KIERKEGAARD, SØREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseuds). Journals of Søren Kierkegaard: a selection; ed. and tr. by Alexander Dru. 603p $7 (25s) Oxford

B or 92 [39-3108]

"With this volume the Oxford Press has launched a definitive translation of Kierkegaard's works under the general care of Mr. Alexander Dru, a careful and exact scholar who has not only learned Danish for this special purpose, but who is evidently prepared to devote years of toil to this arduous and uneconomic task. He has begun in the best possible way—with a comprehensive selection from the Journals which, in the definitive Danish edition, occupy the best part of ten volumes. A selection—it amounts to six hundred pages—was inevitable; the original Journals contain, not only a quantity of unessential matter, but many repetitions. As selected by Mr. Dru, they now form a closely connected and continuously interesting record of the course of Kierkegaard's life and the development of his ideas." Spec

---

Reviewed by L. M. Hollander
Boston Transcript p1 My 27 '39 360w

"He who would know the soul of Kierkegaard must read these Journals. A flaming spirit that had passed through torments—partly of his own making but nonetheless real—pours forth his inmost thoughts and feelings, his interpretations of his own experience, his search for truth, his exhortations to the way of self-denial. The issue is not an orderly and consistent system of thought. He does not say, This is the truth, but, This is the path which led me to my truth; if you follow it you will find your truth." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:609 My 10 '39 750w

"The translation is in excellent English, and Mr. Dru has performed an important service in rendering accessible in our language so material a part of the writings of Kierkegaard." D. S. Miller

+ Churchman 153:16 Mr 1 '39 200w

Reviewed by Mother Mary Maude
Living Church 101:8 N 8 '39 1050w

"Mr. Dru's admirable work of selection follows the German edition of Theodor Haecker. His English is lucid, and though the opacity of Kierkegaard's thought cannot but make the reading of this book a serious task at times, it is one which the translator has very remarkably lightened. Apart from taking us through every phase of the poet's religious development, this selection also shows what a fine novelist Kierkegaard might have been, had his preoccupation been slightly different. The index is important in that it elucidates the esoteric meanings of most of Kierkegaard's favourite words." Edward Sackville-West

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:1056 D 17 '38 650w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum
N Y Times p29 N 19 '39 1100w
Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 25 '39 220w

"If the great Danish writer has had to wait long for justice to be done to his genius, he has finally fallen into the best possible hands." Herbert Read

+ Spec 162:61 Ja 13 '39 1000w

"A book as rich and various in detail as it is unique in the aggregate."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p780 D 10 '38 700w

KIERNAN, REGINALD HUGH. Baden-Powell. 256p il maps $1.25 McKay [3s 6d Harrap]

B or 92 Baden-Powell of Gilwell, Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, 1st baron 39-20466

"The life of Lord Baden-Powell makes a stirring tale of adventure and heroism. The author tells, in detail, of his very lively school days at Charterhouse; of his later life as a soldier with the 13th Hussars in Africa; of his narrow escapes as a scout and spy. He is portrayed as a musician, a humorist, an actor, an author, an artist whose work has been accepted by the Royal Academy. His leadership in Africa earned for this descendant of Captain John Smith the title among the natives 'Impeesa,' the wolf that never sleeps." Library J

"The reader is afforded a vivid picture of a delightful personality, combining the qualities of the soldier, scout, artist, actor, humorist and spy with a natural and outstanding gift of leadership." D. A. L.

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 31 '39 200w

"The book is written from an English point of view but should be of interest to Boy Scouts in any country and to all admirers of Lord Baden-Powell." Alice Martin

+ Library J 64:613 Ag '39 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p270 My 6 '39 220w

KILLINGER, WILLIAM GLENN. Football; il. by Katherine C. Tracy. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 141p $1 Barnes, A.S.

796.33 Football (W) 39-27226

"This book has been printed from the plates of The Book of Major Sports edited by William L. Hughes [Book Review Digest, 1938], with the exception of the photographic illustrations which were supplied through the courtesy of The Free-Lance Photographers Guild." (Publishers' note) Index.

Booklist 35:273 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by J. R. Sharman
School R 47:553 S '39 90w
Wis Lib Bul 35:110 Je '39

KIMBALL, MILO. Principles of corporate finance. 306p pa $1 Longmans

658.14 Corporations—Finance. Corporations—U.S. 39-19728

"Kimball's Corporate Finance starts with a brief chapter on finance—public, private, corporate, and noncorporate. The author devotes one chapter to a definition of the corporation and one to corporate organization and control. Thereafter he deals in his last nineteen chapters with the financial problems of the corporation from its birth to its death. The pattern followed is that most commonly used by textbooks on the subject." Ann Am Acad

---

"The point of approach in this text is that of the classroom instructor who considers his job finished when he explains existing practices. . . For the reader not interested in reform and not particularly concerned with changing existing corporate practices, this book is a readable descriptive text, singularly free from errors." H. E. Hoagland

Ann Am Acad 206:196 N '39 250w
Social Studies 30:335 N '39 10w

KING, MRS BLANCHE (BLACK) BUSEY. Under your feet; the story of the American mound builders. 169p il $2.50 Dodd

970.657191 Mound builders 39-21153

This book is "primarily an earnest effort to tell in simple language the story of the Mound Building Peoples of the Mississippi Valley, with comparisons of [the author's] work in other countries." (Pref) Contains a short list of selected readings.

Booklist 36:131 D 1 '39

"Unfortunately for the reader, Mrs. King is a far better archaeologist than author. While her book contains much that is very interesting to the uninitiated, her material lacks proper organization and is uneven in its writing, sometimes being too simple and sometimes being too complicated for the layman." M. P. Johnson

— + Boston Transcript p2 S 9 '39 90w

"Instead of telling her readers the straightforward story of the Wickliffe excavations . . . Mrs. King has given them nothing better than a badly served archaeological hash—and when archaeology is hashed it loses all real archaeological value. No doubt with excellent intentions, but without skill or sufficient scholarly equipment, Mrs. King has gathered together a hodge-podge of places in two hemispheres, periods over uncounted millenniums, quotations from many and varied writings and irrelevant experiences of European travel, with bewildering effect. If she had stuck to what she thoroughly knows, and to what is pertinent to her subject, she could have produced a genuinely interesting and informative book, which would really have been—as the subtitle mistakenly calls this—'The Story of the American Mound Builders.' What she writes of the King Mounds is worthy of attention."

— + N Y Times p20 O 1 '39 500w

KING, CHARLES DALY. Arrogant alibi. 275p $2 Appleton-Century [7s 6d Collins] 39-2605

Detective story.

Booklist 35:272 Ap 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p8 Ja 29 '39 240w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 28 '39 70w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 22 '38 180w

"I find it hard to say why, but Mr. King has not mastered the baby-face technique required to pull these fast alibis and get away with them." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 15:884 My 21 '38 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Ja 29 '39 180w

"Prize baffler."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:17 Ja 28 '39 40w

"Some readers may find Mr. King's attitude of detachment towards his characters a trifle forbidding; his plot, however, is complex, ingenious, and scrupulously fair." Nicholas Blake
+ — Spec 160:980 My 27 '38 150w

"The complicated, but quite natural, solution is worked out logically and thoroughly."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Ap 23 '38 70w

KING, ELEANOR, and PESSELS, WELLMER. Garden creatures. 64p il $1.25 Harper

590 Zoology—Juvenile literature
(W) 39-27383

Photographs and short sketches in non-technical language of a variety of garden creatures: earthworms, beetles, snails, earwigs, caterpillars, toads, birds, etc.

Booklist 35:312 My 15 '39

"The book is light in weight and slender in size; the subjects are introduced rather than identified; the charm of style, apparently attained without trying for it, brings [the creatures] one by one to a small child's notice in a way that makes them friends rather than specimens. . . . The authors are to be congratulated on following a book as good as 'Insect People' with one just a little better." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Je 11 '39 320w
Horn Bk M 15:170 My '39 10w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith
Library J 64:564 Jl '39 70w
New Yorker 15:108 My 13 '39 10w
Wis Lib Bul 35:116 Je '39

KING, MARY WENTWORTH. Once in a blue moon. 252p $2 Mill

39-29963

Phyllis Whiting, a wealthy city girl, goes for a vacation to her grandmother's home in New Hampshire. There the healthy life and the wholesome outlook of the young people "who are doing things" bring a new Phyllis to life.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 110w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p22 N 5 '39 200w

KING, RUFUS. Murder masks Miami. 278p $2 Doubleday

39-8913

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p21 Mr 12 '39 340w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 11 '39 90w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:380 S 9 '39 50w

"It's an entertaining enough yarn, and often amusing in a tongue-in-the-cheek fashion. What Miami Beach will think of it one scarcely ventures to guess." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p18 Mr 12 '39 160w

"Brief, polished story featuring the kind of people who dine on yachts."
New Yorker 15:88 Mr 18 '39 20w

"Told in machine-gun dialogue; filled with garish characters—wealthy wasters, usually boiled, moving at top speed to fiery finish. Beaut."
+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Mr 11 '39 40w
Time 33:64 Ap 3 '39 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p529 S 9 '39 120w

KING, WILLFORD ISBELL. The causes of economic fluctuations; possibilities of anticipation and control. 353p $3.50 Ronald

330.1242 Business cycles. Panics 38-34495

"[This book] covers a much broader field than its title suggests. In addition to causes, it discusses at length the nature of the business cycle and ways of reducing the severity of cyclical swings, with a chapter on forecasting also included. . . According to the author there are three environmental conditions conducive to violent business fluctuations: (1) the mass movement in public sentiment from pessimism to optimism, which generates the boom which in turn leads to the collapse; (2) the existence of a freely expansible credit system; and (3) the considerable degree of rigidity in the wage and price structure." Harvard Business R

"A fresh point of view such as this book represents is highly useful on the subject of business-cycle processes at the present time. Theo-

KING, W. I.—Continued
ries, largely with ulterior motives, multiply in endless number. All too few scholars have attempted to present coördinated syntheses. A few more on as high a plane as Professor King's book might accomplish more in dispelling obscurities than any other approach." E. C. Bratt
+ — Am Econ R 29:377 Je '39 600w

Reviewed by J. L. Snider
+ Harvard Business R 17:379 spring '39 240w

"Professor King's analysis is much more useful to the business man than that found in many other current books because he faces the problems directly instead of discussing obscure theories. Professor King develops the best case the reviewer has seen for flexible wage rates. . . . The arguments presented against staggering employment, wage-rate maintenance, price maintenance, or the use of public works and the creating of government debt to correct depression are worth reading." E. C. Bratt
+ Management R 28:68 F '39 650w

KINLOCH, TOM FLEMING. Pioneers of religious education; with a foreword by J. S. Whale. 151p $1.25 (3s 6d) Oxford

268 Religious education

"In few words but with ample learning, the author surveys the history of religious education from the Christian humanism of Erasmus and Colet, through the work of the early Jesuits, the Bohemian Comenius, the German pietists, the Moravian Zinzendorf, and on through Pestalozzi, Schleiermacher and Thomas Arnold to the modern English day schools." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 56:975 Ag 9 '39 40w

"The book is invaluable." Elizabeth McCracken
+ Living Church 101:6 D 6 '39 30w

KINSLEY, EDITH ELLSWORTH. Pattern for genius; a story of Branwell Bronte and his three sisters, Charlotte, Emily and Anne, largely told in their own words. 384p il maps $3.50 Dutton

B or 92 Brontë, Patrick Branwell. Brontë family (W) 39-16350

"This book is based on the assumption that the autobiographical material in the novels of Charlotte, Emily and Anne Bronte may be identified, snipped out, arranged according to a chronological plan, and the resultant compilation, with a certain amount of elucidation and filling in, presented as a sort of synthetic family autobiography. Since all three sisters were fascinated by the spectacle of their talented brother's disintegration, the book may well be centered on him. So [the author] offers us 'a story of Branwell Bronte and his three sisters . . . largely told in their own words.'" Books

"In method and in emphasis, 'Pattern for Genius' is a distinct novelty on the long shelf of Bronte literature, but its quality is more that of a tour de force than of a genuine first-hand narrative. Mrs. Kinsley warns us that her work may be taken 'either for fiction or for history, as the reader prefers.' There might be virtue in such ambiguity if the little hybrid possessed the better features of its parents, but that is not so in the present instance. Considered as fiction the composite lacks the sustained vividness of its sources." G. F. Whicher
+ — Books p13 Je 25 '39 850w

"Such a book cannot be taken seriously as biography, though, thanks to the narrative skill of the Brontes, it is a highly readable novel. Even if it were not necessary to take some scenes, including the deaths of Branwell and Emily, as prophetic, because the novels in which they appear were written before the events occurred, the book would still fail to carry conviction. And its ultimate effect is one which Miss Kinsley certainly did not intend. Suppose we grant her hypothesis that the outstanding scenes in the novels are direct records of the domestic affairs of the Brontes. The only possible conclusion is that the sisters were incapable of creative imagination; they were merely reporters throwing a transparent veil of fiction over autobiography. In that case they cease to be major novelists, and the only possible reason for writing a life of their ne'er-do-well brother no longer exists." De Lancey Ferguson
— + Boston Transcript p2 Jl 8 '39 470w

"This book is a tour de force which has been brought off with brilliant success. . . . Miss Kinsley has adroitly stitched together her abundant excerpts with the necessary narrative and explanation. Her own contribution to the story is told with simplicity and directness, though (as she would gladly admit) there is a contrast between the splendid, spacious prose of the three sisters and her own writing." S. C. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 12 '39 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 100:27 Ag 9 '39 390w

"As history 'Pattern for Genius' is unacceptable because too much rests on conjecture. . . . As fiction it fails by building too complicated a machinery for results which are obtained far more pleasurably by a reading of the originals themselves. When writing straight narrative of her own Mrs. Kinsley reveals a commendable style which would have served her better had she used the results of her painstaking research in less novel fashion." Frances Winwar
— + N Y Times p15 Jl 16 '39 900w

New Yorker 15:92 Je 17 '39 30w

"If one will be content to read this story as an historical novel, one will be rewarded by the excellently told tale, and frequently delighted by the imaginative insight of the writer. There is room for this kind of pleasure; but scholarship is another matter, and requires a steadier, colder, and more persistent effort." W. C. DeVane
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:7 Jl 1 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 29 '39 370w
Time 33:84 Je 26 '39 310w

KIRK, KENNETH ESCOTT, bp, ed. Study of theology. 492p $3.75 Harper [15s Hodder]

230 Theology

"The question in this omnibus is: What is theology? A dozen chapters cover the principal divisions of the 'queen of sciences' and attempt to restore a vigorous vitality to what has become a neglected, emaciated study. . . . The editor and authors are English scholars. . . . The subjects under review are comparative religion, the philosophy of religion as distinguished from theology, and the psychology of religion; the Old Testament, the New Testament, symbolic theology, the history of Christian doctrine, ecclesiastical history, moral theology and Christian worship and liturgy." Books

Books p36 D 10 '39 280w

Reviewed by J. L. Adams
Christian Century 57:183 F 7 '40 1000w

"The work could hardly have been put into more competent hands; and this holds both for the editorship of the whole and for the individual contributions. For Dr. Kirk called to his assistance some of the best scholars in England; and together they have produced a book that will prove invaluable as a survey of the field of theological study." F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 154:21 Ja 1 '40 260w

"It is not necessary to single out any contributor for special mention, and where the general level is so high it would be invidious to do so. Many cooks have not spoiled the broth. There is a vast amount of theological learning presented briefly, clearly, and attractively. It is not just a useful book: taken as a whole it has the further great merit of commanding respect for its subject and for those who seriously study it." T. W. Manson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 25 '39 380w

"The writers, it will be noticed, are drawn from different communions and different centres of learning. Though Dr. Kirk assures readers that no attempt has been made to reach a 'common mind,' there is no jarring discrepancy among the contributors. A valuable feature of the book is the comprehensive bibliography following each study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Jl 1 '39 700w

KIRKPATRICK, FREDERICK ALEXANDER. Latin America; a brief history. (Cambridge hist. ser) 456p il maps $3.75; school ed $2.80 Macmillan [18s Cambridge]

980 Latin America—History (W) 39-1417

"The book covers the conquests by Spain and Brazil, the movement of independence, and then gives briefly the history of each State until to-day. The last chapters, on the relations of the Latin-American States with the United States, and the contrast between 'Americanismo'—'a natural effort towards a family understanding between Latin Americans'—and Pan-Americanism, a movement in which the United States has taken the lead, are clear and valuable, and they could well have been longer." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

———

"The work as a whole betrays the need of more background, even though in some fields wide reading is apparent. This weakness is also shown by the uncritical handling of some of the bibliographical material. . . Though the presentation is at times inadequate, the book seems notably free from factual errors. It is also readable and is fair in its treatment of controversial matters, such as questions involving the Catholic Church." M. W. Williams

+ — Am Hist R 45:492 Ja '40 230w

"Some critics will object that Mr. Kirkpatrick has exaggerated the cultural unity of Latin America; but that is a difficult question to decide, and whatever one may think about it, the fact remains that this is an exceptionally thoughtful and well-written book. In my opinion, it is one of the most interesting interpretations of Latin American history published in the past generation." A. P. Whitaker

+ Ann Am Acad 204:181 Jl '39 450w

Booklist 35:172 Ja 15 '39

"The writer has done so much for us by his faithful gathering of facts that we should not condemn him because he has not more faithfully introduced us to the people about whom the facts are gathered. Mr. Kirkpatrick tells us where Patagonia and Matto Grosso are, but he leaves it to us to go and find what kind of people—if any—live in those spots." Hubert Herring

+ — Books p14 F 26 '39 400w

Reviewed by Hannibal Towle

Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 180w

"Mr. Kirkpatrick's book is most timely. In addition, it is well informed, fairly written and balanced."

+ Cath World 148:761 Mr '39 160w

"The author's information is ample, his command of the literature is evidently considerable (though he omits footnotes and documentation), and his judgments are sound in so far as the reviewer could check them."

+ Christian Century 56:123 Ja 25 '39 150w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 1 '39 150w

"Here is an abundance of material with a most complete bibliography which demands further study of a part of the world which is just now becoming increasingly important." D. R. Karr

+ Churchman 153:49 Ap 1 '39 100w

Foreign Affairs 17:644 Ap '39 10w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 101:vi Mr '39 120w

Geog R 29:341 Ap '39 80w

"Mr. Kirkpatrick's history may not merit general strictures applicable to a sizeable body of history writing. He has, it is obvious, tried hard to be objective and unbiased—so much so that he ventures few opinions of his own, offering the often biased or discredited ones of others. But his approach is fundamentally the same ancient one. . . Two or three decades ago, when the field was a pioneer one, his work might have had some value. Today we surely have a right to expect from the historian the opening up of at least a few new horizons, the bringing of a few fresh interpretations to the subject." E. K. James

— + Living Age 356:95 Mr '39 400w

"Mr. Kirkpatrick has written an extremely useful book, but the necessity of compressing this vast history into one volume has made it less 'readable' than it would have been had an attractive style been allowed more liberty. . . When political history has to be told in brief, as in this book, personalities become little more than names. That is a necessary misfortune, and Mr. Kirkpatrick makes some recompense in an admirable chapter which brings to life the people themselves of Latin America." A. W. J.

+ — Manchester Guardian p5 D 30 '38 270w

"This book by an English writer who has already done distinguished work in the Latin-American field of history purposes to give in brief compass the salient facts of Latin-American history since the discovery. The thoroughness and justice with which this difficult task is accomplished fill the reader with admiration. . . One may fairly question, however, certain of Mr. Kirkpatrick's assertions." P. A. Means

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 30 '39 1150w

New Yorker 14:75 Ja 14 '39 30w

"The arrangement of his material is excellent, its presentation incisive and readable, his judgments objective and fair. It is evident that the writer has a thorough mastery of a vast amount of material, is conversant with the controversial nature of the issues that have arisen in the last half-century. . . One may disagree with his view that the United States's occupation of Haiti and Santo Domingo was 'work done for the world,' and regret the omission of material revealing the economic bases for the interlude of rampant U.S. imperialism from the eighteen nineties to its abandonment with the enunciation of the 'Good Neighbor policy.'" Ernest Gruening

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:11 Ja 21 '39 600w

"Mr. Kirkpatrick has accomplished this task with great skill. Viewed as a whole the book is well written, it is interesting, and it is teachable—which is more than can be said for most texts in this field." A. C. Wilgus

+ Social Studies 30:328 N '39 400w

"For many years Mr. Kirkpatrick sustained almost single-handed the serious study of Latin American history in this country [England] where it has been so lamentably neglected. He has already written several interesting books about it and in this new volume he has given us a much needed survey of its political history from the Spanish and Portuguese conquests to the present day. Mr. Kirkpatrick has perhaps been too anxious to avoid those vague generalisations with which writers less learned than himself hide their lack of knowledge. But he has had a clear plan and two-thirds of the book deals with the separate histories of the new nations." C. K. Webster

+ — Spec 162:61 Ja 13 '39 600w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 13 '39 480w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams

Survey G 28:756 D '39 100w

"Nothing is more unprofitable than the hunt for minute errors where a vast task has been brilliantly performed. But perhaps Mr. Kirkpatrick does unintentional injustice to Lieutenant-Colonel Platon Sanchez, President of the Court-martial at Querétaro, when he states that the unhappy Emperor Maximilian was 'tried by a Court-martial of junior officers, a captain presiding'; and his brief bibliography of general works should certainly have included the survey of 'The Republics of South America,' recently issued by the Royal Institute of International Affairs. A text of such high excellence should also have been supplemented with far better maps than those provided by his publishers. But these are very minor defects in an historical achievement of the highest order, which comes in time to meet a crying need."

KIRKPATRICK, F. A.—Continued

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p823 D 31 '38 600w

Wis Lib Bul 35:101 My '39

"This is an excellent book for the general reader or the classroom student." Hubert Herring

+ Yale R n s 29:394 winter '40 170w

KIRKPATRICK, HELEN PAULL. Under the British umbrella; what the English are and how they go to war. 358p $2.75 Scribner

942.084 Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—Foreign policy. European war, 1939-. National characteristics, English (W) 39-29458

An American foreign correspondent writes of her observations in Europe—at Geneva, and in England. She gives an objective account of Great Britain on the verge of war, from the breakdown of the League of Nations to the declaration of war on September third.

Booklist 36:175 Ja 1 '40

"Miss Kirkpatrick's account of the course of British foreign policy is more lucid than its subject. A layman may well be grateful for such a compact survey even though a little unconvinced by its simplification. The book reveals a mind quick to sense implications of events and character. Obviously herself sympathetic and responsive, Miss Kirkpatrick does not allow her acquaintance with important contemporary figures to blur her critical perception." E. E. McLaughlin

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 280w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 19:360 F '40 450w

"Generally speaking, Miss Kirkpatrick can be relied on to take the viewpoint of common sense. If she does not add much to our stock of knowledge, she says what she has to say with a zest that keeps the entertainment in full swing." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 27 '39 600w

New Repub 101:149 N 22 '39 30w

"Into this book, rapidly written and no less easily to be read, [the author] pours her seething memories. . . And more than this. There is shrewd analysis of situations—on facts Miss Kirkpatrick is careful—and satisfying psychoanalysis illuminates the personalities visualized in the manner of David Low, the cartoonist, by a candid camera." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p9 D 10 '39 1200w

"Miss Kirkpatrick is particularly effective in painting the British background for their actions, for she describes with understanding and with considerable sarcasm the social system by which Britain is governed. Miss Kirkpatrick likewise resembles her colleagues in writing at too great length, in bringing in too many personal reminiscences, and in overlooking some of the broader economic and political trends which underlie foreign policy." J. F. Green

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:16 F 3 '40 500w

"Written in a racy style, and in a factual rather than 'I-told-you-so' vein, this book is one of the most readable and interesting commentaries to which current European politics has given rise. It sets forth the opinions of a capable and discerning woman, a student of foreign affairs turned journalist, who has found good opportunities to make use of her talents on the continent." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 26 '39 650w

KIRSH, BENJAMIN SOLLOW, and SHAPIRO, HAROLD ROLAND. Trade associations in law and business. 399p $5 Central bk. co.

338.7 Trade and professional associations 38-32189

"Mr. Kirsh's Trade Associations: the Legal Aspects [Book Review Digest, 1929] is here brought up to date, ten years after publication, and expanded by over a third. The activities covered are the same—statistical and price reporting, uniform cost accounting, codes of ethics and arbitration, standardization of products and sales contracts, credit work, boycotts of unfair or irregular dealers, patent interchange, basing-point systems, collective purchasing, and exporting." (Am Econ R) Index.

Reviewed by S. N. Whitney
Am Econ R 29:156 Mr '39 340w

Reviewed by W. O. Farber
Am Pol Sci R 33:335 Ap '39 200w

"Although it remains primarily a legal treatise, the present volume gives more space to the economic aspects of association activities than did its predecessor. Even so, this phase of the study, because of the limitation of space no doubt, is often too sketchy. The authors were apparently aware of this, since they have appended, by means of footnotes, a number of excellent reading references to the economic treatment. There are, however, several important activities of trade associations not covered in the book, which, while they raise perhaps no major legal questions 'arising from the federation of independent units,' would need to be treated before a complete picture of the trade association in business, as contrasted to law, could be presented." R. F. Breyer

+ — Ann Am Acad 202:230 Mr '39 360w

"The scope of the book is broad and its aim ambitious; but it may justly be said that it presents the trade association problem in accurate outline and perspective." Nathan Probst, Jr.

+ Columbia Law R 39:554 Mr '39 1150w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
Commonweal 29:22 O 28 '39 550w

"The book is readable, but no legal author can write a book that will take the place of proper legal counsel. If a reading of it by laymen who are active in trade associations will induce more of them to insist that their trade associations retain competent legal counsel, with adequate authority, it will have served a useful purpose." W. J. Donald

J Pol Econ 47:731 O '39 1350w

Management R 28:143 Ap '39 70w

Reviewed by W. E. Beach
Pol Sci Q 54:628 D '39 600w

KIRSTEIN, LINCOLN. Ballet alphabet; a primer for laymen; drawings by Paul Cadmus. 71p pa $1 Kamin pubs, 15 W. 56th st, N.Y.

792.8 Ballet 40-325

"In a brief seventy pages, the author of Dance and the lively Blast at Ballet, and manager of the American Ballet Caravan as well, has managed to present not only the basic terms but the central stylistic and aesthetic concepts essential to an understanding of ballet. It is a tribute to the care with which the book has been planned that without violating the alphabetical order 'the important definitions somehow manage to appear first, explaining and supplementing each other', so that the handbook can be read consecutively with growing enthusiasm and profit. . . Although sixty terms in all are included in the alphabetical arrangement, many others are embedded in the text and their meaning indicated." Theatre Arts Mo

---

"This not very rudimentary primer, a little too learned for the layman, a little too limited in scope, is amusing in spots and generally informative as far as it goes. A soupçon of criticism here and there does not come amiss. But it is far milder in tone than the author's 'Blast at Ballet' of last year, and a much nicer book." Margaret Lloyd

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 D 16 '39 500w

Reviewed by George Beiswanger
Theatre Arts Mo 24:71 Ja '40 480w

KLEMPERER, OTTO, ed. See Electric and musical industries. Electron optics

KLEMPNER, JOHN. Once around the block. 381p $2.50 Scribner

39-7581

Story of a Brooklyn family, the Holts, who, by the combined efforts of all three of the grown children, just manage to live on the edge of insecurity. The story is mainly concerned with Peter, who works as an accountant in a chocolate factory, secretly longs to become a writer, and has his romance with a girl in the office tho he knows he should be wooing the boss's daughter instead.

"Klempner tells his story in fluent, sparkling narrative and dialogue. The Holts emerge as individuals and as a family unit closely knit by affection, sorrow, joy and good humor. Besides telling the story of the Holts, Klempner touches upon the lives of the Ellenbogens and several of the workers in the factory. His hand slips a little in the minor plot, but the book as a whole bears the clear-cut stamp of integrity of portraiture of white-collar life." Rose Feld

+ — Books p10 Mr 19 '39 800w

"Mr. Klempner makes his characters genuine, their wisecracking conversations lively and precise."

+ New Repub 98:232 Mr 29 '39 50w

"The most effective feature of the book is its singing tempo—its natural flow of sharp, biting humor, its rhythmic, beating repetition of the thoughts that run through harassed minds. It catches very successfully the flavor of life as experienced by this white-collar family." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 26 '39 390w

"There are many well written scenes, building up to a readable novel and almost a good one. It would be a good one if Mr. Klempner's sympathies were somehow more substantial and less facile. The inevitable strike at the factory misses effectiveness through oversimplification. And we wish Mr. Klempner didn't so frequently seem to be snickering at the sexual misadventures of his characters." G. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 8 '39 250w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 280w

KLERCK, EDUARD SERVAAS DE. History of the Netherlands East Indies. 2v 448;661p il maps $15 Van Riemsdyck

991 Netherland India [39-11298]

"These volumes were written from a patriotic motive. In his preface the author indicates distress at 'how extremely little is known' regarding the East Indies in foreign countries. He further states that 'in the foreign press, opinions are repeatedly expressed regarding the Netherlands East Indies which witness, alas, to a deplorable ignorance of the subject.' . . It is to correct these false representations abroad that DeKlerck, a retired lieutenant-colonel of the Dutch army, has published these two volumes in the English language." Am Pol Sci R

"Many passages of the two volumes are characterized by an adolescent patriotism and a strong political bias. . . DeKlerck's antipathies break through everywhere. . . However, the work as a whole is not as bad as these criticisms would imply. The author's bias naturally comes out most strongly in those chapters which deal with the more recent period. The first volume contains a chapter of nearly a hundred pages on 'The Introductory History of the Netherlands,' and it is in the latter part of this chapter that his prejudices are revealed most glaringly. The remaining chapters of Volume I, which carries the history of the East Indies to the downfall of the Company, are not subject to this criticism, but are in the main very well done. The same is true of all but the later chapters of Volume II, which are marred by the author's failure to repress his lack of sympathy for the liberal policy of the last few decades." Amry Vandenbosch

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:326 Ap '39 700w

"A monumental work, with several excellent maps."

Foreign Affairs 17:644 Ap '39

KLINEFELTER, LEE MILLER. Medical occupations for girls; women in white. 320p il $2 Dutton

610 Medicine. Profession, Choice of. Occupations (W) 39-24170

Presents the vocational possibilities for women in the field of medicine and its allied subjects. Contains information on the following: dieticians, nurses, technical and therapy workers, dentists, doctors, etc. Includes data on schools.

Booklist 36:216 F 1 '40

"Although Mr. Klinefelter has written this book in a story form it is more of a reference book than a narrative. Especially designed for vocational guidance, each branch of healing is explored with equal weight to their disadvantage as well as advantage. It is too bad that Mr. Klinefelter has attempted to have a plot and characterizations along with the information. However, the book should prove very useful in helping girls choose their occupations."

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 30 '39 70w

"Very informative and readable book on a subject of increasing interest to young women. . . A worth while addition to vocational shelves for young people." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 64:905 N 15 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

KLINGBERG, FRANK JOSEPH, ed. See Wysor, W. W. Old Sherry, portrait of a Virginia family

KLUCHANSKY, ANNA M. Commissar Krilenko. 407p $2.50 Liveright

39-10379

Story of a Russian family from Czarist days, thru the war and Revolution, to post-war times under the Soviet regime. The novel follows the destinies of several members of the family scattered during the Revolution, but reaches its climax in the story of the lost Dimitri, Commissar of Executions, Krilenko.

"Miss Kluchansky was born in the Crimea, and received her education in Russia, Germany and the United States, where she now lives. She writes with more fervor than fluency, disclosing a more intimate knowledge of Russian life than of English prose intricacy." George Conrad

Books p8 My 14 '39 300w

Reviewed by Esther Nothnagle

— Boston Transcript p2 My 13 '39 300w

"Miss Kluchansky has taken a leaf out of 'A Tale of Two Cities,' though she has by no means conquered the medium of a language alien to her. On the whole, however, she does very well, and the excitement of the story compensates for such lapses as we would not overlook in a more pretentious work." John Cournos

N Y Times p7 Ap 30 '39 700w

KLUCKHOHN, FRANK L. The Mexican challenge. 296p $2.50 Doubleday

972 Mexico—Politics and government. Mexico—Foreign relations. U.S.—Foreign relations—Mexico. Mexico—Economic conditions (W) 39-27668

Facts and interpretations of the present situation in Mexico, written by the New York Times correspondent "whose frank reporting of totalitarian inroads below the border brought him into conflict with the Mexican authorities and caused his expulsion. . . The writer's thesis is that the rapid nationalization and confiscation policies of the present regime have impaired the Revolutionary program of social and economic emancipation; that general hardship has increased; that real wages have fallen; that the Mexican under dog has merely changed masters. His latest overlords, the beneficiaries of the program, are labor leaders turned officials, politicians, generals. They now exploit the peon, deny him redress, since under the new dispensation they are the government representatives and wax fat in the process. A list of fourteen of these bosses' salaries, before and after the expropriation of the oil properties, shows increases ranging from 150 to 700 per cent." (Sat R of Lit)

Booklist 36:6 S '39

Reviewed by H. B. Parkes

Books p6 S 3 '39 1000w

"Frank Kluckhohn has written an important book on an important subject. In 'The Mexican Challenge' the ex-New York Times reporter in our southern neighbor state tells all in an extremely engaging and fascinating manner. The book represents the viewpoint of one who has been in 'on the know' in that troubled land." Michael Mayer

\+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:383 Ja '40 40w

Reviewed by E. K. James

Living Age 357:198 O '39 300w

"I think that in both his reporting and his book Mr. Kluckhohn tried to do an honest and careful job. But although he writes with determined objectivity, weighing the pros and cons of controversial subjects in an effort to produce an unbiased study, his basic prejudices prevent him from accomplishing this purpose. . . In all fairness it must be stated that the prejudices evident in his book are prejudices that, I am sure, he took with him among his other impedimenta when he first went to Mexico. . . Mr. Kluckhohn's book has value as a clearly expressed account of recent developments in Mexico written from the point of view of one who believes that Mexico is still a semi-colonial country that can best achieve its destiny through the helpful intervention of a friendly United States Administration." Virginia Mishnun

\+ — Nation 149:250 S 2 '39 500w

"I am afraid that the suppressions of vital truths are so extended that not ignorance, or even stupidity, can explain them. Mr. Kluckhohn has set out to paint an unfavorable picture of Mexico, to frighten American capital and to incite it against the Mexican people. To this end he has distorted, concealed, deprecated, so completely that to do the job of refuting him would call for another volume." Waldo Frank

— New Repub 100:193 S 20 '39 1100w

"It is all terribly complicated. It is all alive with pitfalls for the general reader keen to find backing for his pet prejudices and preconceived notions. And one must acknowledge that, despite an honest attempt to inform his public, complications and pitfalls have been rather too much for Mr. Kluckhohn. One emerges from his oil chapters in a mood of helpless confusion, inclined to call down on President Cardenas and American oil men in Mexico 'a plague o' both your houses!' . . Never does the author deviate from the third person singular. Never does he lose his temper. Whatever Mr. Kluckhohn may not have, he has restraint." T. R. Ybarra

\+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 30 '39 1000w

New Yorker 15:59 Jl 29 '39 80w

"This is the most realistic book about Mexico in half a decade. It is a forthright piece of journalism. . . Mr. Kluckhohn is objective and balanced, though his sympathy for the Mexican people is manifest. The importance of this volume is that it is perhaps the first evaluation in some years unclouded by sentimentality, wishful thinking, or partisanship of one origin or another of the Mexican Revolution at the end of a generation." Ernest Gruening

\+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Ag 12 '39 600w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Yale R n s 29:397 winter '40 400w

KNAPPEN, MARSHALL MASON. Tudor Puritanism; a chapter in the history of idealism. 555p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

285.9 Puritans 39-10082

The first and longer section of this study of English Puritanism begins with the journey of William Tyndale from London to Germany in 1524, and covers the historical side of the movement to the Stuart settlement. The second section is a consideration of the intellectual, social, and cultural aspects of Tudor Puritanism. Select bibliography. Index.

"[An] instance of Dr. Knappen's scholarly approach is his frank criticism of the blind opposition of the Puritans to the Council of Trent. Errors occur but it is apparent that they are traceable to the author's unfamiliarity with, or misunderstanding of, Catholic belief and practice. . . Tudor Puritanism is the production of a scholar for scholars, but the casual reader will find its perusal well worth-while. Dr. Knappen writes interestingly; he knows how to clothe the bare bones of history with flesh and blood. There is a freshness about the narrative, and occasional flashes of humor enliven the story." C. H. Metzger

\+ — America 60:549 Mr 11 '39 650w

"In a sense the subtitle is a misnomer, for this volume is a carefully documented and critical study of Tudor Puritanism itself, written from an objective point of view, rather than a discussion of idealism during the Reformation or since. . . It was a study worth making, and, if its true results are tentative and suggestive only, Professor Knappen himself has not really claimed more. The reviewer nevertheless prefers the older judgments about the movement. Professor Knappen, for all his caution and reservations, overemphasizes the roles of the lesser-known men." R. G. Usher

\+ — Am Hist R 45:121 O '39 1000w

"Tudor Puritanism is the product of extensive reading and thorough scholarship, and it is well written. We may, indeed, look forward to the publication by Mr. Knappen of a volume on Puritanism in the seventeenth century." B. E. Lippincott

\+ Am Pol Sci R 33:729 Ag '39 340w

Reviewed by Robert Walcott, Jr.

Atlantic Ap '39 380w

Reviewed by W. H. Dunham, Jr.

Sooks p21 Ap 30 '39 1050w

"The book is a magnificent piece of historical writing, backed by years of laborious research which have put the author in command of a vast body of source materials without corrupting his literary style. . . To the reader of history, or to the inheritor of the Puritan tradition who would like to know what kind of people his forebears actually were with all whitewashing and mud-slinging aside, I can give assurance that this book, though formidable in size, will be of absorbing interest." W. E. Garrison

\+ Christian Century 56:577 My 3 '39 800w

"Making due allowances for a few curious statements—such as that the Council of Trent made something like semi-Pelagianism the orthodox Catholic doctrine—the book is an excellent piece of research and a valuable contribution to an obscure phase of Tudor history." J. J. O'Connor

+ — Commonweal 29:556 Mr 10 '39 420w

Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 16:152 Ap '39 200w

"Dr. Knappen has made a valuable addition to the study of early Puritanism, a field which is receiving today a long overdue restudy. By limiting himself to the period before 1603 he has not only selected an area for which the sources could be thoroughly mastered, but has usefully separated the formative period from later developments." E. R. Hardy, Jr.
+ Living Church 101:11 Jl 19 '39 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Gleason
New Eng Q 12:559 S '39 1050w

"Dr. Knappen has so clear an expository style, and so much human sympathy that those who are not professed historians, or even especially addicted to reading history, can find a great deal of enjoyment in his interesting pages. . . 'Tudor Puritanism,' is a book for the layman as well as the historian. Modern history, as distinguished from that of the Renaissance, obtained its broad base in the sixteenth century. Dr. Knappen enables us to realize how truly broad, and builded of how many diversities, that base really was." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p19 F 26 '39 1300w

Reviewed by William Haller
Pol Sci Q 54:617 D '39 900w
Social Studies 30:379 D '39 150w

"Learned, acute and objective work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Ag 5 '39 180w

"Despite [some] inadequacies, 'Tudor Puritanism' is, as a whole, a model of exhaustive scholarship. It is, by all odds, the best book on the subject now available." F. L. Baumer
+ — Yale R n s 29:208 autumn '39 1150w

KNAPTON, ERNEST JOHN. The lady of the Holy alliance; the life of Julie de Krüdener. 262p il $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

B or 92 Krüdener, Barbara Juliane (von Vietinghoff) freifrau von. Holy alliance 39-14081

The subject of this biography was born in Riga, in 1764, daughter of a wealthy Livonian aristocrat. She married early, a man many years older than herself, who was in the diplomatic service. Her young womanhood was spent in restless wanderings around Europe and in futile attempts to achieve happiness, both within and without marriage. She tried her hand at novel writing but achieved lasting fame by turning to religion and good works. Legend says she was the influence which caused Alexander to inject a religious note into his plan for the Holy alliance. Bibliography. Index.

"Apart from the study of a peculiar and forceful personality which has thus far defied oblivion, Mr. Knapton's very scholarly and well documented research is an introduction to the varieties of religious 'enthusiasm' which sprang up in Europe at the beginning of the nineteenth century in reaction to the Enlightenment and the revolution. 'The rediscovery of faith,' he says, 'was one of the most striking aspects of this age.' Some of its forms were fearful and wonderful, and the aggregate importance of those which individually never became important enough to enter into general history is considerable. Mr. Knapton has done both a solid and a beautiful piece of historical writing."
+ Christian Century 56:903 Jl 19 '39 330w

"This biography recounts authoritatively Julie's restless life, keeping an even balance between sympathy and justice, but wisely relies for its chief interest on the analysis of those various intellectual climates to which she successively succumbed. The chapters on the provincial culture of Riga in the later eighteenth century and on the religious fanatics and charlatans of southern Germany in the Napoleonic period seem particularly fresh and illuminating." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 1 '39 290w

"The author has gone deeply into the available materials on Mme de Krudener's life, including not only the secondary works which have been written about her and her time, but the few manuscripts which are still extant. The information derived from these sources he has worked into a careful synthesis which is of value not only as an account of its heroine but for the manner in which it places her in her time."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 550w

"Madame de Krüdener's career has provided plenty of material for the gibes of unsympathetic critics. But such is not Mr. Knapton's attitude. His book, which is based on wide research and some new material, is written in the spirit of the impartial student of human affairs and human character. Lest this should suggest that it is dull, we may add that it is written also in a lively style and is very readable. It is illustrated by excellent reproductions of portraits."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p480 Ag 12 '39 700w

KNEIER, CHARLES MAYARD. Illustrative materials in municipal government and administration. 632p $3.50 Harper

352 Municipal government 39-3430

Supplementary readings on municipal government and administration for students. "Professor Kneier devotes approximately one-third of his space to the government and politics of cities, and the remaining two-thirds to administration. Municipal liability, expenditures, revenues, debts, the regulation of public utilities, municipal ownership, planning, zoning, and housing are all generously dealt with, but public welfare, education, recreation, and reporting are entirely omitted." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"Some instructors in undergraduate courses will probably feel that the legal aspects have been over-emphasized and that too many judicial decisions have been included. Altogether, however, the collection is a valuable one and will meet a genuine need." Harold Zink
+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:533 Je '39 170w

Reviewed by R. V. Peel
Ann Am Acad 205:161 S '39 700w
Booklist 35:245 Ap 1 '39
Pratt p9 autumn '39

KNIGHT, ALBERT WILLIAM. What's wrong with the economic system? 179p $2.40 (8s 6d) Longmans

330.1 Economics

"The answer to the question which forms the title of this book is apparently that it is the profit motive which prevents the individualist economic system from continuously employing its full productive resources and generates recurring depressions. The profit motive must form the subject of 'a surgical operation,' and its place be taken by a Planning Commission which will put in practice the two principles of controlling the volume of investment and of income distribution. It is admitted that such a change would lead to 'a radically different type of economic system' which would prove inconsistent with the party system in politics and the existing structure of democratic institutions." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"Mr. Knight leads the reader through unorthodox and, at times, untrimmed paths; he will provoke much remonstrance, but he does place emphasis on the aggregate demand function which has been neglected in Ricardian economics." G. W. Sanford
— + Am Econ R 29:812 D '39 450w
Economist 135:662 Je 17 '39 180w

KNIGHT, A. W. Continued

"The planned economy which he finally sketches, though like most of its counterparts it leaves untouched the immense international difficulties and dangers and glosses over many difficulties both theoretical and practical, does at least avoid the half-baked syndicalism which discredits so many. But the weaknesses of his argument are unmistakable. . . Mr. Knight is one of the many students of economic affairs who can only see competition working one way. He can see it working, through the pressure to reduce costs, to drive down wages, and salaries; he cannot see it working, through the equally genuine pressure to obtain control of the factors of production, to raise them. Most economists would agree that at some times, in some places, and in some circumstances, an element of employers' monopoly power vitiates the smooth working of this double process and forms an ingredient in the trade-cycle set-up; but to Mr. Knight this element constitutes the whole—the rest of the argument merely follows." Honor Croome

Spec 163:299 Ag 25 '39 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 100w

KNIGHT, BRUCE WINTON. Economic principles in practice. 606p $3.25 Farrar

330 Economics 39-10077

Textbook for a first college course in economics by the professor of economics at Dartmouth. Index.

"From the standpoint of arousing the interest of students in the study of elementary economics this is the best introductory textbook that this reviewer has seen. Not only is the style lucid and direct but the text as a whole marches on with a combination of logical development and suspense, more common to detective stories than textbooks. Telling illustrations which enliven practically every topic have been culled not only from a wide range of writers in economic theory and history but from others more popularly known, such as John Masefield, George Washington, Adolf Hitler, Huey Long and Walt Disney." G. R. Taylor

+ Am Econ R 29:554 S '39 900w

"Knight's volume is one of the most beautifully and skillfully written economics texts in the English language. The author has drawn extensively upon many fields of knowledge, and has woven skillfully into the text many gems from the literature of the ages. Running throughout it there is a note of sophistication and a warm sense of humor. Common knowledge and understanding are made to yield new light on many points." E. P. Schmidt

+ Ann Am Acad 205:191 S '39 300w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. The affair of the black sombrero. 312p $2 Dodd

39-9211

Detective story.

Booklist 35:308 My 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ap 16 '39 250w

"Mr. Knight writes rapidly. He can make the most outlandish events appear quite natural. Especially good touch is the accidental killing of the killer before the discovery of the final murder." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 15 '39 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p23 Ap 16 '39 160w

"Skillfully characterized story, with vivid figure of much maligned young girl running excellent sleuthing close race for honors. Extra good."

+ Sat R of Lit 19:16 Ap 15 '39 40w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. The affair on the Painted desert. 314p $2 Dodd

39-25961

Detective story.

"We'd call this easily Mr. Knight's best since the memorable matter of the scarlet crab." Will Cuppy

Books p22 O 29 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 50w

"As a mystery, this is as good as anything that Clifford Knight has previously done, if not better, and the desert country forms an appropriate setting for the mysterious crimes that are enacted there. No reader of detective stories can afford to miss this one." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 O 29 '39 180w

"Weird desert background, odd aboriginal characters, lost treasure, much extra slick deducing add up to a swell yarn. Eminent."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 O 28 '39 50w

KNIGHT, GEORGE WILSON. The burning oracle; studies in the poetry of action. 299p $4.25 (12s 6d) Oxford

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism

In these "studies in the poetry of action" "Spenser, Shakespeare, Swift, Pope, Byron, as true poets of action, concerned with human affairs [are] differentiated from Milton, whose rejection of nature and instinct resulted in a rigid monumental grandeur." (New Repub)

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Books p29 D 10 '39 950w

Reviewed by A. S. Noad

Canadian Forum 19:361 F '40 1050w

"Prof. Wilson Knight's book puts the reviewer in a difficulty. It bears the impress of a great university. No one could call it 'gush about Shelley'—or Spenser, Milton, Shakespeare, Swift, Pope, and Byron, who are the immediate subjects of Professor Knight's investigation. It is obviously the result of deep and continuous study. Yet one cannot praise it for it has a grave, overwhelming defect. . . Professor Knight gives the impression of having read all that Spenser, Milton, and the rest wrote without realizing that it was poetry at all." Harold Hobson

— Christian Science Monitor p10 O 7 '39 270w

"Professor Knight is a difficult writer. His style is at once fervid and overcharged with detail. He gives us no breathing-spaces, and at times we feel rather as if we were sitting on the edge of an erupting volcano. Yet his ardour results also in an incandescence of insight which is quite remarkable, and no one perhaps has felt more sensitively than he the vital texture of a poet's imagery, or interpreted it more significantly." H. I'A. Faussett

+ — Manchester Guardian p5 S 1 '39 330w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation 149:504 N 4 '39 800w

New Repub 100:321 O 18 '39 70w

Reviewed by Thomas Merton

N Y Times p5 S 24 '39 750w

"It is impossible to escape the conclusion that, whether generally valid or not, Mr. Knight's psychological theories are responsible for certain dubious literary judgments. This is suggested by his extravagant praise of Byron's art and by his poorly-conceived estimate of Milton. His best essay, that on Pope, owes least to psychology. Yet the book as a whole profits by the vigorous expression (often cast in richly figurative phraseology) of original points of view. Mr. Knight sometimes writes unconvincingly and sometimes obscurely, but he always writes with warmth and individuality." A. C.

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 16 '39 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p514 S 2 '39 2650w

KNITTEL, JOHN. Power for sale. 436p $2.50 Stokes [8s 6d Hutchinson]

39-25877

Romantic story of the experiences of a young engineer who establishes a power plant in the Swiss Alps and attempts to run it according to his own idealistic policies.

"Mr. Knittel offers a great deal to think about and much to enjoy in 'Power for Sale.' His style which has the intangible strangeness so often observable in one who speaks a language not fully his own, is none the less vivid and realistic, and his feeling sensitive." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p3 O 22 '39 600w

" 'Power for Sale' is an important book. . . Mr. Knittel is one of our most skillful and civilized novelists. He knows people and he understands how to make them understandable to others. He has mastered the difficult art of combining descriptive, narrative and conversational passages in such a way as to implement his plot or advance his action with every statement. In 'Power for Sale' he has written a major novel which not only tells an intensely interesting story, but also appeals to one's social intelligence." Lloyd Eshleman

+ N Y Times p7 O 29 '39 750w

KNOWLES, HELEN C. Songs and pictures for little folks; words and music by [the author] phot. by Ruth Alexander Nichols. $1.50 Barnes, A. S.

784 Children's songs 39-22605

"Simple rhymes and tunes for little children, each one a separate page below an attractive and appropriate picture." J Home Econ

"The songs are simple, tuneful and new. The copious illustrations are from photographs by Ruth Nichols, one of the ablest and best known photographers in the country."

+ Christian Century 55:1266 O 19 '38 30w

"Songs with music not too difficult for some children to play for their younger brothers and sisters. The fine photographs by Ruth Alexander Nichols make it a lovely picture book as well." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 24 '39 90w

"The use of accompaniments easy enough for playing by children or by adults with little pianistic skill is commendable and is a plan that others might well follow when compiling similar material. . . A question might be raised whether children, even at a very early age, do not prefer songs of greater musical qualities than those contained in this volume. Judged from a musical standpoint, the melodies, on the whole, are uninspired and commonplace. . . Due regard has not always been paid to the words when they were set to music. For example, in 'Do You Know?' and 'Thank You' main stress or accent sometimes falls on unimportant words. The plan of grouping eighth notes in 'On the Slide' would be confusing to young or inexperienced players and singers. Despite these adverse comments, the book is recommended to parents and teachers of young children. Some of the songs are pleasing and will be useful in early training." A. E. Pierce

— + El School J 39:715 My '39 470w

J Home Econ 31:187 Mr '39 20w

KNOX, ESTHER MELBOURNE. Swift flies the falcon; il. by Ruth King. 245p $2 Winston

(W) 39-9648

Story of the time of the first crusade, for junior high school age. Gareth and Margaret, children of the Earl of Penbridge, with a small band of followers, cross England, then Europe, and arrive in time to take part in the siege of Antioch.

Booklist 35:336 Je 1 '39

"It is a knightly story, romantic and reminiscent, and Ruth King's drawings have a romantic effect for all their familiar faces." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 My 7 '39 360w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 31 '39 250w

"The book is recommended for both junior and senior high school students." C. E. Scott

+ Library J 64:762 O 1 '39 160w

"The background is full of color and picturesque detail. . . The directness with which the story is told and the absence of long descriptions will attract readers whose first choice is not always a historical story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 13 '39 600w

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT. Let dons delight; being variations on a theme in an Oxford common-room. 280p $3 (7s 6d) Sheed

378.42 Oxford. University, England—Intellectual life. Church and state in Great Britain

39-15154

"The action of this remarkable piece of work preserves the unity of place, for it all happens in the common-room of Simon Magus at Oxford, but the span of time covers 350 years. We find ourselves in the common-room in 1588, 1638, and so on down to 1938. In dramatic dialogue the dons of each day hold forth and argue with one another, and the result is . . . a history of the changing currents of Oxford interests and opinions. At the end of each section the author appends pièces justificatives, imaginary biographical data about his figures." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Father Knox's learning is astounding. Yet he refuses to air it except in an easy, offhand manner. The book is dedicated: 'To Daphne, all this waste of time.' Read it, and see if you feel you have wasted a single minute." Leonard Feeney

+ America 61:358 Jl 22 '39 280w

Cath World 149:382 Je '39 180w

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 31 '39 330w

"Every week half a dozen or so books are called 'brilliant.' The adjective has lost its meaning for me except in describing the flashing facets of a diamond. But this time one may well compare Monsignor Knox's book with a diamond: it has many facets and they all flash. As diamonds go, I would say it is the Koh-i-noor, very brilliant." John Betjeman

New Statesman & Nation 17:390 Mr 11 '39 900w

"Mgr. Knox has devised a most entertaining method of indicating the continuity of Oxford life. Like a series of impersonations by Sacha Guitry, his conversations are so convincing, so aptly varied, that you cannot believe they are the work of one man. Because he knows all about parody he has been able to avoid the crudities of its caricature in these portraits; they are simply designed, natural, life-like." Ronald Lewin

+ Spec 162:602 Ap 7 '39 900w

"Monsignor Ronald Knox succeeds in capturing and reproducing the changes of language and speech each half century by virtue of that supersensitive literary ear which also enables him to write the subtlest parodies of contemporary writers for each half century, of Anthony Wood, of Thomas Hearne, of Boswell, Sydney Smith, Mark Pattison and, finally, Mr. Harold Nicolson. He has found in 'Let Dons Delight' a new formula which gives him the widest scope for the play of an acute humour which is the vehicle for searching but not unkindly criticism."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p118 F 25 '39 700w

KNOX, WILFRED LAWRENCE. St Paul and the church of the gentiles. 262p $4 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

227 Paul, Saint. Bible. New Testament—Epistles. Jews—Religion [39-25281]

"This volume is a very learned and acute study of Pauline theology in the light of the apostle's heritages from contemporary Hellenistic Judaism. Attention is clearly and convincingly drawn to the failure of eschatology as a satisfactory religious concept in the gentile environment where Paul labored, and the consequent necessity that he confronted in Athens and Corinth for a restatement of his Christian belief in other terms than those of Jewish eschatological expectations that had dominated in his earlier preaching." J Religion

"This incisive and thoroughgoing study is a most important contribution to the interpretation of Paul. Every serious student of the subject will need to examine it with care. But it seems to suffer from one conspicuous limitation. It makes Paul aim his message chiefly at Hellenistic philosophers. . . There is no reference whatsoever to the possibility that Paul made any adjustment to the contemporary gentile demand for a religion that insured mystical union with a savior. If the author had made himself as familiar with this aspect of the Hellenistic world as he is with its philosophical speculations, he might have given us a clearer insight into the actual work of Paul with the man on the street, so to speak, in the gentile cities where he won his converts to Christianity." S. J. Case

+ — J Religion 19:393 O '39 550w

"That the scholar should at all points find himself in complete agreement with the author is in a book of this kind a matter of secondary importance. Its great value lies in the fact that it states a particular case and does so with all the learning that it can command."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Mr 18 '39 800w

KOBER, ARTHUR. Pardon me for pointing; with il. by Gregor Duncan. 251p $2 Simon & Schuster

39-32017

Volume of short stories written in the vernacular and starring, chiefly, characters found on Broadway, in the Bronx, and in Hollywood.

" 'Pardon Me for Pointing' is not the strained, over-anxious kind of humor that attempts to tease guffaws and abdominal noises of laughter from the reader. It is the quiet humor of realistic observation, and, as such, distinctly worth your while." William Soskin

+ Books p12 D 10 '39 750w

Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 40w

"Away from the Bronx and the summer camps, Mr. Kober is agreeable but nothing special. Might have been called, 'Pardon Me for No Point.' "

New Repub 101:150 N 22 '39 30w

"Here are some of Arthur Kober's best sketches. . . All of them have seen print before, in newspapers and magazines. Now, assembled in a book, illustrated with thumb-nail drawings by Gregor Duncan, they are just as highly entertaining as at first reading." R. G. Doyle

+ N Y Times p9 N 19 '39 420w

New Yorker 15:85 N 4 '39 30w

"If you will grant that caricature means to suggest by exaggeration, and to give an illusion of wholeness while yet offering only a little of the external data—then you will see that Kober is a first-rate literary caricaturist, as effective with the bold, slashing line as anybody writing that sort of thing. . . We do not mean to be weighing down Mr. Kober's book with a message, but the fact remains that it is not only a funny book." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 N 4 '39 280w

"A few of the episodes show forced invention, and Mr Kober's dialog is best enjoyed in small doses, as he himself suggests by the scale of his sketches. But humorous obervation and a lively intelligence are usually found in his explorations of the commonplace and the tawdry."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 N 2 '39 200w

KOCH, FREDERICK HENRY, ed. American folk plays; ed, with an introd, "American folk drama in the making"; il. with phot. of the original productions of the plays; foreword by Archibald Henderson. 592p map $4 Appleton-Century

812.08 Folk drama (W) 39-27548

Twenty short plays written in playwriting courses at the University of North Carolina and other colleges, and produced successfully by college groups. "Each playmaker has honestly tried to get to grips with some one aspect of American life. It may be Davy Crockett or a farm woman of the North Dakota prairies—it may be a cowboy comedy or an Oklahoma tragedy—the same desire to work with native materials and make something of them is obvious in them all." (Sat R of Lit)

Booklist 35:361 Jl 1 '39

"Professor Koch has done a great work in bringing the opportunity and desire for dramatic self-expression to the South especially, and it seems almost ungracious to question these evidences of it. But one cannot help wondering if the time hasn't come for him to apply his great inspiration as a teacher to the creation of plays which have a more significant relation to the life of today." W. P. Eaton

Books p11 Jl 23 '39 160w

"The plays are workable and workmanlike. A few of them, 'Funeral Flowers for the Bride,' 'The Red Velvet Coat,' 'Git up and Bar the Door,' are better than that. But all of them should interest and stimulate little-theater groups throughout the country. . . These are good plays and honest plays, but it is hard to feel that any one of the contributors to the present volume is a potential Paul Green or Eugene O'Neill or Thomas Wolfe. However, I don't know the authors as well as Professor Koch does, and he has every chance of being righter about them than I am." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 20:18 Jl 1 '39 420w

"The plays are of every kind and of unequal value, but they represent in the round the rich material which our younger playwrights choose when they think in terms of the American scene."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:683 S '39 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p528 S 9 '39 480w

Wis Lib Bul 35:142 Jl '39

KOEHLER, ROBERT PORTNER. The doctor's murder case. 253p $2 Phoenix

39-17107

Detective story.

"Mr. Koehler presents a fairly mixed dish of occult implications and clews, some of it exciting in a wild and wide-eyed manner. See chapters entitled 'Dark Necromancy,' 'Wizardry's Last Stroke,' 'The Passing of the Witch's Devil,' and so forth." Will Cuppy

Books p9 Jl 16 '39 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p10 Jl 9 '39 90w

"Witchcraft, diabolism, and poltergeists among features of ably constructed tale with many unpleasant characters. Weird."

Sat R of Lit 20:21 Jl 8 '39 30w

KOEHLER, WILHELM REINHOLD WALTER, ed. Medieval studies in memory of A. Kingsley Porter. 2v il $25 Harvard univ. press [£5 5s Oxford]

709 Porter, Arthur Kingsley. Art, Medieval 39-12282

"There could hardly be a more appropriate memorial to a distinguished archaeologist than this collection of essays in his own field by friends and pupils of the late Professor Arthur Kingsley Porter, who died in 1933 at the early age of 53. The essays were contributed at the invitation of the Fine Arts Department of Harvard University, of which Porter held the chair from 1924 to the time of his death. . . The biographical sketch of Professor Porter is by his widow. . . Looked at as a whole, the studies dedicated to the memory of 'a great scholar and beloved teacher' create a terrifying effect of erudition. . . Among studies of more general interest are those on 'Chivalric and Dramatic Imitations of Arthurian Romance,' by Roger Sherman Loomis; 'Early Christian Art and the Far East,' by Edgar Waterman Anthony; and 'The Canon Tables of the Book of Kells,' by A. M. Friend, Junior." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by E. B. Garside
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 22 '39 1200w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p552 S 23 '39 650w

KOESTERS, LUDWIG. See Kösters, L.

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. The gladiators; tr. by Edith Simon. 398p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cape, J.]

Spartacus—Fiction 39-16854

Historical novel which tells the story of Spartacus and the Gladiators' war of 73-71 B.C.

"Koestler has brought the story to life. He's made a vital story of it, a historical novel that ranks with the best of our time." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p4 Jl 16 '39 950w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 56:974 Ag 9 '39 360w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 15 '39 80w

"Whether or not we can find any moral in this piece of adapted history is an open question. Another question that I wish to pose concerns the educational and moral value of struggling through such a welter of blood and mud. Personally I can find no pleasure in it. Nevertheless, here is a novel with an unusual subject, which is full of vitality, though occasionally overloaded with superfluous and rather tedious detail." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 17 '39 450w

Reviewed by James Orrick
New Repub 100:222 S 27 '39 390w

"A book about backgrounds is bound to be rather complicated, especially when filled with people of many nationalities; sometimes too much has been squashed in, and the transitional passages among the respectable are scarcely smooth enough; here and there the general feeling is Imperial rather than Republican. But the conversations are always good; what is said is not romantic but dialectic. It is a book which anyone who is wondering what will happen to us will do well to read." Naomi Mitchison
+ New Statesman & Nation 17:436 Mr 18 '39 800w

"This is an Olympian book. It looks down on humanity with age-old eyes and discovers with a kind of cynical joyousness that the man-eating pattern of history is a timeless design." Stanley Young
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 16 '39 750w
New Yorker 15:64 Jl 15 '39 20w

"As a picture of Italian life in the first century B.C. the book is effective; but like all attempts at the mass novel it diffuses interest among too many individuals, without quite succeeding in personifying the mass itself. . . . Even Spartacus himself remains shadowy. The most vividly drawn character in the book is no proletarian, but Crassus, with his cynical analysis of the economics of the decadent republic. Koestler's book could be more effectively organized; there is, however, a good deal of meat in it if you don't mind some tough chewing." Elmer Davis
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:7 Jl 15 '39 500w

"An excellent historical novel. . . This strange episode in Roman history makes an interesting and tragic romance, while the translation is unusually good. Herr Koestler draws a parallel between that period and our own, and the whole book reflects a somewhat pessimistic social philosophy, of which the failure of the humanitarian Sun State becomes a symbol." Forrest Reid
+ Spec 162:502 Mr 24 '39 100w

"Much of the narrative of this revolution is told by the lawyer Fulvius, as he inscribes details in his documents, sometimes with a touch of humor, sometimes with satire, but always with accuracy and pithy comment. Those who like historical novels will find satisfaction in this book. It makes alive a period which was choked with big events."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 23 '39 750w
Time 34:64 Jl 24 '39 280w

"Two things in the book deserve a special word of praise, the imaginary chronicle of Fulvius, a radical lawyer of Capua, and the sardonic portrait of Crassus. But 'The Gladiators' as a whole is a finely tempered and often poetical piece of work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 11 '39 800w

KOEVES, TIBOR. Timetable for tramps; a European testament. 244p $3 Houghton

910 Travel 40-1258

"Tibor Koeves belongs in that numerous and widely scattered group of human beings who, casting back into memory, can recall no moment when a railroad train, a steamship, an airplane—or even an open road—failed to stir within them that strange restlessness called 'wanderlust,' or the urge to travel. But unlike his kindred spirits who obey but never question, Mr. Koeves decided one day not to accept the phenomenon any longer without inquiry. Over years then, traveling from city to city in Europe and to America as a journalist, he studied his fellow travelers and looked carefully and deep within himself. His findings, which amount to a new theory of travel, form . . . this fine book." Books

"New and refreshing and extremely provocative reading material for all who have traveled, are traveling or plan to travel." R. G. Doyle
+ Books p4 N 26 '39 900w

"If Tibor Koeves wrote his book in English, he deserves commendation for an unusual mastery of idiom. If, however, it was translated from the Hungarian, certain lapses into awkwardness and quaintness are less forgivable. In any case, its content should gain the book an appreciative audience. . . 'Time Table for Tramps' is a book of charm, gusto and real insight. It will surely appeal to most of us, who like to flatter ourselves that we are real travellers at heart." E. E. McLaughlin
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 23 '39 230w

"Here is a brilliant, entertaining, searching book."
+ N Y Times p30 D 10 '39 480w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 15:116 D 2 '39 450w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '39 600w
Time 34:86 D 11 '39 360w

KOHLER, WOLFGANG. Place of value in a world of facts. 418p $3.75 Liveright

121 Worth. Science—Philosophy 39-7716

"In this book, presented originally as the William James lectures at Harvard during the first half of the academic year 1934-35, Wolfgang Köhler applies his astonishing erudition and vigorously creative mind to some of the problems which dwell in that crepuscular area between science and philosophy. In language too technical for the lay reader he fuses his physiological and philosophical interests, adds relevant observations from such fields as neurology, quantum physics, biology, axiology (value-theory), and phenomenology, and produces a result of high import for the philosophy of science." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

KOHLER, WOLFGANG—Continued

Reviewed by H. L. Hollingworth
Am J Psychol 53:146 Ja '40 2750w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p22 F 26 '39 410w

Reviewed by R. A. Tsanoff
Ethics 49:368 Ap '39 550w
J Philos 36:107 F 16 '39 600w

"Those familiar with some of [his] previous writings know that he treats a subject solidly and seriously. . . One feels that his analysis is essentially sound but not rigorously formulated. . . Professor Köhler is to be commended for his able invasion of a difficult field." Justus Buchler
+ N Y Times p6 F 5 '39 700w

"The general reader, unaware of the riddles that have rocked the philosophy of science and unacquainted with the history of physiological psychology, will derive little pleasure from the book except from the opening pages. . . The book as a whole is required reading for those intellectually fit to pursue the problems of value in terms of the philosophy of science." R. B.
Sat R of Lit 19:22 Ja 7 '39 350w

KOHN, HANS. Revolutions and dictatorships; essays in contemporary history. 437p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

940.5 Revolutions. Dictators. Nationalism and nationality. History, Modern. World politics 39-27549

"The introductory section [of Professor Kohn's volume] deals with messianism, the historical role of the Jews, the Napoleonic era, and the growth of nationalism. The author then turns to twentieth-century Europe: the Russian revolution, fascism and national socialism, which he compares with Soviet communism, the ascendancy of the State over the individual, the Spanish civil war. The discussion shifts from Europe to the Near East, where Professor Kohn has lived for eight years, to the Turkish revolution, the situation in Arabia, and the vicissitudes of the Zionist movement. The volume closes with a general analysis of the present international situation which the author describes as the 'totalitarian crisis.'" N Y Times

Reviewed by Preston Slosson
Am Hist R 45:444 Ja '40 250w

"Revolutions and Dictatorships is not intended to be a systematic treatise, but it is an interesting, well written, and scholarly book which throws much light on the tangled web of our times. As such, it deserves to be widely read." R. H. Wells
+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:888 O '39 600w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Am Soc R 4:738 O '39 360w

"The volume deals with some great controversial problems, and it is, therefore, bound to invite discussion and even opposition among those who take a contrary point of view. Thoughtful readers, of whatever opinion, will welcome this book as a vital, genuine, and intelligent contribution to our knowledge of today's problems." H. N. Howard
+ Ann Am Acad 205:170 S '39 550w
Booklist 35:362 Jl 1 '39

Reviewed by E. S. Bates
Books p9 S 3 '39 600w

"These essays are clear, direct, and informed. They are not the product of a foreign correspondent or a disgusted diplomat, and therefore lack the salt of personal participation in events. But they put the last quarter of a century into illuminating perspective." H. M. Jones
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 27 '39 1000w

"It is full of good things; if not quite a 'must' book, it is decidedly important. Unfortunately its principal defect is a serious one. The publisher's note on the dust-cover speaks of the author as one 'who knows the background of the modern world and appreciates its intellectual and moral forces.' Was it advisedly that no mention was made of its other, especially its economic forces? These, at any rate, Prof. Kohn treats with an indifference that, however sublime, is altogether unpardonable." R. E. K. Pemberton
+ — Canadian Forum 19:131 Jl '39 500w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
Christian Century 56:926 Jl 26 '39 600w

"This is a disappointing book for various reasons. The most important one is the unwillingness of the author, intentionally or unconsciously, to present an unbiased picture of the dictatorships he discusses. This indisposition is evident in several of the dozen essays that constitute this volume. In general the book is a condemnation of dictatorships and a complimentary analysis of the accomplishments of democracy. However the tendency to condemn fascism and its degenerate offspring, naziism, and at the same time to minimize the repulsive features of communism, is strongly marked. The author is definitely not of the opinion that the three are basically equals in evil." Paul Kinlery
— Commonweal 30:220 Je 16 '39 300w
Foreign Affairs 18:369 Ja '40 20w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 149:104 Jl 22 '39 1100w

"In spite of the diversity of the subjects embraced within the scope of Professor Kohn's discussion, the volume gives a pleasing sense of unity; the thread of the narrative is never permitted to become entangled in superfluous details. The author displays impressive erudition. He writes with distinction, vigor and charm. The pages devoted to the position of the Jews in Germany are among the best in the book. They convey a vivid impression not only of the tragedy of Israel under the National Socialist rule but also of its significance beyond the frontiers of the Third Reich." M. T. Florinsky
+ N Y Times p14 Je 4 '39 1050w

"Few writers in the United States can bring to such a job the erudition, the first-hand knowledge of European and Near Eastern nationalism, the grasp of forces underlying the history of our times which Dr. Kohn has at his command. In this collection of essays he gives an excellent bird's-eye view of the nineteenth century landscape which serves as background for the ideologies and power politics of today. It would be difficult to disagree with his analysis of the past hundred years. . . Innumerable questions, however, are raised by his invariably stimulating discussion of the new forms taken by nationalism after the World war. . . It is even more difficult, for this reviewer, to agree with the conclusions which Dr. Kohn draws from his analysis in the final essay on 'The Totalitarian Crisis.'" V. M. Dean
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:17 Je 17 '39 1150w

Reviewed by I. L. Kandel
Social Educ 3:509 O '39 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 11 '39 950w

Reviewed by J. C. deWilde
Survey G 28:505 Ag '39 450w

Reviewed by Hajo Holborn
Yale R n s 29:177 autumn '39 550w

KOMROFF, MANUEL. The march of the hundred. 305p $2.50 Coward-McCann

40-2196

An allegorical story of the last twenty years. It concerns a man and his circle of friends, marching toward a peace they cannot find, a home which seems non-existent. The book closes on a note of hope.

"A gentle Jeremiad, tangent to our world but not of it, a tale that would have been better as a poem. For I think the story fails in this overlong prose narrative. Such a feeling, spiritual, intellectual thing must be clothed in beauty to make itself felt and heard. This is too soft to hold our attention." F. T. Marsh

Books p12 N 19 '39 500w

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 23 '39 600w

New Repub 101:270 D 20 '39 50w

"Certain notions and characters have emerged; but they are vague and static. While the reviewer is not inclined to quibble about a formula for fiction, this particular novel seems to be definitely out of bounds." Harold Strauss

N Y Times p6 N 12 '39 650w

"Mr. Komroff [is] sincere, too, and well-intentioned, but pretty dull and clumsy."

New Yorker 15:106 N 18 '39 40w

"There are limitless potentialities in such a treatment of the chaos of modern life. Some of them are realized in the beginning of the tale, which is enveloped in an atmosphere of fantasy that is both ironically suggestive and moving. Mr. Komroff may seem at times to be overambitious. . . But much is redeemed by such a sequence of inspired irony as the Hundred's attempt to determine their identity by ascertaining the identity of an enemy. . . Though the book forsakes the method and language of literature for that of a rather rhetorical journalism, it nevertheless deals thoughtfully with some of the profoundest questions of our time and remains, in spots, excitingly suggestive." J. S. Mabon

Sat R of Lit 21:7 N 11 '39 550w

KOREY, EDWARD L., and RUNGE, EDMOND JOSEPH. Economics: principles and problems. 687p il $1.80 Longmans

330.1 Economics 39-13728

"[In this high school text] economics as a study is clearly defined and distinguished from economic systems extant today; namely, fascism, capitalism, socialism, and communism. The greater portion of the book is devoted to the modifications of capitalism. Adam Smith and laissez-faire are quietly laid to rest in a sentence or two. The subsequent interventions of social controls such as subsidies, tariffs, price and credit regulations, monopoly controls, standardizations, collective bargaining, and so forth are all well presented and discussed in chapter divisions. The opening chapter very appropriately introduces the consumer and his problems as the burden of any economic system." Social Educ

"The reviewer found the text well adapted to the high school level of learning. It appears that the authors have a thorough understanding of the average high school student's interests. Illustrations and examples are skilfully drawn." R. J. Ahlstrom

+ Social Educ 3:594 N '39 380w

"An ideal book for schools that are using the Unit method of instruction or are in the process of developing it." D. W. Harr

+ Social Studies 30:378 D '39 100w

KORNITZER, LOUIS. Gem trader [Eng title: The bridge of gems]. 265p $2.75 Sheridan [8s 6d Bles]

553.8 Gems 39-27807

Further autobiographical reminiscences of the author of Pearl Trader (Book Review Digest, 1937), this time dealing with his experiences in trading and collecting opals, turquoises, rubies, emeralds, diamonds, etc. In addition to his anecdotes, the author also gives a good deal of information concerning precious stones in an informal style. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:63 O 15 '39

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

"As a book of information 'Gem Trader' concludes with gem tables, a gem bibliography, and colored illustrations of the most important gems. But it is most unusual and interesting in its personal aspects, and it is written with sincerity and real charm."

+ N Y Times p16 S 24 '39 400w

"This book is the story of Kornitzer's experiences—exciting, touching, astonishing, amusing. As in his previous volume, 'Pearl Trader,' he presents with simple and enthusiastic directness the drama and the glamour of gems and the lives of those who covet and own them." R. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:22 O 7 '39 300w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 11 '40 750w

"Though the book is easy to read through, an excellent index makes it also a good book of reference."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 27 '39 150w

KORSCH, KARL. Karl Marx. (Modern sociologists ser) 248p $1.75 Wiley [6s Chapman]

335.4 Marx, Karl 39-20981

"The book is not a biography of Marx, but a collection of essays on many aspects of Marxism, a definition of which only gradually unfolds itself as one reads. The various ingredients of Marx's development, Hegel, Rousseau, Ricardo, St. Simon, Feuerbach, Chartism, Blanqui and Darwin, all of them transformed against the vivid background of the political struggles within the bourgeois era, are handled sensitively yet profoundly by Professor Korsch. In the final chapter he deals with Lenin's struggles with the various brands of Leftism." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by J. E. Moffat

Am Econ R 29:564 S '39 250w

"No one has written a more scholarly study on Marx than Mr. Korsch; the author shows an acquaintance with Marx's writings that few can equal. It is also true that few writers have shown so firm a grasp upon the sources of Marx's ideas. Yet the book hardly achieves its purpose. It aims to serve as a textbook for students in universities, adult education classes, and the intelligent reader. But it does not create an understanding of its subject as do similar books by G. D. H. Cole, A. D. Lindsay, and Sydney Hook." B. E. Lippincott

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:1113 D '39 900w

"Whether or not Professor Korsch's basic interpretation turns out to be valid, there is no doubt that he has thrown a flood of light upon some of the more puzzling features of Marx's method. Although the book is not easy reading, it will repay study." Sidney Hook

+ Books p21 F 26 '39 700w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Repub 100:318 O 18 '39 550w

"Professor Korsch unfortunately writes an exceedingly Teutonic English, which makes the reading of his book a continual struggle. This is a pity; for his exposition is much more than a mere vulgarisation of the essential Marxian doctrines, and embodies a great deal that is of value, especially concerning the relationship between the Marxian and the Hegelian approaches to the study of society. From the standpoint of the reader who is not already familiar with these contrasted approaches, the arrangement of the book is unfortunate. . . Those who take the trouble to overcome the barriers of Professor Korsch's Teutonic English and Teutonic habit of thought will find in his book one of the best expositions of the Marxian dialectics available to English readers." G. D. H. Cole

+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:1100 D 24 '38 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 18 '39 110w

KOSTERS, LUDWIG. The believer's Christ; tr. by Joseph W. Grundner. 416p $3.25 Herder

232.8 Jesus Christ—Divinity 39-8755

"The author proves the divinity of Christ from the Gospels, the testimony of the early Fathers, the miracles that confirm our Lord's own witness, the fact of the Resurrection, and the failure of contradictory, a priori rationalist criticism to explain the historical Christ." Cath World

Cath World 150:250 N '39 140w

"In some instances Father Koesters makes difficulties seem too easy of solution and shows 'apologetic' optimism about the final clarifications of age old questions, which may be the result of wishful thinking. On the whole this is a readable, informative and fairly complete review of the present situation in Biblical criticism." H. A. Reinhold

+ — Commonweal 30:192 Je 9 '39 500w

KOUES, HELEN. How to be your own decorator. 120p il $1.25 Tudor

747 House decoration (W) 38-29021

"The principles of furniture arrangement, the use of color and fabrics, and the types of period decorating explained simply, and excellently illustrated with photographs and diagrams. Emphasis is on livableness and charm, and the homes pictured are not elaborate. Based on work at the Good housekeeping studio." Booklist

Booklist 35:155 Ja 1 '39

"Unfortunately, this book affects me as being a series of articles rounded up by a person giving an assignment, rather than written by someone who had something to give the world. No sparkle, no personality, just the humdrum dabbing into periods and color with amazing monotony. Decorating becomes a laborious responsibility instead of fun. Happily, pictures are plentiful, so that one's imagination gets some stimulation." R. L. Batchelder

— + Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '38 230w

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 13 '39 170w

KOZLENKO, WILLIAM, ed. The best short plays of the social theatre; with an introduction. 456p $2.50 Random house

812.08 Dramas—Collections. American drama—Collections (W) 39-27034

Ten plays of protest against social wrongs. Contents: Waiting for Lefty, by Clifford Odets; Bury the Dead, by Irwin Shaw; Hymn to the Rising Sun, by Paul Green; The Cradle Will Rock, by Marc Blitzstein; Private Hicks, by Albert Maltz; Plant in the Sun, by Ben Bengal; This Earth is Ours, by William Kozlenko; Give All Thy Terrors to the Wind, by Claire and Paul Sifton; Running Dogs, by John Wexley; The Dog Beneath the Skin, by W. H. Auden and Christopher Isherwood.

Booklist 35:202 F 15 '39

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p16 Ap 30 '39 160w

"These young men, and the new movement of which they constitute a representative part, do not believe in isolationalism in art any more than in life. Their art is still in its infancy, it is true, but it is the infancy of a Gargantua. It is rude and ribald in manner; it is gangling in form. But, it is alive, robust and purposeful. Yes, it is a crusader in spirit." Frank O'Flaherty

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 11 '39 800w

Canadian Forum 19:95 Je '39 380w

Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky

Christian Century 56:287 Mr 1 '39 1150w

"Although there is great variety in the methods of attack, about half the plays in this volume draw the same conclusion: that an oppressed class must stand together to get what it wants. . . As a volume these social plays contain the carefully strained living matter of the vital modern drama. They are theatrical landmarks above the colossal wasteland of the tepid and the false in our dramatic presentations. The contributors are all relatively young. Many of them have already written better plays. And all of them have two great qualities—world minds and the courage to speak as they think. They have also the good fortune to live in countries where they can speak." Stanley Young

+ N Y Times p15 F 5 '39 1050w

"Gives you a good idea of the lively, if not always successful, insurgent drama."

New Yorker 14:59 Ja 28 '39 30w

Pratt p23 summer '39

Reviewed by Richard Lockridge

Sat R of Lit 19:13 Mr 11 '39 550w

"The word 'best' is always arbitrary and dangerous to use in any selection, but Mr. Kozlenko has handled it very well in selecting this group of important short plays with social content." Tom Squire

+ Theatre Arts Mo 23:231 Mr '39 480w

KRAELING, EMIL GOTTLIEB HEINRICH. Book of the ways of God; with 8 il. by William Blake. 283p $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d S.P.C.K.]

223.1 Bible. Old Testament—Job 39-17006

A study of the Book of Job, including both the findings of higher criticism and the author's own attempts at interpretation of its literary and religious values.

Boston Transcript p7 My 27 '39 120w

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 56:322 Mr 8 '39 550w

"One cannot but feel that Dr. Kraeling has given insufficient consideration to the intellectual and spiritual strivings of the age in which the author lived, and in which he shared. This, however, is a minor point, since Dr. Kraeling rightly insists that it is the present Book of Job, 'the classic treatment of the theodicy problem, in poetic form,' which is important. His treatise should help many to a clearer understanding the often difficult argument of the Book of Job, and to a deeper appreciation of its beauty." C. A. Simpson

+ Living Church 101:10 Ag 30 '39 180w

"This work by an American scholar, presupposes not only much interest in the Book of Job, but also a rather full knowledge of it, and it sets a considerable tax upon the reader's powers of concentration. It is somewhat heavy and inelegant in style, and not a little dull, though a few brightly lit pages atone for some of these imperfections."

New Statesman & Nation 17:226 F 11 '39 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p812 D 24 '38 210w

KRAFT, CHARLES FRANKLIN. The strophic structure of Hebrew poetry; as illustrated in the first book of the Psalter. 117p $1 Univ. of Chicago press [5s Cambridge]

492.467 Hebrew language—Versification. Bible. Old Testament—Psalms 39-5249

"The parallelism, or couplet structure of Hebrew poetry has been familiar for many years to all students of the language and to attentive readers of the English versions. Indications of larger patterns have been observed, but these have not been adequately studied. Dr. Kraft, examining with particular attention the first book of the Psalter, has given what is probably the most thorough analysis of the structure of Hebrew poetry that has yet been produced." Christian Century

Christian Century 56:26 Ja 4 '39 60w

"The author has command of his subject. His conclusions are reasonable and convincing. His discussion not only enhances aesthetic appreciation of the form of the poems but also aids in the interpretation of their thought and, to some extent, in the criticism of their text. The format of the publication, planograph, is to be commended as a satisfactory means for making such technical studies available at a very reasonable price." R. A. Bowman

+ J Religion 19:409 O '39 180w

KRAMER, HORACE. Marginal land. 426p $2.50 Lippincott

(W) 39-5470

Young Stephen Randall, earning a twelve-dollar salary in a Chicago basement, is taken with pneumonia and on recovering is ordered out of the city. He has inherited a vast ranch out in the Dakotas and goes there, followed later by his recently wedded wife. There in the years that follow he is visited by all the afflictions and discouragements the country has to offer, but eventually he wins thru to something like success, a healthy body and mind, and a second marriage when the first has failed.

Booklist 35:307 My 15 '39

"A writer who can make a convincing document of faith in such an environment, and who can, despite his realistic accuracy, create an appealing life for the people of his story, is truly a romantic novelist. Mr. Kramer's book, warm and tender in its sympathies and understandings, will satisfy chronic dreamers about the soil and the most avid yearners for the sturdy, good, not-ploughed-under life." William Soskin

+ Books p4 Ap 2 '39 1000w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 Je '39

"The book is swiftly styled, facile but sure in its characterization, and filled with a robust sympathy for both the man and the thwarted, eager earth."

+ Nation 148:409 Ap 8 '39 220w

"Mr. Kramer has made the daily business of his characters absorbing enough to hold our interest to the end, and beyond the end, of his book. He has the gift of making ordinary things interesting." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 26 '39 950w

"Mr. Kramer writes without elegance or distinction and his women are stock figures, but somehow he gives a new and warm life to the threadbare man-vs.-nature theme." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:78 Ap 1 '39 70w

"One wishes that Mr. Kramer could be persuaded to give up the use of miracle-working adverbs like 'instinctively,' and occasional coinages like 'definitize.' But these are minor flaws in a very real new talent, one which is sober, honest, and dedicated to an understanding treatment of sound human values." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 19:13 Mr 25 '39 550w

Wis Lib Bul 35:65 Ap '39

KRANOLD, HERMAN. The international distribution of raw materials. 269p $3.50 Harper [15s Routledge]

380.9 Commercial products. Economic policy [38-14433]

Scientific study of the wealth of fifteen nations as evidenced in their raw materials, and an attempt to estimate the influence of these factors upon the political issues which arise therefrom. The work contains seventy pages of statistical tables. The author is associate professor of economics, Talladega college, Alabama. Index.

Reviewed by E. W. Zimmerman

Am Econ R 29:580 S '39 2100w

"Most of the available factual material needed for a dispassionate judgment on the issues in current debate is clearly given; and Mr Kranold is probably weakest when he discusses the political aspects of the matter and reaches the conclusion that the problem is one of 'education in international virtue.'"

+ — Economist 130:561 Mr 12 '38 100w

"A real contribution, especially welcome for its seventy pages of statistical tables."

+ Foreign Affairs 17:437 Ja '39 10w

New Repub 100:167 S 13 '39 30w

"The book is of real value, and it is written in a style which makes a dull subject readable. One must, however, criticise its attempt to prove that the 'Haves' are not really 'Haves.' With this end in view too great importance is attached to secondary raw materials, and the resources of the Dominions and of India are excluded in the estimate made of Britain's place among the Powers." Freda Utley

+ — New Statesman & Nation 15:1096 Je 25 '38 600w

"This is a grand, solid, foursquare book, equally rich in facts, ideas, and humanity. Dry statistics alternate with drier wit; audacity is balanced by caution, idealism by common-sense regard for the unpleasant reality. . . Some criticisms must be made, of which one is indeed admitted by the author. The statistics of raw-material wealth cover only production and stocks; they take no account, with very few exceptions, of potential wealth, ores in unexploited seams, virgin timber, and so forth. . . Other criticisms will no doubt occur to other readers; no mathematical inevitability of demonstration is possible in this field. But they do not seriously lessen the admiration due to this outstandingly valuable and really impressive piece of work." Honor Croome

+ — Spec 160:638 Ap 8 '38 600w

"The seventy odd pages of statistical tables which he has compiled form in themselves a valuable aid to the study of raw materials. Experts differ about nothing so much as they do about statistics—which, notoriously, can be made to prove anything—and they no doubt will find plenty in Mr. Kranold's compilations to dispute over. Others will be content to acknowledge the care and caution with which he has handled his figures and the honest purpose which has moved him to produce this book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Ap 23 '38 440w

KRAUS, EDWARD HENRY, and SLAWSON, CHESTER BAKER. Gems and gem materials. 3d ed 287p il col pl map $3.50 (21s) McGraw

553.8 Precious stones 39-11019

"The book has been reset; 65 new illustrations, and a chapter on metals used in gem mountings, as well as other new material, have been added." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1926. Index.

Booklist 35:349 Je 15 '39

J Geol 47:671 Ag '39 150w

"Most of the small inaccuracies which were found in previous editions have now been corrected, but some still remain. . . Thanks to the clarity of the writing, the wide range covered by the book, and its many illustrations, 'Gems and Gem Materials' is one of the most attractive texts on the subject that has yet appeared. It is a pity that so liberal a use of illustrations must inevitably entail a price which the needy jeweller's assistant will find it difficult to afford." B. W. A.

+ — Nature 144:372 Ag 26 '39 270w

KRAUSE, HERBERT. Wind without rain. 364p $2.50 Bobbs

(W) 39-27087

An impoverished Minnesota farm is the scene of this tense story, narrated by one of four sons of Farmer Vildvogel, a harsh and violent man, poisoned by the memory of his own bitter past.

KRAUSE, HERBERT—Continued

Reviewed by Frances Woodward
Atlantic My '39 140w

Booklist 35:223 Mr 1 '39

"Though some of the more purely imaginative portions of 'Wind Without Rain' lack definition, this first novel presents a bleak and dramatic story so vigorously and cunningly that it leaves behind a singular sense of veracity and power." Iris Barry

+ — Books p5 F 12 '39 700w

"In his first novel, Mr. Krause has really shot the works: he has almost written a novel to end all such novels. He has spared his victims (the characters I mean) no form of misery, and he has exhausted most of the stock themes: frustrated artistic genius, the barrenness of a way of life founded on hate rather than on love, the losing struggle against a tyrant soil, and above all, the tragedy of inarticulateness. . . For all his faults, Mr. Krause will some day be a good enough novelist to regret 'the dark inching worm of fate.' Even now he is good enough to demand the severity of treatment which he has here received." Albert Guerard, Jr.

— + Boston Transcript p1 Mr 18 '39 460w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 160w

"The outstanding virtue of the book is less its characterisation than the very high standard maintained throughout, of Mr. Krause's writing, imaginative, graphic, and sometimes powerful, the writing of one who says, 'When a man can't dream any more he might as well die.'" J. D. Beresford

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 7 '39 280w

Reviewed by L. B. Salomon
Nation 148:208 F 18 '39 400w

Reviewed by Miriam Borgenicht
New Repub 98:144 Mr 8 '39 200w

"For all its over-emphasis, Wind Without Rain is highly impressive, and though any isolated page may seem over-written, its culminating effect is undeniably moving. Mr. Krause presents his characters as wholly of a piece with their environment, and sees their toils and wild junketings (these last exceptionally well described) as almost animal reflexes to their conditions of life." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:90 Jl 15 '39 700w

"'Wind Without Rain' is realism come full circle. There have been grim novels of rural life before, but few to approach this in sheer unrelieved dolor. . . There is no denying the power of the picture Mr. Krause has created. If it appears to weaken toward the end, this is largely because the tension has been too long and fiercely maintained." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p6 F 12 '39 550w

"Among the themes apt to dazzle the beginning young novelist are these two: the frustrated artist and the decaying family. 'Wind Without Rain,' by a capable newcomer named Herbert Krause, contains both. . . [He] treats them with sincerity, simplicity, and, on occasion, power. He does not seem aware that his story in its essentials has been told before. This innocence lends 'Wind Without Rain' an element of conviction. By the time Mr. Krause tackles his second novel he will have forgotten to be proud of the bits of fine writing that stud his prose like cheap jewelry." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 14:81 F 11 '39 300w

"One of the best first novels in a good many years. . . It is not a comforting book. Good does not triumph. Truth felled to earth does not rise again stronger than before. Virtue gets as its reward only the bitter ash of disillusion. For all that, it is a very beautiful novel. Occasionally it is beautiful in its material. . . But mainly it is beautiful in the how of its writing. Herbert Krause was poet before he turned novelist. He is still a poet here, clairvoyantly sensitive to the evocative power of language. . . The beauty of his style doesn't dilute the honesty of his scenes, yet even in the bitterest of those scenes his words sing. And he has passion, feeling as opposed to sentiment, a seeing eye, artistic integrity." Wallace Stegner

+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 F 11 '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p419 Jl 15 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 35:51 Mr '39

KREMER, J. BRUCE. John Hanson of Mulberry Grove. 188p il maps $2.50 Boni

B or 92 Hanson, John 39-1902

"The name of John Hanson should be well known in this question-box era as the quibbler's answer to the question, 'Who was the first President of the United States?' This small volume, which is a little more than a biography and a little less than a history, tells all that is known of John Hanson's career including the period when he was 'President of the United States in Congress Assembled,' the first man elected for a stated term after the ratification of the Articles of Confederation by the States. . . And because Hanson was of Scandinavian ancestry, Mr. Kremer says a good deal about the Scandinavians in colonial history. In fact, he says far more about the Hanson family, its Swedish background and migration from Delaware to Maryland, than he says about John Hanson." Boston Transcript

"Historical evidence dealing with Hanson is so scarce that Mr. Kremer had to strain mightily at the facts to make even his few claims for the importance of his subject. As the story of a family the book is charmingly done, with a neat and justifiable emphasis upon the background. But John Hanson still remains a comparatively minor figure in American history." R. E. Moody

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 4 '39 260w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 25 '39 400w

KRENEK, ERNST. Music here and now; tr. by Barthold Fles. 306p $3 Norton

780.9 Music—History and criticism
(W) 40-1094

The author of this book, who is also the composer of Jonny Spielt Auf "has striven to make a place for himself in the musical world variously as pianist, critic, and conductor. To these activities may be added the authorship of the present volume, which seeks to relate the writing of music at the present time to the social situation of the composer, his place in the economic scheme by which music is produced, and the attitude of his listeners." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 36:210 F 1 '40

"The fact that Ernst Křenek is known to be a latter-day adherent of the principles of Schoenberg and the twelve-tone system prepares the reader of 'Music Here and Now' for some very special pleading undertaken with the zeal of the recent convert. The special pleading is undoubtedly there, although frequently disclaimed, but there is so much else in the book both thought provoking and well expressed that no reader who is interested in music should miss it, whatever his prejudices. 'Music Here and Now' is one of the most stimulating books in recent seasons." Douglas Moore

+ Books p13 Ja 21 '40 950w

"A thoughtful and provocative book." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 14 '40 650w

"One has the curious feeling, when the last page has been turned, of not knowing whether Křenek has written this book to examine a situation for his readers, or to clarify his own approach to the problem of being a composer in the contemporary musical milieu. Part of this may be attributed to the mixture of intellectual sophistication and emotional naiveté which underlie the writing, and part to one's own knowledge that Křenek has himself pursued a somewhat various course as a composer. . . This is not as remote from a consideration of the present volume as it may seem, for this problem of orientation, of establishing a style and an attitude, is a fundamental one in the works of many of the men whom Křenek discusses." Irving Kolodin

Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ja 20 '40 450w

KREY, AUGUST CHARLES. A regional program for the social studies. 140p $1.25 (5s 6d) Macmillan

307 Social sciences—Study and teaching. Minneapolis. Tuttle school 38-11765

"This little book . . . is merely one more attempt at curriculum building, with especial emphasis on the importance of adapting a social studies course to the region which is to use it in its schools—in this case a midwest agricultural section. In reality it is much more than that. Professor Krey has developed a philosophy of curriculum building not only for Minnesota in 1938 but for any time and any clime. He and his seminar of teachers have then constructed a program in accordance with its principles." Social Educ

Reviewed by L. A. Cook

Am J Soc 45:625 Ja '40 170w

Reviewed by H. A. Bloch

Am Soc R 4:906 D '39 70w

"With the co-operation of graduate students at the University of Minnesota, the author presents a program for the region centering in Minneapolis. It may be considered, however, as a model and a type for any similar agricultural region the chief activities of which are concerned with dairying and the production and the processing of small grains. . . The monograph, in the reviewer's opinion, suffers somewhat from the fault that it is not specific enough. . . Krey's excellent book deserves careful study by all school administrators, supervisors, teacher trainers, and teachers of the social studies." R. R. Ryder

+ — School R 47:152 F '39 550w

"The last chapter of the book, contributed by Miss Fay Rogers of the Tuttle School, Minneapolis, is an account of her study of the district in which she teaches—its social characteristics, its economic basis, its world relationships, its cultural background. It is a splendid example of what should be a 'required activity' for all social studies teachers." Ruth West

+ Social Educ 2:588 N '38 700w

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. The four apes, and other fables of our day; decorations by Emile Beliveau. 230p $2.50 L. Raley, 505 5th av, N.Y.

792 Radio plays

Ten radio plays and fables in verse which were produced by N B C last winter.

"A good deal of it smacks suspiciously of doggerel, though perhaps one should not speak so patronizingly of one who has proved himself on other occasions to be a first-rate poet. Evidently it is not easy to write good stuff for the radio."

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 70w

"These plays . . . are vivacious, tinkling, always competent, sometimes not without a certain depth. They do not, however, stand alone; for realization they must depend upon the timbre and idiosyncratic spell of the radio. One welcomes them, as one welcomed Archibald MacLeish's experiments in radio drama, for their promise of a new and important medium in development; but one cannot read them for themselves." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:14 Ja 20 '40 90w

KREYMBORG (krām'bôrg)

KRISTOFFERSEN, EVA M. Cyclone goes a-viking; a story of Norway; pictured by Hedvig Collin. 94p $2 Whitman, A.

Children in Norway 39-22931

Cyclone was a Norwegian farm boy who longed to go to sea; Windy, his girl cousin, did not appreciate sailing with her sea captain father. This story, of the year which Windy spent on the farm with Cyclone and his family, shows how matters were arranged to the satisfaction of all.

Booklist 36:74 O 15 '39

"The title is something less than accurate, but its details will make farm life in Norway attractive to small school children. The many pictures, most of them in gay colors, are by a famous Scandinavian illustrator." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 27 '39 280w

"Accounts of a rural Christmastide, skiing, skating and boating festivals, and a country wedding and wedding feast are of special interest. The illustrations, most of which are in color, are varied and authentic." Vivian Lundberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 4 '39 90w

Reviewed by Marian Herr

Library J 64:903 N 15 '39 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 40w

KRIVITSKY, WALTER G. In Stalin's secret service [Eng title: I was Stalin's agent]. 273p $3 Harper [10s 6d Hamilton, H]

947 Russia—Politics and government. Russia—Foreign policy. Secret service—Russia (W) 40-27004

Personal narrative of the man who served for several years as chief of the Soviet intelligence in western Europe, and is now living in exile. Much of the material has been published in articles in the Saturday Evening Post. Contents: Stalin appeases Hitler; The end of the Communist International; Stalin's hand in Spain; When Stalin counterfeited dollars; The Ogpu; Why did they confess? Why Stalin shot his generals; My break with Stalin.

Booklist 36:197 Ja 15 '40

" 'In Stalin's Secret Service' is internally consistent and, in the reading, altogether convincing. The author is a part of the scenes he describes. . . It is virtually incredible that such a work, with its multiplicity of details about nearly all the important characters on the Russian stage, could have been written by any one not of high place in the Soviet system. It is, of course, true that though a book may be self-confuting it cannot be self-proving; its truth ultimately depends not on its internal consistency or plausibility but on its relation to external fact. But while awaiting that final confirmation which only the future can give, one may believe, on the basis of the internal evidence and the limited external evidence now available, that 'In Stalin's Secret Service' will in all probability survive the test." E. S. Bates

+ Books p4 N 19 '39 1450w

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 490w

Cath World 150:630 F '40 360w

"Fiction is shamed and put in the shade by this tale of intrigue, deception, and horrors recounted by 'General Krivitsky.' . . It is all most plausibly argued, and the author's thesis has certainly been borne out by events." W. H. C.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 22 '39 350w

"No matter where you stand on the question of Soviet politics, you are going to read W. G. Krivitsky's 'In Stalin's Secret Service.' Its value is not decreased by the fact that a large part of the book was published in the Saturday Evening Post during the last twelve months, for Mr. Krivitsky has added so many interesting details to the original version that it is well worth rereading." Ludwig Lore

+ Nation 150:24 Ja 6 '40 1100w

KRIVITSKY, W. G.—Continued
Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 102:120 Ja 22 '40 4750w
Reviewed by Kingsley Martin
New Statesman & Nation 18:861 D 9 '39 700w

"Krivitsky's introductory statement of the reasons that led to his desertion from the Soviet ranks displays a noble elevation of soul, keen sympathy for the hungry village and homeless children, unbounded affection for the deported peasants, fervent devotion to the cause of humanity. Unhappily, these exalted sentiments, surprising enough in a man long used to the methods of the Ogpu, are difficult to reconcile with the harshness of Soviet realities he himself depicts in somewhat too vivid colors. The question why Krivitsky failed to perceive, until the Spring of 1937, that the road to the salvation of mankind was not necessarily identical with Stalin's rule is one of the many mysteries that his book leaves unsolved." M. T. Florinsky
N Y Times p3 N 26 '39 1000w
New Yorker 15:106 N 18 '39 40w

"Mr. W. G. Krivitsky's book is one of the most valuable, most interesting, and at the same time one of the most frightening books of our epoch." Alexander Kerensky
+ Sat R of Lit 21:3 N 25 '39 3000w

"The importance to be attributed to the volume obviously depends on the view taken of its authenticity. Its author's real name is apparently not Krivitsky; and his title to the rank of general is a little misty. But these are secondary considerations. The question is whether he did, in fact, hold a high position in the Ogpu, and have access to its major secrets. Internal evidence suggests that that was so . . . and there is external testimony which points to the same conclusion. On the whole, [In Stalin's Secret Service] must be taken seriously, and parts of it gain dramatic confirmation from events that were still in the future when the articles in their original form were written. So regarded, the book, when all allowances are made, is a sensational piece of history, and the light it throws on the internal and external politics of Soviet Russia in the last half-dozen years, dazzles while it illuminates." Wilson Harris
Spec 163:828 D 8 '39 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p710 D 9 '39 650w

"Another book on Stalin which is bound to raise a whirlwind of controversy is General Krivitsky's 'In Stalin's Secret Service.' Although there is obviously no means of checking the authenticity of many of the facts which it presents its revelations have a strong internal consistency, and also tally with other information which has leaked out concerning Stalin's policy in Spain, the purges in Russia, and Stalin's desire for an agreement with Hitler." P. E. Mosely
Yale R n s 29:387 winter '40 450w

KRON, GABRIEL. Tensor analysis of networks. 635p il $7.50 Wiley [37s 6d Chapman]
621.31921 Electric circuits. Calculus of tensors 39-4361

"This book is not written by a mathematician and is not written for mathematicians. This book is written by an engineer for engineers who are interested in learning an organized method of attack to analyze and synthetize electrical networks. . . The definitions and physical interpretations of all concepts are given here in a language that is thought to be best suited to the requirements of the engineer who confronts such method of attack for the first time. This volume makes no pretense of possessing absolute mathematical rigor. . . The aim of this volume is to get definite answers to definite engineering problems, the mathematical concepts serving only as an aid." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 24:7 Ja '39
Reviewed by Adeline Macrum
Special Libraries 30:317 N '39

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. The American drama since 1918; an informal history. 325p $2.50 Random house
812.09 American drama—History and criticism (W) 39-28988

"The purpose of this book is to offer both a connected account and some critical evaluation of playwriting in America since the World war. It is by no means a complete record of theatrical production. . . On the other hand the intention is to provide what the subtitle promises—an informal history—rather than an essay on this or that aspect of the contemporary American drama. A great many plays are discussed and the attempt is made to provide a continuous account of the course of playwriting in the United States during the two decades ending with the present." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

"The full story of any decade of drama cannot be told by cool, critical analysis alone, nor even, perhaps, some of its most promising tendencies detected, in the work of the 'best' writers, without reference to the popular theater. But perhaps Mr. Krutch would disclaim the intention of trying to write so broad a history, and we should admit his imposed limitations, and congratulate him, and ourselves, on the high merits of his work." W. P. Eaton
+ — Books p5 D 17 '39 950w

"Mr. Krutch's volume confirms the impression that he often disagrees with his colleagues on the merits of the playwrights and their plays. Be that as it may, he remains among a few writers on the drama worth hearing. For he has considerable inner content as a man, wide knowledge of life and letters, and a fearlessly individual temperament. It is by these qualities that critics must stand; it is by their lack that they sink to the indistinguishable voices of men in a chorus." L. S. Wellstone
+ Boston Transcript p13 D 21 '39 700w
Reviewed by Grenville Vernon
Commonweal 31:250 Ja 5 '40 450w

"We have a good many critics who can assess the entertainment values of dramatic productions but very few who are capable of any inclusive thought about the theater. Mr. Krutch is able to give generalizations that illumine the whole problem of producing in the theater a work which may also belong to the realm of literature." M. M. Colum
+ Forum 102:263 D '39 300w

"The book's incontestable value lies in its vigor, its discrimination, and its stimulating judgment on two decades of important, if somehow tentative and miscellaneous, drama that may be truthfully identified after all these years as our own." John Anderson
+ Nation 149:683 D 16 '39 1250w
Reviewed by P. M. Jack
N Y Times p2 Ja 21 '40 1600w
Pratt p18 winter '40
Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs
+ Sat R of Lit 21:11 N 18 '39 700w

"Theatre Arts has lived so clearly and long in the world of theatre as theatre that it is a little difficult today to face that world again made unreal and untheatrical by the separation of its essential parts. A part of its life disappears with such division. There is, on the other hand, compensation in the fact that such intelligent, subtle and clarifying criticism as Mr. Krutch's of one of the theatre's fundamental elements is a gift of real value to a complex art concerning which so little criticism is impersonal, wise, or even below the surface of an hour's quick thinking." E. J. R. Isaacs
+ Theatre Arts Mo 24:71 Ja '40 1000w

KUCZYNSKI, JURGEN. Hunger and work; statistical studies; with a foreword by R. Coppock. 132p $1.50 Int. pubs. [3s 6d Lawrence]

331.2942 Wages—Great Britain. Cost and standard of living—Great Britain 39-16312

"These statistical studies of the condition of the working classes in Great Britain emphasize the fact that many of the employed and many more of the unemployed fail to secure a reasonable standard of living, and suggest that labour has not obtained its due share of the increase in the national income which took place between 1931 and 1937." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by A. T. Helbing
Am Econ R 29:614 S '39 300w

"The defects of this book are less of technique than of deliberate and avowed bias."
— + Economist 133:222 O 29 '38 850w

Reviewed by Honor Croome
Spec 161:1054 D 16 '38 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p649 O 8 '38 50w

KUHLMAN, AUGUSTUS FREDERICK, ed. See American library association. College and university library service

KULP, CLARENCE ARTHUR. Social insurance coordination; an analysis of German and British organization; a report prepared for the Com. on social security [Social science research council]. 333p $2.50 Social science research council

331.2544 Insurance, Social 39-5758

"The volume is confined to an analysis of the social insurance programs of Germany and Great Britain, in an attempt to discover how well the programs of these two nations work within themselves, and why. From this analysis, essentially one of organizational policy and basic relationships in form and operation, certain fundamental American parallels are drawn." (Am Econ R) Index.

"The volume will demand careful study and considerable supplementing by all but a few, since it presupposes a thorough knowledge of the two systems being analyzed. Some readers no doubt will find it somewhat difficult to follow the general thesis presented by the author. The subject matter is not as well organized and clearly presented as it might have been. . . Some readers will miss a clear presentation of the major characteristics of the two systems analyzed as a background (although purposely omitted), and will doubtless feel the need for definite quantitative analysis throughout many of the chapters. In spite of these shortcomings, however, this work is to be welcomed, for it gives rise to fundamental problems that must be carefully thought through as we approach the tasks of adding health insurance and of co-ordinating the social insurances in the United States." P. A. Dodd
+ — Am Econ R 29:426 Je '39 1200w

Reviewed by R. C. White
Am J Soc 45:492 N '39 250w

Reviewed by Charles McKinley
Am Pol Sci R 33:1123 D '39 550w

"Professor Kulp's analysis is penetrating and competent, and his statement of the implications of his studies for the United States is, for the most part, sound. Further study of a unified system such as that of the Soviet Union is, however, clearly needed before the American parallels can be outlined with complete confidence." M. S. Stewart
+ Am Soc R 4:616 Ag '39 280w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes
Ann Am Acad 205:143 S '39 480w

"An excellent, carefully detailed study." M. R. Carroll
+ Survey G 28:343 My '39 500w

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD (ARNOLD FREDERICKS, pseud). Leif Erikson, the lucky; il. by Norman Price. 245p $2 Winston

(W) 39-11405

Saga of the adventures of Leif Erikson, his boyhood and young manhood, his adventures on the sea, his introduction of Christianity into Greenland, and his later voyage to the new world.

Booklist 35:367 Jl 1 '39

"It brings in people we met in the ballads of Longfellow, and reinforces American history at a point where children find it weak. The pictures would have been useful with better reproduction, but most of them are now sound and fury signifying nothing." M. L. Becker
Books p6 Je 25 '39 370w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 3 '39 50w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 27 '39 300w

Horn Bk M 15:227 Jl '39 270w

"There is a dearth of Viking material and, while this book for older girls and boys will not satisfy the eight-to-ten-year-old readers who demand it, it serves to fill a gap in library collections." J. L. Sauer
Library J 64:519 Je 15 '39 150w

"Whether or not boys in the vigorous years of their 'teens will prefer this motive to the traditional Viking lust for adventure, they will find the story of that voyage through fog and calm and storm, and of the first Winter on the rich shores of Vinland a graphic one, filled, as is the whole book, with a knowledge of the sea of which one is sure the Vikings would approve." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Je 18 '39 360w

KUYKENDALL, RALPH SIMPSON. The Hawaiian kingdom, 1778-1854; foundation and transformation. 453p il map $5 Univ. of Hawaii

996.9 Hawaiian Islands—History 38-28602

"[This] is the first volume of what is presumably to be a two-volume history of independent Hawaii. There has long been a need for such a history, and Professor Kuykendall, of the University of Hawaii, is unquestionably the right man for the task. The present volume is based almost entirely upon original sources, gathered from Washington, Boston, London, and Paris as well as from Honolulu. It opens with a chapter on primitive Hawaii, and thereafter traces the impact of white civilization in its effects on the government, economic life, education, and religion of the islands, and the ensuing rivalry of British, French, Russians, and Americans for a dominant position, down to the defeat of the annexation project of 1854." Canadian Hist R

Reviewed by R. W. Van Alstyne
Am Hist R 45:190 O '39 320w

"The book impresses one as scrupulously fair to all participants in the events related—to men of all nationalities, races, and religions. It is also readable, though the uninitiated will find Hawaiian proper names too much for him." J. W. Pratt
+ Canadian Hist R 20:227 Je '39 200w

"Here we have the first half of what may be considered the first definitive history of this exotic meeting place of East and West, this unique melting place of the mid-Pacific. It is a complete narration, yet unburdened with needless detail, workmanlike, scholarly, and above all, fascinatingly readable. It is a characteristically worthy cultural product of one of the most successful experiments in evolutionary self-government, and of communal responsibility perhaps unrivaled in the recent story of mankind." E. G.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:21 Ja 28 '39 240w

L

LADAS, STEPHEN PERICLES. International protection of literary and artistic property. (Bur. of int. research, Harvard univ. and Radcliffe college. Harvard studies in int. law) 2v 679;683-1273p ea $5 Macmillan

655.63 Copyright 38-32756

"Mr. Ladas devotes Volume 1 to a discussion of his theory of copyright protection, the history of international copyright, the structure of the Berne Convention and a discussion of certain phases of copyright law as interpreted by the courts of continental Europe, with only occasional reference to British and American decisions. Part 3 of Volume 1 gives the history and structure of the Inter-American Conventions. Volume 2 devotes less than 200 pages to a discussion of the copyright law of the United States, 35 pages to the copyright law of the British Empire, 60 pages to the copyright law of Latin America, 150 pages to the law of other countries, and 90 pages to the text of the Berne Convention and its various modifications, the several Pan-American Conventions and the United States Copyright Act." (Yale Law J) Bibliography and index at end of volume two.

"The book is excellently written and should prove to be of great service to the development of the copyright law." Rudolf Littauer

\+ — Columbia Law R 39:1069 Je '39 1850w

"Accuracy has been purchased at a high price. Valuable as the book is for consultation by a specialist or lawyer preoccupied with a particular question, continuous reading of it is almost impossible. . . Now, it is a pity that Mr. Ladas' work should be only consulted and never read; because sandwiched among these lists and stories of old quarrels among delegates at Berlin or Rome are many very interesting paragraphs about fundamental problems and colorful cases. Would it not be possible for Mr. Ladas to rearrange the book, so as to present this material of general value in such a form that it could be read continuously with real pleasure and profit?" Zechariah Chafee, Jr.

\+ — Harvard Law R 52:1378 Je '39 3900w

"It is to be regretted that a work which so ably presents the copyright law of continental Europe and the historical development of international copyright should be marred by a discussion of domestic copyright and the theories underlying domestic copyright protection, with which Mr. Ladas is obviously unfamiliar." Herman Finkelstein

\+ — Yale Law J 48:712 Ja '39 1700w

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER. Each to the other. 422p $2.75 Coward-McCann

811 (W) 39-27252

A novel in verse. Two stories are told: that of the unhappy married life of Josiah and Maria Cottrell, which ended in a separation; and the story of their son Tom, demonstrating the effects of his early observations upon his philosophy of life, and the difficulties which had to be overcome in his marriage with Judith Carpenter.

"It is inevitable in any long poem that flat passages should fall between the moments of highest tension, and in more than one passage the lines are near prose in their directness and in their speech patterns. But that very simplicity of accent prevents any effect of artificiality, of words forced to fit the meter. . . On the whole it is an engrossing story—and that is still the main test of a novel in any form." Mildred Boie

\+ — Atlantic My '39 650w

Booklist 35:267 Ap 15 '39

"There are pages of this novel in verse which make the reader wish for more rather than less. Mr. La Farge has a sharp ear for conversation and a remarkable ability to reproduce it. This important ingredient of the novel has been united with verse with extraordinary success. Through this, and through the faithful painting of changing mood, living characters develop. Tom's grandfather, the girl he picked up at college, Charles the butler and Agatha the cook—all these and many more are real as seen through Tom's eyes. In the final test of reality attained through subjective vision 'Each to the Other' emerges as a successful achievement." J. Y. Case

\+ Books p5 Ap 9 '39 850w

Reviewed by M. E. Smith

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 15 '39 320w

Commonweal 30:243 Je 23 '39 50w

Forum 101:iv My '39 450w

"Mr. La Farge is at his best in the purely lyrical passages or in those of direct narrative. I am not prepared to say, on a single perusal, in how far 'Each to the Other' justifies its author's contention, but it contains much lovely verse, and I have little doubt that Mr. La Farge is a poet of considerable potentialities." Wilfrid Gibson

\+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 8 '39 300w

Reviewed by James Daly

New Repub 99:109 My 31 '39 500w

Reviewed by David Garnett

New Statesman & Nation 18:403 S 16 '39 900w

"[The book] will be read as a distinctive novel in an unusual form, equally interesting to those who read fiction and like verse." P. M. Jack

\+ — N Y Times p2 Ap 9 '39 1100w

"I do not wish to seem captious. 'Each to the Other' has many beautiful passages, and, in the hero's father and grandfather, two characters extremely well studied. But the beautiful passages should have been collected as a short book of lyrics, and Mr. La Farge's talent for characterization should have been utilized in a conventional piece of prose fiction. Poetry is poetry; novels are novels. All Mr. La Farge's intelligence and energy, and he has plenty of both, cannot quite make the twain meet. But if you'd like to watch at close range a gallant attempt at pulling off an impossible stunt, I commend 'Each to the Other' to you." Clifton Fadiman

\+ — New Yorker 15:83 Ap 8 '39 800w

Pratt p23 summer '39

"In 'Each to the Other' Christopher La Farge has succeeded in writing a living book possessed of all the novel's virtues, enhanced by supple and finely varied verse, which, while it seldom or never rises to the level of intensely memorable poetry, embodies a robust and dramatic story—a semi-autobiographical and semi-invented tale of youth, love, and marriage—of firm structure and emotional strength." W. R. Benét

\+ Sat R of Lit 19:5 Ap 1 '39 750w

"Its merits—psychological honesty, a subject worth writing about, vivid depiction of characters and experiences—are merits equally possible to novels written in prose, and ones which its medium must merely have made more difficult to realise. Of poetry—which is not an alternative title for verse, but a quality to which verse should aspire, and which may sometimes be found in prose—it is empty. Mr. La Farge writes verse very skilfully, but he is not a poet, and one may permit oneself to doubt whether there is anything but the ability to write poetry which justifies the attempt to write a novel in verse." Derek Verschoyle

— + Spec 163:384 S 15 '39 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p537 S 16 '39 900w

"La Farge has taken his cue from Stephen Vincent Benét's 'John Brown's Body' by employing various kinds of verse forms to accelerate the tempo and keep the narration from a monotony of utterance. But, since the action is much slower than in Benét's quasi-epic, the effects are not so happy. The sonnets which introduce the main divisions are quite conventional; the lyrics are pleasant but somewhat irrelevant; the orthodox blank verse is generally the most successful. Yet, for all its length and its incidental defects, the story moves. It may not be, as the author claims, 'the next logical step forward in narrative verse,' but it is a notable experiment; it adds new color and music to what is essentially an old but still interesting tale." Louis Untermeyer

+ — Yale R n s 28:609 spring '39 500w

LAIDLER, GRAHAM (PONT OF PUNCH, pseud). The British character, studied and revealed; with an introd. by E. M. Delafield. 120p il $1.50 Knopf [5s Collins]

741 Caricatures and cartoons. National characteristics, English. Humor 39-21754

Collection of cartoons from Punch poking fun at the peculiarities which characterize certain phases of English life.

Booklist 36:196 Ja 15 '40

"Pont of Punch proves once more that the English can be funnier about themselves than Americans can be about them. The Englishman can view his own foibles without rancor. No one can be more amusing about him than himself, except possibly the Frenchman." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 12 '39 420w

"Often the newness is in the draughtmanship rather than in the ideas, but none will deny a fresh and considerable talent for severity in the drawings." G. P.

+ Manchester Guardian sup xii D 9 '38 170w

"The British characteristics illustrated here are traditional, fairly obvious and not likely to raise even a titter on this side."

New Repub 100:139 S 6 '39 20w

Reviewed by John Betjeman

New Statesman & Nation 16:934 D 3 '38 80w

"For the most part the author's aim is adroit rather than deadly. But Miss Delafield's brilliant introduction trains a merciless dart of wit. By and large, it's a grand book."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 13 '39 440w

New Yorker 15:66 Ag 19 '39 20w

"The reader who sees a sample of Pont's caricatures will be able to image for himself something of the spirit in which the drawings are executed. But only the book will reveal the fertility of his humor and the combined aptness and exaggeration—the thing which makes these caricatures relevant. . . Miss E. M. Delafield contributes an introduction to a book that in every way is a delight."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 13 '39 480w

LAINE, ELIZABETH. Motion pictures and radio; modern techniques for education. 165p $1.75 (10s 6d) McGraw

371.33523 Moving pictures in education. Radio in education 38-28681

"This volume is one of twelve published by the Regents Inquiry into the Character and Cost of Public Education in the State of New York. Its publication indicates the Inquiry's conviction that the motion picture and the radio are potent forces in modern education and, as such, deserve attention. . . The study was made during the latter part of 1936 and the first part of 1937 and includes a survey of the literature of the field and a summary of present practices as observed not only in the state of New York but also in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, and in Washington, D.C." Social Educ

Booklist 35:274 Ap 15 '39

"Motion Pictures and Radio constitutes a much needed review of these fields. The amount of work that went into it must have been tremendous. One is disappointed however that it does not go further in its criticism of existing conditions and that more concrete steps toward adequate educational programs in these two fields were not recommended. . . On the whole the second half of the book, dealing with the use of the radio, is far superior to the section on motion pictures." W. H. Hartley

+ — Social Educ 3:210 Mr '39 1200w

"This compendium of up-to-date information on motion pictures and radio is well supplied with footnotes. The place of the volume as a reference work is assured." J. F. Santee

+ Social Studies 30:186 Ap '39 950w

LA JOIE, ERNEST PHILIP. Story of the Goodfellows. 199p il $2 priv ptd The author, Dime bank bldg, Detroit

362.7 Old newsboys' goodfellow fund, Detroit. Detroit—Charities 38-38767

"History of a philanthropic enterprise conducted by former newsboys for the benefit of poor children in Detroit." Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '38 20w

Springf'd Republican p6 S 4 '39 300w

LAMB, FRANK H. Book of the broadleaf trees. 367p il map $3.75 Norton

634.972 Trees. Forests and forestry

"The story and the economic, social, and cultural contribution of the temperate broadleaved trees and forests of the world." (Subtitle) Selected bibliography. Map on end papers. Index.

Booklist 36:209 F 1 '40

"Even the amateur will complain that he is getting too much Joyce Kilmerish sentiment and not enough practical information. The best feature of the book is its handsome photographs of forest scenes all over the world."

+ — New Repub 101:297 D 27 '39 50w

"The book is clearly written and thoroughly interesting: a book, in short, which should find a firm and often-visited niche in the American family library."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 7 '40 500w

"Mr. Lamb's book on the deciduous trees is a worthwhile successor to his 'Sagas of the Evergreens.' This seems a happier combination of science and description which is the author's strength." H. S. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 F 3 '40 80w

"All of Mr Lamb's important references are documented. The book has a complete index, and an up-to-date bibliography and shows an intelligent arrangement of material. As in many books of Nature essays and facts, 'The Book of the Broadleaf Trees' contains a goodly amount of quoted poetry. But, unlike some naturalists who would use such a volume to advertise their own mediocre achievements in rhyme and prose, Mr Lamb fortunately chooses to quote only from outstanding men of letters." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 D 14 '39 400w

LAMBERT, A. R., ed. See Photographic buyers' handbook

LAMBERT, REITA (MRS A. F. NEVIN). Beauty, incorporated. 266p $2 Macrae Smith co.

39-11265

A beauty parlor owner, who had spent years in the art of making other women the subject of romantic interest to the masculine sex, suddenly awakens to the fact that her own good looks have received too little attention. When she takes up her own beauty problem Bernardine is soon rewarded for her efforts.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p8 My 21 '39 120w

LAMBERT, REITA—Continued

"An interesting success story, giving amusing insight into the labor that goes to making women handsomer than nature alone allows. The chemist and the rich nephew compete for Bernardine's hand, but that little hand is too busy for a ring until the last page." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 23 '39 180w
Wis Lib Bul 35:146 Jl '39

LAMKEY, ROSEMARY. The lonely dwarf; designed by [the author]. 50p $1 Holt

39-32608

Picture-story book about a lonely dwarf who lived in a castle by the sea, but was finally cheered up by a baby lost from a wrecked ship. The author-artist is in her early teens.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p10 D 10 '39 250w
Cath World 150:374 D '39 50w

"The production of a fourteen-year-old. But don't let that prejudice you. Really a fine book." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 31:133 D 1 '39 20w

"Beautiful pictures."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 20w

LAMPREY, LOUISE. The story of weaving; il. by Elizabeth Wolcott. 278p $2 Stokes

677 Weaving—History (W) 39-27736

A simply written but comprehensive history of spinning and weaving from the plaited basket work of prehistoric man to the synthetic fabrics of today. The book considers not only the technical, but also the economic and social aspects of the subject. Index.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

"The book is similar in treatment and difficulty to the author's All the Way of Building. It should prove generally useful." Alice Monroe

+ Library J 64:806 O 15 '39 140w
Wis Lib Bul 35:184 N '39

LAMPSON, ROBIN. Death loses a pair of wings. 518p $3 Scribner

811 Gorgas, William Crawford—Poetry

40-1033

"A novel in cadence" which retells the story of General William Gorgas and the conquest of yellow fever.

"Mr. Lampson's book is almost a model of fictional biography; it shows just enough attention to background and youthful influences; a sympathetic understanding of an ambitious young man; a nice balance of public and private life. It is not proven, however, that Mr. Lampson has been as skillful in the form he has chosen as in the structure. . . For the use of meter in a long narrative one must show good cause; it does not seem to me that Mr. Lampson has justified his choice. But it is clear that he can write excellent, sound, musical and lively prose." J. Y. Case

+ — Books p12 O 8 '39 700w

"Written in unrhymed verse that is frequently spirited and effective, occasionally monotonous, and at times would do nicely as simple prose."

+ — New Repub 100:322 O 18 '39 40w

" 'Death Loses a Pair of Wings' has many faults. One may question, for one thing, the wisdom of Mr. Lampson's adoption of a prosody which has few precedents in English and is monotonous in practice. Yet one important fact remains. 'Death Loses a Pair of Wings' is a noble poem, celebrating noble men and deeds. It is an epic for every American to read and to take pride in." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p4 S 17 '39 1000w

"The matter of the book should be of intense interest to any reader of intelligence. I am sorry I cannot praise the manner." Christopher LaFarge

— + Sat R of Lit 20:37 O 14 '39 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 15 '39 850w

LANCASTER, BRUCE. Guns of Burgoyne. 425p map $2.50 Stokes

(W) 39-27253

The story of Burgoyne's expedition and defeat at Saratoga told from the point of view of a young Hessian officer in the English army.

"What sets this novel apart from the others of its period is the sympathetic and to me freshly entertaining story of the Hessians. . . This narrative has long waited to be told, and it delights me to see it handled so capably by Bruce Lancaster." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic Ap '39 350w
Booklist 35:270 Ap 15 '39

"Mr. Lancaster has given us a first-class story from the American past. The history is there—and fascinating history it is. But it doesn't stick out in chunks; it is part and parcel of the narrative. And, despite the length of the book, there is a fresh vividness to the telling that carries the reader steadily along." S. V. Benét

+ Books p1 Mr 26 '39 1000w

" 'Guns of Burgoyne' is not a great novel, but it is the sort of book that we need in large quantities. It is exciting adventure, presenting believable people, made of flesh and blood, whose behavior is neither idealized nor vulgarized. There are obvious faults, like the tendency to floridness in the more romantic portions, and an occasional stilted bit of dialogue. But the interpretation of early American character is so convincing, the viewpoint toward American history so original, the action so swift and compelling, that the reader should be swept along in grateful enjoyment, without being captious about such details." Sculley Bradley

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 1 '39 500w

"This is particularly a man's book—mightily robust in language and concerned with men's affairs, though at least one of its few women characters is memorable for charm as well as for resolution." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 6 '39 650w

"The story, as pure narrative, is a bit confusing at times, and so far as the fate of all the Burgoyne forces goes, inconclusive. But as a part of the current re-appraisal of the American experiment, now so popular on our stage and in our fiction, it is consistently interesting for all of its 425 pages, and since it is well written and quite evidently based on long and careful research, it inspires confidence and renews faith—faith in the soundness and ultimate invincibility of our Democratic ideals. It deserves a wide reading." W. P. Eaton

+ — Commonweal 30:24 Ap 28 '39 360w

"A novel vigorous and exciting, firm in texture and satisfying—at least as fiction." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 26 '39 800w
New Yorker 15:86 Mr 25 '39 30w
Pratt p29 summer '39

"The great historical characters . . . start from the pages into life. So do the details of the campaign of which history is most neglectful. . . The thread that carries these jewels is rather weaker. Kurt Ahrens is obvious and uncomplicated, makes acute observations on military matters like a hero out of G. A. Henty, and falls in love with a girl from the opposite side like a hero out of Mary Johnston. In short, the story is a formula story; but most readers will be able to overlook this while enjoying the book for its vivid pictorial quality."

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:17 Mr 25 '39 280w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 2 '39 650w
Wis Lib Bul 35:65 Ap '39

LANCASTER, BRUCE, and BRENTANO, LOWELL. Bride of a thousand cedars. 344p $2.50 Stokes

(W) 39-28989

Historical novel of Bermuda during the years of the American Civil war. It pictures the sleepy island flashing into activity with the coming of the blockade runners, and then sinking back into its accustomed comatose state at the war's end. The heroine is pretty Sally Cottrell, an island beauty; the hero is the handsome British captain of a blockade runner.

Booklist 36:150 D 15 '39

"It is a thrilling tale on all counts, swiftly paced and dramatically told." Rose Feld

\+ Books p2 N 19 '39 650w

"This has more amusing touches than most historical novels. The minor characters are excellent. . . Not so grand a piece as 'Guns of Burgoyne,' 'Bride of a Thousand Cedars' is nevertheless one of the best historical novels of the season." Olga Owens

\+ Boston Transcript p4 N 11 '39 600w

"A picturesque and entertaining story. . . 'Bride of a Thousand Cedars' is a lively story of an aspect of the Civil War which fiction writers have for the most part pretty thoroughly ignored." L. M. Field

\+ N Y Times p24 N 19 '39 700w

"Agreeable hoopskirt piece, not to be taken too seriously."

New Yorker 15:105 N 18 '39 40w

"There is the background and the local color, all very well done, in clean, sunny colors. But the book is a disappointment, from the author of 'Guns of Burgoyne.' That stayed in your mind and made you wonder about it—it was rich with character and incident, yet the line moved straight to an end. 'Bride of a Thousand Cedars' is another historical novel—pleasant, sufficiently exciting, a trifle overweighted with background. If you know someone who's going to Bermuda—it would be a good book to give." S. V. B.

\+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 N 25 '39 220w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 31 '39 380w

LANCING, GEORGE. Lotus Blossom. 362p $2.50 Furman [8s Hale, R]

Tzŭ-hsi, empress dowager of China—Fiction 39-19897

"The youth of the late Empress-Dowager of China, known as Yehonala 'the Orchid,' who died in 1908, after one of the most amazing reigns in history, and the love she inspired in Lotus, the cobbler son of Li, are the theme of Mr. Lancing's novel." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Anthony West

— New Statesman & Nation 18:150 Jl 22 '39 220w

"For those with strong stomachs there is much that is interesting in this novel. The novelist dealing with the period is already supplied with an embarrassment of riches. Mr. Lancing has shaped his fragment into a good story and drawn his characters ably enough—the pitiful Li, the rapacious, cruel, beautiful Orchid, the emasculated degenerate Emperor—but has failed to portray the dignity and distinction that must have been as much part of the people and of the background as the lust and greed. He will have helped a good cause, however, if his book inspires readers to walk further along one at least of the roads which have led to China's present sorrow."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Jl 15 '39 320w

LANDES, RUTH. Ojibwa woman. 249p $3 Columbia univ. press; for sale in the U.S. by Augustin [15s Oxford]

970.3 Chippewa Indians. Indians of North America—Women 38-14550

This volume supplements the author's work Ojibwa Sociology (Book Review Digest, 1938). "The presentation is organized principally around the life cycle with chapters on Youth, Marriage, Occupations, Abnormalities and Life Histories. The chapter on Marriage in this volume (70 pp.) when read in connection with the shorter chapter of the same title in the Sociology gives as realistic a picture of the operation of both formal and personal aspects of marriage as could be desired." (Am Soc R)

"The volume is distinguished by the richness of the case material, skilfully integrated throughout. . . Since male ethnographers have given us most of our accounts of the life of native peoples, it is well to have a culture systematically studied and presented from the feminine point of view. Landes has been successful in carrying this out, as I can testify from my own investigation of a western branch of the Ojibwa." A. I. Hallowell

\+ Am Soc R 3:893 D '38 280w

"The force of the study is much enhanced by a free use of the actual words of the subjects under observation, and further illuminated by a number of life-histories."

\+ Nature 143:744 My 6 '39 200w

LANDIS, CARNEY, and HUNT, WILLIAM ALVIN. The startle pattern; with a chapter by Hans Strauss. 168p il $2.50 Farrar

158.423 Reflexes. Emotions 39-13475

Report of a series of psychological experiments performed to ascertain the physical reactions to a startling noise. The major part of the experiments was carried on in the psychology laboratories of the New York State Psychiatric Institute and the Connecticut College for Women. References. Index.

"The study is exploratory rather than definitive. In spite of the superior techniques, there are flaws resulting from small numbers of cases, and a visible tendency of the authors to summarize results in a manner suggesting that these results are neater than the data really show." R. E. L. Faris

Am J Soc 45:623 Ja '40 210w

Reviewed by Livingston Welch

N Y Times p26 Ap 16 '39 410w

LANDIS, CARNEY, and PAGE, JAMES DANIEL. Modern society and mental disease. 190p $1.50 Farrar

616.8 Insanity. Sociology 38-30800

"In [this] volume, the authors have enclosed a mass of material ranging all the way from definition and classification of mental disease, to compilations and interpretations of statistics of mental disease in relation to age, marital condition, urbanization and economic conditions. In addition to all of these, they devote 20 pages to heredity, sterilization, marriage and eugenics." (Am J Psychol) Index.

"Although the volume is encyclopedic and critical, it has many obvious flaws. Its encyclopedism does not signify that it brings together all of the evidence either for or against certain statistical problems in the field of mental disease. The criticalness of the volume is also occasionally marred by certain interpretations of data. . . Whatever specific criticism such as the forementioned may be directed against the book, it is a distinct contribution to the field of mental disease whether viewed from a psychological, psychiatric or politico-social point of view. It is so compactly written that it is not easy to read but it is eminently worth studying." F. J. Gaudet

\+ — Am J Psychol 52:323 Ap '39 360w

"The arguments used might furnish model horrible examples for textbooks in the interpretation of statistics. An additional fault is that some of the strongest contrary evidence, though known to the authors, is ignored. No account is taken of variations of rates between sections of large cities, although these contrasts are far greater than any they deal with. Cultural background is dismissed as of slight importance on the basis of the most superficial information about American Indians, Negroes, and Orientals. The project is a demonstration of the futility of studying social factors in complete ignorance of sociology." R. E. L. Faris

LANDIS, C., and PAGE, J. D.—Continued

— Am J Soc 44:769 Mr '39 160w

LANDON, CHARLES EDWARD. Industrial geography. 811p il maps $4 Prentice-Hall

330.9 Geography, Economic 39-17456

"Subordinating the geography of commerce, the volume undertakes to set forth the physical basis and economic principles underlying territorial specialization in agricultural, mineral, forestry, and other production and to 'focus attention on the significant aspects of the industrial activities of the different countries.' Practically half of the space is devoted to the United States, the remainder to foreign countries, treated singly. Sketch maps, diagrams, a classified bibliography, and an unusually full index are valuable features." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

"Students of international relations will find [this] a convenient manual of economic information." F. A. O.

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:932 O '39 90w

"The material seems to be accurate, although somewhat unbalanced. Just why sixteen pages should be devoted to quarry products in the United States and only eleven to both iron ores and ferro-alloys is not clear. Many products discussed are of such minor importance that to omit them and devote the space to more significant facts would appear to have been a better procedure." W. F. Christians

+ — Ann Am Acad 207:250 Ja '40 450w

LANDS and peoples; the world in color; editor-in-chief: Holland Thompson; with an introd. by Isaiah Bowman; ed. for Canada: R. Bruce Taylor. 7v il col pl maps $39.90; 30 pts also obtainable separately at varying prices c1938 Grolier soc.

910 Voyages and travels—Pictorial works 38-7302

"This is a revised issue of the set, Lands and Peoples, which was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1930, p.8. [Book Review Digest, 1934]. In scope, arrangement and format, the 1938 issue in seven volumes is similar to the older one. The various countries of the world are depicted with brief text and with many photographs, of which a large number are colored plates. The arrangement is as follows: v.I, British isles and Western Europe; v.II, Baltic states and Central Europe; v.III, The Near and the Middle east; v.IV, Southeastern Asia and the Far east; v.V, Africa, Australia and southern islands; v.VI, Canada and the United States; v.VII, Latin America and general articles." Subscription Bks Bul

"Libraries which can afford it will find the 7-volume set of interest in the reference collection, especially for its illustrations of costume. Those having the earlier edition would not need the new one. Many schools and libraries will find the 30-volume printing useful, since the material in this form is easily handled, with substantially reinforced bindings, and available for use by a greater number of readers at one time. Some libraries having the 7-volume set may wish selected volumes of the 30-volume issue. Lands and Peoples, 1938 is recommended under these conditions."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 10:56 O '39 650w

LANE, ALLEN STANLEY. Emperor Norton, the mad monarch of America. 286p il $3 Caxton printers

B or 92 Norton, Joshua Abraham 39-3640

In the late '50s a resident of San Francisco, disgusted with local and national politics, proclaimed himself Norton I, emperor of the United States, and by a succession of decrees abolished Congress, the Supreme court, the President, Vice-President, etc. The kindly, tolerant citizens of the town, merchants and newspaper men, instead of locking up the harmless lunatic, humored his illusions even to the extent of paying "Imperial Taxes," and finally gave him a royal burial. This story of his life and fame is based on research in newspapers and other contemporary sources. Bibliography.

"He had his charm, did Norton I, and Mr. Lane makes that abundantly plain. As many a visitor has discovered, San Francisco does possess a flavor of its own, a special quality which derives, more than anything else, from its citizens' tolerance, sense of humor and willingness to play. Mr. Lane's account of Emperor Norton brings this out very clearly. After reading it, the least sympathetic should be able to understand how it could happen that a few weeks ago a group of San Franciscans—bankers, doctors, business men of all sorts—spent some hours of their time and more than a few dollars of their money to place in the city's new Bay Bridge Terminal a fine bronze plaque commemorating the royal proclamation of Norton I, now after so many years at last fulfilled." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p13 Mr 19 '39 600w

"The facts of the Emperor's reign are here set forth more clearly than ever before, but though the data are well assembled, the spirit of the book is not always in keeping with the subject. Mr. Lane falls into some heavy-handed humor, high seriousness, and maudlin sentiment, which tends to rob the documentation of the interest it deserves."

+ — Sat R of Lit 19:12 Mr 18 '39 340w

LANE, MARGARET (MRS BRYAN EDGAR WALLACE). Edgar Wallace; the biography of a phenomenon. 423p il $3 Doubleday [10s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 Wallace, Edgar (W) 39-9999

Biography of Edgar Wallace, covering all the many phases of his life: newsboy in London, soldier-poet in South Africa, war correspondent, racing tipster, short-story writer, novelist and playwright. Index.

Reviewed by R. P. Harriss
Books p6 Mr 19 '39 950w

"Miss Lane's is an admirable biography in a field where good biographies are rare... Affectionately, ironically and with sometimes a rap on the knuckles, she draws a human portrait of an extraordinary character without skipping his faults or foibles. Wallace was an egoist, a go-getter, a gambler with fortune, a sentimentalist, a showman in everything from his wild generosity downwards." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '39 650w

"The book makes fascinating reading, partly for its matter, partly because of the restraint and distinction of Miss Lane's writing. Whether her background be the street life of Billingsgate or the conduct of the Boer War, Miss Lane writes with the authority of one who is thoroughly in command of the place and event which conditioned the chaotic life she has so perceptively set forth." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 My 6 '39 600w

"Miss Margaret Lane has told the story with fullness and fairness: she talks of 'genius,' but does not put it too high, and she gives an extraordinarily vivid and persuasive picture of the likeable, irascible, generous, vain, volatile, absurd, portentous Edgar Wallace of the later days." Ivor Brown

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 16 '38 700w
New Repub 98:231 Mr 29 '39 80w

"Miss Lane's attitude, indulgent but unconcealing, is just right; having married into the Wallace family herself she has been able to compose a well-documented and consistent portrait. It was easy enough, no doubt, to reconstruct his later years . . . but his beginnings needed careful research, for they were wrapped in the foggy obscurity of the Thames-side." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:1014 D 10 '38 900w

"Miss Lane's view of Wallace is witty, brisk and serenely sensible. The eager, high-spirited little poseur whose gritty determination to live beyond his income helped make him the most popular writer of his time is neither overpraised nor undervalued. Her study is friendly but objective, factual and most engagingly presented. It is built upon an uncommonly solid job of research." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 19 '39 1450w

"A well-written, fairly candid story, not so much of a writer as of a sensational and bizarre character who happened to turn to writing. Good job."

+ New Yorker 15:87 Mr 18 '39 30w

"Miss Lane tells a good story well, expresses no opinion of her subject, draws a picture of a man whose only interest in any situation seems to have been in what was in it for him. But if the portrait is not so attractive as admirers of Wallace's mysteries might have expected, his career is doubly interesting: in details unique, in general typical of many success stories." G. S.

Sat R of Lit 19:19 Mr 11 '39 160w

"We must be grateful to Miss Margaret Lane for the trouble she has taken to collect the facts and the judgement she has shown in arranging and commenting on them. She has built up a character, writing honestly and allowing for the good and the bad: one can ask little more of a biographer." William Plomer

+ Spec 161:1008 D 9 '38 1150w

Time 33:75 Mr 13 '39 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p765 D 3 '38 600w

LANE, ROBERT HILL, and others. The progressive elementary school; a handbook for principals, teachers and parents. 208p il $1.90 Houghton

372 Education of children. Education—Experimental methods (W) 38-29364

The book deals with the educational philosophy behind the newer principles of education in the elementary school, and shows how that philosophy may be applied. Includes both suggestions on what to do and how to do it, and on what not to do. The authors are the assistant superintendent of the Los Angeles schools, and some of his assistants in the city schools. Selected reading list. Index.

Booklist 35:245 Ap 1 '39

"While the volume is somewhat uneven in quality and unity, it is alive and readable. It should be a valuable help to teachers who are wondering what this newer education is all about. It should be useful also to school administrators who are seeking something concrete to place in the hands of their teachers which will help stimulate thinking with regard to newer educational practice." W. W. Beatty

+ El School J 39:550 Mr '39 600w

LANE, WHEATON JOSHUA. From Indian trail to iron horse. (Princeton hist. of N.J.) 437p il maps $3.75 Princeton univ. press

974.9 New Jersey—History. Transportation—New Jersey 39-14007

The first volume in the Princeton history of New Jersey covers travel and transportation in New Jersey from 1620 to 1860. "Mr. Lane traces the early settlements that followed Indian paths back from the waterways, tells the stories of the colonial highways and the turnpikes, and pictures the roadside scene. He describes the enthusiastic era of canal building, and his chapters on the 'iron horse' are fittingly introduced by a reference to John Stevens of Hoboken as 'the father of American railroading.' The book is illustrated with reproductions of old prints and maps." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. F. R. Shaw

Am Econ R 29:849 D '39 100w

"Mr. Lane's book is a good example of the kind of able and definitive study that many scholars are writing today. He has treated an extremely complicated subject with intelligence and skill; no one will have to do it again." Daniel Aaron

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 27 '39 500w

"Detailed, well-documented, full of interest, Mr. Lane's study is both antiquarianism for those who live in New Jersey and history for everyone interested in the fascinating and fundamental subject of inland transportation." H. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 12 '39 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:31 Ap '39

"If the succeeding volumes are as interesting as this, they should be welcomed by the general public as well as by students."

+ N Y Times p15 My 14 '39 320w

"It is a competent historical work, clearly written, and achieving its interest by the simple narration of general developments and the presentation of pertinent details. Mr. Lane is mindful of the picturesqueness inherent in phases of his study, but lets the story tell itself. . . [His] study represents a vast amount of original research, and proves that the past is more, not less, interesting, for being studied by exact methods. It suggests, though it does not explore, the relation of transportation history to general economic and social history."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 21 '39 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Jl 29 '39 300w

LANGDON-BROWN, SIR WALTER. Thus we are men. 344p $3.50 Longmans [10s 6d Routledge]

610.4 Medicine—Addresses, essays lectures. Man [39-10989]

Collected addresses by the emeritus professor of physic at Cambridge. They embody the philosophy of life of this famous physician—an attempt to diagnose our present discontents by delving into the psychology and biology of the present, while not forgetting the culture of the past. Indexes.

Manchester Guardian p5 S 27 '38 320w

"It may perhaps be doubted whether there is any other living physician who could have given us so varied, so deeply-thought, and so richly expressed a mental harvest as has been gathered up in Thus We Are Men." H. H. Bashford

+ Spec 161:736 O 28 '38 310w

LANGEWIESCHE-BRANDT, WOLFGANG ERNST. I'll take the high road. 254p il $2.50 Harcourt

629.13 Aeronautics—Flights (W) 39-27989

Personal narrative of an amateur aviator, relating his experiences in learning to fly and some of his adventures as a tourist of the air.

Booklist 36:128 D 1 '39

"Wolfgang Langewiesche's book doesn't rank with 'Listen! the Wind,' or with 'Wind, Sand and Stars.' But it ranks not far below them, and it makes a very strong promise of what its successor, if there is one, will be. In places, it has an almost lyric quality. Always it is stirring—even when its author is on the ground, hanging about the hangars and wishing he had enough money to buy a little more time in the air." R. G. Doyle

+ Books p4 N 12 '39 500w

LANGEWIESCHE-BRANDT, W. E.—Cont.

"Aviation has produced a good many books of personal experience, and here is one that is unlike any of the others, and that is very fine indeed. . . This young German-born student of sociology turned American aviator is not another Saint-Exupéry. But the point is precisely that he is not 'another' any one; also that he can write with fresh, clear observation and more than a touch of poetry. His book has originality, marked with interest and genuine distinction."

+ N Y Times p36 O 29 '39 500w

New Yorker 15:83 O 28 '39 100w

"All told, an unpretentious volume; but one that describes with evident accuracy and considerable sensitiveness the emotions of a fledgling aviator." F. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 D 9 '39 250w

"'I'll Take the High Road' is much more than a technical book about private flying. In its quiet humor and agreeable style it ranks among contemporary books of adventure which are to be read and enjoyed by almost anyone."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 12 '39 420w

Time 34:80 N 6 '39 300w

LANGEWIESCHE-BRANDT, WOLFGANG ERNST. Lightplane flying [advisory ed, Alexander Klemin]. 213p il $2.50 Pitman

629.1325 Airplanes. Aeronautics 39-15419

"Answers newcomers' questions on amateur flying, arranged in order of difficulty. The book covers techniques, finances, safety, and uses of flying in everyday life." Special Libraries

N Y New Tech Bks 23:35 Jl '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum

Special Libraries 30:316 N '39

LANGLEY, HUBERT. Doctor Arne. 119p il $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Arne, Thomas Augustine [39-19021]

This monograph is concerned chiefly with a critical study of the music produced by this eighteenth-century English composer, best remembered today as the composer of Rule, Britannia! Index.

Manchester Guardian p5 Ja 6 '39 500w

Reviewed by Desmond Shawe-Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 17:792 My 20 '39 140w

"Mr. Langley has made his task harder by an unfortunate choice of method. He has written in a hundred pages or so an intensive monograph, in which he points out that besides Rule Britannia, Comus and the Shakespearian songs, for which he is famous, Dr. Arne has also written other works—Judith, for instance, and The Judgement of Paris—which deserve to be revived. His intention is admirable, but he does not make clear the importance of Arne." J. M. A. Ridley

Spec 162:500 Mr 24 '39 500w

"Mr. Langley, who has worked harder than any man living to reinstate Arne's music in the affections of our own generation, is no blind admirer, but has written his book with the intention of discriminating between what was of temporary and what of permanent value in his output. . . Arne is allowed to speak for himself in half a dozen well-chosen excerpts in full score. Such advocacy is convincing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p13 Ja 7 '39 330w

LANGSAM, WALTER CONSUELO, and EAGAN, JAMES MICHAEL. Documents and readings in the history of Europe since 1918. 865p $3.75 Lippincott

940.5 Europe—History—1914 39-16766

This book, patterned after Professor Langsam's 'The World Since 1914,' consists chiefly of documents, partly of reporting, and occasionally of interpretation. . . The first section is devoted to the Paris Peace Settlement, the next to the League, the third to post-war finances, the fourth to the problems of peace and war—collective security, armaments, and so on. The six remaining sections are given over to the separate powers and their special problems: Great Britain, France, Italy, Spain, Greater Germany and Russia." Boston Transcript

"The principal defect of the book, in the reviewer's opinion, is the omission of essential provisions of certain of the treaties, statutes, and decrees which have been included. Explanatory notes introduce each selection, and while not in every case accurate or adequate, they aid in placing the selection in its proper context." H. B. Calderwood

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:935 O '39 200w

Reviewed by Mark Schorer

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 320w

"Both for interest and for value the collection is unique; and, although naturally in no sense exhaustive, it is indispensable as it stands."

+ Cath World 150:636 F '40 130w

"The arrangement of the papers corresponds to the chief chapters in the author's well known text-book, 'The World Since 1914,' but could be used with equal facility as a supplement to any good modern history. The collection is catholic in its content and includes the text of treaties and laws and legal decisions, reports, editorials, and contrasting expressions of national policies. . . Clear terse notes are given for each selection, and an adequate index completes the volume which will be found indispensable in small libraries, useful even in the largest." Mother Mary Lawrence

+ Commonweal 30:363 Ag 4 '39 180w

Social Studies 30:332 N '39 140w

LANHAM, EDWIN MOULTRIE. The Stricklands. 311p $2.50 Little

(W) 39-5008

"A story of Oklahoma tenant farmers and especially of two brothers. One is driven to steal the money he can't get in any other way; the other devotes himself to building up a union in which Negroes and whites can oppose their combined strength to exploitation by the large landowners." New Yorker

Booklist 35:270 Ap 15 '39

"This is Lanham's best novel yet. It is serious, often poetic, often exciting; it is a novel of marked talent not yet arrived. If Mr. Lanham is making a bid for serious recognition, and he well might, he has no need to pick other people's bones." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p10 Mr 5 '39 450w

Reviewed by C. C. Walcutt

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 1 '39 320w

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 102:v Jl '39 180w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 28 '39 500w

"It is skilfully woven, exciting melodrama, highly flavored with the salt of social realism. . . Mr. Lanham knows his Oklahoma and its people; he has woven into the texture of 'The Stricklands' the story of its folklore and tradition. His is the simplicity of good writing; Pat and Jay and Rocky live on every page of the book. The book is more than the story of two or three men; it is a novel of an entire people striving through union for true emancipation from the slavery into which they were born." Samuel Romer

+ Nation 148:355 Mr 25 '39 500w

"My first impulse was to praise 'The Stricklands,' simply because I admire the author's attitude, his humanity, sincerity and evident honesty of purpose. But fine feelings will never do duty for poor writing, and the sooner all writers who wish to change the world accept that, the better. It is not enough, for example, to adapt the Faulkner device of giving each character chapters of his own in which he is free to cut some stream-of-consciousness didoes. It didn't make 'As I Lay Dying' an especially good novel, and it certainly does nothing to make Mr. Lanham's prose better than that of a newspaper feature story, turgid with adjectives." George Milburn

— + New Repub 99:54 My 17 '39 440w

"There is no book to lay beside it for comparison. The best elements of a labor story, of crime provoked through ignorance, of tragic love, and of family loyalty have been fused in the same book. It is easily Edwin Lanham's finest novel to date, and one of the surest on the contemporary American scene this reviewer has read." Stanley Young

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 5 '39 900w

New Yorker 15:78 Mr 4 '39 70w

Pratt p29 summer '39

" 'The Stricklands' starts rather slowly. Mr. Lanham uses a variant of the internal monologue in which the thoughts of his main characters are fully expressed in their own colloquial speech. The result is dragging in spots, heavily until one becomes used to it, then cumulatively more and more effective. A cutting of as little as two or three percent would make a great difference. A week or more after reading it, 'The Stricklands' leaves an impression of power, of remembered pleasure, of a good bet for the Pulitzer Prize." Oliver La Farge

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 Mr 4 '39 700w

" 'The Stricklands,' an interesting example of American regional fiction at the present time, is a revealing commentary on social and economic trends under the Roosevelt Administration and an impressive if not wholly satisfying piece of story-telling."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Jl 29 '39 600w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH HUBBARD. Sky service; il. by Roberta Paflin. 301p $1.75 Crowell

39-10865

When pretty young Nancy Naylor graduated as a nurse, she decided to take a job as air stewardess instead of going on with nursing. This book is the story of her experiences, with adventures with a spy and a love story to add to the interest.

Booklist 35:336 Je 1 '39

" 'Sky Service' is light fiction scaled to the early 'teens, when girls have been known to take more interest in romance than in aeronautics." M. L. Becker

Books p6 S 10 '39 250w

Wis Lib Bul 35:113 Je '39

LANSING, JOHN. The delegate from New York; or, Proceedings of the Federal convention of 1787; from [his] notes; ed. by Joseph Reese Strayer. 125p $2 Princeton univ. press

342.732 U.S. Constitutional convention, 1787

39-8456

John Lansing, junior, was one of the three delegates from New York to the Federal convention at Philadelphia in 1787. Altho he did not attend the convention until June 2d, he kept notes of the proceedings from May 25th to July 9th, the earlier entries being copied from Yates, another delegate. These notes are here published for the first time. Index.

Reviewed by A. C. McLaughlin

Am Hist R 45:235 O '39 220w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 26 '39 60w

"Altogether, the work will be valuable for filling in crannies of our information about the convention and for corroborating one or another of accounts that have been at variance." T. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 25 '39 500w

Reviewed by C. H. Coleman

Social Educ 3:437 S '39 350w

"Students of history and those zealous amateurs who are trying to determine the real meaning of the nation's constitution will be grateful for the combination of circumstances and scholarly effort which has led to the discovery and editing of the notes of John Lansing, Jr." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 4 '39 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 27 '39 80w

LAPIERE, RICHARD TRACY. Collective behavior. 577p $4 (24s) McGraw

301.15 Social psychology 38-19965

"This work is a fairly comprehensive study of most social interactions in small and large groups. It is equally a contribution to social psychology as to sociology. A large amount of material is discussed that has never hitherto been introduced in books of this type, and the treatment throughout is objective and scientific. The book is divided into five parts, the first being a general introduction to collective behaviour, the second dealing with cultural types of interaction, the third with recreational types of interaction, the fourth with control types of interaction and the fifth with escape types of interaction. There are copious examples of these various types of social interactions; of institutional, conventional, regimental, formal, nomothetic rebellious behaviour, etc." Nature

"If the categories [the author] employs seem a little crude, as first-hand and home-made concepts are likely to, they are at any rate based upon an acquaintance with actual life, and in origin, at least, are empirical rather than scholastic. The most interesting and perhaps the most important parts of this volume are not contained in the text but in the notes and random observations of the author at the end of the chapters in which he refers to the literature and the sources upon which this treatise is based." R. E. Park

Am Soc R 4:404 Je '39 900w

"One is particularly struck by the judicious use the author makes of such sources of information and illustration as those provided by newspapers and popular periodicals. This imparts a living, organic touch to the work as a whole; the subject and treatment never become academic or remote from familiar events. . . In spite of defects, the work will be of much use to the student as an introduction to the phenomena of social life." J. I. Cohen

+ — Nature 143:660 Ap 22 '39 600w

LARGE, ERNEST CHARLES. Asleep in the afternoon. 351p $2.50 Holt [7s 6d Cape, J]

39-21296

A novel within a novel. Charles Pry lives with his wife and son near Tilbury, England. He is an industrial chemist out of work, but he does not worry; there is enough money in the bank for two years. Out of Charles' habit of sleeping in the afternoons on the floor behind the piano comes the idea for the writing of a novel. The novel evolves within the main story, and Charles' struggle with his work, his publisher, reviewers, and his public, all becomes part of the story.

"This is a nice book, witty, philosophically witty, fundamentally thoughtful, always mature. Maybe a little too long, a little too serious for a book which has the charm of wit and cleverness and silences. They liked it in England; and this reviewer thoroughly enjoyed it." David Tilden

+ Books p2 S 10 '39 1000w

"I enjoyed, shall I say, both books and was sorry when they were finished. Mr. Large, like Mr. Pry, is an exceedingly knowledgeable author, with a large fund of scientific information and an ironical but very clear-sighted view of life as it is lived at the present time. I regret a frankness in certain relations that almost amounts to vulgarity here and there. Everything that can possibly be said about sex in a novel has been all too freely used in recent fiction. But I am left with a very profound admiration for Mr. Large's intelligence and hope that he will give us at least a third book." J. D. Beresford

LARGE, E. C.—Continued
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 19 '38 420w

"E. C. Large has two novels running simultaneously, introducing the double-feature bill in fiction. They are both called 'Asleep in the Afternoon.' They are strikingly similar in style and about equal in general interest. This is no small feat of ingenuity. . . [The author] passes as easily from romance to satire, from realism to fantasy. This bifurcate form—not the happiest in the world for most purposes—enables Mr. Large to get in an inordinate amount of discussion without scuttling his story." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p14 S 3 '39 800w

"Highly entertaining, intelligent, penetrating, never whimsical."
+ New Yorker 15:61 S 2 '39 60w

"There are many things to be said of this latest novel by the author of 'Sugar in the Air,' but the first is to recognize its high entertainment value. The stories . . . gather speed under a constant barrage of amusing asides and witty comment. There is a stimulating exuberance about the book; one can never imagine Mr. Large looking about for an idea, rather he seems to be elbowing them away trying to confine his novel to a conventional length." Gladys Graham
+ Sat R of Lit 20:17 S 16 '39 550w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 161:346 Ag 26 '38 650w

"The book is really a satire on tendencies of the times, both literary and in general. Mr Large has a sharp and scoffing pen which delights the reader. But the manner of his writing is labored and artificial. He achieves in this manner the originality he aims at, but at the risk of wearying the reader."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p541 Ag 20 '38 400w

LARIGAUDIE, GUY DE. Flivver to Cambodia. 182p il maps $2 Putnam

915 Asia—Description and travel. Automobile touring 39-25466

Account of the journey of two French Boy scouts by Ford from Paris, south across Europe, thru Turkey, the Holy Land, and east to Cambodia.

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40

Reviewed by H. N. Gardner
Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 130w

"No mere 'boy's book.' . . Boys and their fathers and their mothers, too, will follow this gay and exciting narrative of adventures always interesting, often funny, and sometimes dangerous. . . The boys are devout Catholics. . . The English translation has been capably done."
+ Cath World 150:381 D '39 100w

"This travelogue, though very French in viewpoint, is an inspiring book for our young scouts." R. W. Stewart
+ Library J 65:37 Ja 1 '40 100w

"Good but naive account."
Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 20w

LA ROE, WILBUR. Parole with honor; foreword by Sanford Bates. 295p $3 Princeton univ. press

364 Probation system 39-27918

An attempt to explain in simple language for the general reader the purpose of parole of prisoners, how parole boards function, and why parole is a valuable adjunct to our penal system. The author is chairman of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of the District of Columbia. Index.

Booklist 36:104 N 15 '39

"Timely, authoritative and up to date, 'Parole With Honor' tackles a lively subject in interesting, provocative fashion. It should go far toward correcting many popular misconceptions about this most hotly debated of all penological subjects." S. G. Kling
+ Books p22 N 26 '39 850w

Reviewed by Morris Ploscowe
Columbia Law R 39:1460 D '39 420w

"The book is as readable as it is comprehensive and sound."
+ N Y Times p32 O 29 '39 480w

"By far the best book I have seen on this controversial subject." S. G. Kling
+ Survey 76:27 Ja '40 300w

LARRIMORE, LIDA, pseud. See Turner, L. L.

LARSEN, MRS ELLOUISE BAKER. American historical views on Staffordshire china [prefatory note by Homer Eaton Keyes]. 270p il maps $10 Doubleday

738 Staffordshire pottery. U.S.—History—Pictorial works 39-27498

"A reference manual containing encyclopedic data about historical Staffordshire wares, intended to enable students to classify unidentified specimens or to understand the significance of various designs. Though based on the list presented in Barber's Anglo-American Pottery, the author has added over 160 views and many new facts. Includes an index of borders, sketches of border segments, a list of American historical china, bibliography, p. 251-54, and a biographical list of artists. Many illustrations, some in the blue of the china." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:345 Je 15 '39

"Collectors of China are the principal clientele to which American Historical Views on Staffordshire China will appeal, though the volume has a wider interest. . . So many American scenes are pictured that a survey of the products has antiquarian interest apart from the collector's interest in china products. For instance, one view reproduced by Mrs Larsen shows the first St Patrick's cathedral at the corner of Prince and Mott streets, New York."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 13 '39 130w

LARSON, JAMES HENRY. See Bible. New Testament. Gospels. Meet the Man you were born to love

LARSON, LAURENCE MARCELLUS. The log book of a young immigrant [autobiography]. 318p $3 Norwegian-Am. hist. assn.

B or 92 39-23550

"A plain and factual account of the adventures of a Norwegian boy in leaving his home country for the Iowa prairies in the early seventies. Through retrospective eyes, Professor Larson recaptured for his diary the impact of those early days: the economic conditions of the frontier farmer, the survival of old-world folk culture, the new Americanism, and the variety of frontier amusements, among which must be considered both the itinerant clergy with their revivals and the excitements of local politics." (Social Studies) At the time of his death Professor Larson was president of the American Historical association.

"This log-book is a contribution to an understanding of the two major themes of American history: immigration and the frontier. . . All this is familiar enough; the case study makes it personal and intimate. The details are unimportant, often dull, but their cumulative effect is impressive. . . 'The Log Book of a Young Immigrant' belongs with that large shelf of volumes which the Scandinavians have contributed to the story of immigration and Americanization—with Riis's 'Making of an American' and Jensen's 'American Saga' and Rolvaag's 'Peder Victorious'—and it is not unworthy of that company." H. S. Commager

+ Books p20 D 3 '39 700w

"Professor Larson's diary should take its place permanently as a minor contribution to the literature of the American immigrant. . . While this work contributes little to literature, it will undoubtedly prove a source of information for the social historian." Sculley Bradley

+ Social Studies 31:44 Ja '40 240w

LASCELLES, MARY. Jane Austen and her art. 235p $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Austen, Jane [39-31338]

"[The author's] purpose here is 'to give some account first of Jane Austen—approaching her by way of a brief narrative of her life and an inquiry into the scope, the quality and the outcome of her reading—and then of her art, approached through her use of language and studied most fully in relation to the narrator's peculiar problems.' The biographical section of the book is brief, and is itself preponderantly concerned with literary emphasis. The examination of Jane Austen's narrative art fills almost half of this volume, and is acute, richly allusive and interesting." N Y Times

---

"I read Jane Austen and Her Art with some care, and, being pretty well acquainted with the works, I have no excuse for not understanding it. So I should find it easy to describe; yet my impression of the book as a whole is strangely vague and unsatisfying. The author meant to bring light. Former critics, she observes, have worked on too small a scale; they have stopped short just at the interesting moment; they shirk the 'exciting how and why of analysis.' She quotes them, on purpose to continue where they leave off. And after all it is the quotations that are illuminating." K. John

— + New Statesman & Nation 18:618 O 28 '39 1050w

+ N Y Times p10 O 29 '39 350w

"This is a very distinguished essay on a subject which has already been largely ransacked, but not so largely that Miss Lascelles is unable to show how many subtle connexions remained to be pointed out. . . My advice to the general reader would be somewhat as follows: Buy the book; read it through once, skimming the cream; then, whenever you read one of the novels, look up the references in Miss Lascelles' index and read what she has to say, under the different headings. You cannot fail thus to add enormously to your enjoyment of Jane Austen." Edward Sackville-West

+ Spec 163:594 O 27 '39 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 500w

"As the critic follows the development of her author from the early skits to the mature achievements, noting her treatment of time and of space, her principles of construction, her growing skill in effacing herself and making contact with her readers through the consciousness of her characters, and a score of other matters, it becomes clearer and clearer that this is not only a masterly study of one of the finest artists in English literature but also an outstanding contribution to the criticism of the craft of fiction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p356 Je 17 '39 1950w

LASSER, JACOB KAY. Your income tax. 1939 ed 128p pa $1 Simon & Schuster

336.24 Income tax 39-27140

Explains the present status of the federal income tax laws, as of January 1939, and gives directions for computing taxes and deductions. An earlier manual with the same title was prepared by Hugh Satterlee and I. H. Sher (Book Review Digest, 1936).

Booklist 35:236 Mr 15 '39

Booklist 36:169 Ja 1 '40

Management R 28:180 My '39 60w

"Written in simple you-style by a certified public accountant, Your Income Tax treats the befuddled lower-bracket taxee very much as a psychiatrist would handle an alarmed patient. The 120 pages of text lay every bugaboo from Who-Must-File-a-Return to What-to-do-if-They-Get-After-You. You can hardly go wrong unintentionally."

+ Time 33:71 F 20 '39 240w

LASSWELL, HAROLD DWIGHT, and BLUMENSTOCK, DOROTHY. World revolutionary propaganda; a Chicago study. 405p pl $4.50 Knopf

335.4 Communism. Propaganda 39-27088

"A detailed study of the theory and technique of communist propaganda, conducted by two sociologists with a view to evaluating the future prospects of communism. Chicago was the scene of the case study, and the period covered was 1929-1934." (Booklist) Index.

Am Hist R 45:491 Ja '40 30w

"It is to be hoped that, having developed a technique of analysis and measurement, Professor Lasswell and Miss Blumenstock will continue their study on a broader front. Perhaps they may even be persuaded to apply the same methods to a study of revolutionary propaganda emanating from Rome and Berlin. If Mr. Dies is really looking for expert assistance, I nominate the authors of this most significant book." P. H. Odegard

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:683 Ag '39 850w

Booklist 35:218 Mr 1 '39

Reviewed by E. S. Bates

Books p12 Je 25 '39 410w

"I think that it is a book which is of quite exceptional value to the general reader and that the publisher does well to give to the public so solid and non-sensational a work dealing with a subject that is of vital importance, but which has been so predominantly treated with emotional passion, either for or against, that it becomes ever more difficult to penetrate the rhetorical fog that surrounds so much of its discussion and to get at the facts and realities covered up by the storms of charges and counter-charges." Michael Williams

+ Commonweal 30:316 Jl 21 '39 1000w

"In the flood of froth and foam concerning subversive activities in America which fills the daily press, it is refreshing to have this sane study by two distinguished students of propaganda. Mr. Lasswell and Miss Blumenstock confine their researches to Communist propaganda in Chicago between 1930 and 1934. By thus limiting the problem they are able to present a more detailed and scientific analysis than is to be found in more extensive and general treatments of the subject." P. H. Odegard

+ Nation 149:199 Ag 19 '39 900w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

New Repub 98:350 Ap 26 '39 900w

"The book is not easy, nor even altogether pleasant to read, chiefly because of the social-scientific jargon in which it is composed. Certainly the authors are not therein especially conspicuous." Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 19:18 Mr 4 '39 500w

LATIMER, JONATHAN. Red gardenias. 280p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Methuen]

(W) 39-25445

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p12 S 10 '39 200w

"A good baffler. . . There are gangsters to complicate matters and plenty of clues, false

LATIMER, JONATHAN—Continued

and otherwise. There are also a lot of pretty awful puns, for which the detective undoubtedly deserves the physical violence he underwent." Marian Wiggin

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 16 '39 100w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 18:568 O 21 '39 40w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

N Y Times p20 S 17 '39 200w

"Grand story, bright as a button, with as good dialogue as you will find anywhere."

+ New Yorker 15:84 S 16 '39 50w

"Not too credible plot camouflaged by action, alcohol, and atmosphere, with sleuths wise-cracking ribald way through various dangers. Amusing."

Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 23 '39 40w

Time 34:71 O 2 '39 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 23 '39 130w

LATIMER, WENDELL MITCHELL. The oxidation states of the elements and their potentials in aqueous solutions. 352p $3 Prentice-Hall

541.37 Electrolysis. Oxidation. Chemical elements 39-2026

"Dr. Latimer, who is Professor of Chemistry in the University of California, writes this textbook to enable the student possessing 'a very elementary knowledge of thermodynamics to answer many of the qualitative questions involved in the interpretation of inorganic chemistry.' Tabular data and bibliographies are included in the appendices. 'The author, in calculating many new free energies from reaction heats, has drawn largely upon his own experimental work on the entropies of solids and aqueous ions.'" (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"The usefullness of thermodynamic data is determined by the carefullness with which they have been obtained, the clearness with which they are presented and the convenience with which they may be used. Judged by these criteria Latimer has achieved a remarkably successful volume. . . This volume will not only constitute an essential part of every chemist's reference library but will also introduce students who wish to use physico-chemical data to the elements of thermodynamics." H. E. Bent

+ Am Chem Soc J 61:2565 S '39 370w

"The author has succeeded well in the task that he set himself and has presented us with an authoritative text, which satisfies a long-felt need in physical, inorganic, and analytical chemistry. Anyone interested in the states of oxidation of elements will find the wealth of information to be obtained from this text invaluable. . . This book, undoubtedly, will receive the recognition and wide circulation that it deserves." I. M. Kolthoff

+ J Phys Chem 43:396 Mr '39 380w

"The volume will be extremely valuable to many workers—chemists, physicists and biologists—and it may be cordially recommended to their attention."

+ Nature 144:367 Ag 26 '39 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:53 O '38

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. A history of the expansion of Christianity [6v] v 3, Three centuries of advance, A.D. 1500-A.D. 1800. 503p maps $3.50 Harper

270 Church history. Missions (37-20993)

The third volume of this history of the missionary expansion of Christianity covers the period from 1500 to 1800. Bibliography. Index. For volumes one and two see Book Review Digest, 1937, 1938.

"As the preceding volumes, this new volume gives testimony of the author's prodigious diligence and the wide range of his scholarship. He seems to have consulted every relevant treatise in tracing the course of expansion of the Christian faith in every part of the world. . . As a history of missions the book is superb. When it seeks to estimate the relation of theological movements to each other and the effect of Christian faith upon moral and political life, it is bound by the author's persistently vague definition of the Christian religion." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Books p27 D 10 '39 950w

"It is high praise of this third volume of Professor Latourette's work to say that it maintains the standard set by the first two. . . Necessarily his treatment is much more condensed than that to be found in books devoted entirely to this subject, or to a part of it. But the total body of factual data included, with careful documentation, is immense, and the author's interpretative generalizations, though inclined to be on the favorable side when praise and blame are to be apportioned, are always valuable. It would have been a great help to the reader if the several chapters had been given a more visible structure." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 56:1578 D 20 '39 1000w

"The promise contained in the two previous volumes of this important series is sustained in this third volume. That Professor Latourette is successfully performing a most important task has been evident from the beginning. To cover the story of Christianity so comprehensively and yet so appealingly is a work which only a profound student and ready writer would undertake." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 30 '39 600w

"The value of the service rendered by Dr. Latourette is incalculable. He has made it impossible for any affiliated Christian to suppose that his community stands alone among the commonwealth of the faithful. . . The narrative is so complex that Dr. Latourette, as he proceeds, has to be congratulated upon keeping a clear head. Through the Americas and the Orient he leads us, hither and thither, without losing for an instant his sense of direction." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p11 Ja 14 '40 850w

LATTEY, CUTHBERT. Paul. (Religion and culture ser) 182p $2 Bruce pub. [8s 6d Coldwell]

227 Bible. New Testament—Epistles. Paul, Saint 39-5035

A study of St Paul, his life, writings, and teachings, by a Roman Catholic scholar. "The book treats different phases of the life and writings of the Apostle under four main headings: Paul; Christ; the Church; the Christian. One comes to see why Saint Paul is one of the greatest figures in the history of the world and why he could evoke such love and devotion from his followers." (America)

Reviewed by J. J. Collins

America 61:310 Jl 8 '39 250w

"It is no easy task to provide a brief synthesis of practically the whole of Christianity as seen through the eyes of St. Paul. So many difficult and intricate problems call for debate that much must inevitably be taken for granted, indeed regarded as fixed and settled, in a comparatively short study of this kind. Nor will a Protestant reader escape from the conclusion that Father Lattey has at times read his Roman Catholicism into the Pauline literature. Apart from such provisos, however, the book contains much excellent material, skilfully put together, and may be read with profit by members of all Christian communions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Ag 12 '39 700w

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. Jonny; il. by [the author]. 101p $1.25 Harcourt
(W) 39-27737

Jonny is two years old and this story about him records simply his activities thru a whole day.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 7 '40 250w

Reviewed by Vivian Lundberg
Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 50w

"Beginners in reading will enjoy it because of its large print and its pictures." Josephine Smith
Library J 64:849 N 1 '39 50w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Library J 64:903 N 15 '39 70w

"Eleanor Lattimore knows what is interesting to a 2-year-old because she has a son just that age. She knows, too, the little quirks of behavior which are so unexpected to adults, so natural to children. She has told the events of one day in a smooth-flowing narrative with a perfect sense of proportion." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 O 29 '39 240w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 50w
Wis Lib Bul 35:188 N '39

LAUBE, CLIFFORD JAMES. Crags. ltd ed 84p il $2.50 Monastine press, 107-06 103d av, Richmond Hill, N.Y.
811 38-15140

A book of poems by a Roman Catholic poet. "Mr. Laube displays a catholicity of interests. He writes of St. Paul and St. Augustine with no less fervor than he writes of Aristide Briand, the late Dr. Henry van Dyke and the skyline of Manhattan. Many of his poems are definitely religious, but it is the thought behind the religious motif rather than any emphasis on a creed which animates the verse." (N Y Times)

"Mr. Laube has some faults, though none so serious that they cannot be overcome. He is frequently a little uncertain in his use of words; his ear now and then fails him; and he has, as yet, a manner rather than a style. But he makes evident in 'To Fear' and 'Last Rally,' as well as in a number of other places, that he is a sincere and sensitive poet. Crags shows that he is already accomplished; it also suggests that he may rise to incontestable achievement." J. K. M.
+ — Cath World 149:757 S '39 210w

"In Clifford Laube's nature—as in that of Joyce Kilmer, whom he somewhat resembles—there is an essential simplicity which integrates the apparent contradictions of life, an essential ideality which leaps easily and unaffectedly to the First Cause. This simplicity is elemental and inclusive." Katherine Brégy
+ Commonweal 29:63 N 4 '38 300w

"This little book of reticent and delicately etched verse is, moreover, unique in a way that reminds one of William Morris. The Monastine Press, the author informs us, is located in the basement of his house at Richmond Hill, L. I.; and there he set his type by hand, made his woodcuts and printed and bound the books, which are limited to an edition of 1,000 copies. The same love of craftsmanship for its own sake which prompted Mr. Laube to put the book together himself is to be found in the meticulous care lavished on every individual line and stanza." P. H.
+ N Y Times p9 F 19 '39 200w

"Mr. Laube's gift is not great, but his neat expression in verse is better than that of a good many." W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 20:19 Ag 5 '39 30w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. So you're visiting New York city! 84p il maps $1.35 Houghton
917.471 New York (city)—Description
(W) 39-27550

Brief guide to New York city, intended as the first chapters of a projected book So You're Going to Travel in the United States. It describes New York city and vicinity street by street, giving also a selected list of hotels and restaurants, with their prices. Sixteen photographs. Map of subways and of theater, hotel and shopping districts. Index.

Booklist 35:362 Jl 1 '39

"The metropolitan chapters of a forthcoming 'So You're Going' book for the United States are offered as a preview of what promises to fill a want long felt. . . The tone throughout is personal to conversational point, much as if a friendly New Yorker were showing the reader around."
Books p15 Jl 23 '39 140w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 15 '39 30w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39
Pratt p24 summer '39
Wis Lib Bul 35:143 Jl '39

LAVES, WALTER H. C., ed. International security, by Eduard Beneš, Arthur Feiler, Rushton Coulborn. (Chicago. Univ. Harris foundation lectures on int. relations, 1939) 153p $2 Univ. of Chicago press
940.5 Europe—Politics. International law and relations (W) 39-29433

"Lectures on the Harris Foundation. Mr. Feiler's topic is 'Farewell to Security', Mr. Coulborn's 'Farewell to Leadership'—meaning British leadership. President Benes, after discussing the Geneva protocol and the Locarno pact, arrives at the conclusion that Britain's abandonment of her leadership and of the pax Britannica idea after the World War was the cause of many woes, and that, with such assistance as Britain can and will lend, 'the United States must now assume world leadership.' " (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 36:174 Ja 1 '40
Christian Century 56:1512 D 6 '39 70w

LAW, FREDERICK HOUK. Civilization builders. 356p il $1.32 (6s) Appleton-Century 926 Inventors. Inventions. Scientists
(W) 39-12424

Short accounts of the lives and works of famous leaders in transportation; machinery; photography; electricity; applied chemistry; and medicine. For high school age. Index.

" 'Civilization Builders' is designed to meet the rather prosaic and optimistic needs of the high-school freshmen. There is the usual undercurrent of quietism. No serious attempt is made to link mechanical invention with larger issues. A nice, safe book for Junior."
Boston Transcript p3 Je 10 '39 130w

"A very readable and stimulating account. . . Excellent for general reading, as well as for use in schools."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p647 N 4 '39 30w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE. A good home with nice people. 322p $2.50 Little
(W) 39-27002

The theme of the story is the domestic servant problem as exemplified by the dealings of two particularly disagreeable and tyrannical mistresses with their maids.

Booklist 35:191 F 1 '39

LAUGHLIN (lŏck'lĭn)

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE—Continued

"Miss Lawrence has a keen and merciless eye. She catches and shows up the little meannesses and big injustices of domestic life as mercilessly as the sunlight shows the flaws and dirt on the window pane. At first you squirm. Her observation is so persistent and so acute that it hits near home. As the outrages continue, however, your indignation abates. It is hardly possible to stay incandescently indignant for 322 pages. Suddenly you realize that you don't know and can hardly imagine, if at all, any culture of housewifery as despicable as the samples here submitted in test tubes. They are all right as pathologic specimens in a laboratory experiment and doutless many as unmixed as they can and do exist; but somewhere in the course of the experiment the novel passes out. The book becomes a kind of a diatribe against housewives in general and those who have servants in particular." Mary Ross

— + Books p6 F 5 '39 1150w

"No sane housewife is going to think this story fair; and of course all literate maids are too downtrodden to find time to read it. Enthusiasm, therefore, will be limited to henpecked husbands, exasperated employment people, and gentlemen critics who live in apartment hotels. . . As a novel this story is a caricature, done with honesty and sincerity; it is lively entertainment. As a tract, which is obviously what it is meant to be, it makes us pretty mad." Olga Owens

— + Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '39 1050w

"Within the first few pages, the book's message is made distressingly clear; the remainder of the narrative is spent in reiterating it without variation. The tyranny of Lolly Hazen and Mrs. National, the ceaseless discord in their homes, the pathetic parade of a series of disheartened maid-servants who play their brief part in the gloom of these bedlam-ridden households all contribute to a picture of one type of home life, a picture as horrible as it is photographically accurate." M. W. S.

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 8 '39 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '39

"Lack of formal plot in this new book can be overlooked because compensation is satisfactorily found in excellent character portrayal, realistic and moving, almost exciting, scenes of home life, and interesting discussions and incidents centered around the main thesis: 'not ignorant maids, but ignorant mistresses are our real servant problem.'" P. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 29:472 F 17 '39 420w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p9 Ap 28 '39 300w

"Most women will feel that the book lampoons women as employers; most men will sniff disdainfully at the milksop Mr. Hazen and the ineffectual Mr. National; but there is something about the story that makes one go on reading it just to see whether these deplorable people ever improve, or even get an inkling of the real reason why they can't keep a maid." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 148:182 F 11 '39 300w

New Repub 98:28 F 8 '39 50w

"The reader feels Opal to have been rather extraordinarily unfortunate in her mistresses, a feeling which greatly injures if it does not destroy whatever of interest or value the book might otherwise have as a presentation of the much-discussed servant problem. . . The best-drawn character in the book is that of Grandpa Hazen, whose whims, crotchets and innate shrewdness bear the stamp of truth, reminding the reader of some of Miss Lawrence's other and better novels." L. M. Field

— + N Y Times p7 F 5 '39 650w

"Miss Lawrence overstates the case so strongly that the force of her argument is lost. She should have either toned her two ladies down or boiled them in oil."

— New Yorker 14:67 F 4 '39 70w

Pratt p29 summer '39

"The subject is not really discussed seriously from any recognizable social angle, and has no direction, unless we consider the farcical ending, in which the girl ties and gags her mistress 'because she wouldn't stop talking,' as a climax. The book is simply one long headache about the servant problem." N. L. R.

— Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 4 '39 210w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 162:730 Ap 28 '39 500w

"The story lives, moves along swiftly, and the characterizations are sharp and seemingly genuine. Miss Lawrence knows how to make any story go to the bitter end, no matter what her text may be." M. D.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e F 5 '39 750w

"It is an amusing and often instructive tale, though it comes disappointingly from Miss Lawrence, whose previous novel was altogether solider and more serious. Realism in this degree where food and household cares are concerned is excessive. And Mrs. Hazen, with her mania of housewifely and every other kind of silliness, is overdrawn. The servant problem is a neglected subject in fiction, no doubt, but Miss Lawrence has been needlessly generous in trying to make amends for the neglect."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p215 Ap 15 '39 430w

Wis Lib Bul 35:65 Ap '39

LAWRENCE, THOMAS EDWARD. Letters; ed. by David Garnett. 896p il maps $5 Doubleday [25s Cape, J]

B or 92 (W) 39-27198

In his preface to these letters of T. E. Lawrence the editor explains he has "included not only private letters but anything from his official reports, letters or articles in the press, diaries, unpublished notes and memoranda which would serve my purpose." The arrangement is by periods of Lawrence's life, beginning with his early years as an archeologist, followed by the war period, his return to England, the attempt to escape from the Colonel Lawrence legend, and the final period of his life from 1929 to his death in 1935. Index.

"Only Mr. Garnett, who edited the collection, can know how much material was discarded. With unostentatious skill his selection clarifies that strange and magnificent character. Only when necessary do his own notes supply a lead. Most of the letters belong to the post-war period. The years of the Arab Revolt have only small space. Possibly that was unavoidable—certainly it is quite proper. The significance of the collection is personal. Seven Pillars of Wisdom satisfied history." A. W. Smith

+ Atlantic Jl '39 900w

Booklist 35:251 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Books p3 Mr 26 '39 2650w

"'Sincerity,' wrote Lawrence on May 1, 1928, 'is the only written thing which time improves.' Mr. Garnett kept this dictum in mind as he selected Lawrence's letters for this novel biography; and the result is a rich and vivid picture of a bewildering personality, every page of which frames some new quality of the man, or evokes in the reader some fresh emotion, until the gamut of human character and feeling is well-nigh exhausted." William Thomson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 25 '39 470w

"The artificial style of 'The Seven Pillars of Wisdom' is not here—with his attachment to 'titanic' books it is evident that Lawrence's admiration for Doughty had its influence—he writes vigorously, racily, humorously, always passionate about detail. They are the letters of a man with obvious drive, and he early learned to adapt himself to his correspondents." V. S. Pritchett

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 14 '38 850w

Foreign Affairs 17:820 Jl '39 20w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 101:268 My '39 900w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein

Nation 149:47 Jl 8 '39 1650w

"They are good letters: but not much more. They are not important as separate pieces of writing. Their importance is cumulative, for the light they throw on the extraordinary and complex character of the man who wrote them. In that sense, they are one of the most important collections ever to be published. For Lawrence, as he himself knew, was not an artist. What is best in an artist's mind is externalised in works of art: you can see it, there, outside—it is mere idle curiosity to peer within. But not with Lawrence. If you would see the beautiful complexity of that intensely active mind you must look into it: and these letters, with The Seven Pillars of Wisdom, are the chief means of doing so. This is, moreover, one of the best-edited volumes I have ever come across. The arrangement, the careful transcription, the short narrative links, are admirable." Richard Hughes

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:1007 D 10 '38 1850w

"It is not often that one can say of a book that it is the man himself, but assuredly this may be averred of David Garnett's 'The Letters of T. E. Lawrence.' With perfect tact (occasioning, of course, certain excisions) and meticulous annotation (which really makes a sort of biography out of the venture) the author of 'Lady Into Fox,' himself a close friend to Lawrence during the latter's last years, has assembled nearly 600 letters in chronological order and thereby given the reading public the clearest picture of the multiple-natured war hero that we are ever likely to have." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 12 '39 1650w

"This selection is, in part at least, remarkably interesting, often irritating, occasionally moving. . . At his finest, Lawrence was a wonderful artist in prose, but he will not rank among the great English letter-writers. Yet there are a few dozen pages here not easily forgotten. . . Lawrence's early letters, written to his mother when he was in his teens, are singularly fresh, vivid, and poetic, quite unlike the later correspondence, which tends to the military-factual in tone or is touched by his central and inescapable morbidity." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:92 Mr 11 '39 650w

Pratt p28 summer '39

"850-odd pages of letters, packed with thinking, erratic with congested detail, allusive, elusive, witty, erudite, always familiar. They read as if sparks flew from the pen as he wrote. Personality electrifies them to a degree which makes the brain tingle, till the reader slows down. Few letters have less than a dozen subjects. There is the kind of tension in them which you get in a too witty play. Without annotation, some of them would be unintelligible to the uninformed,—but there is good annotation. An active intellect at work upon the complex life of our times is certainly displayed in this book." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 19:6 Mr 11 '39 1250w

Reviewed by C. Day-Lewis
Spec 161:908 N 25 '38 1100w

Time 33:72 Mr 20 '39 230w

"Mr. David Garnett has fulfilled his task with religious zeal and scholarly thoroughness. . . All this material is woven together skilfully but unobtrusively to make a chronological narrative, and is grouped in periods."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup 757 N 26 '38 1350w

"David Garnett's choice and arrangement of the letters in groups, each with a penetrating introduction, make it possible to follow the strange psychological evolution of T. E. Lawrence from boyhood to death. They reveal the increasing force of his personality, his brilliant intellect, the scope and limitations of his knowledge, the breadth and depth of his interests, his acute sensitiveness and delicacy of feeling, and his coarseness. The reader delights as much in his rebellious spirit and puckish nature as in his simplicity and friendliness; and is as amazed at his timidity as at his self-assurance." William Yale

+ Yale R n s 28:819 summer '39 1250w

LAWRENCE, THOMAS EDWARD. T. E. Lawrence to his biographer, Robert Graves: to his biographer, Liddell Hart. ltd autog ed 2v 195;241p il $20 Doubleday [£5 5s Faber]

B or 92 39-3672; 39-3673

"Two volumes containing the byproducts of two biographies written of Lawrence while he was still alive. Liddell Hart's was essentially a study of a military genius, Robert Graves's a history of the man's career, with more emphasis on his personality and his intellectual achievements in general. . . What each biographer has done in the two books under review is to print his correspondence with Lawrence, in which the man is asked to tell, and does tell, his own story. But in addition to the letters . . . both Graves and Hart sent the text of their biographies to Lawrence, who paragraph by paragraph, and sometimes sentence by sentence, supplied his own readings of his exploits, and his corrections of misstatements or errors. The result is a fascinating study of the making of history and biography." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
Books p2 Ja 8 '39 1700w

"The replies, notes, corrections, and additions which Lawrence sent to his two biographers and which are now collected in these two companion volumes, his reactions to his portraits and attempts to retouch them, are valuable material both for an understanding of his personality and, especially in the case of Captain Liddell Hart's book, of Lawrence in action. Moreover, the two books should help finally to blast certain legends—if anything can ever blast a legend." L. B. Namier

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 14 '39 550w

Reviewed by Herbert Gorman
N Y Times p1 Ja 8 '39 1250w

Reviewed by H. S. Canby
Sat R of Lit 19:7 Ja 7 '39 600w

"These two very finely produced volumes contain a great mass of information about T. E. Lawrence—some new, some already known, some amending or qualifying earlier statements. . . The books are intensely interesting to anyone acquainted with Lawrence's work and character, and though, like every other book about Lawrence, they leave the final mystery of his nature unsolved, they certainly allow us to see the contradictions in him in new and revealing detail."

+ Spec 162:278 F 17 '39 240w

Time 33:72 Mr 20 '39 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 14 '39 750w

LAWSON, ROBERT. Ben and me; il. by [the author]. 114p $1.50 Little

Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature
(W) 39-24448

Humorous biography of Benjamin Franklin, written for children. The supposed author is a remarkably intelligent mouse who resided in Ben's old fur cap, and always appeared at opportune—and inopportune—moments to aid his patron in his inventions or his social duties.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

"So many grown-ups have already recommended the book to me I have an idea it will be one of those brought home to the children because Papa wants it himself. Both will have a good time. . . A child who knows the few facts about Franklin every child is told early in his American history will get the joke in these gay travesties of fact. As for the pictures, they have clear-cut, definite, beauty like music, a just-right look that pleases even those who don't yet know just why they are right." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 N 12 '39 250w

LAWSON, ROBERT—Continued

"The publishers request that not more than 500 words be quoted without special permission, and well they may. With such a succession of printed chuckles to choose from, selection is difficult, and the reviewer's best recourse is to say: Read it. And now lest this praise seem too fulsome, let us concede the existence of some few personages who will not be able to enjoy the book—they will be cautious souls who cannot take their history tongue-in-cheek." Vivian Lundberg

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 280w

"We heartily recommend 'Ben and Me' if you are looking for good entertainment. Read it yourself, better still read it aloud, sharing it with your family and friends. It is ageless in appeal. We think you will agree that it is history on a lark." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '39 160w

"Robert Lawson's inimitable pictures are an important part of the book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 15:388 N '39 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk M 16:28 Ja '40 60w

"A book which can hardly be classed strictly as juvenile as the humor and sly references to Franklin's personal idiosyncrasies will probably make it as appealing to adults as young people. Excellent black and white drawings equal if not surpass the humor of the text. For senior—young adults collection." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 65:125 F 1 '40 70w

"Putting it mildly, this is a change from the average view of Franklin, and boys and girls, who, like Amos, are sick and tired of Poor Richard's maxims, will enjoy this unconventional and cheerfully unauthentic portrait. It furnishes ample material for fun, even though it is not of the wildly hilarious variety, and Mr. Lawson has made the best use of the opportunity in his illustrations." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 10 '39 320w

Sat R of Lit 21:21 D 9 '39 20w

LAY, MARION (MRS H. L. DAVIS). Wooden saddles; il. by Addison Burbank. 175p $2 Morrow

Children in Mexico (W) 39-23414

Adventure story of the Mexican desert country for young readers. The hero is the boy Chucho, who ran away from the gypsies who had kidnaped him, and lived among the Mexican villagers. Chucho's skill at rope throwing brings him work and a certain amount of fame.

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:391 N '39 90w

"A book of literary merit and dramatic quality which gives, perhaps, the best pictures we have of Mexico's cactus deserts, high cool mountains, warm fertile valleys, and its people. . . Attractive make-up and good illustrations in black and white by Addison Burbank cleverly interpret the setting. Recommended for grades five-seven." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 64:762 O 1 '39 140w

New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 20w

LAYTHA, EDGAR. North again for gold; birth of Canada's arctic empire. 360p il map $3 Stokes

917.12 Frontier and pioneer life—Northwest, Canadian (W) 39-32211

Story of the great discovery of radium bearing ores in northwestern Canada, and of the new civilization which is springing up in those regions: on the shores of Great Slave lake, and on up to the Arctic ocean. The author lived with the prospectors and engineers, and the book contains short sketches of some of these and other personalities, among whom is Monsignor Breynat, better known as "the Flying Bishop."

"Not all of this picture of advancing empire is pretty. But the story of it is well done." R. G. Doyle

Books p30 D 10 '39 650w

New Repub 101:297 D 27 '39 30w

"This is a story without an end. Yet it is one with fascinating reading in it and may serve as an escape for many who are wearied and depressed by the news they read from older communities." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 D 3 '39 1100w

"To the lay reader who will never be called upon to finance the operating of a huge mine in the Arctic or the extraction of radium from pitchblend, there are too many pages, too many details concerning money and scientific processes. But this tedium is more than made up for by the clear and striking portraits which the author draws for us of the men—and some women—to whom this new empire is the center of existence." M. A. Peary

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:13 D 23 '39 600w

"The narrative of his trips is as intimate as it is stirring. Often he quotes the precise language of those interviewed and his descriptions are realistic. His ability to make one see through his eyes is remarkable. One can almost feel the bite of the mosquitoes and the sting of the cold as well as the beauty of the scenery, the personalities of prospectors, engineers and adventurers, and the flight of the airplane. His narrative form, which sometimes resembles a journal, makes for vividness and exactness."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 1000w

LEA, FANNY HEASLIP. Not for just an hour. 276p $2 Dodd

39-8346

Story of a modern marriage which survived the vicissitudes of misunderstanding, separation, and even divorce, and reached a happy conclusion.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Ap 16 '39 200w

"Told in Fanny Heaslip Lea's lucid, straightforward fashion, this story of a foolish girl trying to be sensible is made fresher than its plot deserves." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Ap 16 '39 200w

LEA, HENRY CHARLES, comp. Materials toward a history of witchcraft; arranged and ed. by Arthur C. Howland; with an introd. by George Lincoln Burr. 3v $12 Univ. of Pa. press [55s Oxford]

133.4 Witchcraft 39-5921

"This voluminous work which runs to over fifteen hundred pages is exactly entitled. It consists of the great mass of data assembled by Mr. H. C. Lea, whose projected history of witchcraft was left unwritten at his death. For nearly thirty years these materials, without order or arrangement, remained inaccessible to the public. Now, through the labors of Professor Howland, they may be studied in a historical sequence which adequately demonstrates the rise of this appalling delusion, its height and its slow decline." (N Y Times) No index.

"In setting forth the result of Dr. Lea's toil Professor Howland frankly points out that the collection is far from exhaustive, and the student seeking a comprehensive history of witch prosecution and extermination down the ages will still have to face an extensive search. The sections are uneven in scope and quantity, for, while largely transcribing generally, Dr. Lea tended to concentrate 'regionally' and at his death, apart from his survey of early demonology, had satisfied his requirements fully only so far as to cover the German holocausts." C. L'E. Ewen

+ — Am Hist R 45:96 O '39 1000w

"The great value of the work lies in the huge assembly of references drawn from treatises uncommonly met with. In every case they were culled from books in the possession of Mr. Lea and every entry has been checked with its source by the editor. For the historian, the sociologist and the student of legal procedure they constitute an array of evidence nowhere else so readily available. For the scholar there is a further value: here may be seen the method of compilation employed by one of the most distinguished of American mediaevalists in the construction of a major work." S. J. Herben

+ N Y Times p4 My 7 '39 450w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Too much college; or, Education eating up life; with kindred essays in education and humour. 255p $2 Dodd

378 Education, Higher. Humor (W) 39-32452

A volume of essays in which, in semi-humorous vein, a professor emeritus of McGill university (and a well-known humorist) discusses the terrible state of higher education in the United States and Canada. Partial contents: Education eating up life: What good is Latin? Has economics gone to seed? Teaching the unteachable; Kindred essays in education and humor: When men retire; Reader's junk; Little stories for good luck: Thinking of tomorrow; Are professors absent-minded? Freedom of thought.

Booklist 36:174 Ja 1 '40

"It's nice to have a book on the subject by a writer so much loved by us all and so thoroughly belettered and bedoctored as Stephen Leacock. And it's grand to have the problem all dressed and laid out in the foreword so that one can forget it and concentrate on the main show, which is Leacockism, none the less priceless when peeping through the whiskers—I will not say the false whiskers—of more or less solemn and venerable theory. I hope it's all right to prefer the professor when he is funny about the bad old curriculum, as he mostly is—he can't seem to help it." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 N 19 '39 1050w

"This is Leacock on education. He flogs some dead horses, and he overstates his case shamelessly, but he does it with his own brand of wit and urbanity. Leacock fans will find all of his usual flavor, and serious readers will find material for a full evening of uplifting discussion." N. W. Mattis

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 360w

N Y Times p22 N 26 '39 480w

LEAF, MUNRO. Fair play [il. by the author]. 94p $1.50 Stokes

(W) 39-27738

Rules of conduct for social living, amusingly written for young children. Illustrated with line drawings.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

"Mr. Leaf has deserved well of his own country and of the embattled democracies, for a book that could have been perfectly awful—as some others have been—if it had not been just right. But, you see, it is just right." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 O 1 '39 300w

Reviewed by Ruth Page

Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 60w

Cath World 150:374 D '39 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 15:379 N '39 60w

"Fair Play should be required reading for every child. It is a picture book, and it is fun." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 64:851 N 1 '39 60w

"This would be a good gift for a school or a class rather than an individual child, for it has a touch of the text-book in spite of its lively cartoons, and is meant to instruct and improve and inspire patriotism in the youthful breast." R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 90w

Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

LEAF, MUNRO. The watchbirds; a picture book of behavior [il. in two colors by the author]. 28p $1 Stokes

39-11079

Humorous drawings and simple descriptive text show certain members of society in action—sulkers, squirmers, grabbers, fussers, floor-pilers, etc., the purpose being to teach painless lessons in good manners to young people.

"This book laughs the littlest child into some of the reasons for manners. Nobody else does it in this way—or quite so well in any other way." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 7 '39 150w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack

Boston Transcript p13 Je 29 '39 70w

LEAGUE OF NATIONS. Health organization. Technical commission on nutrition. Guiding principles for studies on the nutrition of populations, by E. J. Bigwood. 281p il pa $1.50 Columbia univ. press [pa 6s Allen, G]

612.39 Nutrition

"In this volume Professor Bigwood of Brussels University has endeavored to work out methods of enquiry which can be generally applied, as to the actual food consumption and the state of nutrition of given population groups. The book is divided into two parts. In the first, Dietary Surveys, four types of dietary surveys are described. . . The second part discusses the somatometric (biometric, clinical and physiological) methods that may be suitably employed in these investigations. Special attention is given to the physiological methods, especially those for detecting latent hypovitaminoses and iron deficiency." Canadian Forum

---

"A useful and enlightening publication. . . The author presupposes no advanced knowledge on the part of the reader and discusses nutritive principles, tests, and statistics with such clarity that both the student and the experienced worker will benefit." A. S. Levine

+ Am J Pub Health 29:1269 N '39 240w

Canadian Forum 19:302 D '39 250w

LEAHY, D. J. St Augustine on eternal life. 122p $1.50 Benziger [5s Burns]

237 Future life. Augustine, Saint, bp. of Hippo

Theological treatise on the subject of St Augustine's teachings on the nature of man's vision of God. "By dint of much quotation of not always pertinent texts, Father Leahy develops his threefold thesis: that the beatific vision is reserved for heaven, that this vision in heaven is an intellectual one accompanied by love, finally that man will not see God in heaven directly with his bodily eyes." (Commonweal)

"The author writes with clarity on an abstruse subject." J. McS.

+ Cath World 149:501 Jl '39 70w

Reviewed by V. J. Bourke

Commonweal 30:166 Je 2 '39 130w

"The student may smile a little at being told that 'with regard to the visions enjoyed by Moses and St Paul, all readers of St. Augustine are aware that they were exceptional' . . . or that 'one cannot resist the urge to enquire whether the Saint insisted that the Christian will not see God face to face until after the resurrection of the body.' But the three sections of the book on 'The Purpose of Life,' 'Life Abundant' and 'The Perfect Life in Body and Soul' leave in combination a series of interesting and stimulating impressions and the writer has been at real pains to make his work as useful as possible to his readers."

LEAHY, D. J.—Continued
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p303 My 20 '39 210w

LEAROYD, C. G. Physicians' fare. 302p $2 Longmans [7s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

A volume of short stories, most of them dealing with doctors, medicine or medical research.

"Candour is an essential in such work as Mr. Learoyd's, and if it occasionally leads the author to desert the short story form for the essay or dissertation the lapse is amply redeemed by the wise and lovable personality, sympathetic, whimsical, that comes through every time. We can do with more work of the kind from one who appears to be a new-comer to authorship, although there is really no need for him to offer anything more on the lines of two Rabelaisian pieces." Thomas Moult
+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 16 '39 450w

"While some of the stories are inconsequential, the collection as a whole is interesting. Not alone do the better tales merit attention for their plot, but for the pleasing nature of the mind which has fashioned them." Rose Feld
+ — N Y Times p7 D 3 '39 700w

"On the whole, this is a most entertaining mixture, with humour, wisdom, cynicism and tragedy well blended and a dash of typically medical wit of the very broadest and most full-blooded flavour. There is tolerance and humanity as background to every story, even when Dr. Learoyd is at his most cynical."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p279 My 13 '39 230w

LEAVENS, DICKSON HAMMOND. Silver money. 439p $4 Principia

332.41 Money. Silver as money 39-6936

"This presents the background and principal developments in the use of silver as money since the beginning of the nineteenth century. . . The study opens with a brief historical account of silver and gold before the nineteenth century." Pacific Affairs

"Here is a book which should be required reading for all members of Congress as well as for all others who have anything to do or say about silver. . . The value of the volume is enhanced by a classified bibliography which includes practically everything of worth on silver published in English." H. W. Guest
+ Am Econ R 29:617 S '39 550w

Reviewed by C. R. Whittlesey
Ann Am Acad 206:205 N '39 500w
Foreign Affairs 17:808 Jl '39 10w

"To this book Mr. Leavens has brought two decades of administrative experience in China, a mathematical bent, statistical training, and methodical habits. The volume represents much painstaking work. But, for readability, it contains too much statistical and other detail in the body of the text. Much of the detail is more suitable for the footnotes or Appendix. Moreover, the discussion ranges back and forth chronologically and geographically, producing the effect of a collection of separate and often overlapping essays. . . [However] notwithstanding [certain] omissions, the volume contains a great deal of useful information. In view of the dearth of recent books on the monetary use of silver, the Cowles Commission has performed a useful service in publishing this volume." H. M. Bratter
+ — J Pol Econ 47:588 Ag '39 750w

Reviewed by W. F. Spalding
Pacific Affairs 12:324 S '39 750w

LEBRETON, JULES. History of the dogma of the Trinity; from its origins to the Council of Nicæa; v. 1, The origins; tr. by Algar Thorold from the 8th edition. 453p $4.50 Benziger [15s Burns]

231 Trinity [39-8548]

"Père Lebreton's book on the dogma of the Trinity has been used in the French original by a good many generations of students since its first publication thirty years ago, and eight editions, down to 1927, have attested its usefulness. The first volume of an English translation, undertaken by the late Mr. Algar Thorold, presents the sections in which under the headings 'The Hellenic Environment,' 'The Jewish Preparation' and 'The Christian Revelation' the author amassed materials relating to his subject up to and including the New Testament writings." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"On its first appearance, in 1910, this volume was universally esteemed a masterly treatment of its subject. Each successive revision of the French text has received high praise; and to-day, after a testing of nearly thirty years, the work is generally acknowledged to be one of the truly great books of the twentieth century." F. L. Sheerin, S.J.
+ America 61:142 My 20 '39 550w
Cath World 149:764 S '39 210w

"The first volume of Père Lebreton's great work . . . has been rendered into clear, readable English by the late Mr. Algar Thorold. The translation is somewhat shorter than the original, due to a reduction and abbreviation of the footnotes and appendices, but the text itself is a faithful and complete rendering of the French edition. We are fortunate to have accessible one of the most important works of historical theology that has appeared in our day." W. R. O'C.
+ Commonweal 30:27 Ap 28 '39 80w

"Some freedom has been used in dealing with the abundant notes with which the French editions are enriched; the many hundreds that are left will, however, supply fruitful sources for further study. . . In view of the writer's tendency to overcrowd his text with miscellaneous information it might be wished that the index could have been longer than three pages."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p167 Mr 18 '39 180w

LEDERER, MRS CHARLOTTE (BACSKAY). The eagle's quest; il. by the author. 296p $2 Doubleday

Rákóczy, György—Fiction 39-27919

Historical novel for young people. The story concerns Hungary's rebellion against the Austrian yoke in the eighteenth century. The chief characters are the young Polish princess, Lodoska, and Giorgio Rakoczy, son of Hungary's exiled king, Francis Rakoczy.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

"This is excellent historical fiction for older readers in the children's rooms and for the high school ages, bringing to them a brand-new interest in eighteenth-century affairs of state." Irene Smith
+ Library J 64:806 O 15 '39 120w

"Exciting and valiant."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

LEDERER, JOE. Fafan in China; tr. by Margaret Rounds; il. by William Sanderson. 137p $2 Holiday

Children in China 40-1708

Story of a ten-year-old Swiss boy who lived in the International Settlement in Shanghai. Stephen, or Fafan as the Chinese called him, made a name for himself when he rescued his little Chinese friend from kidnapers.

Cath World 150:378 D '39 100w

"Slight, expensive, and inferior as a picture of China to many other available stories, it is recommended only for libraries for which the author's name has significance or which wish it as an example of Helen Gentry's design." J. L. Sauer

— + Library J 65:78 Ja 15 '40 90w

"Behind this compact little tale, which will hold the attention of 8 to 14 year olds with its comedy and genuine suspense, lies the complicated structure of life in a modern Chinese city, and there is, too, an understanding of a little boy's restless, wordless need for friendship and for adventure. So well translated is this English version that there is no trace of its German origin and it stands as a distinguished piece of incisive writing." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 4 '40 300w

"The chief charm of the book is not its melodrama but its humor, fresh background, and lively writing."

+ New Yorker 15:89 N 25 '39 30w

"Good to read aloud."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 16 '39 20w

LEE, ALFRED MCCLUNG, and LEE, ELIZABETH BRIANT, eds. Fine art of propaganda. See Institute for propaganda analysis

LEE, CHARLES. How to enjoy reading; il. by the author (with apologies to James Thurber). 263p $2 Waverly house, 156 Boylston st, Boston

028 Books and reading (W) 39-31390

A series of chapters on books and reading by the literary editor of the Boston Herald. Contents: Reading and you; How to read; What to read; Building your library; Buying and borrowing books; How to be your own critic.

Booklist 36:147 D 15 '39

"The author's drawings are presented 'with apologies to James Thurber,' which seems scarcely necessary; they are amusing little drawings in their own way, and they lighten a by no means heavy little book."

+ N Y Times p34 N 5 '39 400w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 13 '39 360w

LEE, EDWIN AUGUSTUS, ed. Objectives and problems of vocational education. 2d ed 476p $3.50 McGraw

371.42 Vocational education 38-29361

New and revised edition of a symposium by well-known authorities on vocational education, first published in 1928. Index.

Booklist 35:137 D 15 '38

J Home Econ 31:118 F '39 70w

LEE, KATHRYN DEAN. Adventuring in art. 224p il map $2.25 (7s 6d); student ed $1.68 Appleton-Century

700 Art (W) 39-5869

This textbook for secondary schools takes up both the appreciation of art and the application of art principles to everyday life. The many illustrations include diagrams and drawings in the text, reproductions of famous paintings (in black and white), and photographs of architecture, sculpture, etc. The author is teacher of fine arts at the University High School, University of Chicago.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

"The style is easy and colloquial. It is possible, of course, to argue that art cannot be taught from books. Which, at the bottom, is quite true. But to focus the child's wavering interests, 'Adventuring in Art' should fill a distinct need."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 80w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 27 '39 120w

"Written in a chatty, readable style, and profusely illustrated in half-tone and in line, it should help girls and boys realize the value of art to their lives." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 7 '39 150w

LEE, MRS MELICENT HUMASON. In the land of rubber; il. by Edmund Marine. 99p $1.75 Crowell

(W) 39-27420

Story of native life on a Malay rubber plantation, and of a visit to the coast by two Malay families. Details of daily life, pets, fishing, and a tiger hunt are given in this story for young readers.

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ag 13 '39 300w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart

Library J 64:564 Jl '39 60w

"A straightforward, interesting story. . . An authentic and pleasing picture of rubber plantations and native life in Malaya that 8 to 11 year olds will read with enjoyment." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Je 11 '39 220w

LEE, MRS MELICENT HUMASON, and HO, JUNG. Chang Chee; pictures by Laura Bannon. 137p $1.50 Harper

Children in China (W) 39-27739

Story of life in a little Chinese village, called Good Luck, and of the boy, Chang Chee, who wanted to be an artist.

Booklist 36:47 O 1 '39

"Remarkably fine pictures by Laura Bannon keep pace with the events and the interesting end papers are Chang's own drawings made when he was ten and a half and eleven years old." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 13 '39 150w

"There is serenity and sincerity in this story of Chang Chee. . . The reader shares Chang Chee's ambitions as well as his life at school, his helping in the rice fields, the trips to market and the perils of a spring flood. Good to recommend for supplementary reading on China for fourth and fifth grade readers." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 64:904 N 15 '39 70w

"Not for children of the most robust taste perhaps, but for children of the middle years it makes real and understandable the exotic figures and background of Chinese pictures. For that reason it is a pity that Laura Bannon's illustrations, which have their own individual style and humor, do not contain more of the subtle delicacy of the Chinese style." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 N 26 '39 310w

LEE, OLIVER JUSTIN. Beyond yonder. 169p il $2.50 Chapman & Grimes

522.6 Astrometry. Photometry, Astronomical 39-31897

In this small book the author explains in language the layman can understand how man has arrived at techniques for measuring "the incredibly small and the incredibly large." Dr Lee is director of the Dearborn observatory, Northwestern university.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:58 O '39

"The author is stamped as one who not only knows whereof he speaks but speaks so that his hearers must comprehend. In other words, here is 'popular science' at its best."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Je '39 200w

LEEMING, JOHN FISHWICK. Thanks to Claudius; with il. by Richard B. Ogle. 158p $1.50 Viking [cheaper ed 3s 6d Harrap]

39-23760

The further adventures of Mr Tawney among the Bee People, ruled over by the king bee, Claudius. This time a meddlesome woman, Mrs Bustle-Loudly, and her friend, Mr Clutterbuck, are accidentally reduced to bee size, and are taken charge of by the bees until matters can be corrected. The resulting mix-up is an amusing sequel to Claudius the Bee (Book Review Digest, 1937).

"I think the English audience will be more enthusiastic, because there is, in general, more favor there for stories in which insects talk, wear clothes and conduct various enterprises often less wisely managed by men. What distinguishes the Claudius books from most of these is their jollity. . . The situation here is heightened by making one of them a lady, a stock character of British humor, to be sure, but none the less humorous to a child not yet familiar with the type." M. L. Becker

Books p15 My 7 '39 300w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith

Library J 64:563 Jl '39 140w

"Mr. Leeming can write a good tale in a fine vein of fancy; he can also enjoy neatly satirizing the ways of humans. Children from 10 on grasp this satire and enjoy it, but it will be a pity if Mr. Leeming allows it to overbalance in his stories the quality of imagination. 'Thanks to Claudius,' glad as we are to meet our old friends of the Free Bee People again, is just a little less spontaneous and amusing than 'Claudius the Bee' because the author seems to be increasingly bent on showing up the weak spots in human behavior." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 30 '39 380w

Wis Lib Bul 35:116 Je '39

LEEMING, JOSEPH. The book of American fighting ships. 283p pl map $2.50 Harper

973 U.S.—History, Naval. Warships. U.S.—Navy—History (W) 39-31924

"From the records of a century and a half Joseph Leeming has selected 35 episodes in the history of the United States Navy for retelling to younger readers. Starting with the cold, January day in 1776 when Captain Esek Hopkins set foot on the 'Alfred' to inaugurate a navy, the author ranges through many deeds of daring down to World War exploits." Boston Transcript

"The book is written in a dashing style, well calculated to hold the interest of any boy, or even older readers who are not too familiar with the Navy's history. . . Recommended to uncles who have nephews to think of at Christmas time." P. J. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 2 '39 140w

Churchman 154:35 Ja 1 '40 40w

Reviewed by Marian Herr

Library J 65:125 F 1 '40 90w

"Inaccurate and based upon faulty source material. A good idea badly done."

— Sat R of Lit 21:28 N 18 '39 20w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Fun with paper; il. by Charles E. Pont. 152p $2 Stokes

793.9 Paper work. Handicraft 39-27670

"How to fold and cut paper to make useful articles, toys and amusing tricks." (Subtitle) Useful with the sick and young people. Contains suggestions for making party favors, Christmas decorations, lamp shades.

Booklist 36:18 S '39

"I'd like to see a Christmas tree trimmed from this book. It might not be sparkling but it might be more appreciated by the child who trimmed it and the family who took a hand, than the ready-made product of Mr. Woolworth's resources. Indeed, I have seen such a tree, thus trimmed with paper, standing in the snow of a Massachusetts hillside: we had a great time getting it ready and the birds liked it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 5 '39 300w

Cath World 150:379 D '39 50w

"Most complete book on the subject. Will attract the unskillful as well as those with ability to make things. . . Clear excellent diagrams are by Charles Pont, who tested and enjoyed checking each article." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 64:663 S 1 '39 70w

Wis Lib Bul 35:193 N '39

LEEN, EDWARD. The church before Pilate. 78p $1 Preservation press, Silver Spring, Md.

261.7 Church and state. Roman Catholic church—Apologetic works 39-33533

A defense of the Roman Catholic church against the accusations made by Marxists and others.

Cath World 150:637 F '40 180w

Christian Century 56:1411 N 15 '39 40w

"This book has great merits and will appeal to many. Still, there is a very real danger that those who look for information may put it aside with a sureness of having 'the' solution, which would be unwarranted. A discussion with an alert Marxist might be rather disconcerting and might have disastrous consequences for the defendant's own assuredness. If we want to debunk the fallacy of communism, statism, and other caricatures of truth, we should first be sure that we see that they are caricatures of 'truth' and second that we are attacking Marxism, not the picture we make of it for ourselves." H. A. Reinhold

Commonweal 31:310 Ja 26 '40 600w

LEEN, EDWARD. True vine and its branches. 268p $2.50 Kenedy

230.2 Jesus Christ—Mystical body 38-36241

A study of the Catholic dogma on the subject of the mystical body of Christ. The author attempts to show " 'how the world solidarity dreamed of by the Internationalists can be realized without in the least degree impairing the national distinctions which are of such paramount value in the eyes of the ultra-Nationalists.' " (Cath World)

"Much more definitely than in his preceding books the author . . . considers the twentieth century a non-Christian world; and a good many readers will classify [this] as his best work." J. McS.

+ Cath World 148:759 Mr '39 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

Reviewed by V. C. Donovan

Commonweal 29:390 Ja 27 '39 180w

LEEN, EDWARD. Why the cross? 366p $2.50 (7s 6d) Sheed

232 Jesus Christ—Teaching. Christianity 39-2790

"An analysis of New Testament teaching, [which] shows the essential connection of holiness and happiness in the philosophy of Christ and explores the function of the Cross in the all inclusive scheme of man's purification." Cath World

Cath World 148:759 Mr '39 230w

"The exposition of the issue confronting modern society makes this the most important book of the year. It strikes at the root of the modern problem of life." V. C. Donovan

+ Commonweal 29:390 Ja 27 '39 180w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). Some day I'll kill you. 288p $2 Dial press

39-6481

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 Mr 5 '39 130w

"The whole story is rapid, with plenty of conversation and a good bit of liquor consumption." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 60w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 50w

"A fast, exciting story with many absurd incidents but never a dull one: there is even a surprise at the finish for readers who can't keep their wits about them at high speed." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:934 D 23 230w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p25 F 19 '39 160w

"First-class tough story, not for the squeamish."
New Yorker 15:68 F 25 '39 20w

"Somewhat antiquated plot—nucleus lavishly overlaid with rapid-fire talk, brisk and bloody action, piquantly pulchritudinous females, and fervent drinking. Lusty."
Sat R of Lit 19:20 F 18 '39 40w
Time 33:63 Mr 6 '39 20w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). Too like the lightning. 271p $2 Dial press

39-24226

Mystery story.

"Here is one of the speediest hair raisers in sight, complete with that brittle manner, chromium trimmings and the correct ribald touch, such as descriptions of anatomy. More or less timely, too." Will Cuppy
Books p20 O 1 '39 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 O 22 '39 120w

"Crazy but grand."
+ New Yorker 15:72 S 30 '39 40w

"Good thriller."
Sat R of Lit 20:36 O 14 '39 50w

LEGGET, ROBERT FERGUSON. Geology and engineering; with a foreword by P. G. H. Boswell. 650p il maps $4.50 (22s 6d) McGraw

620 Geology. Civil engineering 39-20256

"The author, who is Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering at the University of Toronto, treats geology from the engineer's background. The first four chapters are devoted to the history of geology, the composition and structure of the earth's crust, and geological field-work and mapping. The rest of the book deals with such technical applications as preliminary and exploratory work, geophysics, tunnels, excavations, retaining walls, earth movements and landslides, transportation routes, bridge and cofferdam problems, foundations, reservoirs, erosion and silting, water supply, groundwater, building foundations, materials of construction, and soils and soil mechanics. There are a glossary, a descriptive list of geological surveys of the English-speaking world, and a classified bibliography." (N Y New Tech bks) Indexes.

Booklist 36:84 N 1 '39

"The book is largely 'qualitative' rather than 'quantitative'. Technical terms and expressions are used sparingly and engineering formulae are generally avoided. The result is neither a treatise on geology nor a text book on engineering, but an interesting and helpful discussion of interrelated features of both." Julian Hinds
+ Eng N 123:58 O 26 '39 700w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:39 Jl '39

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEHMAN, AGNES C. The Flahertys of Aran; pictures by [the author]. 212p $2 Dodd

Children in Ireland 39-30374

The Aran islands, thirty miles off the coast of Ireland, form the background of this book for children from eight to twelve. In telling the story of the Flaherty family the author succeeds in showing the manners and customs, pleasures and sorrows of the people of Aran.

Cath World 150:376 D '39 60w

"Another Irish story, and excellent. Too bad the author isn't much as an illustrator." H. L. Binsse
+ — Commonweal 31:132 D 1 '39 10w

LEHMANN-HAUPT, HELLMUT. The book in America; a history of the making, the selling, and the collecting of books in the United States; in collaboration with Ruth Shepard Granniss and Lawrence C. Wroth. 453p $6 Bowker

655.473 Booksellers and bookselling. Publishers and publishing. Printing—U.S. Libraries—U.S. Book collecting 39-27551

"A comprehensive account of printing in the United States and the allied crafts and industries, of bookselling and publishing, of book collecting and the growth of libraries, which show their continuous development from colonial times to the present day. The book was originally written for a Leipzig publisher and published in German in 1937 as 'Das Amerikanische Buchwesen.' The author and his collaborators have revised and somewhat enlarged their material for this first American edition of their invaluable survey of all that pertains to the American book." (Publishers' Weekly) Bibliography, p385-422. Index.

Booklist 35:360 Jl 1 '39

"Any one interested in the making of American books will have to read this volume. It is not merely the best book on the subject, it is the only book covering the entire field, and no better authors could have been chosen to write it. It is so charmingly written that this reviewer sat up half the night to finish it, and it is so all-inclusive that he could find nothing important omitted." R. W. G. Vail
+ Books p12 D 31 '39 1050w

"This comprehensive account of the American printer, bookseller and book collector during the three centuries since the arrival of the first printing press in the colonies is the first broad survey of this many-sided subject to appear. Its easy style and encyclopedic thoroughness make it a notable addition both to printing literature and to American cultural history. . . Altogether 'The Book in America' is a coherent and comprehensive history. It is the best possible introduction to the subject, as well as a first-class reference work." E. N. Jenks
+ N Y Times p2 Ag 27 '39 1300w
Pratt p11 winter '40

"An astonishing amount of varied information is to be found in the 453 pages of this book, and it possesses the merit of being both readable and authoritative. There is occasional overlapping due to the division of the subjects in three periods of history. Manifestly less attention is paid to books as the instruments of literature, although authors are not entirely neglected. It is only surprising that so comprehensive a work has not been written before. In any event 'The Book in America' is likely to prove its usefulness for many years to come." H. F. Jenkins + Publishers' Weekly 136:100 Jl 8 '39 900w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 24 '39 500w

"The interested public is much indebted to all those concerned in the publication of this book. It covers a very large tract of often uncharted ground; it is, within its limits, full, without being overloaded with detail; it is succinct without being dry; and while its ample bibliography indicates the sources of fuller information for many of the subjects with which it deals, there are many others which owe their first adequate treatment in print to Dr. Lehmann-Haupt and his collaborators."

LEHMANN-HAUPT, HELLMUT—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p616 O 21 '39 700w

LEIFFER, MURRAY HOWARD, ed. In that case . . .; a study of ministerial leadership in problem situations. 156p $2 Willett
250 Pastoral work 39-31043

Fifty perplexing problems which confront ministers are stated, and answered by a group of ten experienced pastors, each case being given two answers.

"Hardly a 'significant' book, but withal a humanly interesting one. . . It is perhaps unfair to criticize adversely when so little space is given for the answers; in some cases one is struck with the acute penetration of the replies, in others one is appalled by the surety based on lack of psychological and sociological knowledge." J. H. Titus
— + Churchman 153:49 Ap 1 '39 160w

Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 16:158 Ap '39 100w

"It is not the intention of either the editor or the authors to give final answers. But this ingeniously planned book will undoubtedly fulfil the hope expressed by the editor that it will 'aid alert people . . . to deal more adequately with comparable issues when they arise.' " C. T. Holman
+ J Religion 19:410 O '39 150w

LEIGHTON, CLARE VERONICA HOPE (MRS HENRY NOEL BRAILSFORD). Sometime—never; drawings by the author. 178p $3.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Gollancz]
B or 92 39-32453

Chance memories of the author's life, illustrated with her own drawings. The point of departure is the approach of midnight on December 31st, as the others on shipboard celebrate the coming of the New Year.

"Here is a book that a dog would love—if a dog could read—so full it is of enchanting and significant smells. And any gardener, also. For it has as many gay flowers as a seed catalog, all blooming quite naturally. . . The book will be for you, as it was for me and must have been for Miss Leighton, a joyous experience." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p7 N 19 '39 750w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 100w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 27 '40 360w
Forum 103:vi F '40 100w

Reviewed by H. W. Nevinson
New Statesman & Nation 18:870 D 9 '39 550w

" 'Sometime-Never' is a rare experience in sensory autobiography. Almost invariably events are recast through the memory of the eye, the nose, the ear. An almost tropical lushness pervades some of the descriptions, and the rich texture of the drawings enhance this effect. Perhaps the finest writing and the finest lithograph in the book are inspired by the vendange. Apart from its art 'Sometime-Never' carries the seed of an idea which might, with good effect, be cultivated. One offers it with humility to those who have seen their harvests destroyed." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p2 N 12 '39 1000w

"Try it if you don't feel silly looking in on someone else's daydreaming."
New Yorker 15:91 N 11 '39 40w

"Miss Leighton has added to her medium of pen and pencil, the power of words, and is doing a moving picture of her memories. Read this way, the book is often delightful, for it has the powerful sensuous qualities of the author's drawings and is dramatic as they are always dramatic. It begins and ends on the sea; but it is with the country and with human beings filled with sap and good earth that the author is most at home." H. S. Canby
+ Sat R of Lit 21:13 N 25 '39 200w

"Miss Leighton's meditative impressions seldom attain philosophy or the deep imprint of personality. They seem self-conscious rather than intuitive, and lack the robust vision which characterizes her drawings of the English countryside. But the whole is delicately wrought and the descriptive phrases have sensuous glow."
Springf'd Republican p10 D 7 '39 550w

"This is a book that will be accepted with quiet gratitude by those who wish to turn from the turbulence and unrest of the present time to the relief that is to be unfailingly found in more permanent and abiding matters, and the author's illustrations reinforce the appeal of the text."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p679 N 25 '39 500w

LEIGHTON, GEORGE ROSS. Five cities; the story of their youth and old age. 370p il $3.50 Harper
917.3 Cities and towns—U.S. 5 anals (W) 39-9015

Studies of the life of five American cities: Shenandoah, Pennsylvania; Louisville, Kentucky; Birmingham, Alabama; Omaha, Nebraska; Seattle, Washington. It records the birth, growth, and decay of these cities, and does not flinch from recording the political corruption, labor wars, race troubles, and crimes committed in the process. Bibliography. Index.

Am Hist R 45:477 Ja '40 20w

Reviewed by M. R. Davie
Am J Soc 45:495 N '39 150w

"Our author has not sought to prove a thesis or advance a cause. He has not sought to produce a blurb for any of the cities studied. He has tried to paint a picture of what he has seen in his visits and through the printed page. It is a dark one, indeed, and at times faulty in its perspective, but it is certainly one worth having." C. R. Woodruff
+ — Ann Am Acad 206:214 N '39 650w
Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson
Books p6 Ap 23 '39 950w

Reviewed by Michael Mayer
Boston Transcript p1 My 6 '39 470w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 30:220 Je 16 '39 550w

Reviewed by Charles Angoff
Living Age 356:396 Je '39 550w

Reviewed by Robert Cantwell
New Repub 99:26 My 10 '39 750w

"The technique is admirable; the style pungent and resilient; the attitudes critical but not in the least malicious or superficial. And whether or not Mr. Leighton always gives due meed of credit to the top dogs in his story, he does show a warm sympathy for the confused and hopeful under dogs, of whom there appear to have been quite a number." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p3 Ap 30 '39 1350w

" 'Five Cities' is a first-rate book from a dozen points of view, but I must not forget to mention that the finest thing in it is six pages of prologue, not apparently related to Mr. Leighton's specific subject matter. These few pages, in which a dying ninety-four-year-old frontier woman has her last say about her country and yours, quite literally made me catch my breath." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 15:102 Ap 15 '39 650w

Pratt p24 summer '39

" 'Five Cities,' in my opinion, is among the few books to be chewed and digested, even though its strong meat is likely to bring heartburn to pampered stomachs. Meanwhile there are other American cities, the stories of which lie waiting to bulwark Mr. Leighton's thesis. I think offhand of Tulsa, Houston, Detroit, Denver, Great Falls. And I, for one, hope he will go on to them." George Milburn

+ Sat R of Lit 19:4 Ap 22 '39 800w

"Mr Leighton's hard-boiled style is a hangover from the Mencken era of journalism. It is breezy and exciting—if the reader can stand the strain—but it loses rather than gains in stimulating power when articles are collected in a book. Likewise the articles lose in effectiveness, because they now invite attention as sober analyses. The reader demands a more restrained painting of a historical picture."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 14 '39 360w

"This book is a capital job of history brought to our time by one who is more the talented journalist than a scholar of urban cultures. Where he departs from the chronological, his stories sometimes confuse; where he depends on generalized evidence, he treads soft ground. But for a book on America it is hard to match as a product of intensive research. He has kept it free of prejudice, and has provided ample bibliographies to mark his labor." Clayton Hoagland

+ — Survey G 28:453 Jl '39 550w

"Civic boosters are likely to damn his book, to complain at the bleakness of the picture he draws. Dilemma of Five Cities is that Author Leighton's enthusiasm for the color and gusto of U. S. life is always at war with his knowledge of the violence of much of U. S. history. But in telling the story in local, rather than national terms, Five Cities suggests that he has tapped one of the richest of unworked U. S. historical mines."

Time 33:87 Ap 17 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 35:101 My '39

LEISER, CLARA, ed. Lunacy becomes us, by Adolph Hitler and his associates. 138p il $1.25 Liveright

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement 39-1979

Collection of unintentional humor gleaned from the speeches of Nazi leaders and the Nazi press and provided with amusing captions by the compiler. Index.

"This book is indescribably bad, but for that very reason should be read far and wide. Most of all by those people who say that Hitler, after all, has restored law and order or that one kind of a tyrannical ism is preferable to another."

— Books p17 Ap 16 '39 280w

Boston Transcript p2 F 11 '39 50w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipler, Jr.

Churchman 153:18 My 1 '39 100w

Reviewed by R. D. Miller

Crozer Q 16:158 Ap '39 50w

N Y Times p15 Ag 13 '39 230w

"Almost unbelievable excerpts from the writings and utterances of the founders of the Nazi State. Very funny—in a way."

New Yorker 14:60 Ja 28 '39 20w

"The lighter side of life in a totalitarian state is here illustrated, albeit somewhat sardonically. . . . Although one could accumulate similar oddities from American and British publications, it is consoling to reflect that such lunacy has not yet become the official state philosophy."

Sat R of Lit 19:11 F 11 '39 210w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Survey G 28:338 My '39 60w

Wis Lib Bul 35:49 Mr '39

LENGYEL, EMIL. The Danube. 482p il maps $3.75 Random house

914.96 Danube river (W) 39-27920

Claiming that "history has taken permanent quarters in the Danube basin," the author has presented a panorama of the Danube—a combination of history, geography, guidebook, and political study, embellished with anecdotes gathered from legend and actuality. Index.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Library Bulletin 14:346 D '39

Booklist 36:108 N 15 '39

"Mr. Lengyel knows well the region about which he has written—and he obviously loves it. This is why he has made a good book out of what would otherwise have been merely a piece of useful hack-writing. Any one not a student of central and eastern European affairs who wants to know more about that part of the world without being overwhelmed by too great a mass of historical and statistical information, will find this volume on the Danube as useful as it is good reading." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p8 N 5 '39 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

"Emil Lengyel has written . . . a beautiful book. Beautiful on two scores: it is beautifully written and beautifully put together. It is rich in substance and form. The writing is calm, careful, finely-balanced, almost finely-etched. The physical production is strikingly good." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 51:1 N '39 800w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 51:5 D '39 60w

Foreign Affairs 18:379 Ja '40 30w

Reviewed by Charles Meister

Living Age 357:392 D '39 300w

"It is a great pleasure to read a work which deals on every page with historical and contemporary controversies in the Danube Valley by a man who has a truly international point of view." Franz Hoellering

+ Nation 149:556 N 18 '39 750w

"This is an excellent book. Mr. Lengyel writes with appreciation of beauty, with remarkable grasp of historical background, with amazing facility for presenting clearly and interestingly the political tangles in which the various countries watered by the Danube have been enmeshed in the past and are caught in the present. . . His capacity for illuminating even the worst political labyrinths does not desert him even when he is deep in the Balkan countries traversed by the Danube. In skillful analysis and felicitous phrase he gives the essence of those strange lands. . . A book which, in the opinion of this reviewer, is better than anything of its kind that has appeared over a long period of years." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p1 O 22 '39 1050w

"Much of the story—particularly the post-Hitler career of Danubia—has been better covered in other books, but the earlier history of the region and its picturesque topographical aspects are given fresh and attractive treatment." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 15:100 O 14 '39 130w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 20:6 O 21 '39 800w

LENIN, NIKOLAI. New data for V. I. Lenin's Imperialism, the highest stage of capitalism; ed. by E. Varga [and] L. Mendelsohn. 322p $2 Int. pubs. [6s Lawrence]

321.03 Imperialism. Capitalism

"This is an English translation of Lenin's pamphlet written in Zürich in the spring of 1916 for publication in Russia with some caution so as to avoid the interference of the tsarist censors. Lenin had no time to revise it. Influenced by J. A. Hobson's book on imperialism, Lenin wrote a violent attack on the imperialistically minded capitalists. In the present edition on the left side of the book is reproduced Lenin's pamphlet and on the right side 'New Data'—an array of statistical tables and facts, 'corroborating the truth of Lenin's theory of imperialism.' . . One of the editors, E. Varga, is a Hungarian communist émigré, now in soviet service, and the other, L. Mendelsohn, is a soviet economist of the younger generation." Am Econ R

LENIN, NIKOLAI—Continued

Reviewed by Paul Haensel
Am Econ R 29:834 D '39 220w
Economist 136:268 Ag 5 '39 750w

LENOTRE, THERESE. The mystery of dog Flip; tr. from the French by Simone Chamoud; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 190p $1.75 Stokes

39-30330

"This dog Flip is the spoiled darling of a wealthy South American living in Paris. When Flip was kidnapped a globe-trotting rescue party spared itself no effort, which led to large scale adventures." Library J

"I can seldom speak well of stories offered to our children in translations from the French. . . But this one took me by surprise and by storm. Think of a mystery of the slightly cock-eyed sort loved by ten-year-olds; with the Jules Verne touch; with people who have the reality of caricature, which often produces a better portrait than portraiture. This is 'The Mystery of Dog Flip'; a child jumps through it; an intelligent adult will not put it down before the last page." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 S 10 '39 500w
Cath World 150:376 D '39 50w

"Excellently translated from the French, the book is illustrated in perfect accord with the text." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:394 N '39 60w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
Library J 64:842 N 1 '39 60w

"Simone Chamoud has translated it, and the illustrations are by Fritz Eichenberg. Boys and girls from eight to twelve will find this a welcome novelty in their fare of reading." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:952 D 1 '39 140w

"Lots of fun for the whole family."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 30w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). The little airplane. [48p] il 75c Oxford

(W) 38-27599

Story of plump little Mr Small and his airplane, using terms which can be understood by the very young.

Books p13 N 13 '38 130w

"Children love Lois Lenski's 'little' books, and this will be a favorite."
+ New Repub 97:148 D 7 '38 20w
Wis Lib Bul 34:206 D '38

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Ocean-born Mary; pictures by [the author]. 388p $2 Stokes

Wallace, Mrs Mary (Wilson)—Fiction

(W) 39-23861

Based on the New England legend of Ocean-born Mary, who was Mary Wilson, born on the high seas in 1720, and christened by the pirate captain who captured the immigrant ship, but spared the lives of all on board because of the baby. This story is of a year and a half in Mary's life, when she was eleven and twelve, and lived with relatives in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and describes her later experiences with the pirate captain.

Booklist 36:117 N 15 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 29 '39 370w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 1 '39 90w

"Of all her stories from history this is Lois Lenski's best. . . Manners and customs in pre-Revolutionary New England make a fitting background for a story of fresh and genuine interest." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 15:390 N '39 130w

"An excellent addition to the children's shelves." A. L. Shea
+ Library J 64:1000 D 15 '39 200w
New Repub 101:238 D 13 '39 30w

"There is enough intrigue to keep the story lively, and enough of contemporary life to make it interesting." Z. C. Durrell
+ Sat R of Lit 21:24 N 18 '39 100w

"Miss Lenski is a gay illustrator as well as a delightful writer."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 200w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY), il. Susie Mariar [an old folk rhyme]. [43p] $1 Oxford

(W) 39-27671

"The author-illustrator has caught the spirit of an old folk tale, combining a southern and a New England version and making a successful nonsense rime. The illustrations are in three colors—brown, red and yellow. . . Picture book age, grades 1-2." Booklist

Booklist 36:18 S '39

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 29 '40 250w

"This gay book, with its red gingham cover, is intended for the youngest children—but any age will enjoy it." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:712 S 15 '39 90w

"A book that 5 to 8 year olds find very funny." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p11 Ja 21 '40 160w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 60w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. The Fire Fighter; il. by Earle Winslow. 65p $1.50 Macmillan

352.3 Fire boats—Juvenile literature

(W) 39-24311

The Fire Fighter is New York's largest fireboat. The book contains an account of the visit of two boys to the boat and of what they learned about fireboats.

Booklist 36:91 N 1 '39

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 D 17 '39 100w

"Similar in style and make-up to Tugboat, this should be popular with boys eight to ten." Josephine Smith
Library J 64:905 N 15 '39 70w

"Rather flimsy."
Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w
Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

LEON, PHILIP. The philosophy of courage; or, The Oxford group way. 222p $2 Oxford [6s Allen, G]

248 Oxford group movement 39-21395

The author, an English philosopher, became a member of the Oxford group movement several years ago. In this book he expounds what he believes to be the philosophical principles of the movement.

"Most men with moral convictions have no intellectual training: most intellectuals have no moral convictions. Mr. Leon has both, and in addition a vigour and vitality of style which enable him to express his moral experience as well as analysing it. The Philosophy of Courage is not only able philosophy but a personal document. It is that rare thing, a book which demands either acceptance or refutation. You can't read it and just leave it alone." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:708 My 6 '39 1550w

Sat R of Lit 20:22 O 7 '39 60w

"Mr. Leon has not succeeded where complete success is unattainable. He has, however, given a well-reasoned and attractively written defence of the faith that is in him."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p84 F 11 '39 330w

LEONARD, JONATHAN NORTON. Three years down. 320p $2.75 Carrick

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions 39-30520

Study of the political events and of the forces at work in the United States during the first years of the depression—1929 to 1933. Index.

Booklist 36:144 D 15 '39

"A sprightly history, written with venomous antipathy toward the leaders of high finance, big business and national government during the boom years that preceded it. . . This book may yet be required reading for Democratic candidates in 1940. It is healthy stuff for any reader able to recall half-learned lessons without a renewal of old resentments." Allen Raymond

+ Books p8 N 5 '39 750w

"In far the greater part [of the book] Mr. Leonard gets along with a cynicism that is as consistent and as healthy as normal blood temperature. And it is hardly too much to say that the book is a fine moral contribution." L. S. Doughty

+ Commonweal 31:100 N 17 '39 300w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

— N Y Times p16 Ja 7 '40 1000w

"Brilliantly done, with an acid wit that makes this story of a tragic period almost a joy to read. Of course, if you don't care to remember, better avoid Mr. Leonard's book."

+ New Yorker 15:94 O 21 '39 40w

Pratt p21 winter '40

Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 20 '40 200w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 1 '40 430w

LEONARD, OSCAR. One house contains us. See Theodorescu, D.

LERNER, MAX. Ideas are weapons; the history and uses of ideas. 567p $3.50 Viking

304 Ideology. Thought and thinking. Social psychology (W) 39-27990

"In this substantial volume Max Lerner has gathered together some sixty-odd essays and reviews written, and most of them published, over the period of the last nine years, His interests have led him to range freely over many fields—'law, literature, politics, economics, history, education, sociology, social psychology,' as he tells us in the Foreword—but always his point of contact with his subject matter is the same: the relation between society and ideas on the one hand and between ideas and society on the other." Nation

---

"Here is a book which should make every democrat rejoice, not because it preaches democracy, but because its very publication is a sign of intellectual democracy working in our midst and on a very high level. . . It is perhaps surprising that the author's psychological insight into individuals should not keep pace with his insight into mass movements and collective facts. The essay on Swift, for example, is disappointingly shallow." Jacques Barzun

+ — Atlantic F '40 650w

Booklist 36:130 D 1 '39

"Few American reviewers and essayists would have the courage to reprint their fugitive pieces two or three years later—and still fewer would the public care to have do so. Max Lerner unquestionably belongs in this small and distinguished group. His writing is nearly always not merely brilliant—we have plenty of 'brilliant writers'—but opens up vistas of thought far beyond the immediate subject which he is treating." E. S. Bates

+ Books p7 D 10 '39 1350w

"There is not a dull page in the whole book, and there is more than enough to suit the taste of every reader." P. M. Sweezy

+ — Nation 149:616 D 2 '39 1100w

"They were good essays when they were first printed, well reasoned, brilliantly presented, and almost all of them are good essays today. Some have suffered from the changing times, and some through being transferred from scholarly journals into a book intended for the general reader, who may be somewhat puzzled by their vocabulary. A few essays suffer from repetition. . . Faults like these are inevitable in any collection of pieces written for different magazines. On the other hand, 'Ideas Are Weapons' has a strength and a unity that most collections lack." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 101:264 D 20 '39 1250w

"Sixty-one interesting, unretouched Marxist-liberal essays and reviews on subjects as far apart as Jonathan Swift and William O. Douglas."

New Yorker 15:107 N 18 '39 20w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt

Sat R of Lit 21:5 D 2 '39 450w

LERNER, MAX. It is later than you think; the need for a militant democracy. 260p $2.50 Viking [8s 6d Chambers]

320.4 Democracy. Collectivism (W) 38-37864

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"It could be expected of an author of Dr. Lerner's brilliancy of style and mastery of facts that he should hit a high mark as a diagnostician of the evils of our economic system. Indeed, the book abounds in sparkling comments on many manifest disturbances of our social order, though it falls short of the devastating irony of Silone's School of Dictators. But the real test comes only when the diagnosis is supplemented by constructive proposals for therapeutic treatment. . . The least convincing part of the book is that in which the author tries to demonstrate (or rather fails to demonstrate) the processes by which the democratic majority is to be educated, formed, and set in motion." Karl Loewenstein

+ — Am Pol Sci R 33:519 Je '39 1350w

Reviewed by N. L. Sims

Am Soc R 4:413 Je '39 240w

"Mr. Lerner has succeeded, in a provocative 250 pages, in posing most of the questions which are to-day troubling the American radical as well as most other Americans earnestly seeking to defend the 'democratic way of life.' . . Unfortunately Mr. Lerner endows the posing of his questions with more audacity than he does his quest for the answers. . . The publication of the book may in fact be of the greatest importance if others follow to carry out what Mr. Lerner advocates but does not exemplify—a 'militant,' 'affirmative,' and 'tough-minded' tackling of the all-important questions it poses for our troubled times." C. R. Walker

+ — Atlantic Mr '39 700w

Cath World 149:637 Ag '39 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '39

"Whatever criticisms of Mr. Lerner's book may be valid, it remains the most profound and penetrating analysis of the position and prospects of democracy, particularly in the United States, that has come from an American during the last decade, the most eloquent and outspoken call to action on behalf of those things which civilized men hold dear. There is no longer any excuse for it being later than we think. For Max Lerner has told us unmistakably exactly what time it is." Corliss Lamont

LERNER, MAX—Continued

+ Columbia Law R 39:545 Mr '39 1150w
Foreign Affairs 17:629 Ap '39 60w
Harvard Law R 52:723 F '39 450w

"Professor Lerner has written a brilliant tract for the times—incisive, cogent and magistral. He has the great merit of seeing the issue so clearly himself that he compels his readers to face it upon the ground that he has chosen to occupy." H. J. Laski

+ Living Age 356:93 Mr '39 800w

"Though the title of this remarkable book, written by an American professor, gives expression to the urgent need of active policy on the part of all democrats, it gives no indication of the learning and the philosophy which Mr. Lerner brings to his aid." J. A. Hobson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 2 '39 650w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 98:23 F 8 '39 310w

Reviewed by C. McA. Destler
Social Educ 3:358 My '39 750w

"A book that is at once cogent in logic, brilliant in style, and commendably brief." S. K. Ratcliffe

+ Spec 162:1142 Je 30 '39 550w

"Mr. Lerner's political blueprint for achieving this democratic collectivism is drawn to the scale of our times. There is scarcely a person who is appalled by the specter of approaching fascism who will not find it attractive at least in part. But in the long run his structure, as he readily admits, will stand or fall depending on its solution of the economic problem. At this point, unfortunately, and at this point alone, the author retreats into a somewhat vague mysticism of 'increasing purchasing power.' A few more details would have strengthened one of the most useful books of our day." M. S. Stewart

+ — Survey G 28:245 Mr '39 330w

"Mr. Lerner's book is written primarily for American readers, and there are occasional detailed references to the New Deal and its consequences in which the average Englishman will find himself somewhat out of his depth. But the book as a whole is a notable and very stimulating contribution to democratic thought. It contains both a philosophy and a policy, and is a work of scholarship though its style is the very reverse of scholastic."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p242 Ap 29 '39 600w
Wis Lib Bul 35:24 F '39

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
Yale Law J 48:706 Ja '39 1050w

LE ROSSIGNOL, JAMES EDWARD. The habitant-merchant; with motif il. by B. Cogill Haworth; and a wrapper design from a painting by Dorothy Stevens. 258p $3.50 Macmillan

[39-30697]

A volume of short stories dealing with the habits and customs of French Canada and centering in the character of Jovite Laberge, merchant in Quebec and benefactor of his native parish.

Living Church 101:10 N 29 '39 170w

"Professor LeRossignol has, in Jovite Laberge and his swarm of aunts and uncles and cousins and every imaginable sort of family connection, portrayed or created, or both, a little world of folk chockful of life, brimful of humor (humor of action, being and word) and never-endingly entertaining." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 9 '39 900w

LESLIE, MRS DORIS (OPPENHEIM). Another Cynthia. 346p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Hutchinson]

39-27808

Reconstruction of the life of an English Regency adventuress, born in a tavern, who grew up to become a famous actress, the mistress of one English lord, the beloved wife of another. The story is supposedly based upon Cynthia's diary, parts of which are reproduced in the book.

Booklist 36:68 O 15 '39

Reviewed by Iris Barry
Books p10 O 8 '39 500w

"This is no great novel, but it is very entertaining, and in some ways rather remarkable. . . Miss Leslie manages very well indeed the recreation of the atmosphere of the time she describes." Mark Schorer

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 14 '39 300w

"Miss Leslie has, at least, produced an entertaining essay in the picaresque mode, and though we are never convinced that Cynthia is anything but a story-book heroine her creator has taken some pains to provide her with an historically accurate background for her unlikely adventures. Doubtless Miss Leslie's many readers will find these lively improbabilities a pleasant relief from the ominous possibilities of the nightly black-out." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 22 '39 180w

"An utterly delightful comedy, in which Doris Leslie has recaptured the gay lightheartedness and effervescence of a society that, whatever else it may have been, was never dull, was rarely shocked and was always robustly alive." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p26 O 1 '39 700w
Sat R of Lit 21:20 N 4 '39 300w

"When she puts costumier's English and other tricks aside, Miss Leslie reawakens interest in her heroine's adventures in raffish society on the one hand and in political strife on the other. . . The subject is so well chosen that the author's perversity in distracting attention cannot spoil it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p537 S 16 '39 400w

LESLIE, ELMER ARCHIBALD. The prophets tell their own story. 307p $2 Abingdon

221.92 Bible. Old Testament—Prophetical books. Prophets. Bible. Old Testament—Biography 39-21396

"The author is professor of Old Testament in Boston University School of Theology. . . He permits the prophets to tell their own story in copious quotations but gives them and the reader able assistance by paraphrasing their messages. Thus each prophet speaks in a continuous discourse that gives a vivid first-person presentation of his life and teaching." Christian Century

---

"This book, the product of ripe wisdom and extensive scholarship, is designed especially for the serious student, with critical notes and bibliography for further study for those who desire a closer acquaintance with the prophets."

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 14 '39 220w
Christian Century 56:1078 S 6 '39 50w

LESTER, BERNARD. Applied economics for engineers. 464p il $4 Wiley [20s Chapman]

330.1 Economics. Engineering 39-21084

The book is primarily for engineering students, to provide an introduction to the practical side of economics. Partial contents: Principles and methods of planning; Human and public relations in industry; Standards and standardization; Principal elements of cost; Problems of the supplier; The market for technical products; The distribution of technical products; Price and pricing policies; The engineer as a citizen. Index.

"Not only an informative, but also a distinctly readable book."
+ Chem & Met Eng 46:725 N '39 160w

"The volume is well organized and gives a broad, practical picture of the engineer's economic problems. It is carefully indexed and contains numerous valuable references. It cannot fail to be a help to both young and experienced men of the engineering profession."
+ Management R 29:37 Ja '40 200w

LEVETT, ADA ELIZABETH. Studies in manorial history; ed. by H. M. Cam, M. Coate, [and] L. S. Sutherland [pref. by M. J. Levett; memoir, by E. M. Jamison]. 404p map $8.50 (25s) Oxford

942.58 St Albans abbey. Manors [39-2342]

Collection of some of the unpublished work of an English historical scholar who died in 1932. Contents: Memoir, by E. M. Jamison; Inaugural lecture given as professor of history at Westfield college, University of London, on 12 November 1929; Baronial councils and their relation to manorial courts; The financial organization of the manor; Studies in the manorial organization of St Albans abbey.

"With all its incompleteness and somewhat varied content, it is a volume which we could ill afford to miss and which more than ever makes us regret the untimely cessation of writing so keen, so delicate, so distinguished in its reliance on fact and its power of reflection." N. Neilson
+ Am Hist R 44:586 Ap '39 750w

Reviewed by N. Denholm-Young
Eng Hist R 54:489 Jl '39 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 10 '38 380w

LEVINSON, HORACE CLIFFORD. Your chance to win: the laws of chance and probability. 343p $2.50 Farrar

519 Probabilities. Chance. Gambling [39-5391]

A comprehensive study of the laws of chance and probability and how they enter into various aspects of life from poker and craps to business and scientific research. The author has taught mathematics at Ohio State University and has devoted more than eleven years to business statistics and to executive work in business.

Reviewed by John Lardner
Books p20 Ap 2 '39 100w

Reviewed by George Frazier
Boston Transcript p1 F 18 '39 500w
N Y New Tech Bks 23:41 Jl '39

"Dr. Levinson's book has many practical implications. It should be well received." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 12 '39 480w
Pratt p11 autumn '39

"The book is really one of those popularizations of scientific subjects which have appeared recently in considerable numbers—'Mathematics for the Million' is its nearest relative—and possesses most of the virtues such a work should have; clarity, patience with the ignorant, thoroughness, and an amiable conversational style. If you wish to reckon the mathematical chances of success in business, war, love, or baseball, this will tell you how." F. P.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 18 '39 170w
Wis Lib Bul 35:109 Je '39

LEVINSON, RONALD BARTLETT, ed. College journey. 569p $2.50 Nelson

378 Colleges and universities—Curricula [38-28963]

"This is a new sort of survey-course textbook for college freshmen. Instead of a survey of the world, it offers a survey of college courses. It is ingeniously worked out, to evade the obvious pitfalls of giving a preview by taking merely an arbitrary chunk out of each future course that the freshman may some day elect." J Philos

Booklist 35:127 D 15 '38

"The authors—colleagues, for the most part, at the University of Maine—working in close collaboration with the editor, have succeeded in turning out a volume remarkable for the degree of integration which they have achieved. . . Whether or not this book will supply the need for orientation long felt in academic circles will depend largely on the instructor. That it makes exciting and profitable reading at least one general reader can testify." E. T. Buehrer
+ Christian Century 55:1402 N 16 '38 550w
J Philos 35:642 N 10 '38 260w
Social Studies 30:334 N '39 200w

LEVY, FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE. Art education in the city of New York; a guidance study. 148p $1.75 School art league of N.Y, 745 5th av, N.Y.

707 Art—Study and teaching [38-16405]

Concise information on the colleges, high schools, and vocational schools in New York city which offer art courses, and what those courses cover. Indexed by subject and by school.

Booklist 35:219 Mr 1 '39
Pratt p19 winter '39
School Arts 38:8a Je '39 70w

LEVY, HYMAN. Modern science; a study of physical science in the world today; with 154 diagrams by Joan Samuell. 736p $5 Knopf [21s Hamilton, H]

509 Science—History. Physics. Science—Philosophy [39-25672]

"Professor Levy, who is a professional mathematician particularly noted for his skill in teaching, expounds in this long book mathematics and physics as products of social development, but he has added a still newer feature. He has expressed the exposition in the terms of the philosophy of dialectial materialism. In his last chapter, which might with advantage be read first, he compares the conventional mechanistic method of science with the dialectical method. The differences of the two approaches are tabulated under nineteen parallel headings." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Booklist 36:145 D 15 '39

"The book is a masterpiece and should become a classic. It is a new primer in the philosophy of physical and mathematical science and of engineering. Every mature specialist in those fields should study it and grow broad; every philosopher should go to it for the touch of fact and reality. The 'gentle reader' would find it profound and difficult." Gerald Wendt
+ Books p28 D 10 '39 600w

Reviewed by M. F. Ashley-Montague
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 260w

"It isn't necessary to agree with Mr. Levy to get a great deal out of this volume, both on information about important scientific developments and their true significance in the course of history. . . There are a few shortcomings that should be pointed out. Chemistry has not received its due in the consideration of significant developments. There is no documentation of original sources. . . The index is much too brief. But these are only minor drawbacks. The reviewer highly recommends the book." C. C. Furnas
+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:689 N 10 '39 350w

Reviewed by J. G. Crowther
Manchester Guardian p9 Jl 14 '39 450w

LEVY, HYMAN—Continued

"This is a book for all scientific workers to read. It will provoke thought and discussion. Its length, which the need for elementary presentation makes necessary, is compensated for by the forcefulness and clarity of Prof. Levy's style, and by the excellence of the many illustrations." J. D. Bernal

+ Nature 144:3 Jl 1 '39 1700w

Reviewed by Harold Ward

New Repub 101:202 D 6 '39 420w

"The reader of Modern Science will have to do a great deal of brow-wrinkling before he achieves full understanding. . . In Professor Levy's own idiom the book jumps about between different levels of explanation. At one time he stops to define and enlarge on simple, everyday notions, and at another he demands considerable historical knowledge or mathematical facility. The style, sometimes so clear and forcible, becomes on occasion perplexingly polysyllabic. The introductory historical section is particularly unsatisfactory. But do not be put off by the first fifty pages. Repress your annoyance at explanations of the familiar. Ignore obscure historical references. Struggle through or, as a last resort, skip the difficult passages. . . For in Modern Science Professor Levy has begun to shape out what must be the world outlook of science in the next period of its growth." B. Woolf

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:1000 Je 24 '39 1050w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:62 O '39

"One must not forget . . . to express admiration for Professor Levy's pedagogical skill in popularization. This book may be read with great enjoyment merely for the thousand and one explanations of the thousand and one things that a man who has spent about three decades in active scientific work is likely to pick for display to his lay friends. Also, one must not forget to praise the 154 diagrams by Joan Samuell. They have character as well as accuracy." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p16 O 29 '39 1050w

New Yorker 15:77 O 7 '39 150w

Reviewed by G. R. Harrison

Sat R of Lit 21:4 Ja 27 '40 500w

Scientific Bk Club R 10:3 N '39 650w

"I would warn the reader against supposing that in Modern Science he will find a textbook. It is altogether too original and personal to be placed in the textbook class. More important, and from the textbook point of view more serious is the fact that the exposition is written at a number of different levels; part is devoted to the simple explanation of elementary notions; part again demands a high degree of mathematical knowledge for its comprehension; some parts tax the ability of the philosopher, while others challenge the sympathies of the Marxist. I do not doubt that the book is a considerable achievement but I do doubt whether it is quite the achievement that the author intended." C. E. M. Joad

+ — Spec 163:100 Jl 21 '39 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Jl 15 '39 600w

LEWIS, CLIVE STAPLES (CLIVE HAMILTON, pseud). Rehabilitations, and other essays. 208p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

820.4 English literature—History and criticism 39-17408

A volume of essays on literary subjects. Contents: Shelley, Dryden, and Mr Eliot; William Morris; The idea of an 'English School'; Our English syllabus; High and low brows; The alliterative metre; Bluspels and flalansferes: a semantic nightmare; Variation in Shakespeare and others; Christianity in literature.

"Mr. Lewis's thinking is of the kind that plays over any topic with lightness and quick apprehension. . . [He] has a genius for careful distinctions that will bear long pondering." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p8 Jl 23 '39 550w

"Learning and life, scholarship and raciness, are not easily or often combined. But Mr. Lewis does it. No one reading these essays, all of which were originally delivered as addresses to various societies, can doubt the range or precision of his learning. But it is always in close touch with the simple essentials of human experience which it clarifies and from which it derives its savour." H. I'A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 25 '39 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Ap 1 '39 600w

LEWIS, EDWIN. The faith we declare. 236p $2 Cokesbury press

230 Christianity 39-14577

This book contains the substance of the author's Fondren lectures delivered at Southern Methodist University last February. The author is professor of systematic theology in Drew Theological Seminary.

"Dr. Lewis presents with cogency the essence of satisfying evangelical faith. Dr. Lewis is a true apostle of neo-orthodoxy who shows the strength of a typical evangelical faith which is able to proclaim dogmatically what many are not ready to assume. . . Few books present so concisely and clearly a theological position as this one."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 180w

"This is a great book, greatly written—and greatly needed. Liberal Christians will find it hard to believe this. They still have in their mouths the bad taste of A Christian Manifesto [Book Review Digest, 1935] which, to many, seemed anything but Christian, and which was hailed with glee by the foes of spiritual freedom. They are through with Lewis. But here Lewis goes Christian again, and with a will! . . All the high insights of Jesus Christ and the Human Quest and Lewis' earlier books are here sustained and made contemporary by matching them, with kindly but insistent Krutch and other exponents of the more logic, against the pronouncements of Dewey, naturalistic philosophies." J. M. Versteeg

+ Christian Century 56:736 Je 7 '39 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '39

LEWIS, FLANNERY. Abel Dayton. 304p $2.50 Macmillan

39-19009

Story of the development of a young boy growing out of adolescence into manhood. The hero, Abel Dayton, lives alone with his father and the latter's assistant in a lonely railroad telegraph station in the far West, and his experiences are those of a boy brought up by men.

"Lewis does an admirable job in describing the sensitive inner life of a boy and the tangled web of its expression. Abel stands real and warm and endearing against the swift current of age and contemporary life. The writing is effective throughout the book, swift and hard in dialogue, poetic in description." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Ag 6 '39 1000w

"The limitations of the novel are revealed not in the characterization but in the style. Except for a description of kite flying, the writing is consistently gray and pedestrian. Flannery Lewis is a wholly worthy, even a perceptive writer; but he lacks any flair at all that makes writing, as a special form of perception, interesting." Mark Schorer

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 210w

Christian Century 56:1046 Ag 30 '39 80w

New Repub 100:168 S 13 '39 50w

"Mr. Lewis's 'Suns Go Down' and 'Brooks Too Broad for Leaping' were promising youthful novels. 'Abel Dayton' is beyond youth and promise. It is mature, finished and beautifully written; its author is a finished novelist as craftsman and artist. The story is as perfect as it is simple, original, bold and sensitive." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 6 '39 1200w

New Yorker 15:67 Ag 5 '39 50w

"The book is written in a straightforward manner, representing an advance over the author's sensational, pseudo-historical 'Suns Go Down.' Nevertheless some of the old difficulties are present." G. R. Stewart

Sat R of Lit 20:12 Ag 5 '39 450w

LEWIS, HAROLD MACLEAN. City planning: why and how. 257p maps $2.50 Longmans

711 City planning (W) 39-27254

"This book is neither a technical treatise nor a textbook for students of city planning. It is an attempt to set forth in simple language the need and advantages of planning for the future growth or change in a municipality. It is arranged in two parts, the first of which takes up the 'whys' of city planning, necessarily including a brief summary of the development and growth of the planning movement. . . The second part treats with the 'hows' of city planning; that is, the procedure that should be adopted in order to meet the problems and to reach the objectives brought out in the first part." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. V. Peel

Ann Am Acad 205:158 S '39 700w

Booklist 35:266 Ap 15 '39

"Proving again that no subject is dull if properly presented, Harold M. Lewis tells the story of city planning in a manner that is both entertaining and educational."

+ Eng N 122:72 Je 22 '39 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:20 Ap '39

"The broad and intricate subject of city planning is here brought with admirable clarity within the covers of one book—a book for the average citizen. . . This excellent popular study is simple, detailed and expert."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 16 '39 480w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks

Social Forces 18:295 D '39 100w

Reviewed by G. V. Price

Social Studies 31:89 F '40 300w

Reviewed by Carl Feiss

Survey G 28:457 Jl '39 260w

Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

LEWIS, OSCAR, and HALL, CARROLL DOUGLAS. Bonanza inn; America's first luxury hotel. 358p il $3.50 Knopf

917.9461 Palace hotel, San Francisco. San Francisco—Social life and customs

(W) 39-32706

Story of the Palace hotel in San Francisco, opened in 1875, destroyed by fire in 1906. Many chapters of the book are devoted to accounts of celebrities who stayed at the Palace, and the story of the Rose of Sharon, the scandal connected with Senator Sharon, is recounted in detail. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:170 Ja 1 '40

"Mr. Lewis and Mr. Hall have put together a delightfully nostalgic, jigsaw-and-ormolu story, well worth reading for its own sake. But they have also added a significant chip to the brightly colored mosaic of America's yesterday." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p6 D 3 '39 1750w

"If the choice of the hotel as a center of interest prevents the authors from dealing with the broader bases of the city's life and commits them to certain chattiness of manner, at least it gives them a varied dramatis personae and helps to organize a large quantity of intractable materials. One feels sure they would gladly risk some superficiality if they could be certain of avoiding dullness. Their book clearly reflects their intentions." E. L. Smith

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 550w

New Repub 101:269 D 20 '39 50w

N Y Times p28 D 10 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:119 D 2 '39 30w

"The book has been painstakingly and accurately compiled; its well-mannered restraint eschews exaggeration. The carefully chosen illustrations are more than ornaments—they really illustrate. The style of writing is a little spotty. The chapter on the opera stars is too much a series of newspaper clippings. On the other hand, most of the book displays the same deft, certain touch which made 'The Big Four' a distinguished piece of prose and a joy to read." G. R. Stewart

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 D 2 '39 500w

LEWIS, WELLS. They still say no. 306p $2.50 Farrar

39-10239

Story of a summer's dalliance of a Harvard senior in Mexico, where he had gone ostensibly to be his uncle's secretary. The author is a son of Sinclair Lewis.

"The very virtues of the book lead it astray, for the desire to be frank sometimes leads to a descent from psychological analysis to physiological description, and the author's sincerity allows him to present as serious scenes that to an objective reader are apt to seem not at all serious. He has touches of satire, especially in the dialogue, which might profitably have been applied more extensively to the central theme. Mr. Lewis, in fact, seems undecided at points as to whether or not to take his hero seriously, which indecision naturally leads to confusion." J. G. Linn

— Books p12 Ap 16 '39 600w

"There is no indication here that the younger Lewis is Nobel Prize material. He has no sense of humor at all, the tragedy being that he thinks he has a great deal. Every joke and witticism is carefully dissected and explained minutely. His facile command over incident and his neat but superficial delineations of character show a thorough mastery of narrative techniques, but there is no originality in the treatment. The theme is a valid one and the story is frankly told, but it lacks subtlety and conviction." W. M. Murphy

— + Boston Transcript p1 Ap 29 '39 330w

"A first novel by a twenty-one-year-old son of Sinclair Lewis that will be an embarrassment to him if he grows up to be a writer. It's the story of a Harvard freshman with little on his mind but the question of whether he can lose his virtue to a nice girl who will be safe. After a couple of hundred pages of honest but dull writing, we don't much care."

— New Repub 98:359 Ap 26 '39 70w

"This is not another 'This Side of Paradise.' It won't start another parade of flappers and philosophers across the campuses, with galoshes jingling, and a brand new slang. But it is an interesting and amusing first novel, well written, ably put together, humorous, and filled with promise." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 16 '39 440w

"The writing is fresh and neatly colloquial; the situations are described with a disarming frankness. The only problem is: How much amorous dalliance can you stand in one novel?"

New Yorker 15:77 Ap 22 '39 70w

"The novel's chief character is a young man with money and leisure who is expected to spend four years waiting for—not precisely earning—a university degree. It is silly to ask us to share and sympathize in this pointless existence—without even presenting it in decent prose. Wells Lewis may not have intended his novel to be taken seriously, as a comment on college life. Yet it is a gloomy thought that this story is a reflection of the ideas of a considerable number of the students at our institutions of higher learning." J. B.

LEWIS, WELLS—Continued
— Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 22 '39 300w
Time 33:91 Ap 24 '39 170w

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. The answer; the Jew and the world: past, present and future. 342p $2 Liveright
296 Jews—Political and social conditions
(W) 39-16230

"Mr. Lewisohn's message, stated in what is apparently a collection of essays and speeches, is predominantly a message to American Jews. It is an appeal to the group consciousness of the American Jewish community. Written by a distinquished man of letters who does not hesitate to call himself a Jewish propagandist and a professional Jew, it calls upon Jews to abandon the 'servile assimilationism' hitherto in fashion among them. Jews are to assert and nurture their existence as a separate people and a separate church. . . But this is not all. Jewish values and Jewish moral precepts inherited from millennia of their national history demand that Jews espouse true liberalism and eschew the degradation of communism as a way of life or a solution of the Jewish problem. . . This can be realized only by creation of a Zionist Palestine." Sat R of Lit

---

"The book [is] personal, spirited and challenging. It deserves, though somewhat hastily assembled and none too lucid in outline, a wide and careful reading." G. N. Shuster
+ — Books p5 Jl 16 '39 1400w
Reviewed by Charlotte Bassett
Boston Transcript p13 Ag 17 '39 600w
New Yorker 15:96 Je 10 '39 30w
No Am 248:206 autumn '39 100w
Reviewed by D. H. Popper
Sat R of Lit 20:18 Je 17 '39 600w

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. For ever wilt thou love. 253p $2 Dial press
(W) 39-5590

"Mr. Lewisohn's ideas about love and marriage, somewhat unrealistically set down by a man who Tells All to his wife and friends over the dinner table." New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 Mr 19 '39 450w
Reviewed by Jean Arrowsmith
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 8 '39 500w

"The story itself is a good enough repeat performance on the love-against-the-world theme. If it has been told many times before, it has not often been recounted in such peculiar circumstances." Norah Hoult
— + Nation 148:538 My 6 '39 280w

"A tender and passionate love story, reminiscent of the French pattern in theme, yet typically American in its scene, is Ludwig Lewisohn's latest novel. . . After its fashion the book is a gem of a love story. It provides not only good reading but grounds for endless discussion on the theory of love and marriage." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 12 '39 700w
New Yorker 15:86 Mr 18 '39 30w
Pratt p28 autumn '39

"Wooden characters talking an artificial dialogue fail to make the story convincing; Mark's emotional strip-tease is embarrassing to contemplate. Readers who could take 'Sparkenbroke' seriously might conceivably find something besides ineptitude in 'For Ever Wilt Thou Love.'" G. S.
— Sat R of Lit 19:20 Mr 25 '39 110w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Aeronautical occupations for boys; il. with photographs; foreword by C. R. Smith. 207p map $2 Dutton 629.13 Aeronautics. Occupations
(W) 38-28964

Vocational study for junior and senior high schools similar to Klinefelter, Medical Occupations Available to Boys (Book Review Digest, 1938). The book covers the field of major occupations in aviation, giving details of the training required for each job.

Booklist 35:141 D 15 '38

"This is a valuable book, especially since so many boys are interested in aeronautics. It will be popular, and it will supply them with authoritative information." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 64:197 Mr 1 '39 100w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 25 '39 360w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Fighting fire: the boys' book of firemen; with a foreword by John J. McElligott. 224p il $2 Dutton
614.84 New York (city). Fire department. Fire extinction. Firemen (W) 39-27384

The author spent eight months in the New York City fire department gathering material for this book. He explains the various pieces of equipment and their use, the procedures in different kinds of fires and emergencies, and illustrates the actual incidents. Illustrated with flame-colored photographs. Junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 35:313 My 15 '39

"It makes interesting reading. Fighting Fire seems simpler and more readable than Our Firemen by Crump. The type is larger and it contains less material than the Crump book, especially anecdotes of exciting rescues. Both are excellent, but if libraries have not bought Our Firemen by Crump, Fighting Fire is recommended because it looks easier to read." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 64:381 My 1 '39 150w

"Exciting and informative."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 15 '39 30w

"Valuable information is found in the chapters dealing with proper action in such emergencies. Primarily for boys, there is nothing in the book to limit it to juveniles; adults will find plenty to interest and instruct them. The business of fire fighting has its adult 'fans' as well as juveniles."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 29 '39 300w

L'HOMMEDIEU, MRS DOROTHY KEASBEY. Scampy, the little black cocker; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 64p $1.50 Lippincott
(W) 39-32822

About an inquisitive little cocker spaniel who went hunting by himself and had enough adventures to keep him in stories for some time.

"If you ever owned a cocker spaniel, this is required reading; if you never owned a dog, small children in the family are likely to require it on sight. This is due to Miss Kirmse's irresistible puppy pictures. The story is worth telling." M. L. Becker
+ Books p12 N 12 '39 200w
Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 20w

LIDA. The little French farm; pictures by Helene Guertik; tr. by Louise Raymond. [26p] $1 Harper
(W) 39-4900

Describes in prose and picture the life on a French farm, giving special attention to the animals. Grades one to four.

Booklist 35:254 Ap 1 '39
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 5 '39 300w

Horn Bk M 15:163 My '39 20w

"It is a pity that the text is not more worthy of the format. It is simple to the point of dullness and has no story interest to speak of. On the other hand, the pictures are distinctive. They have life, they are gay and colorful, and they have real charm." M. F. Potter

+ — Library J 64:331 Ap 15 '39 130w

New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 10w

"A child may not recognize the excellent style and originality which have gone into the making of these illustrations, but he will delight in the full pages of vibrant color and in their vitality. Louise Raymond's English version of the text reads so naturally that there is no suggestion of a translation." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 12 '39 160w

New Yorker 15:104 My 13 '39 40w

Wis Lib Bul 35:114 Je '39

LIDDELL, ROBERT. Take this child [Eng. title: Kind relations]. 347p $2.50 Greystone [7s 6d Cape, J]

40-3357

Story of two small boys left in England with relatives after their mother's death and their father's return to his army post in Egypt. The story covers the years from 1914 to 1918 and follows, principally, the thoughts and experiences of the older child, Andrew.

"Robert Liddell has written his second book (and we suspect it of being largely autobiographical) with the gentle insight of an A. A. Milne that is so necessary to probe the depths of a child's world. He has shown us Andrew in all his uncanny wisdom, his wonderings, and his fears. He has given us a truly 'happy' book which, for a whimsy, enchantment, and poignant simplicity, ranks with the very best of the year." D. B. Shapiro

+ Books p14 N 5 '39 600w

"Mr. Liddell . . . writes sensitively, revealing by many subtle touches the characters of the various children and of the poor, foolish, and blunderingly well-meaning grown-ups; but the record of these four years in the life of a small boy is much too long drawn, and the interest aroused by the excellent opening chapters gradually diminishes as Andrew grows older." Wilfrid Gibson

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 F 24 '39 380w

"Mr. Liddell's account of the boy's feelings and thought is so uncommonly convincing that one suspects the book to be largely autobiographical. A child's feelings about sex, religion, other children and the tiresome behaviour of grown-ups could hardly be more accurately reconstructed. An accomplished novel, neither boring nor exciting." Roger Galway

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:290 F 25 '39 90w

"Robert Liddell skillfully avoids the pitfalls either of sentimentality or of allowing Andrew to appear as a psychological case. His whimsical humor alleviates the pathos, his portrayal of character is subtle and revealing." M. L. Rossbach

+ N Y Times p24 O 29 '39 650w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 162:364 Mr 3 '39 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 31 '39 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p119 F 25 '39 550w

LIDDELL HART, BASIL HENRY. The defence of Britain. 444p $3.50 Random house [12s 6d Faber]

355 Great Britain—Defenses (W) 39-27865

Written before the outbreak of war in September, 1939, this book surveys Britain's defenses, both at home and abroad, in her colonial possessions and in the armies and fortresses of her allies. Index.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Library Bulletin 14:206 N '39

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Atlantic Ja '40 70w

Booklist 36:83 N 1 '39

"It is the first half of the book that has the most immediate and timely importance for all who are trying to follow the progress of events in Europe. This is one of the most persuasively written works which has ever come from Capt. Hart's very persuasive pen, and that is saying a great deal, for he has a skill with words and for apt phrasing which few modern writers on any technical subject can equal. He has, moreover, a tremendous sense of responsibility, passion for truth and a concomitant aversion to wishful thinking." G. F. Eliot

+ — Books p1 O 15 '39 1550w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Boston Transcript p1 O 21 '39 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 2 '39 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '39

"Far and away the best book for Americans on the war in Europe is Captain Liddell Hart's The Defence of Britain, originally published in London. And it would have been twice as good—for Americans, that is—if half the book were deleted for publication here." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 51:3 N '39 460w

Foreign Affairs 18:380 Ja '40 90w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Living Age 357:288 N '39 280w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Nation 149:415 O 14 '39 950w

Reviewed by Alfred Vagts

New Repub 100:347 O 25 '39 600w

"The Defence of Britain is an enthralling book: it deals not only with the principles we should adopt in the next war, but with every detail of our preparations. There are chapters of the very greatest interest dealing with the role of the British army and the defence of the Empire and others concerning the reform of drill and training. The chapters which will attract most attention are those dealing with the condition of affairs in 1937 and during the September crisis last year." David Garnett

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:147 Jl 22 '39 1450w

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p2 O 22 '39 1750w

New Yorker 15:79 O 7 '39 10w

" 'Defence of Britain' is well worth the reading, by both soldier and civilian. The occasional fallacies are balanced by a lot of sound common sense. And by a year from now Liddell Hart's pet theories of war will doubtless have had a thorough test." R. E. Dupuy

+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 O 14 '39 850w

Reviewed by B. T. Reynolds

Spec 163:101 Jl 21 '39 950w

"Captain Liddell Hart's latest book is not only timely but also in many respects one of his best. A considerable part of it appeared first in The Times, and the result of reprinting these articles is a certain lack of connexion on the one hand and an excess of repetition on the other; but these weaknesses are not serious in view of the general unity of the subject."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p431 Jl 22 '39 600w

LIDDELL HART, BASIL HENRY, ed. See Lawrence, T. E. T. E. Lawrence to his biographer

LIDE, MRS ALICE (ALISON). Princess of Yucatan; il. by Carlos Sanchez M. 187p $1.50 Longmans

(W) 39-22039

Tale of a Mayan slave, trained as a sacrificial victim by the Aztecs. Because she could read the hieroglyphic writing on the walls of her prison, Nakah escaped and helped to free her people.

LIDE, ALICE—Continued

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40

"An exciting and highly colored tale . . . conveying a good deal of information about the Aztecs and their predecessors. But one wonders whether there is traceable, in this and other juveniles of the better sort, some regrettable influence of the more lurid 'strips'—the Sunday adventures of 'Orphan Annie,' 'Terry and the Pirates' and the like."

Christian Century 56:999 Ag 16 '39 60w

"A colorful, stirring story. Excellent historical background, based chiefly on Prescott and Morly. . . . For grades five to seven and all interested in this type of historical story." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 64:762 O 1 '39 120w
Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 50w
Wis Lib Bul 35:221 D '39

LIEB, FREDERICK GEORGE. Sight unseen; a journalist visits the occult. 257p $2.50 Harper

133 Occult sciences 39-10231

"Anyone who follows baseball will already know Mr. Lieb, whose sports column was a feature in many papers for years. It seems that during the several decades when he spent his afternoons in the press boxes of ball parks, his spare time was occupied in studying the more spectacular forms of religion. This book is an account of what he found and the conclusions he has reached." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"Many will feel that, in trying to remain open-minded and to avoid the dogmatism of the skeptic, [the author] has himself become a bit credulous. But he writes with a journalist's swing."

Christian Century 56:517 Ap 19 '39 70w

"It is refreshing, really, to find a man who refuses to confine himself to one culture and a single philosophy. He has examined many ways of life and tells of his personal experiences with a straight-forwardness that carries conviction and with a sprightliness of literary expression which this reviewer at least has found entertaining, instructive and enriching to mind and spirit." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 153:18 Je 15 '39 200w

"The book throughout its two hundred and fifty pages is most interesting, although it must be noted that some readers, partisan in their religious beliefs, probably will have apoplexy. . . Mr. Lieb's experiences and conclusions are not only interesting but thought-provoking. It is too bad, however, that he had to fan at the curved ball that has fooled so many others who peeked into the occult—confusing legerdemain and power—for it leads one to question his judgment at other times." John Mulholland

Sat R of Lit 20:27 Ap 29 '39 340w

LIEBERMAN, ELIAS. The collective labor agreement; how to negotiate and draft the contract. 233p $3 Harper

331.11 Labor contract. Collective bargaining. Labor laws and legislation—U.S. 39-27866

"The collective labor agreement has become a topic of paramount importance in industrial relations in the United States. Although there is a considerable literature on various aspects of the subject, no work thus far has treated it as a practical problem for the labor unionist, employer, or negotiator of the agreement. The historical and theoretical portion of this book is meant to place the labor agreement in its total setting, social, economic and legal. Only through knowledge of the background of labor history can one properly understand the motives for certain demands of labor which find expression in current collective labor agreements. The chapter on how to negotiate the agreement reflects the observation and experience of the author in negotiating collective agreements for more than a quarter of a century. The second part of the book is devoted to the drafting of the agreement." (Pref) Bibliography. Index of cases cited and index of clauses.

Booklist 36:83 N 1 '39

"Mr. Lieberman, as counsel for the International Ladies Garment Workers and many other unions in New York over a period of 25 years, is richly suited by experience to write about the trade agreement. His volume is an extremely valuable contribution to the literature of collective bargaining." Russ Nixon

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 12 '39 350w
Management R 28:409 N '39 210w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 3 '40 120w

LIEBERMAN, JOSHUA, ed. See National association for the study of group work. New trends in group work

LIEF, ALFRED. Democracy's Norris; the biography of a lonely crusade. 546p il $3.50 Stackpole sons

B or 92 Norris, George William. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 39-27867

Biography of Senator Norris of Nebraska which is at the same time a history of the last forty years in United States politics. It traces the struggles for judicial and legislative reform, the fight against our entry into the World war, the power question fight, and certain aspects of the New Deal. Notes on sources. Index.

Booklist 36:87 N 1 '39

"Alfred Lief has written a long and interesting biography of Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska. Mr. Lief's book is not brilliant. In it, George Norris does not walk through the pages a living image. Characterization is only incidentally pulled out of the bag of tricks of Mr. Norris's biographer. But the thing that does emerge is, perhaps, for purposes of recorded history, more important than personal characteristics: a connected, authentic, intelligent, truthful story of the man who, more than any one now living, represents middle-class liberalism." W. A. White

+ Books p2 O 22 '39 900w

"If historical biographers, especially those writing books lying mainly or wholly in the sphere of politics, are to make any progress, they must, it seems to me, study the methods which have revolutionized literary biography. A statesman is surely as complex a figure as a poet. . . But until the writers of political biography are prepared to study their craft, we shall not make much advance beyond such a book as Mr. Lief's, which is a good, honest, old-fashioned kind of book." H. M. Jones

+ — Boston Transcript p1 O 21 '39 2000w
Christian Century 56:1608 D 27 '39 260w

"Senator Norris can scarcely be said to have a brilliant biographer. Despite the publisher's claim this is not the authoritative, definitive biography of Norris. Nor can readers of Bowers's 'The Progressive Era' admit this to be the entire story of the Progressive movement. For all that it is an absorbing book." Francis Downing

+ — Commonweal 31:207 D 22 '39 600w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 150:50 Ja 13 '40 1050w

"Mr. Lief's writing lacks any verve, but it has some advantages over more popular work. The care with which Mr. Lief assembles his material is of great value, and he has been industrious in the search for collateral material in the fields of Congressional controversy and national politics. His book is an important addition to the history of government and politics in the United States during the twentieth century and is a thorough account of the valuable activities of the country's leading independent statesman." M. R. Werner

+ N Y Times p10 O 8 '39 1000w

"An important book about a really important American. Of special interest to students of politics."

+ New Yorker 15:102 O 14 '39 50w

"Mr. Lief's biography is clear, accurate, and interesting, as good a life as Mr. Norris can have until his and his contemporaries' papers are available. Here and there it is a bit unfair to some of Mr. Norris's opponents, and its treatment of the World War is particularly one-sided. But on the whole it is a stimulating and instructive work, which everyone interested in our recent history and contemporary problems will profit by reading." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 20:5 O 14 '39 750w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 31 '39 600w

Reviewed by Kinsey Howard

Survey G 28:767 D '39 600w

LIEPMANN, HEINRICH. Tariff levels and the economic unity of Europe: an examination of tariff policy, export movements and the economic integration of Europe, 1913-1931; foreword by Sir Walter Layton; tr. from the German by H. Stenning. 424p $6 Macmillan [21s Allen, G]

337 Tariff—Europe. Europe—Economic conditions [39-15815]

"An industrious analysis of the statistics concerning tariff policies and export movements from 1913 to 1931." Foreign Affairs

---

Reviewed by P. W. Bidwell

Am Econ R 29:188 Mr '39 1100w

"Not everyone will agree with all Dr Liepmann's conclusions about the policies of particular countries and their effects, but none will deny the great worth of his treatise to the theoretician and practical politician alike."

+ Economist 131:239 Ap 30 '38 100w

Foreign Affairs 17:437 Ja '39 20w

"A book of real value to the student of contemporary politics and economics."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 22 '38 230w

"His theoretical generalisations, though sound enough, confess a certain lack of originality and profundity; but he has provided a wealth of material from which others may draw their own conclusions or by which they may check their previous speculations. As a work of reference for the economic specialist Tariff Levels deserves—and is likely—to become a standard."

+ Spec 160:978 My 27 '38 270w

"It is by no means easy to obtain a clear and connected account of the actual course of tariff history. This gap in our economic literature has been admirably filled, as far as European tariffs are concerned, by Dr. Liepmann, whose valuable study on the subject has been translated into English, with an introduction by Sir Walter Layton."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p474 Jl 16 '38 460w

LIFAR, SERGE. Ballet, traditional to modern; tr. by Cyril W. Beaumont. 302p il $4 (15s) Putnam

792.8 Ballet [39-15975]

Studies of the art and history of the ballet, by the young Russian dancer who received his early training in Russia under Bronislava Nijinska, and was associated with Diaghilev from 1923 until the latter's death in 1929. After a chapter on general considerations on the theory and nature of dancing, the author discusses the ballets of the seventeenth to twentieth centuries, and choreology and folklore. In the appendix are given plots of future ballets, and of ballets already produced. Index.

"Lifar has brought to his critical discussion the craft of a brilliant and experienced executant, the creative knowledge of a choreographer whose career has been devoted to experimental innovation, and the painstaking researches of a scholar into the traditions of the dance. The result is a study admirably organized, authoritative in its technical insight and exceptionally illuminating in its analysis." Lloyd Morris

+ Books p24 Ap 30 '39 340w

"It is often profitable to hear what those who practice an art have to say about it, for, as the old Latin maxim says, practice is the best of all instructors. But evidently M. Lifar determined to do dancing proud at its reception beneath the dome of knowledge. He seems to have searched for all the longest words and tried hard to make the simplest things obscure. . . With a deeper knowledge of the aesthetics of music and its relations of form, rhythm, and color to the other arts, one feels that M. Lifar might have avoided many of the pitfalls, dug by himself, into which he continually tumbles in an unequal book. He is none too well served by the translation." W. H. Haddon Squire

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 S 2 '39 1100w

Manchester Guardian p7 D 20 '38 280w

" 'Ballet, Traditional to Modern' is not another popular book about dancing, but a serious, and in fact rather heavy and stiff, analysis. But if it is rather heavy and stiff, it is also personal and interesting to those who take an intellectual interest in its subject."

— + N Y Times p20 Mr 19 '39 440w

"Serge Lifar, excellent dancer though he be, wishes to be known as a 'chore-author' and a personage of the generally brilliant and sensitive caliber of, for instance, Georges Balanchine. His desire to give an impression of erudition, however, is palpable, his footnotes too painstaking, and he splits hairs on the indefinite meanings of the terms 'classic,' 'academic,' 'romantic' and 'character' with unctuous pretentiousness. Nor is his style easy. . . This book lacks the human element." Cecil Beaton

Spec 161:1096 D 23 '38 440w

"Lifar is a traditionalist, and never more so than in his long, carefully-documented and delightful study of what the ballet of the past has bequeathed the dance of the future and how the modern choreauthor may use this heritage. . . Readers, whether furious or delighted with what he has to say, will recognize that he is a dancer who has trained mind as well as body into the subtleties of classic elevation and control."

+ — Theatre Arts Mo 23:233 Mr '39 470w

"The responsibility of addressing a distinguished audience gathered to consider aesthetics and the science of art seems to have borne heavily upon the author. He is apt to mistake long words for profundity of thought, and darkens counsel with involved sentences and technicalities derived from not always appropriate sources. . . After propounding his aesthetic theories, M. Lifar turns to the history of the ballet. His narrative is interesting and his criticisms, put forward with modesty, are stimulating, even though they are naturally coloured by his own aesthetic prejudices. He perceives accurately enough the value and the weaknesses of the work of MM. Fokine and Massine, and his strictures upon the attempts to break away from the traditions in the pseudo-classicism of Isadora Duncan and of the German school, represented by Laban, Mary Wigmann and Kurt Jooss, are both just and temperate."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p768 D 3 '38 1100w

LIGON, ERNEST MAYFIELD. Their future is now; the growth and development of Christian personality. 369p $3 Macmillan

136.7 Character education. Personality

A guide for Christian parents. The book "refers to growing children and youth. Professor Ligon has taken the eight traits, which he expounded as the central character values in the Sermon on the Mount in his former book, The Psychology of Christian Personality, and developed an applied psychology, grade by grade, for use by teachers and parents who aim to develop Christian persons." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 36:229 F 15 '40

"Here is a book related to the more critical and progressive educational psychology of the day, yet moving where the Christian families in our churches live and think. The staff of every church school should study it carefully. Parent groups will be able to use it with a minimum of supervision from the trained leaders in child psychology. Pastors, having mastered this text, will be able to unite with public school teachers in the common tasks of school and church." E. W. Blakeman

+ Christian Century 57:81 Ja 17 '40 650w

"This should be a source book on teaching methods for all interested in the Sunday schools. . . It is easy to read, showing how to teach using personality measurement charts. If all Sunday schools were put on the basis of this book, they would contribute a great deal more to social progress." G. F. Taylor

+ Churchman 154:22 Ja 15 '40 70w

LIMPUS, LOWELL M. Honest cop: Lewis J. Valentine; being a chronicle of the Commissioner's thirty-six years in the New York police department. 299p il $3 Dutton

B or 92 Valentine, Lewis Joseph. New York (city)—Police 39-15813

Life story of the present (1939) police commissioner of New York city, describing his difficult climb to success during his thirty-six years in the police department. Index.

"Mr. Limpus is a good reporter, though a trifle weak on names and middle initials, and his tale of a policeman's life is straight stuff. However, it would have been a better book if written some years hence, when the vigorous subject finally has decided to put on the carpet slippers." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p12 Je 18 '39 350w

Reviewed by J. F. Timilty

Boston Transcript p11 Jl 6 '39 850w

New Repub 99:230 Je 28 '39 40w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p3 Je 18 '39 650w

"Mr. Limpus's admiration of his hero is a trifle dazed, but the record is interesting enough."

+ New Yorker 15:91 Je 17 '39 30w

"It is a valuable contribution to the record of New York City's political history, made by a competent reporter who has had access to sources of inside information." A. H. MacC.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:19 O 21 '39 200w

LIN, ADET, and LIN, ANOR. Our family: with a foreword and comments by Meimei [introd. by Pearl S. Buck]. 256p il $2 Day

B or 92 Children as authors. Voyages and travels (W) 39-27455

Adet, aged sixteen, Anor who is thirteen, and Meimei, eight, are the three daughters of the Chinese scholar, Lin Yutang. These essay-stories were written by the two older girls, with brief comments by their little sister, and give vivid impressions of the Lin family, and their visits in the United States, Europe, and China.

Booklist 35:330 Je 1 '39

" 'Our Family' has the freshness and charm natural to happy children anywhere and also a special charm of its own. . . In this book, which Mrs. Buck declares entirely untouched and uncorrected except for the small changes made by the young authors themselves when they learned that it was to be published, there is every evidence of freedom and spontaneity as well as affection and grace. It takes only the first few pages to establish a friendship with the very different and distinct personalities of Adet and Anor and with the laconic, but highly articulate and piquant little Meimei. They are friends worth making." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 Ap 16 '39 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ag '39

"Reading and rereading this charming book, its power grows. We identify ourselves with the Lins and see the parts of the world they have lived in with their eyes. They are always in love with life and one another wherever they find themselves. They can make a home anywhere in the world, even in Paris during the crisis of September, 1938." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 15:156 My '39 600w

"A series of pert essays, wide-eyed but not naive, childish but not coy, and a refreshing commentary on the Chinese family."

New Repub 98:388 My 3 '39 50w

"It is exceedingly interesting: a book to be read and remembered not because it is a curiosity or a limelight performance but precisely because it is not. 'Our Family' is a little bit of reality, no less simple and appealing because it is unusual. It is often very amusing. And it has a genuine charm." K. W.

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 16 '39 900w

New Yorker 15:77 Ap 22 '39 100w

Pratt p28 summer '39

Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ap 22 '39 330w

Time 33:94 Ap 24 '39 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p740 D 23 '39 450w

LIN, YU-T'ANG. Moment in Peking. 815p $3 Day

(W) 39-27923

Long chronicle of life in China from 1900 to 1938, as evidenced in three wealthy upper middle-class Chinese families. Beginning with the exodus of the Yao family from Peking at the news of the Boxer rebellion, the narrator follows in detail the lives of the members of all three families, down to the epic flight of China's millions to the interior in 1938.

Booklist 36:110 N 15 '39

" 'Moment in Peking' is painted on a large canvas and with a glowing brush. One can feel the author's joy and pride in the cities and mountains of which he writes so lovingly, in the allusions to art and literature and customs that he makes so understandable to those who are of other traditions. The most vivid remembrance of the book, however, will lie in its portrayal of persons, especially those of the women. . . It is the great fortune of the West that some one not of it has been able to look at China objectively and to show its virtues and weaknesses, its beauties and on occasion its sordidness and tragedies as Lin Yutang here give us his people and his country." Mary Ross

+ Books p1 N 19 '39 1500w

" 'Moment in Peking' is not a book to be read in an American way, by dashing from cover to cover. It is a book to live in; and real appreciation of it lies in the cultivation of two qualities so deeply revered by this author—patience and leisureliness. A speed limit of 20 pages an hour will repay you, because all 815 pages are very big and important seconds." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 N 18 '39 850w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p10 D 30 '39 800w

Reviewed by O. B. White
Commonweal 31:140 D 1 '39 420w

Reviewed by Carl Crow
Living Age 357:495 Ja '40 600w

"No other novel about China in English approaches the scope of this one, and probably none surpasses it in authenticity of detail; according to Pearl Buck, the author has used even the technique of the Chinese rather than of the Western novel, so that the book reads almost like a translation." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 149:624 D 2 '39 420w

" 'Moment in Peking' seems to me to fall between two stools: read as a novel it fails to satisfy our curiosity about individuals; read as history one would like to know more details about Chinese life in general, about political ideas, social manners and actual historical events. Since, however, if they do not absorb it through fiction, most people will learn no history at all, I hope that this book will be widely read, for its subject is one about which it is imperative that we should all know as much as possible. Written with grace and charm, it carries one along, and within the limits imposed by the form, it manages to say a good deal about a civilization which ranks beside that of France as the highest pattern of social life yet achieved by man." W. H. Auden

+ — New Repub 101:208 D 6 '39 700w

"This is life. These are people. One is with them. One shares their destinies, in small things and great; and through those destinies one is in their country in evolution and revolution and tumult and union, until homelessness itself marks the triumph of continuity at the end. The novelist, it seems, has merely brought us to them; he has opened for us the door into their lives." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 N 19 '39 1650w

"The book is so full, so explicit, that in the end, if we read slowly enough and soak ourselves in its atmosphere, the Chinese way of life—at any rate the way of life of the cultivated bourgeoisie—becomes so real to us that it ceases entirely to have the shallow values of mere oddity and becomes as understandable and as precious as our own. I repeat, you must read 'Moment in Peking' slowly and, even if it may sound odd, with relaxed rather than rigid attention. . . The book is a remarkable panorama; you must sit back in your seat and allow it to flow past your eyes. Its charm and significance inhere not in any detail or any particular episode but in the movement itself, the flow of time, the incessant flux of gesture, people, habits, architecture, interiors, relationships—all somehow loosely uniting to give one a sense of a life at once alien and beautifully familiar." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:103 N 18 '39 1200w

Pratt p23 winter '40

"The quintessence of Chinese life: such is 'Moment in Peking.' Those who turn its leisurely pages see following, one on the next, vivid vignettes of the Central State and its people; vignettes which are not merely vivid, but authentic as well. The style too is Chinese." Florence Ayscough

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 N 18 '39 800w

"There are many scenes and passages of great beauty in the book, excerpts from the classics, poetry and philosophy. There are also incidents of humor, delicate and subtle. Equally skillful is the author in depicting scenes of dramatic intensity, stark tragedy of war and acts of heroism. . . 'Moment in Peking' is a unique literary achievement." L. C. Rich

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 26 '39 1150w

"Moment in Peking, far superior to Author Lin's whimsical The Importance of Living, may well become the classic background novel of modern China."

+ Time 34:86 N 20 '39 500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:17 Ja '40

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 29:vi winter '40 300w

LINCOLN, FREDERICK CHARLES. The migration of American birds; il. by Louis Agassiz Fuertes. 189p maps $4 Doubleday

598.2 Birds—Migration (W) 39-18475

A popular treatise on the subject of bird migration dealing in separate chapters with history, origin, mechanics, dangers and times of migration, with the influence of weather, distances covered, bird banding, etc. The author was formerly curator of ornithology at the Colorado Museum of natural history, and is now associated with the United States department of agriculture as senior biologist, chief of the Section of the distribution and migration of birds. Index.

Booklist 36:85 N 1 '39

" 'The Migration of American Birds' is completely free of cheapness or sentimentality. The mystery of continent-to-continent bird travel is there, the more powerful because the author so plainly has done his best to dispel it. The drama of it all is there, though scarcely a sentence is other than factual. Everything we want to know about is discussed. . . Interesting and scholarly is the author's discussion of the so-called 'flyway systems,' the Atlantic, the Mississippi, the Central and the Pacific, along which our transient birds pass. Deeply interesting is a considerable section of the book, printed in smallish type, and devoted to 'case histories' of banded birds." G. M. Sutton

+ Books p2 Ag 13 '39 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Ag '39

Commonweal 30:303 Jl 14 '39 260w

"Despite the fact that this is a scientific book and a detailed report on an intricate study, Dr. Lincoln has put the whole thing not only in simple words but in engaging fashion." John Kieran

+ N Y Times p5 N 26 '39 320w

New Yorker 15:87 Je 24 '39 30w

"It is no discredit to Dr. Lincoln to say that such a book as this could hardly be anything but dramatic and enthralling. The facts are enough in themselves, and he presents them, wisely, without literary embellishment." L. J. Halle, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 20:7 Jl 8 '39 350w

Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Je '39 140w

Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

"The volume has been supplied with an adequate index, and the text itself seems relatively free of errors. In a popular book of this sort, one can hardly quibble about things omitted. Mr. Lincoln's decision to eliminate every bibliographical reference is, however, a hard one to accept. . . Mr. Lincoln's book [contains] two brilliant chapters on American flyways and on bird-marking. His treatment of the subject might be called uneven, but the drama of bird migration is there, page after page of it, and his readers cannot be but stimulated." J. J. Hickey

+ Yale R n s 29:206 autumn '39 650w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY. Rhymes of the old Cape; il. by Harold Brett. 258p $2.50 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century

811 39-24482

Collection of dialect poems about Cape Cod, its inhabitants, and customs. Index.

Christian Century 56:1169 S 27 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 5 '39 300w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY, and LINCOLN, FREEMAN. The Ownley inn. 311p $2.50 Coward-McCann

(W) 39-27810

Mystery story.

Booklist 36:68 O 15 '39

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p12 Ag 13 '39 150w

LINCOLN, J. C. and F.—Continued
Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 19 '39 600w

"A happy combination of maturity and youthful exuberance, of humor and sentiment, nicely calculated and expertly executed." M. L. Rossbach
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 20 '39 500w

"Unfortunately, in spite of pleasant, straightforward writing, the book takes its tone less from the hurricane than from the primer; the mystery and the accompanying romance are not so much stormy as abecedarian." K. S.
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 19 '39 100w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 3 '39 420w
Time 34:63 Ag 14 '39 240w
Wis Lib Bul 35:168 O '39

LINDENBERG, SIDNEY J. Supervision in social group work; foreword by Arthur L. Swift, jr. 141p $1.50 Assn. press

361.8 Social work 39-34170

"[This is a] guide to effective supervision for all executives, directors, and leaders in schools, settlements, Scouts, Y's, and other leisure time, recreational, and group work organizations. It is an exposition of a supervision that is educational rather than administrative in character, and the first translation of broad principles into the actual processes of supervising group work." Publisher's note

"The book suffers somewhat from the fact that Mr. Lindenberg concentrates on the methods used in supervising students who are being trained professionally for work in this field. The great majority of group leaders are volunteers whose attitude toward their groups and toward supervision differs widely from that of the professional student. Adaptation of the methods described here will therefore need to be made to the more common situation. The reviewer also questions how effective some of Mr. Lindenberg's methods might be in breaking down resistance to supervision, especially if attempted with volunteers. With these exceptions, the book has much to offer to those interested in improved group leadership in recreation agencies." G. L. Coyle
+ — Am J Soc 45:632 Ja '40 160w
Social Studies 30:336 N '39 10w

LINDMAN, MAJ JAN (MRS MAJ LINDMAN-HULTEN). Flicka, Ricka, Dicka and the new dotted dresses [il. by the author]. [26p] $1 Whitman, A.

(W) 39-17419

Picture-story book about three little Swedish girls who started out in the morning all wearing new dotted dresses and returned at night much the worse for wear.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Ag 27 '39 200w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 29 '40 50w
Reviewed by E. G. Mullan
Library J 64:662 S 1 '39 80w
Wis Lib Bul 35:188 N '39

LINDSAY, JACK, and RICKWORD, EDGELL, eds. A handbook of freedom; a record of English democracy through twelve centuries. 408p $2.50 Int. pubs. [6s Lawrence]

320.8 Liberty. Democracy. Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Politics and government 40-2772

A collection of excerpts from speeches, public documents, pamphlets and works of literature, from the year 700 to the year 1918, in which the English common people have expressed their demands for liberty and freedom. Index.

"The quotations are very short and their use will depend upon knowledge of the history of England. No clear idea is shared by the various writers who are quoted except perhaps the need to oppose those in power. It is, however, a useful book for students of the development of the idea of freedom." C. D. B.
Ethics 50:243 Ja '40 90w

"It is easy enough to point out omissions in a work of this nature, especially as one cannot hope for more than an outline of the struggle for democracy through twelve centuries in 400 pages. The editors set themselves to compile a book which would be not only a monument to the dead but a message to the living, 'an essay towards an understanding of the strategy of social advance,' and on the whole it is an admirable achievement." Philip Henderson
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:284 Ag 19 '39 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Jl 8 '39 180w

LINGENFELTER, MARY REBECCA, and KITSON, HARRY DEXTER. Vocations for girls. 358p $2.50 Harcourt

396.5 Woman—Occupations. Profession, Choice of (W) 39-22231

"[The authors' aim is] to help young women of this generation to obtain a vision of the multitude of occupations open to them; to discover the characteristics they should possess for the particular fields; the steps they should take in preparing for various types of careers; the rewards they may expect." (Pref) Reading lists. Index.

Booklist 36:179 Ja 1 '40

"The style has what such books should have, a cheerful but not too alluring tone. The authors are selling nothing but information and some of it is bound to be discouraging to girls who want to get into careers practically closed or at least overcrowded. But so many are open that its advice to girls who want to get on will reach an audience glad to get it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ja 14 '40 300w
Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 40w
J Home Econ 32:43 Ja '40 70w

"Indispensable for vocational guidance in junior and senior high school libraries." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 64:872 N 1 '39 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:63 O '39
Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 24 '39 420w
Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

LINGSTROM, FREDA. Axel [Eng title: A flower in his hand]. 401p $2.50 Little [8s 6d Cape, J]

39-30072

The book opens with the return to England of Axel Wreford, a wanderer who has made several fortunes in strange lands. Now he wants a home and children and the early chapters tell how he adopts two boys and a girl. Later the story follows each of these as they develop personalities and careers different from those their foster father had desired for them. The scene shifts from England to Norway and to Austria; the time covers the last decade or so before 1938.

Booklist 36:150 D 15 '39

"Miss Lingstrom . . . writes like a streak, so that 'Axel' is from first to last both pleasantly intelligent and readable. But the wit of the opening pages bogs down a bit." F. H. Bullock
+ — Books p10 O 29 '39 400w
Reviewed by O. E. Schoen-Rene
Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 220w

"While never wholly convincing, 'A Flower in His Hand' is sufficiently plausible to make pleasurable reading; and the book is packed with entertaining episodes and contains a whole host of characters perceived with a shrewd insight into personality and portrayed with a telling economy. And the theme of the book, the essential independence of the human spirit and the inevitable isolation of the individual soul which must tend to modify the closest of human relationships, is illustrated effectually." Wilfrid Gibson

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 16 '39 400w

"For its story the book is good reading. For characterization there is interesting variety, yet without the complete realization that makes you feel you know these people. The reader shares to a less degree Axel's bewilderment at the conduct of his chicks, who will persist in growing up to be ducklings or swans. Happily, circumstances switch Axel into a new groove of his beloved domesticity when all his fledglings have winged off on their own." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p29 O 29 '39 600w

New Yorker 15:82 O 28 '39 40w

"Miss Lingstrom is at her best in the whimsicalities of character and in her lighter scenes; when she writes in more serious vein, her style loses something of its individuality." G. G.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 O 28 '39 280w

Reviewed by Forrest Reid

Spec 162:1144 Je 30 '39 350w

Time 34:86 D 11 '39 20w

" 'A Flower in his Hand' is a novel of unusual accomplishment and more than fulfils the promise of its predecessor, 'The Seventh Sister,' a much slighter work. Miss Lingstrom writes a clear, vital English, informed throughout by real knowledge of human nature, most noticeably that calm, earnest, simple character of the Norwegian whose genius springs from the earth. Her people, even those who play minor roles in her fairly long cast, are never 'types,' but are known nearly and individually."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p371 Je 24 '39 500w

LINKLATER, ERIC. Judas. 243p $2 Farrar [6s Cape, J]

Judas Iscariot—Fiction 39-20244

In modern diction, the author has attempted a psychological character study of Judas, retelling the story of the last week of his life from Sunday to Saturday.

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

Books p4 Jl 30 '39 850w

Reviewed by E. A. Murphy

Commonweal 30:402 Ag 18 '39 310w

"Where the book fails to achieve greatness is to be found in the fact that Mr. Linklater apparently lacks the religious sense, and even in portraying the character of Judas a far deeper recognition of a spiritual background is absolutely essential to give life and meaning to such a story." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 31 '39 550w

"If the novel is worth reading, it is in spite, and not because, of its subject. Mr. Linklater has an easy style, a pleasant humour and a telling turn of phrase that makes it difficult for anything he writes to be seriously offensive. Indeed, we begin to enjoy Judas until a familiar name or an echo of the original source suddenly remind us that this is not a suburban light tragedy but a reconstruction of perhaps the most important moment in recorded history. Pater we would have endured, Anatole France enjoyed, but Mr. Linklater, I'm afraid, has overreached himself." John Mair

— + New Statesman & Nation 17:504 Ap 1 '39 240w

"Mr. Linklater makes out a sympathetic case for the misguided Judas. It calls to mind the recent analytical book 'The Man Who Killed Lincoln,' inasmuch as both fictional treatments attempt to show the sincere idealism motivating a great betrayal. The present author manages his study with quiet emotion and dignity, and the result is a narrative of thoughtfulness and occasional force." Stanley Young

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 30 '39 800w

"Thoughtfully done, but not quite convincing."

+ — New Yorker 15:65 Ag 19 '39 70w

"The overly pious, the pedant, and even the scholar, may be offended by Mr. Linklater's free and easy treatment; his book is not history and is not meant to be; but if taken for what it is—a lively adventure in social psychology on the margin between fact and fancy—it will be found well worth the reading." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 20:10 Jl 29 '39 550w

"Anatole France once suggested that the mysterious sin against the Holy Ghost might be bad taste. Mr. Linklater's vulgar little novel inclines me to accept this theory." Forrest Reid

— Spec 162:606 Ap 7 '39 80w

Time 34:51 Jl 31 '39 190w

"Judas is a complex, strangely modern character as seen by Mr. Linklater, and his story is told with such detachment as to make it read more like a lecture to a psychological society than a piece of creative artistic work."

Times [London] Lit Sup p191 Ap 1 '39 220w

LINSCOTT, MRS ELOISE HUBBARD, ed. Folk songs of old New England; with an introduction by James M. Carpenter. 337p $5 Macmillan

784.4 Folk songs, American (W)

Collection of ballads, country dances, singing games, sea chanteys, folk songs and ditties, sung in New England, the larger proportion of which derive from the British Isles. Words and music are given, with some introductory matter in each case.

Booklist 36:211 F 1 '40

"New England has never had so directly useful a book of songs and dances as this. There have been regional collections of ballads and excellent books about the country dance—a living affair in rural New England today, not a precious revival—but to get them both in one volume with music anybody can play with one hand (two if you are up to it) is to have a work to be put to instant use in any household with a New England background. Use at Christmas, for instance." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 D 17 '39 400w

"The accompaniments for piano are thoughtful and aim to preserve the simplicity and beauty of the times. Mr. Carpenter's introduction is informative and highly readable. The whole book is splendid evidence of Eloise Linscott's enthusiasm for folk music and her ability to recover it from fresh sources. It is further a tribute to the many singers, fiddlers, and callers who have supplied the material. It should increase an interest which is already rising steadily." Roy Lamson, Jr.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 9 '39 550w

Christian Century 56:1609 D 27 '39 140w

"All who care for song will be grateful to Miss Linscott for this book. Even if the songs and ballads weren't as varied and interesting as they are the collection would be worth owning for its singing games and its country dances, the latter complete with directions, calls, and the old happy-go-lucky fiddle tunes." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p5 D 10 '39 600w

Sat R of Lit 21:20 D 23 '39 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 350w

LIPSON, LESLIE. The American governor from figurehead to leader; with an introd. by Marshall Edward Dimock. 282p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge]

353.9 State governments. Governors 39-27456

This study in political theory contains the author's observations and conclusions resulting from three years' personal examination of the position and influence of the governors of several American states, particularly their relationship to the legislative bodies. The author is an Englishman, professor of political science at the Victoria University college, Wellington, New Zealand. Index.

LIPSON, LESLIE—Continued

"Steering clear of both the extravagant claims of reorganizing enthusiasts and the intemperate and emotional reactions of some opponents, the author presents, in the opinion of this reviewer, a fair appraisal of reorganization." G. W. Spicer
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:910 O '39 750w
Booklist 35:324 Je 1 '39

"Mr. Lipson's book is timely. It is obviously the result of thorough research, and it shows an outsider's impartial approach coupled with a real understanding of the average American's attitude toward his Government." Francis Russell
+ Boston Transcript p11 Je 23 '39 800w

"The British perspective of Dr. Lipson, his entire detachment from American politics, gives a definite kind of value to what he has written. He has made so few and such unimportant mistakes that they are not worth considering, and the book may well be called authentic. It covers a field of research that has not been duplicated. In view of the tremendous change in the character of our American presidency in the last fifty years this book, which traces a similar rise in the power of our governors and the growing widening of their leadership, is most significant." W. A. White
+ Harvard Law R 53:164 N '39 900w

LITTLE, CLARENCE COOK. Civilization against cancer. 150p $1.50 Farrar
616.994 Cancer (W) 39-27142

Discussion of the subject of cancer, its early stages, various forms, possibilities of cure, and present state of cancer research, written for the layman. The author is director of the Roscoe B. Jackson memorial laboratory in Bar Harbor, Maine, and managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. Index.

"Members of the Women's Field Army against Cancer will find that the book is an excellent guide for their worthy efforts, while other members of the lay public who have the courage to delve into the subject will derive much useful information and possibly some inspiration from this well printed book." J. A. Tobey
+ Am J Pub Health 29:796 Jl '39 180w
Booklist 35:227 Mr 15 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ap '39

"If questions arise in the thoughtful reader's mind about abnormal growths, Dr Little is almost sure to anticipate and answer them. . . His book, the best popular interpretation of its kind that has come to this reviewer's notice, should be distributed all over the land as an educational document of the highest importance." W. K.
+ N Y Times p2 Mr 5 '39 550w

"Dr. Little knows his subject. There is no gainsaying that. But he has yet to learn that the English language may be as tricky, if not as unpredictable, as the human body. . . A careful reading of the book gives the impression that the seeker for knowledge will find his confusion increased rather than lessened by it. . . There is not space here to give instances of Dr. Little's inability to say exactly what he means, but it must be said with regret that that inability destroys any value the book may have hoped to have as a hand held out to the actual and the possible sufferer." R. H.
— Sat R of Lit 19:21 Mr 4 '39 300w
Wis Lib Bul 35:99 My '39

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. The black gloves. 265p $2 Doubleday 39-30328

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 O 1 '39 110w

"The characters are excellent, the conversation carries the thing along at a great rate, and the camouflage of the criminal is ingenious. I got quite attached to bored, divorced Lissa Herridge, who progressed from discovering how dandelions are made blue to the solution of the crime." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 30 '39 60w

"The mood of the story is never in key with its grim events, but there is a real mystery which is solved with a real surprise." Kay Irvin
+ — N Y Times p22 O 1 '39 220w

"Fresh, humorous story."
+ New Yorker 15:80 S 23 '39 40w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 S 23 '39 40w

LITTLEPAGE, JOHN D., and BESS, DEMAREE. In search of Soviet gold. 310p map $2.75 Harcourt [8s 6d Harrap]
914.7 Russia—Economic conditions. Gold mines and mining. Siberia (W) 38-27739
For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 98:23 F 8 '39 250w

Reviewed by David Garnett
New Statesman & Nation 17:249 F 18 '39 1400w

"It says something for In Search of Soviet Gold that in spite of a style that combines the absolute literary artlessness of the engineer with a certain amount of gingering up by a newspaperman, the book remains readable." Anthony Powell
+ Spec 162:314 F 24 '39 310w

"This is as interesting and as illuminating a book about Russia as has appeared for some time. . . A book the theoretical expert on Russia should not miss."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p99 F 18 '39 700w

"Observations of great historical value and comment upon the everyday life of the Russian people are combined in a fascinating manner. Among the most interesting of the detailed descriptions is that of the customs of the Asiatic nomadic tribes before the second communist revolution of 1929. In many respects, 'In Search of Soviet Gold' has earned a right to take its place among the finest volumes of Russian-Asiatic travel literature." André Efron
+ Yale R n s 28:627 spring '39 750w

LITVINOV, MAKSIM, originally MEER GENOKH MOISEEVICH VALLAKH. Against aggression; speeches; together with texts of treaties and of the Covenant of the League of nations. 208p $1.50 Int. pubs. [5s; pa 2s Lawrence]
327.47 Russia—Foreign policy

"This book is a collection of some of Maxim Litvinov's more important speeches and of documents characterising the struggle raised by the Soviet Union against aggression. These speeches of the People's Commissar of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R. and the treaties entered into by the Soviet Union with the purpose of averting the danger of war constitute some of the most important elements in the foreign policy of the Soviet Union." Introd.

Reviewed by E. S. Bates
Books p19 S 17 '39 330w
Christian Science Monitor p20 Je 22 '39 600w
Foreign Affairs 18:378 Ja '40 10w

"While it would be difficult to doubt the sincerity of M. Litvinov's peace declarations, which express both the needs and desires of the U.S.S.R., his program of preventive medicine seems concerned solely with the problem of checking the spread of the disease, not with removing its causes. His chief preoccupation appears to be maintenance of the European status quo, not constructive discussion of the problems which threaten to disrupt it." V. M. Dean

Sat R of Lit 20:12 Jl 8 '39 550w

LIVERMORE, SHAW. Early American land companies; their influence on corporate development. (Columbia univ. School of law. Foundation for research in legal hist. Publications) 327p $3.50 Commonwealth fund [15s Oxford]

333 Land claim associations. Corporations. Land tenure—U.S. [39-6029]

"The author of the present volume is a member of the department of economics at the University of Buffalo. The volume is devoted to a synthesis of business history and legal history. . . The purpose of the author is to study the rise and development of the corporation in America, particularly the business corporation, and to explain the incoming of state laws which standardized and normalized such corporations. This emphasis on American experience is rather more justified than we might at first think because America was quite in the vanguard of the users of corporations for business purposes." (Am Econ R) Bibliography. Index.

"The work is scholarly, readable, and useful to both lawyers and historians." N. S. B. Gras

\+ Am Econ R 29:831 D '39 450w

"It is obvious throughout the book that the author has depended too largely upon secondary works and that his knowledge of the land companies is limited." T. P. Abernethy

— Am Hist R 45:408 Ja '40 900w

Reviewed by J. J. Robbins
Am Pol Sci R 33:546 Je '39 180w

Reviewed by E. M. Dodd, Jr.
Columbia Law R 40:356 F '40 1950w

"I do wish that Professor Livermore were a little more conscious or at least more articulate of his philosophy of history. Although his work shows clearly that the economic necessities of particular business enterprises were more powerful in shaping the form of business organization than was any narrow requirement of law, he does not draw the obvious moral. The book is weaker for it. . . Still this is an excellent book. When the Faustian spirit who attempts an American Legal History comes to defy the ocean of statutes and cases, he will do well to adopt Professor Livermore's functional technique as a means of reducing to order the materials so discouragingly vast. As Professor Livermore has shown us, this Faustus will have to be economist as well as lawyer." D. J. Boorstin

\+ — Harvard Law R 53:358 D '39 1000w

LLOYD, CHRISTOPHER. Captain Marryat and the old navy. 286p il map $4 (15s) Longmans

B or 92 Marryat, Frederick. Great Britain—Navy 39-18606

Biography of the author of Mr Midshipman Easy and other old favorites, from his thirteenth year in 1805 to his death in 1848. His varied career included experience in the British navy, when he saw service in the American War of 1812 and commanded the naval forces during the first Burmese war among other activities; life on a large estate in Norfolk; and the writing of successful stories of the navy. Index.

"Although the portrait of the chief character is not full length, Marryat's life forms the binding thread of an excellent description of life in the 'Old Navy'. . . There are a few slips to mar the generally high quality of the work, the prejudices and fictional liberties of Marryat are sometimes taken too literally, and the historical background is occasionally inadequate. On the other hand, the references indicate considerable research, the composition is careful, and the style excellent." J. H. Kemble

\+ — Am Hist R 45:213 O '39 230w

Reviewed by F. L. Oliver
Boston Transcript p2 Je 3 '39 250w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 1 '39 280w

"Mr. Lloyd, setting out to write on Captain Marryat, fell upon a larger subject. . . His greater theme is the 'old Navy' after Nelson's death, and he has vivid descriptive powers for portraying a sea fight, or the habits of an 'unreformed captain' in handling his crew. . . This exciting volume is admirably illustrated from Cruikshank's engravings of 'The Life of a Midshipman,' which were prepared from Marryat's sketches." B. I. Evans

\+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 10 '39 750w

"This is an enjoyable book because it brings together, gracefully and skilfully, all the available material about an interesting man who led an eventful life." Richard Church

\+ New Statesman & Nation 17:701 My 6 '39 900w

"This book is by a writer who knows his phrases—and his history. Whether one be a Marryat 'fan' or not, any lover of old ships and old ways can read this book with mutual profit and pleasure—and one can experience vicariously the hardships and callous brutality of the old navy." H. W. Baldwin

\+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 23 '39 1200w

"As Marryat's own sea-career was as full and adventurous as any of his heroes', the result makes for excellent reading, if not for completely-rounded biography." S. V. Benét

\+ — Sat R of Lit 19:18 Mr 25 '39 380w

"Everyone who has received pleasure from Marryat's novels—and who has not?—will welcome this account of their author." E. E. Kellett

\+ Spec 162:232 F 10 '39 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 11 '39 1850w

LLOYD, DOROTHY JORDAN. See Jordan Lloyd, D.

LLOYD, ELIZABETH. See Howell, E.

LLOYD, ROGER BRADSHAIGH. The golden middle age; a study of social life in twelfth century Europe. 255p $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

940.1 Civilization, Medieval. Twelfth century. Education, Medieval. Colleges and universities—Europe. Learning and scholarship—History. John of Salisbury, bp. of Chartres [39-31322]

"For Canon Lloyd the golden middle age is the twelfth century, and his new book is concerned with its social rather than its political life. After a brief note on the revival begun by Charles the Great, he describes the rapid growth of the universities, especially Paris, and shows how their disputations made for freedom of thought and had widespread effect. He devotes a cautious chapter to town and country in England, and concludes with an account of the Church in England, which is rather surprisingly favourable. Stubbs's well-known lecture on the literary court of Henry II is made full use of, and John of Salisbury's Policraticus is repeatedly quoted." Spec

---

Books p22 O 29 '39 550w

"From the political aspect, which Canon Lloyd leaves aside, the twelfth century was a harsh age, but his presentation of it as a sort of intellectual Renascence is on the whole both plausible and interesting. Other authorities take a less kindly view than he does of the turbulent university of Paris, but it is true that the lecturers and students together had, on the whole, a great influence for good on a very stagnant Europe."

LLOYD, R. B.—Continued
Spec 163:28 Jl 7 '39 160w

"This is an attractive book. Canon Lloyd lays no claim to original research and is content to rest largely on the standard authors—Poole, Rashdall, Haskins, Miss Waddell; but he has a talent for synthesis and a workmanlike style. He has performed, as he confesses, 'a labour of love,' and he investigates his chosen century with one fancies, much the same zest as its scholars approached the Universals."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p227 Ap 22 '39 480w

LLOYD GEORGE, DAVID. Memoirs of the Peace conference [Eng title: The truth about the peace treaties]. 2v il maps set $10 Yale univ. press [ea 18s Gollancz]

940.314 European war, 1914-1918—Peace. Peace conference, 1919 39-4896

The only living member of the triumvirate who directed the Peace conference at Versailles presents his personal account of the conference. He includes personal sketches of many of those who attended: Woodrow Wilson, Colonel House, Poincaré, Clemenceau, Northcliffe, among others. Index at end of volume two.

Reviewed by J. S. Reeves
Am Pol Sci R 33:678 Ag '39 950w

Reviewed by R. J. Sontag
Ann Am Acad 204:197 Jl '39 500w

Booklist 35:249 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by W. L. Langer
Books p1 Mr 5 '39 2400w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 25 '39 1150w

Cath World 149:504 Jl '39 900w

"These Memoirs give us Lloyd George the lawyer 'selecting' (note that word!) the material with which to make out a case in defense of Lloyd George the politician. The result is not happy. It will do nothing to make Americans eager to support England in another war."
— Christian Century 56:581 My 3 '39 390w

"This book is, rather to the reader's relief, less acutely polemical than the war memoirs. But it is, even more markedly, a defense of his policy. He is not bashful about claiming credit where credit is due to him." E. H. Carr
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 18 '39 950w

"Mr. Lloyd George states his position with candor. He stands as a defender of his own and his colleagues' attempt to make a peace to end war. Such a plainly spoken intention leaves the reader to indulge what personal reservations he may, and thus places these volumes among the most important of the many interpretations of two decades of mere armistice." C. W. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 9 '39 600w

"As pointed and sharp as are his personality sketches in this volume, so are his observations of the events at the Conference lucid and trenchant. Every important detail of Versailles is here recorded and interpreted. The fact that Memoirs of the Peace Conference is a personal narrative does not detract from but adds to its significance as an historical record." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist 50:2 Ap '39 700w

"This work has not quite the same quality of exposition as his War Memoirs; for Mr Lloyd George is so often concerned to show that criticisms directed against himself should have been addressed elsewhere, that the work is loaded with unduly long quotations and summaries. The subject matter is immensely complicated and covers an enormous field; and Mr Lloyd George assumes a rather wider knowledge of the history of other nations than many general readers possess. Nevertheless, Mr Lloyd George's work is an essential contribution to the understanding of the Peace Treaties; the new documents which he quotes must be taken into account by anyone who hereafter attempts to form an opinion; and it is immensely valuable to have on record the personal impressions of the only survivor of the chief actors in that greatest of diplomatic dramas."
+ — Economist 134:6 Ja 7 '39 2100w

Foreign Affairs 17:810 Jl '39 70w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin
Living Age 355:380 D '38 1650w (Reprinted from New Statesman & Nation)

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 148:406 Ap 8 '39 500w

Reviewed by Paul Birdsall
New Repub 98:282 Ap 12 '39 1550w

"Mr. Lloyd George's interesting account of the Treaty-making would have been better if he had been able to look back on these twenty years with a broader and more philosophical eye. He has never been one to turn the other cheek, and his preoccupation with self-vindication spoils some otherwise valuable sections of his book. . . This is a sobering book. . . I hope those who remember nothing of the war and of the circumstances of the Peace and who now talk as if a war with Germany were inevitable will read this book—and even more important, Mr. Lloyd George's earlier volume on the battle of Passchendaele." Kingsley Martin
+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:651 O 22 '38 1650w (Review of v 1)

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin
New Statesman & Nation 16:922 D 3 '38 1800w (Review of v 2)

"The defendant's case is submitted to the jury with the forensic insight into average mentality for which Mr. Lloyd George is famous. By means of anecdotes, character-sketches, descriptives and adroit innuendoes, an accomplished parliamentarian spreads an atmosphere around situations skillfully analyzed." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p1 Mr 5 '39 1600w

"As a detailed narrative, complete with documents, by one of the three men most intimately concerned with the Versailles Treaty, these two volumes are of prime historical importance. All may not, however, agree with Lloyd George's somewhat oversimplified defence of the Treaty as 'the action of men who honestly did their best.' The pen portraits of the author's colleagues are full and often diverting."
+ — New Yorker 15:95 Mr 11 '39 80w

"Mr. Lloyd George's account of the Peace Conference and its immediate consequences is in many ways less thrilling and exciting than his narrative of the war years. It is, however, of greater interest and value to the historian and the serious critical reader, because he quotes at length from the supposedly very confidential minutes of the Council of Ten, the Council of Four, the Imperial War Cabinet, and other important documents, not to mention his own election and Parliamentary speeches." S. B. Fay
+ Sat R of Lit 19:10 Mr 11 '39 1050w

"Mr. Lloyd George has collected a great deal of valuable material, and while his judgement in the matter of selection and arrangement may be questioned . . . his work is an important addition to the mass of published histories of the Peace Conference. It is marred by a systematic denigration of President Wilson from the first chapter to the last, on a scale quite disproportionate with the plan of the book, even if the criticisms were just, which many of them palpably are not." Wilson Harris
+ — Spec 161:662 O 21 '38 800w (Review of v 1)

Reviewed by Wilson Harris
Spec 161:956 D 2 '38 900w (Review of v 2)

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 12 '39 420w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
Survey G 28:338 My '39 420w

"In a sentence in his preface Mr. Lloyd George reminds his readers of his years of legal experience 'in sifting, selecting and weighing evidence . . . with a view to presenting the case as a whole.' The sentence calls attention to the difficulty of passing a balanced critical judgment on this book. The mere fact that it deals intimately with events of which Mr. Lloyd George has a fuller knowledge than any man now living makes it history, and its claim to be history is challengingly asserted by its title. But the very authorship that gives it its historical value means that it is also a piece of advocacy."

Times [London] Lit Sup p671 O 22 '38 1750w (Review of v 1)

"Apart from the lucidity of its arrangement, never better exemplified than when Mr. Lloyd George is making his way through the mazes of the Eastern Question, the new volume has conspicuous merits. Like its predecessor, it conveys atmosphere, and it can on occasion present all the aspects of a tangled and controversial issue with the insight and sympathy which explains Mr. Lloyd George's success in negotiation. But the underlying partisanship is also well marked."
Times [London] Lit Sup p762 D 3 '38 900w (Review of v 2)

Reviewed by R. C. Binkley
Yale R n s 28:853 summer '39 950w

LOBECK, ARMIN KOHL. Geomorphology; an introduction to the study of landscapes. 731p il maps $4.50 (25s) McGraw

551 Geology. Physical geography. Landscape 39-17524

Textbook for college students and the serious-minded general reader. The notable feature of the book is the large number of photographs and diagrams—comprising nearly two-thirds of the bulk of the book—and intended to be studied as diligently as the text itself. The author is professor of geology at Columbia University. Index.

Booklist 36:85 N 1 '39

"Professor Lobeck's well known illustrative skill is nowhere better exemplified than in his latest book. The illustrations are superb. . . They are illustrations that really illustrate, and they are provided with clear, explanatory legends. Probably they will prove, in themselves, to be excellent teaching implements, a useful substitute for the field work that usually can accompany an elementary course to only a limited degree. . . Although no one, on opening the book, can fail to be impressed first by the pictures, the text is by no means of secondary importance. Quite evidently a great deal of thought has been spent on it. The statements are clear, precise, and generally so phrased that the critic looking for trouble cannot find fault with them. The content is neither encyclopedic nor painfully elementary." R. F. Flint
+ Geog R 29:701 O '39 1000w

Reviewed by G. B. Cressey
+ J Geol 47:772 O '39 340w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:56 O '39

LOCKLEY, RONALD MATHIAS. I know an island. 300p il maps $3 Appleton-Century [10s 6d Harrap]

914.29 Skokholm, Wales. Birds—Great Britain. Islands (W) 39-27554

An account of ten little-known islands off the coasts of England, Ireland and Wales. The chronicle begins and ends with Skokholm, near the coast of Pembroke, which uninhabited island the author has made his own, and where he and his wife and small daughter lived for several years. Without capital, they were able to live on goat's milk, garden produce, fish, sheep, and honey. Mr Lockley is an ornithologist and the book contains data on sea and land birds he has observed on his own and other islands.

Booklist 35:362 Jl 1 '39

"This is not a book for every one to enjoy, of course; but for those who love islands, who are interested in birds, who find charm in remoteness; for those, too, who are drawn by prose of unaffected beauty, this is a rare discovery. And the pictures, also, are unusual and beautiful." John Patton
+ Books p2 Ag 13 '39 500w

"Mr. Lockley's book is a delightful, simply written, record of Crusoeing, and is of immense interest to ornithologists, too." V. S. Pritchett
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 25 '39 380w

"Well printed on excellent paper, with numerous maps and photographs, the book can be recommended with equal confidence to the natural historian and to the general reader whose interests lie rather in travel and the study of mankind." A. W. Boyd
+ Manchester Guardian sup xv D 9 '38 380w

"A delightful, matter-of-fact book, written in a sober, convincing way. . . I warmly recommend I Know an Island to everyone: its only fault is that it is not long enough." David Garnett
+ New Statesman & Nation 16:1052 D 17 '38 1550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p805 D 17 '38 390w

LOCKLIN, DAVID PHILIP. Economics of transportation. rev ed 863p maps $4 Business publications

385.132 Transportation—U.S. Railroads—U.S. Railroads—Rates 38-23534

"New material in the revised edition of 'Economics of Transportation' includes a chapter on pipe lines and one on transport coordination. A description of the provisions of the Motor Carrier Act of 1935 has been added to the discussion of regulation of highway transportation; and the provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 are outlined in the chapter on air transportation. Special attention is paid to those aspects of transportation which involve questions of public policy." (Management R) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

Reviewed by R. L. Dewey
Am Econ R 29:143 Mr '39 280w

"While certain of the defects of the first edition . . . have been eliminated, the text still contains the same overemphasis on regulation and the same slighting of the actual processes of transportation to which even a book on principles must devote some attention. . . Despite such complaints, the reviewer must again pay tribute to this scholarly, thorough, and well-documented handling of a vast and complicated field. Professor Locklin's treatment of such an array of difficult subject matter should continue to command the respect and admiration of experienced students of transportation who can recognize the meticulous care with which the author has gathered and compiled his material and organized it into an outstanding text." H. E. Dougall
+ — J Pol Econ 47:743 O '39 500w
Management R 28:35 Ja '39 80w

LOCKMILLER, DAVID A. Sir William Blackstone. 308p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press [14s Oxford]

B or 92 Blackstone, Sir William 38-37894

For descriptive note see Annual for 1938.

"As a scholar Lockmiller has clung to his documents, extracted their contents without fudging or shudder, and refrained from noting a significance to be found only between the lines. . . The story is reverent, solidly buttressed in citation, and a bit naive." Walton Hamilton
+ Columbia Law R 39:724 Ap '39 2500w

LOCKMILLER, D. A.—Continued

"Mr. Lockmiller's book is considerably the better of the two [Warden, L. C. Life of Blackstone] and has the great merit of being written in simple and correct English; he has also briefly discussed Blackstone's decisions, and printed some of his verses, tracts, and his opinion in Perrin v. Blake." T. F. T. Plucknett

+ — Harvard Law R 52:721 F '39 300w

"Mr. Lockmiller has written a concise and objective appraisal, in a direct if not exciting style. He has revealed in action an immensely energetic legal mind which brought forth from a maze of confusing and obscure treatises and decisions a vivid statement of the laws and Constitution of eighteenth-century England." J. P. Pollard

+ N Y Times p4 F 26 '39 900w

"In my opinion Mr. Lockmiller gives a good, straightforward account of Blackstone's life and achievement. . . As a general rule Mr. Lockmiller's work is accurate; but in [a few] instances he seems to me to have fallen into error. . . But [they] are minor. . . I think that Mr. Lockmiller's book is a worthy memorial to the great man who did more than any other single person to create, as between the United States and England, the all important link of common legal principles." W. S. Holdsworth

+ — No Carolina Law R 17:232 Ap '39 850w

LOCKWOOD, MYNA. Macaroni, an American tune; pictures by the author. 46p $1 Oxford

Gasparino, a little Italian-American, wished desperately that the American boys in his neighborhood would not call him Macaroni. He wanted whole-heartedly to be an American. A stolen violin called forth Gasparino's courage, and changed many things for him.

"The story is slight, but it is an appealing object lesson in American hospitality to newcomers, based on a true incident, and developed with a sympathetic understanding of the problems which small immigrants have to face." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 O 29 '39 240w

Wis Lib Bul 35:189 N '39

LOEB, LEONARD BENEDICT. Fundamentals of electricity and magnetism. 2d ed 554p il $4 Wiley [20s Chapman]

537 Electricity. Magnetism 38-23708

"Drastic revision and enlargement by 122 pages bring this college text last published in 1931, strictly up to date. Dr. Loeb, who is the eminent Professor of Physics in the University of California, does not shirk the use of the calculus in his endeavor to present the subject in a quantitative and mathematical fashion. The work is well diagramed and there are more than 300 practical problems offered for solution." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Booklist 35:67 O 15 '38

N Y New Tech Bks 23:55 O '38

LOEWENSTEIN, KARL. Hitler's Germany; the Nazi background to war. 176p $1.25 Macmillan

943.085 Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Nazi movement (W) 39-32518

Survey of the Nazi government and party machines, which the author, who now teaches political science at Amherst college, defines as a "gigantic experiment in mass control thru emotionalism." He declares that now the war is on, "oldfashioned patriotism has precedence over National Socialism. It may well be that the most notable victim of the war is the National Socialist movement."

Booklist 36:175 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p8 Ja 4 '40 160w

"A concise, but complete and well organized survey."

+ New Repub 101:269 D 20 '39 30w

"The book is a gem of compactness and lucidity. [The author] has tried hard to be objective. He has fought resolutely against his natural resentment as an exile from Germany, which he admits, 'has been more deepened than mitigated lately.' " T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p3 D 10 '39 350w

LOFTING, LYNNE. Squawky and Bawky; il. by Waldo Peirce. [16p] $1.50 (4s 6d) Scribner

39-30329

"Squawky and Bawky were twin penguins, so alike that not even their mother and father could tell them apart. Once Squawky was captured by an explorer who put a red ring around his foot, but when he escaped he gave half of the red ring to Bawky so that they were alike as ever. This story by Hugh Lofting's daughter is childlike and amusing." Library J

"The illustrations are by Waldo Peirce, a famous American artist. As far as I have been able to discover, this is his first attempt at illustration. . . In a criticism of his work in the Magazine of Art for October, 1937, Howard Devree says 'he sometimes shows a carelessness of drawing, an impatience with technique.' This seems particularly true in these illustrations for they are so confused that it is hard to imagine a child being able to make much out of them. Recommended for special collections rather than as a book for children." E. G. Mullan

+ — Library J 64:999 D 15 '39 150w

"Penguins seem to exist chiefly for the delectation of artists, and certainly the best reason for the existence of Squawky and Bawky is the pictures which Waldo Peirce has made of them—very blue and black-and-white pictures in heavy, swashbuckling lines against the wettest seas and coldest icebergs imaginable. The humor and crispness which the text doesn't quite achieve have full expression in them." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p11 Ja 21 '40 200w

"The penguin is getting to be the most overworked of picture-book animals, but this story of penguin twins is entertaining enough and Waldo Peirce's slap-dash water-color pictures are fresh."

New Yorker 15:86 N 25 '39 30w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH. Blossom like the rose. 363p il $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 39-23752

A romantic, historical novel, telling, in the first person, the story of Sir John Ollenshaw's crippled son, of how Philip grew up in hatred and neglect, how he sold his birthright, and how he came to America and what he accomplished in the wilderness. The time is the late seventeenth century.

" 'Blossom Like the Rose' is a stirring tale. It moves with swiftness and grace, the narrative keyed in language and tone to the dramatic incident and characterization. There is not a single stock figure in the book; each speaks and acts with personal virtue." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 S 17 '39 800w

"It would be captious to stress tiny anachronisms—stoves in a backwoods New England kitchen of 1680, potatoes in gardens of the same place and time. The wonder is that the feeling for seventeenth-century New England is so clear and true. Besides, the story marches on so briskly that there is scant time for hair splitting. More serious is the author's disposition to twist a character to further her story, so that she leaves us puzzled about the real inwardness of Linda and not quite easy about Nathaniel Gore." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '39 800w

Reviewed by H. C. White
Commonweal 31:99 N 17 '39 500w
Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '39 250w
New Repub 100:224 S 27 '39 50w

"If her characters are not true to their age and would fit equally ill into any other, they are yet presented with a curious power and vitality. This is not a good novel—it gives the impression of being careless or unfinished and is full of grotesque anachronisms. But it has a flavour distinctively its own, and I shall not be surprised if Miss Lofts gives it a rather remarkable successor." John Mair

— + New Statesman & Nation 18:314 Ag 26 '39 200w

"A stylist and a romanticist, with a gift for spinning a yarn which is smooth as silk, Norah Lofts has turned this time to America for the principal setting of her latest tale. Like the best of her previous novels . . . 'Blossom Like the Rose' is a lively period story which deliberately drugs the senses with color and panache. . . . As one who has long admired Norah Lofts's gifts . . . I am sorry to report that 'Blossom Like the Rose' is one of her poorer efforts." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p5 S 17 '39 600w

"[Mrs] Lofts writes her tale of the hard-bitten, narrow-minded, stubbornly religious colonists in a clear, firm prose. A pleasantly tender love story provides the romance, and the Indians, described as murderous savages, provide the drama."

+ New Yorker 15:77 S 23 '39 50w
Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 6 '40 200w

"Mrs. Lofts has written a thoroughly sound novel, and one of its excellencies is its unconventionality. In her drawing of the characters, in her working out of the plot, it is clear that she is keeping faithfully to life as she sees it." Forrest Reid

+ Spec 163:355 S 8 '39 800w

"[Mrs] Lofts tells her story with a consistent development of character, with an unconfused plot, with strength in the many harrowing scenes, with a keen sense of drama and with a straightforwardness of narration which never allows the reader's interest to lag."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p501 Ag 26 '39 750w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH. Colin Lowrie [Eng title: Out of this nettle]. 393p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 38-29023

Follows the adventurous career of a red-haired Scot, Colin Lowrie, forced to leave Scotland after the Jacobite rebellion of '45. He was sold into slavery in the West Indies but escaped after ten years and fled again, this time to Virginia. In Virginia he tried to run his own plantation, but failing in that, he returned to Scotland to restore his ancestral home. In each episode of his story some woman dominates the scene—from the Negro Cassie of the West Indies, to the passionate Eulalia in Virginia.

For biographical sketch of the author see Wilson Bulletin 13:504 Mr '39

Booklist 35:191 F 1 '39

"Though one does not quite believe in the later part of the book as one believes in the first accounts, [Mrs] Lofts has given us a smoothly written, entertaining narrative that certainly does not lose by its lack of 'God-wottery.'" Norah Hoult

+ — Books p8 Ja 1 '39 500w

"This novel is always readable, the calculated matter-of-factness of the writing going far to counter the extravagant inventions of its second half." Harold Brighouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 19 '38 390w
New Repub 97:296 Ja 11 '39 30w

"The writer has a gift for implying atmosphere, and with the minimum of description can suggest the uneasy stirring of slaves at night, or the vast emptiness of the American plain. At times the anachronisms become intensely annoying. [It] is an historical novel by courtesy and an adventure story by achievement. The movement is rapid, the characters vivid, and the situations strong. It is typical of the story's weakness and strength that the figure of the hero is the least well-defined in the book." John Mair

+ — New Statesman & Nation 16:194 Jl 30 '38 500w

"[Mrs] Lofts's firm and beautifully cadenced prose, no less than her accurate realization of Colin Lowrie's character, distinguishes her novel altogether from the kind which depends for its effect solely upon action. The method is unconventional, perhaps, but only a pedant would object to this when the result is four-star entertainment. One's chief complaint of 'Colin Lowrie' is that it ends too soon." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 1 '39 550w
New Yorker 14:54 Ja 7 '39 90w

"Norah Lofts has plenty of vigor, and in 'Colin Lowrie' she lavishes it with the same abandoned joy which lets her strain the arm of coincidence, fling her hero around the world and back, pop him in and out of danger, poverty, riches, and beds. . . It's fun, so that once more it must be said that though [Mrs] Lofts is no great new light on the horizon of English letters, she doesn't write about Mummy and the rectory party, and she gives you a good time." Frances Woodward
Sat R of Lit 19:6 D 31 '38 300w

"Lowrie is successful with women, and although he is the narrator of his own story, he manages the record of his loves without seeming absurd himself. Variety of love-experience is to be expected in so coloured and perilous a life, and Mrs. Lofts captures our interest not merely for Cassie, the young negress, and for Sadie, the Virginian maid-servant, but also, more improbably, for the brilliant, fantastic Eulalia of the last chapters. So she must forgive those of us who do not believe at all in the episode of the little Sister of Charity. Which is not to say that its facts are impossible, but simply that, as worked in here, too nicely calculated as destiny's implement of spiritual growth, it is no more than a perilous novelist's device—by no means a fatal anguish. Still, even here and right to the end, through all Eulalia's whims and extremities, good writing and narrative ability carry us without noticeable effort to the four hundred and forty-fifth page." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 161:277 Ag 12 '38 500w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 19 '39 550w
Time 33:56 Ja 9 '39 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p477 Jl 16 '38 320w

LOGASA, HANNAH. The study hall in junior and senior high schools. 190p $2 Macmillan

371.3 School management. Study 38-18897

Summarizes the literature of study hall practice in numerous schools, with helpful deductions by the author concerning function and the consequent organization, equipment, and management of the high school study hall." Booklist

---

Booklist 35:185 F 1 '39

"The study hall, taken as a whole, will probably be of most value to the beginning teacher. Supervising study halls is all too frequently assigned to the beginner, who approaches one of the most difficult tasks of the school without full awareness of the problem. The present volume gives a clear picture of the difficulties encountered, of the confusion in purposes and organization too frequently found, and of certain attempts to meet the problems. No satisfaction derived from the devices and methods presented should lead the reader to forget that Miss Logasa has given an honest but not too attractive picture of what, in too many schools, is falsely termed 'study' hall." Lou La Brant

LOGASA, HANNAH—Continued
+ Library Q 9:371 Jl '39 900w
Pratt p10 spring '39

"This volume should be welcomed alike by high-school principals, study-hall supervisors, librarians, and teachers. Certainly it provides excellent basis for a series of faculty meetings on a most significant group of problems." B. L. Johnson
+ School R 47:230 Mr '39 350w

LOHRKE, EUGENE WILLIAM, and LOHRKE, MRS ARLINE. Night over England. 192p $2 Harrison-Hilton bks

942.084 Great Britain—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics—Crisis, 1938. Great Britain —Civilization 39-15283

A young American couple who have spent several years on a farm in Sussex, England, "portray the British attitude to the September [1938] crisis. . . The authors reflect the views of the farmer and artisan, proud of their national heritage and conscious of their dignity as free and honest yeomen. After trying on gas masks and preparing for war during the weeks before Munich, the villagers could not comprehend the last-minute surrender. 'For the first time in my life,' said the Löhrke gardener, 'I'm ashamed to be an Englishman.' In such personal and informal terms, the authors allow the ordinary British citizen to speak for himself." (Sat R of Lit)

"The great virtue of 'Night Over England' lies in the fact that it is not a bitter diatribe, but the restrained, honest and all-too-comprehending testimony of friends. . . As a revealing analysis of England, this reviewer finds it exceptional and important far beyond the ordinary." Leland Stowe
+ Books p4 Je 18 '39 1050w

Reviewed by R. A. Chace
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 22 '39 320w

"Few of the documents of that period reveal the weight of hours as the Löhrkes felt them. Few of the dispatches convey the courage and perplexity which the Löhrkes found among the 'little men' in the fields and the workshops. Indeed, it would be difficult to find a more compassionate study of the September atmosphere. And at the same time, it would be difficult to find a more tolerant assessment of British foreign policy."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 1 '39 460w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 Je '39

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 50:5 Jl '39 550w
Foreign Affairs 18:380 Ja '40 20w

"A beautifully written analysis and a revealing commentary on the prevailing international crisis."
+ New Repub 99:260 Jl 5 '39 40w

Reviewed by Shepard Stone
N Y Times p9 Je 18 '39 950w

"The importance of this book, which contains the most revealing analysis of English character to appear in recent years, arises from a combination of sympathy and restraint. . . Unlike Robert Briffault, who derides everything English as worthless, the Löhrkes respect and praise the finest qualities of the British tradition. Unlike Margaret Halsey, in preparing their inventory of virtues and vices they prefer wisdom to the wisecrack. In describing the night of confusion and futility which they find settling over England, the Löhrkes employ remarkably agreeable prose, interspersed with humor, irony, and a touch of bitterness. . . For those North Americans who feel a trifle overwhelmed by royal pomp and circumstance, this brief and incisive picture of dry-rot beneath the throne is highly recommended." J. F. Green
+ Sat R of Lit 20:6 Je 3 '39 700w

"A report written with fine eloquence and gravity."
Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 7 '39 300w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 28:502 Ag '39 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p659 N 11 '39 150w

LOHSE, REMIE. The miniature camera in professional hands. 119p il spiral binding pa $1.50 (6s) Studio

779 Photographs (W) 39-10947

The comparatively brief text reviews the author's own experiences and discusses technical points in general fashion. The bulk of the book contains a series of photographs, each with its caption stating circumstances under which it was produced.

Booklist 35:345 Je 15 '39
Times [London] Lit Sup p442 Jl 22 '39 80w

LONDON, JOAN. Jack London and his times. 387p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 London, Jack (W) 39-33408

"An unconventional biography" of the American novelist written by his daughter. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
Books p4 N 26 '39 1850w

"Joan London's treatment of the 'times' too close to being mere historical and critical réchauffé, is redeemed by her special emphasis on West Coast events and personalities; and her industry and shrewd insight appears in such passages as her demonstration that, more than by Darwin or Nietzsche, London was encouraged in his glorification of force and his proto-Aryanism by a now obscure second-rater, Benjamin Kidd. After all, it is fascinating to learn by what blending of ideals and self-hypnotism Jack London's phenomenal energy was sustained in his unequal twenty-year struggle." Roberts Tapley
+ — Nation 149:583 N 25 '39 550w
New Repub 101:241 D 13 '39 70w
New Yorker 15:87 N 4 '39 40w

"Miss London . . . means to present a candid account of London's early surroundings and personal life. In picturing his 'times' she is often incisive and revealing in her concrete description of individuals and groups, but needlessly encumbers her story by labored generalizations about economic history, the class struggle and the 'inevitability' of socialism. Making allowances for these intrusions of theory and doctrine, the reader will find Joan London's 'Jack London' a colorful, pungent, well-written book." E. N. Jenckes
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 N 11 '39 1200w

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. The Shakespeare murders. 255p $2 Phoenix

39-20476

Detective story.

"In spite of the fact that the book is fairly well written and moves along at a good pace, it is, in many ways, unbelievable. This may be because of the number of deaths; or due to the theatrically artificial quality of each killing." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 12 '39 150w

"The plot is an ingenious one, and it gives the reader ample opportunity to guess wrong." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 13 '39 100w
Sat R of Lit 20:20 Ag 12 '39 40w

LONG, AUGUSTUS WHITE. Son of Carolina; a segment of the American scene. 280p $3 Duke univ. [18s Cambridge]

B or 92 39-29579

An autobiography. "Dr. Long lived next door to Woodrow Wilson and was a neighbor of Grover Cleveland at Princeton; he worked for Walter Hines Page in Raleigh, N.C; he studied under Gilman at the Johns Hopkins and under Eliot at Harvard. . . Now returned, in his seventies, to North Carolina where his 'very young eyes' saw Sherman's army pass by, he has put himself to the task of telling all about it in [this book]." (Books)

"A leisurely, discursive book that is hardly of earth-shaking importance, but that certainly is not without charm. . . Dr. Long writes about life in North Carolina fifty years ago in a way that will enchant Tarheels, or at least those among them who appreciate lucid prose that reveals on every page a kindly, but perceptive and faintly ironical spirit. This son of Carolina has made a delightful gift to his state." G. W. Johnson

\+ Books p30 D 10 '39 500w

New Repub 102:94 Ja 15 '40 60w

"There is value in this book in the neighbor's sympathetic estimate of Woodrow Wilson, in the personal and intimate pictures of Walter Hines Page, Henry Van Dyke, of Johns Hopkins as it was growing to greatness, of Harvard under Eliot. However, it is not the great and the grand but the warm detailed remembering of a good childhood after a destructive war which gives the book its charm and strength." J. D.

\+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 6 '39 250w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 20 '39 600w

LONG, DWIGHT. Seven seas on a shoestring [Eng title: Sailing all seas in the Idle Hour]. 310p il $3 Harper [9s 6d Hodder]

910.4 Voyages around the world. Idle Hour (ketch) (W) 39-3448

In the autumn of 1934 Dwight Long left Seattle in the 32-foot ketch, Idle Hour, with a one-man crew and a dog-mascot, to circle the globe. Four years later, having sailed 35,000 miles and weathered many storms and adventures, he brought the ketch to New York harbor, only to have her wrecked in the hurricane which swept the New England coast. He is more interested thruout in the seven seas and in navigation than in strange ports and scenes ashore.

Booklist 35:229 Mr 15 '39

"This is a thoroughly honest and straightforward book of ocean cruising, without any of the deliberate exaggeration and artificiality which characterizes the tales of too many professional stunt voyagers on dangerous seas. . . Not since the publication of Ahto Walter's 'Racing the Seas,' a book that did not receive its rightful attention, has such a fresh and engaging account of ocean work in a small craft come along." Lincoln Colcord

\+ Books p4 F 12 '39 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '39

"It is a tale of adventure which will appeal as much to a layman as to a sailor, and there emerges from its pages a determination to carry on which no amount of hardship could destroy." W. W.

\+ Manchester Guardian p5 O 14 '38 280w

"Now that the navigator has turned to authorship—this is his first book—he shows himself an excellent writer, both in the selection of material and in the unaffected manner of its telling. His comments on the various modes of human life he encountered are poignant and refreshing. I should like to recommend this tale to all adventurous youths looking for new worlds to conquer, but I am fearful of a traffic jam in the Panama Canal, not to mention the limited capacity of the harbor at Tahiti." H. H. Darby

\+ Nation 148:593 My 20 '39 500w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p28 Ap 16 '39 1000w

"The author is not much of a hand at the English language, but his adventures should appeal to other navigators, both saltwater and armchair."

\+ — New Yorker 14:68 F 4 '39 40w

"There is a good deal of charm in this tale of a minor Magellan; his writing is boyish but it is alive with enthusiasm, and through it you come to know gladly a lad who is unafraid to leap horizons to catch a dream." H. D.

\+ — Sat R of Lit 19:22 F 4 '39 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p572 S 3 '38 350w

Wis Lib Bul 35:63 Ap '39

LONG, LAURA. Hannah courageous; il. by Edward Caswell. 246p $2 Longmans

(W) 39-27740

Historical novel for older boys and girls. The scene is White River, a small community on the Underground railway, in the days before the Civil war. The heroine, Hannah, is a Quaker, with a talent for drawing cartoons.

Booklist 35:47 O 1 '39

"Quietly told, softened by the 'plain language' it is a story of spiritual decision expressed in human experience." M. L. Becker

\+ Books p5 Ag 20 '39 550w

Christian Century 56:999 Ag 16 '39 30w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 1 '39 120w

Churchman 153:24 D 15 '39 20w

Living Church 101:7 D 13 '39 60w

Wis Lib Bul 35:221 D '39

LONG, MAX. Murder between dark and dark. 279p $2 Lippincott

39-16740

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 Jl 16 '39 150w

"Somewhere I gleaned the notion that 'Murder Between Dark and Dark' was Max Long's first mystery story. After reading it, it seems hardly possible. The plot is ingenious in its utter simplicity, the pace is lazy, yet rapid. And above all that is the calm way Komahko has of wandering around through killings, and finally solving them to everyone's satisfaction." Marian Wiggin

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 15 '39 110w

"While it is a little too confused to be a really great mystery tale, this book offers reasonably good entertainment." Isaac Anderson

\+ N Y Times p12 Jl 16 '39 150w

"Competent."

Sat R of Lit 20:17 Jl 15 '39 40w

LONG, RENEE. Style your personality; the art of feminine finesse [il. by Jeva Mary Cralick]. 197p $1.98 Doubleday

646 Clothing and dress. Beauty, Personal (W) 39-27036

Advice on clothes, cosmetics, care of body and diet for Mrs Average Woman. Renee Long is style consultant for Franklin Simon in New York, and lectures before women's clubs in many cities.

Booklist 35:201 F 15 '39

Reviewed by Katherine Vincent

Books p13 F 5 '39 350w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 4 '39 100w

LONGINOS MARTINEZ, JOSE. California in 1792; tr. by Lesley Byrd Simpson. 111p map $2.75 Huntington lib.

917.94 California—Description and travel. Indians of North America—California. Natural history—California 38-33381

"A translation of the diary of a Spanish explorer in California, José Longinos Martinez, the botanist who was sent by Charles III of Spain to report on its flora and trees. . . . The original Spanish manuscript, now in the Huntington Library . . . was found in Mexico by that inveterate Hispano-American scholar and collector Henry R. Wagner. It contains many interesting observations about the customs of the California Indians." N Y Times

Reviewed by E. W. Gifford
Am Anthropol 41:488 Jl '39 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p24 Ap 30 '39 110w

"The book is an interesting item of Americana. The translator is to be congratulated upon a valuable piece of work in his careful deciphering of the manuscripts and his production of an extremely readable English text. The notes, by the translator and by other experts, are excellent." G. R. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:20 Ja 21 '39 90w

LONGLEY, MRS PEARL DORR. The rebirth of Venkata Reddi; a story of India. 349p il $2.50 Am. Bapt.

39-14796

A story of India and its caste system written by a missionary. The story concerns chiefly the members of a Sudra family and their gradual emancipation from superstition and tradition.

"A story based on fact, realistic within limits, embodying first-hand knowledge of the country and its people, and having the high purpose of creating a sympathetic understanding of both."
+ Christian Century 56:124 Ja 25 '39 30w

Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 16:151 Ap '39 160w

LOOMIS, ALFRED FULLERTON. Ranging the Maine coast; il. by Edward A. Wilson. 274p maps $4; ltd autog ed on rag pa $20 Norton

917.41 Maine—Description and travel. Yachts and yachting. Hotspur (cutter) 39-27868

Historical anecdote, descriptions of islands, shore lines and fishing villages, personal reminiscences and sailing lore make up this account of two voyages made by the author in his yacht Hotspur, along the coast of Maine. The book is profusely illustrated with maps, full page drawings and pictorial decorations by the artist, Edward A. Wilson. Index.

Booklist 36:86 N 1 '39

" 'Ranging the Maine Coast' is far and away the best piece of work [the author] has ever done; and although it chronicles a quiet coastwise cruise, it nevertheless is the best cruising book, by and large, that I have read for many a year. For it is what all cruising books ought to be—an informed and seamanlike narrative that incidentally reveals a rich personality." Lincoln Colcord
+ Books p6 O 29 '39 1200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '39 650w

"We know that all cruising yachtsmen will reach for this book. My hope is that it shall penetrate inland and open vistas not before glimpsed. 'Ranging the Maine Coast' is one jolly good sea yarn." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p6 O 1 '39 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 650w

LOOMIS, ANDREW. Fun with a pencil. 119p il $3 Viking

741 Drawing—Instruction (W) 39-12710

"The fundamentals of drawing caricatures and popular figures are explained and demonstrated with many step-by-step illustrations for the beginner. Though intended only to provide a pastime, it may be useful in learning commercial art work." Booklist

Booklist 35:360 Jl 1 '39

"Mr. Loomis's humorous exemplars of technical progress are alone worth the price of the book. It should be very useful and encouraging for the beginner draughtsman."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 20 '39 70w

Pratt p14 winter '40

LOOMIS, FREDERIC MORRIS. Consultation room [Eng title: Consulting room]. 281p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Obstetrics (W) 39-27003

From his twenty years of medical experience a woman's doctor who takes a keen interest in the lives and problems of his patients has selected to relate a varied collection of case histories and stories of childbirth revealing the intimate relationship between doctor and patient.

Booklist 35:185 F 1 '39

" 'Consultation Room' is a valuable book to put into the hands of any woman of childbearing age. Its simplicity, honesty and lack of pomposity are attractive and make all the more surprising the author's statement that 'the socialization of medicine is a potential menace to the freedom of both doctors and patients.' " Lorine Pruette
+ Books p8 Ja 22 '39 550w

Reviewed by H. I. D. McGillicuddy, M.D.
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '39 270w

"Characterized by the kind of common sense and maturity you like your doctor to have."
+ New Repub 97:352 Ja 25 '39 40w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 17:992 Je 24 '39 100w

"It is not sensational. It is a sincere and straightforward personal chronicle, which touches upon matters of deep importance in ordinary human life. And it sends a fresh breeze of scientific information to blow away some old cobwebs, emphasizing the progress of modern surgery and medicine the while. . . [The] book is as kindly as it is well informed, and it is written with simplicity and the quality of unforced interest."
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 22 '39 450w

"For some weeks I have been hoarding a few rude paragraphs with which to greet the next unnecessary collection of medical memoirs the publishers would see fit to inflict upon us. Now what should come along to frustrate all my medicocidal plans but this sympathetic, amusing, and deeply interesting book by—and why not?—an eminent gynecologist and obstetrician." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 14:57 Ja 28 '39 550w

"There is lots of humor in this book—some of the stories the Doctor tells on himself are inimitable—and the lusty acceptance of life's jokes and terrors alike, held the interest of this reviewer to the end, although we have become pretty well bored by medical excursions onto literary seas. Women will find 'Consultation Room' full of things they should know about themselves, but almost any intelligent person will find enjoyment in its racy humor and genial understanding." M. S. U., M.D.
+ Sat R of Lit 19:21 Ja 28 '39 210w

"This is not a work for children, but one to be recommended to all interested in social and sexual problems." J. H. Shakespeare
Spec 162:1140 Je 30 '39 190w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 22 '39 290w
Times [London] Lit Sup p275 My 13 '39 330w

LORAINE, WINIFRED LYDIA (STRANGMAN) (MRS ROBERT LORAINE). Head wind; the story of Robert Loraine [with original personal letters and actual passages contributed by George Bernard Shaw] [Eng title: Robert Loraine, soldier, actor, airman]. 390p il map $3.50 Morrow [10s 6d Collins]

B or 92 Loraine, Robert 39-16447

Biography of the English actor, pioneer aviator, and soldier, written by his wife. After winning early success as a matinee-idol, Loraine became an ardent admirer of Shaw and won considerable fame as an actor and producer of Shavian drama. He was also very successful in the part of Cyrano in Rostand's play. As an aviator he was the first to fly the Irish channel and later served as a Flight-commander in the Great war.

"This biography is the true, full-length portrait of a man—a remarkable man—excellently and even brilliantly executed, and such portraits are rare." B. R. Redman
+ Books p2 My 28 '39 800w
Reviewed by Carroll Kilpatrick
Boston Transcript p13 My 25 '39 430w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 26 '39 400w

"Robert Loraine was a grand dare-devil, a dangerous man to provoke, and difficult, one fancies, in any co-operative harness. But he was unique in his flamboyant approach to life and art: in a world of much colourless monotony he flamed alone, and this book justly reflects the incandescence of his spirit." Ivor Brown
+ Manchester Guardian p5 S 16 '38 400w
Reviewed by Cyril Connolly
New Statesman & Nation 16:658 O 22 '38 150w

"His story is as interesting as a novel, and as suggestive. And although the book is perhaps overcrowded, one would not want to miss its glimpses of the background and associates of its hero's life." K. W.
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 30 '39 700w

"This story of his life, told by the wife of his later years, is presented with much sympathy but with no effort to make Robert Loraine seem anything but what he really was—a passionately fantastic, congenital hero. It is an amazing, improbable history which happens to be true. Not the least interesting part of it is a series of letters and interpolations in the text by Shaw." Raymond Holden
+ Sat R of Lit 20:11 My 6 '39 480w
Times [London] Lit Sup p579 S 10 '38 600w

LORCA, FEDERICO GARCIA. See Garcia Lorca, F.

LORENZ, EDMUND SIMON. The singing church; the hymns it wrote and sang. 297p $1.50 Cokesbury press

245 Hymns 38-39297

History of Christian hymns and hymn writing from earliest times, with suggestions for the study and use of hymns. Indexes.

Christian Century 55:1267 O 19 '38 20w

"It is safe to say that few men know the field of Christian hymnology more thoroughly than Doctor Lorenz. His study is both comprehensive and learned." W. R. McNutt
+ Crozer Q 16:147 Ap '39 100w

LORING, MRS EMILIE (BAKER). Across the years. 298p $2 Little 39-24572

The plans of an American bombing plane are stolen from a senator's office in Washington. Before the mystery is solved several lives are tangled up, but that of the senator's faithful secretary is not one of them.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 O 15 '39 170w

"In the creation of both character and incident Mrs. Loring is lavish in the use of color with the result that there is not a dull page in the book. 'Across the Years' should not be recommended as a before-bed sedative." Regina Madden
Boston Transcript p1 O 21 '39 180w

"The story is pretty incredible, high-flown in style, but fast moving enough to be moderately entertaining." Beatrice Sherman
— + N Y Times p26 O 15 '39 200w

LORING, PETER. Miss Rolling Stone. 284p $2 Macrae Smith co.

39-11082

Story of adventure, with Baghdad as background. The chief characters are an attractive American girl; an Arabian prince who wants to give up his whole harem for the girl; and an English man who has other ideas about both the prince and the girl.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 Mr 19 '39 120w

"A good adventure story, with the Arabian desert for a background and plenty of plotting and murder. . . While the story itself is not too plausible, it sounds real enough while you are reading it, because the local color is good and the three leading characters are pleasantly convincing." Charlotte Dean
+ — N Y Times p25 Mr 26 '39 180w

LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. Alexander Hamilton, portrait of a prodigy. 320p il $3 Carrick

B or 92 Hamilton, Alexander (W) 39-21845

This biography of Hamilton sketches his life story from his youthful success as a clerk in a West Indian business house to his death in the famous duel at Weehawken. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:66 O 15 '39

"Alexander Hamilton at last has found a relatively unprejudiced biographer, and it is high time. . . This latest biography is written with complete detachment and with a mild cynicism which Hamilton would have understood perfectly, although he might have disliked it in its personal application." G. W. Johnson
+ Books p5 S 17 '39 1700w
Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p2 O 7 '39 550w
Christian Science Monitor p20 N 10 '39 350w

"Some biographers of Hamilton have been hypnotized by excessive admiration; others have allowed mental myopia to distort fairness. David Loth, fascinated of course, writes with honest, critical detachment. He exhibits all the angles in the graph of the prodigy's ambitious career: his failure and success as soldier, lawyer, financier, statesman. . . Historical specialists may shrug irked shoulders over lapses here and there." D. S. Rankin
+ — Commonweal 30:541 O 6 '39 300w
Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 149:530 N 11 '39 1000w
New Repub 100:278 O 11 '39 30w

"Here is a well-balanced biography, written with grace and warmth, with only an occasional overdose of color. The engaging story, as Mr. Loth tells it with judicious interpretations, is an excellent, popularly written work. It is not for the student or scholar, nor do we believe Mr. Loth intended this portrait of a prodigy for the specialist. A true story, simply and delightfully told, it will be enjoyed by every one attracted by the life of a genius or by the history of the United States." N. G. Goodman

LOTH, D. G.—Continued
+ N Y Times p10 S 17 '39 1550w
New Yorker 15:80 S 23 '39 20w
Pratt p21 winter '40

"Mr. Loth has always written with color, grace, and simplicity; these qualities are most effectively combined in his life of Hamilton. For many years no writer has produced a competent, general biography of the great Federalist leader; Mr. Loth has now repaired this omission by giving us the best biography of Hamilton within the covers of one small volume. . . It should find its way to the general reading public." Frank Monaghan
+ — Sat R of Lit 20:5 S 16 '39 550w

"Mr. Loth pursues the story not so much dramatically, as with an abundance of personal incident and social color. Hamilton's flirtations are related with considerable particularity, and add to the vivacity of the narrative, without improving its balance. On the other hand, some aspects of Hamilton's life are treated with insight and a good deal of relevant detail. If the book has the defects of its type, it also has the merits."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 10 '39 1200w
Wis Lib Bul 35:186 N '39

LOUCKS, WILLIAM NEGELE, and HOOT, JOHN WELDON. Comparative economic systems: capitalism, socialism, communism, fascism, cooperation. 838p $3.50 Harper

330.1 Economic policy. Capitalism. Socialism. Communism. Fascism. Cooperation
(W) 38-31196

"A clear, practical analysis of socialism, communism, fascism, cooperation and capitalism from the economic viewpoint. The various programs of these economic systems are described without interpretative comment. There is no separate section treating capitalism; instead, in the discussion of other types of economies, the principles of capitalism serve the purpose of comparison and contrast." (Management R) The authors are professors in the University of Pennsylvania. Indexes.

"There has been crying need for a volume which would compare descriptively the fundamental economic organization of the democratic, fascist and communist countries in brief and without bias. Though discussions of the philosophical roots of these systems are fairly common, there is also a place for a study selecting the economic elements of these basic doctrines. Some have hoped for yet a third sort of treatment, i.e., comparative analysis. . . Messrs. Loucks and Hoot have tackled all three of these problems with varying degrees of success. In general it may be said that they have done a surprisingly good job on the first two and a passable one on the third." Max Millikan, 2d
+ — Am Econ R 29:353 Je '39 800w

"The lack of a comprehensive study on comparative economics has been especially felt by the teachers on contemporary affairs. The book of Loucks and Hoot succeeds very well in filling this gap. It is a clear presentation of the most important economic systems competing in our time. . . Of course, in covering such a vast field the authors have to be selective. One may argue with them whether the different economic systems are equally dealt with. . . However, well-organized in its presentation, balanced in its judgment and criticism, almost encyclopedic in its scope, yet not overloaded with a confusing ballast of material [the book] serves as an excellent introduction to a most intricate and controversial topic." Sigmund Neumann
+ — Ann Am Acad 203:235 My '39 550w
Foreign Affairs 17:630 Ap '39 20w
Management R 28:72 F '39 50w
Pratt p8 spring '39
Reviewed by Eduard Heimann
Survey G 28:402 Je '39 380w

LOW, DAVID. A cartoon history of our times; with an introduction and text by Quincy Howe. 174p il $2 Simon & Schuster

909.82 Caricatures and cartoons. Current events. History, Modern—Pictorial works
(W) 39-18997

Almost a hundred full-page cartoons, with brief historical comment, picturing the progress of world affairs during the last six years. The cartoons are arranged under the headings: disarmament; collective security; the Far East; Spain; the Axis; the British empire.

Booklist 36:4 S '39

"Perhaps the most striking fact about this absorbing and delightful book is its complete applicability to the American scene. 'The well meaning ineffectuals' lean out from any day's headlines. Could not the skillful Mr. Hull negotiate an addendum to the trade treaty whereby America would relinquish all rights to British lecturers, past, present and future, in exchange for the indefinite loan of one Mr. Low?" Geoffrey Parsons
+ Books p1 Jl 16 '39 650w
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 29 '39 440w
Reviewed by Mason Wade
Commonweal 30:362 Ag 4 '39 450w
Foreign Affairs 18:368 Ja '40 30w

"Quincy Howe's commentary is straightforward and factual. He allows the cartoons to express themselves, while he discreetly fills in with only the most necessary background. No truer proof could be shown than this book that England is still at heart democratic. Low uses to the utmost the privilege of free expression, yet he never misuses it. For the real quality of his cartoons lies in their sane clarity and their freedom from emotional fanaticism." Katharine Scherman
+ Living Age 357:97 S '39 440w
Reviewed by John Chamberlain
New Repub 100:80 Ag 23 '39 1300w

"Mr. Low's cartoons reveal no ills. They are the work of a healthy, vital man, with an excellent sense of humor, with a clear view of the insane happenings going on around him." Robert Van Gelder
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 16 '39 600w

"Mr. Low has caught the full irony of the last six years on the point of an infinitely witty pen."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Jl 15 '39 30w
Pratt p19 winter '40
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 9 '39 600w

LOWE, ERIC. Salute to freedom. 615p $2.50 Reynal [10s 6d Collins]

(W) 39-21

The story opens in 1902, when Robin Stewart, the hero, is a boy of twelve. The scene is the New South Wales country. It traces in detail Robin's life and the changes in his character thru the years of his youth, his participation in the World war, his marriage, his wife's sudden madness, and thru his death in Spain where he had gone to drive an ambulance.

Booklist 35:191 F 1 '39

"The force of the book lies in its sensitive appreciation of one man's questions and his answers, with no effort to give a general solution ready-made. 'Salute to Freedom' has depth and importance as a novel in that the narrative is illuminated by the less tangible adventures which men and women have shirked or met in all places and times." Mary Ross
+ Books p4 F 12 '39 1100w

"Mr. Lowe's style is at first stiff and mechanical but improves toward the latter part of the book, as if the author needed time to get into his stride. There are some beautiful descriptive passages. . . 'Salute to Freedom' would be improved by cutting. Mr. Lowe, like many writers of distended novels, lays the burdens of selection upon his readers." R. T. D.

— + Boston Transcript p2 F 11 '39 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '39

"One suspects that Mr. Lowe is young and that he intended something in Robin that he has not been able to express clearly. But if Robin is an unsatisfactory hero for a long novel, nothing but praise can be given to the treatment of his setting and the people by whom he is surrounded." Charles Marriott

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 S 20 '38 440w

"A solid, honest, revealing novel which, if the awkwardnesses of style and construction were eliminated, would be absolutely first-rate. As it stands, it ranks well up toward the top of any list of recent Australian novels." C. H. Grattan

+ — New Repub 98:108 Mr 1 '39 220w

"Here is one long novel at least that is not too long. From beginning to end it is full of the meat of thought. Written by an Australian about present-day Australia it throws a steady, brilliant light on the mentality of a young nation that counts enormously, and will count increasingly, in British imperial policy; and that also, as the book implicitly reveals, will have a big future part to play in world politics. . . But even with this exceptionally interesting background 'Salute to Freedom' could not have been the deeply moving novel it is had Robin's story been less humanly tragic or less tragically typical of our own transitional era. . . It is a book that has both head and heart in it. Its appeal is to both." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 F 12 '39 1000w

"The best sections of Mr. Lowe's 615-page portrait of a young man deal with his own native Australia, its cattle, rabbits, horses, kangaroos, sheep-stealers, land grabs, feuds, mountains, horses. . . The beginning of 'Salute to Freedom' is crowded with characters whom it is impossible to disentangle and who mostly fade out anyway. . . The final section explains how Robin became a literary man and solved all his life problems by going to Spain and getting killed by the Fascists. . . In between the first part and the last part is a good deal of information about Australia that I was glad to absorb. Also some pow'ful melodrama: Mr. Lowe is a dead shot at describing violent mountain-climbing, man hunts, murders, storms, that kind of thing. Were he less ambitious, his book would have been more successful." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 14:80 F 11 '39 350w

Pratt p29 summer '39

"There is strength, insight, and passionate conviction in this novel. It is big in scope as well as in size. But what will recommend it to many readers is the fact that it communicates, better than any recent novel, a sympathy for the awful vertigo of the baffled visionary." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 11 '39 700w

"In the last third of the book's more than 600 pages the element of Australian background dwindles, the chapters become increasingly preoccupied with the state of Stewart's mental and emotional reactions; and the story works toward a communist viewpoint that in the closing pages develops into a direct though abstractly stated thesis representing this viewpoint." R. W. N.

Springf'd Republican p7e F 12 '39 650w

"Reading fat, second-rate novels nowadays is like watching the wake of a ship: they stir up a lot of suds, produce a certain hypnotic effect, and a few hundred yards back, leave no trace at all. Salute to Freedom churns thus for 615 pages."

— Time 33:71 F 13 '39 170w

"Here is a first novel by an Australian writer that deserves a welcome. It is very long, forthright and serious in tone, vividly descriptive of the way of life of the country people of New South Wales. . . The freshness of the scene, however, is not Mr. Lowe's chief claim upon the sensibilities of the reader here. He has a full and varied story to tell, and he tells it with ease and candour, with a sobriety of feeling also that seems to give extra substance to the excitements of mountain-climbing, for instance, or the frenzy of stampeding cattle."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p595 S 17 '39 900w

Wis Lib Bul 35:51 Mr '39

LOWE, JOHN ADAMS. See American library association. Committee on library architecture. Small public library buildings

LOWENBERG, MIRIAM ELIZABETH. Your child's food. (Whittlesey house publication) 299p il $2.50 McGraw

649.3 Children—Nutrition. Menus. Cookery (W) 39-28993

"An enlarged version of Food for the Young Child [Book Review Digest, 1935] with meals and recipes planned for the whole family. Chapters on feeding the infant, and on allergy, by Dr. Katharine Bain, and on eating, by Lydia V. Swanson." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:154 D 15 '39

Survey 76:31 Ja '40 70w

Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

LOWENFELD, VIKTOR. The nature of creative activity [tr. from the German by O. A. Oeser]. 272p il $4 Harcourt [21s Routledge]

701 Art—Psychology. Blind. Perception. Children as artists 39-21238

"Experimental and comparative studies of visual and non-visual sources of drawing, painting, and sculpture by means of the artistic products of weak sighted and blind subjects and of the art of different epochs and cultures." (Subtitle) The author spent fifteen years in the Hohe Warte Institute for the Blind in Vienna, teaching blind and weak sighted children to draw and paint. Illustrations grouped at end of volume. Index of subjects.

"This is an important book which should be studied, by all those who are interested in the art products of children." R. H. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 14 '39 600w

New Statesman & Nation 17:626 Ap 22 '39 330w

Spec 162:322 F 24 '39 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Jl 1 '39 300w

LOWER, ARTHUR REGINALD MARSDEN. The North American assault on the Canadian forest; with studies of the forest industries of British Columbia by W. A. Carrothers, and of the forest industries in the Maritime Provinces by S. A. Saunders. 377p maps $3.75 Yale univ. press [16s Oxford]

338.1 Lumber trade. Canada—Relations (general) with U.S. 39-4546

"A history of the lumber trade between Canada and the United States." (Subtitle) The volume is one of a series on the relations of Canada and the United States issued by the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

LOWER, A. R. M. [illegible]

[illegible] Am Hist R 44:101 Ja '38 [illegible]w
Book Sat 16:247 Ap 1 '38
Reviewed by E. J. Wrong
Canadian Hist R 19:118 Je '38 [illegible]w
Foreign Affairs 17:641 Ap '39 [illegible]w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS. F. S. LOWNDES). Lizzie Borden. 1939 $2 Longmans

Borden, Lizzie Andrew—Fiction [39-8421]

Fictionized study of the Borden murder case, in Fall River in 1892. In her story the author has delved into the life and psychology of Lizzie Borden and supplied a motive and solution for this very brutal case.

"In her most important novel since 'The Lodger' Mrs. Belloc Lowndes has at last provided the Borden Case with one feature it has hitherto lacked for the purpose of fiction—a reasonable even a convincing motive. She gives it and that makes the whole thing fall into line. This study in conclusions has put female Borden into fiction to stay." M. L. Becker

+ Books p1 Ap 23 '39 300w
Cath World 149:766 S '39 110w

"The details of the plot are frankly invention, but they are constructed with sound respect for the facts of the Borden murders and the story is held within its natural frame in pitiful-pending reality." K. W.

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 16 '39 450w
New Yorker 15:106 My 13 '39 80w

"Vivid picture of thwarted Victorian spinster done with strict regard to atmosphere morals, and manners of time. Grade A."

— Sat R of Lit 19:14 Ap 22 '39 40w

Mrs. Belloc Lowndes presents her conjectures in fiction form and makes a mystery story of breathless interest. Whether she convinces her reader is doubtful. Her conjectures are well constructed but there is lack of conviction—relevant facts. She tells however a thrilling story and adds one more oil to the literature of the Lizzie Borden case."

— Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 30 '39 [illegible]w

Wis L J 39:113 Je '39

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS. F. S. LOWNDES). Reckless Angel. 1940 $2 Longmans

Mystery story

[40-11684]

"A tall and pleasing tale of high life." Will Cuppy

Books p14 N 19 '39 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wilson
Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 60w

"This is much more of a fairy-tale love story than a mystery story, and it is pretty light stuff and way one chooses to take it." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 N 19 '39 90w
Sat R of Lit 21:43 D 2 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 200w

LOWNDES (lownz)

LOWRY, FERN, ed. Readings in social case work, 1920-1938 selected reprints for the case work practitioner. (N.Y. school of social work. Publications) 510p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

361.3 Social work 39-9956

This volume of readings was published to meet the need of case work practitioners, and students and teachers of social case work. It is largely a collection of papers read at the National Conference of Social Work, or papers printed in The Family. However, eleven other professional publications are represented by one or two reprints. (Am Soc R) Index.

Am J Sociol [illegible] N '39 [illegible]
Reviewed by W. F. Ogburn
Am Soc R 4:811 Ag '39 [illegible]
Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder
Churchman 153:17 S 1 '39 200w

"Instead of criticizing Miss Lowry for her selections we should sympathize with her struggle to find truly helpful material for the practicing social case worker. We trust that this book will be the first of many such efforts and that social case workers will be stimulated to provide enough more professional literature that will be [illegible] practitioners." I. K. Carter

Social Forces 18:306 D '39 500w

Reviewed by Gertrude Springer
Survey 75:156 My '39 [illegible]

LUCAS, ALFRED. The route of the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt. 99p map $1.35 Longmans [3s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

222.13 Jews—History [39-14835]

After showing that the story of the Exodus from Egypt rests upon good historical foundations Mr. Lucas advances reasons for thinking that the Children of Israel followed the route which passes along the eastern shores of Lake Menzaleh to Nekeb and El Thamed, down the Wadi el Muerr and thence round the top of the Gulf of Akaba to the south end of the Wadi Arabah, which is where was the wilderness of Sin." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The author is apparently ignorant of the fact that the Priestly narrative of the Exodus, upon which, together with the list of stations in Numbers 33, he bases his study, is a conflation of three documents differing markedly from each other as to the route followed. The possibility suggested on the basis that this reconciliation of this hitherto baffling problem may well prove to be its final solution is accordingly remote." C. A. Simpson

— Living Church 101:12 Jl 23 '39 [illegible]w
Times [London] Lit Sup p759 N 25 '39 [illegible]w

LUCAS, JANNETTE MAY. Where did your garden grow? il. by Helene Carter 65p col maps $2 Lippincott

581.9 Plants—Geographical distribution. Flowers (W) 39-33649

By means of colored picture-maps and historical text the book traces many of our familiar flowers to their original habitats. For ages ten to fourteen.

"It is information such as young gardeners will find personally interesting and schools directly useful for a fairly wide range of ages." M. L. Becker

— Books p22 N 12 '39 200w
Cath World 150:374 D '39 40w

"The pictorial maps by Helene Carter show the flowers that were originally native to each continent and seem clearer than some maps she has done. A page of flower sketches heads each chapter. Recommended for any but the smallest library collections." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 65:38 Ja 1 '40 100w

"Helene Carter has an opportunity to draw some of the most beautiful pictorial maps which she has yet done. Even if the text did not fire the imagination these maps, in fresh lovely tones, would, and her pictures of gladioli, narcissi, and all the other lovely species are so filled with an appreciation of the beauty of texture and form that they will delight the seasoned gardener and the casual one equally." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p38 N 12 '39 200w

"Fascinating colored maps by Helene Carter. Makes flowers exciting."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w

Wis Lib Bul 35:218 D '39

LUCCOCK, HALFORD EDWARD. The Acts of the apostles in present-day preaching. 2v 173;168p ea $1.50 Willett [ea 6s McCallum]

226.6 Bible. New Testament—Acts (38-12985)

"The author defines this book as neither commentary nor sermons but as 'an unsystematic and unpretentious collection of thoughts provoked by interested reading of Acts in the light of contemporary situations.'" (J Religion) Volume one covers the first eight chapters; volume two includes chapters nine thru twenty-eight.

"An imagination, so disciplined that it avoids the fantastic, that can play with a great word of Scripture (and it is as thrilling as play) will rarely be dull, and almost never foolish. But it must be disciplined; and such an imagination is Luccock's finest gift and achievement. Imagination is what makes great poets, great humorists, great composers, great executives, great soldiers (though I don't like to give even the devil his due there) and great preachers." E. M. Poteat

+ Christian Century 55:562 My 4 '38 650w (Review of v 1)

Christian Century 56:453 Ap 5 '39 70w (Review of v2)

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 153:17 Je 15 '39 170w (Review of v2)

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat

Crozer Q 16:148 Ap '39 200w (Review of v 1)

"This volume is up to the best level of Professor Luccock's homiletical comment on the Scriptures." E. C. Colwell

+ J Religion 19:87 Ja '39 70w (Review of v 1)

Reviewed by B. S. Easton

Living Church 100:71 Ja 18 '39 150w (Review of v 1)

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Color and colors. 206p $3 Van Nostrand [15s Chapman]

535.6 Color. Colors (W) 38-33537

"The author has discussed various aspects of color and of colors in other books, but this is an attempt to treat this ramified subject in a new manner. The scope is confined to the effectiveness of light and color upon human responses. The other scientific aspects are subordinated and even eliminated wherever this seems practicable. If something has been sacrificed for palatability it is hoped that the result has justified the means. It is tempting to present these discussions in a light vein but, obviously, breadth and depth are not achieved by superficiality. At any rate, the other extreme has been guarded against as much as possible. The book is written for anyone who possesses eyes. It should be helpful to most persons and perhaps to those who especially use color in any of its spheres of influence." Prelude

---

N Y New Tech Bks 24:21 Ap '39

"The book has real merits, but the author's rather precise style of writing is likely to repel serious students of colour science."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p583 O 7 '39 50w

LUDLUM, DAVID MCWILLIAMS. Social ferment in Vermont, 1791-1850. 305p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

917.43 Vermont—Social conditions. Vermont —History 39-22998

Now regarded as an ultra-conservative state, Vermont in the early years of the nineteenth century was looked upon as the source of many radical movements. Contents: The scene; The Puritan counter-reformation; The temperance crusade; Antimasonry; Antislavery and religion; Antislavery and politics; "Equal and exact justice to all;" Social architects; A Vermont bibliography, 1791-1850. Index.

"[The] exceedingly interesting Vermont chapter in our pre-Civil War history has now been very well presented in Dr. Ludlum's contribution to the Columbia Studies in American Culture. His book is that unusual phenomenon—a thoroughly scholarly treatise which is fascinating to read." E. S. Bates

+ Books p23 O 8 '39 400w

"In 'Social Ferment in Vermont, 1791-1850,' Dr. Ludlum has done a job of dissecting the first sixty years of Vermont's history as a state. Through the elaborate use of source material, carefully detailed in footnotes, he has managed to present a fascinating chapter in the story of our national origins." Kathleen Coyle

+ Commonweal 30:520 S 29 '39 700w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 S 16 '39 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p647 N 4 '39 300w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Quartet; tr. by Ernest Boyd. 383p $3 Alliance bk.

39-19353

A German writer and his wife, Helena, and a Danish painter and his wife make up the "quartet." The first couple live in a lovely secluded villa in Switzerland. They and the others become friends, later complications arise, but in the end, tho the couples separate, the perfect harmony of friendship remains.

"Ludwig has attempted a daring novel; but it's a novel of all times. The solution is inevitable from the opening gun. I expect that a great many people will like it, as I did; and with as many, if different, reservations." F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p7 My 14 '39 700w

Reviewed by Julius Adelberg

Boston Transcript p2 My 20 '39 450w

"There is an oblivious, adolescent earnestness about many of the passionate passages that a ribald reader will find roaringly funny, and the slightly tongue-tied gawkiness of the translation adds to the effect. 'Luscious mush,' the unsympathetic might call it. Our mothers' sturdy generation would have slightingly dismissed it as 'soft.' So it is. But if you want a cushion for the hard times, what a smooth, fragrant, downy pillow!" L. A. MacKay

Canadian Forum 19:196 S '39 480w

"It's all too weighted down by soulful analyses to serve as much of an escape for the impatient reader."

New Repub 99:84 My 24 '39 40w

"The jacket of the book tells us that 'the theme of the novel was first suggested by Boccaccio. It was first developed by the great Goethe. And Ludwig, the heir to these literary Titans of the past, contributes a striking and original treatment of this eternal theme.' These words are presented here for what they are worth. Speaking for myself, I do not see the value and significance of Mr. Ludwig's contribution. There would seem, for me, to be too much moonlight in his beer. Mr. Ernest Boyd's translation is excellent." John Cournos

N Y Times p7 My 14 '39 600w

"The fact is that the characters of 'Quartet' don't amount to very much, and we may content ourselves with being amused at their antics, as Ludwig undoubtedly did in writing of them." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 20:19 My 13 '39 310w

LUEHRING, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Swimming pool standards; introduction by Jesse Feiring Williams. 273p $5 Barnes, A.S.

371.624 Swimming pools 39-11575

"The purpose of this volume is to 'provide guiding standards' for those 'charged with the responsibility for the planning, construction, and administration of swimming pools in educational institutions.' After a historical treatment of swimming pools—ancient, medieval, and modern—the author discusses laws, rules and regulations pertaining to them today. Twenty criteria for judging standards are then set up followed by detailed discussion of the suggested standards." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. P. Miller
Am J Pub Health 30:94 Ja '40 80w
Wis Lib Bul 35:162 O '39

LUMPKIN, GRACE. The wedding. 307p $2.50 Furman

39-5402

The scene is a little Georgia town, and the time the twenty-four hours before the wedding of Jennie Middleton, daughter of a good but unprosperous family, and a promising young doctor. On the night before the wedding the lovers quarreled and the effects of that quarrel upon all the characters are traced. The time is 1909.

"It is too bad that three of the men had names beginning with G and the title of Doctor —Dr. Gregg, Dr. Greve, and Dr. Grant, resulting in some confusion and clumsy expression. And it is very much too bad that the text is marred with misspelled words. But the story has strength and humor and credibility." Lorine Pruette
+ — Books p10 Mr 5 '39 400w

"Miss Lumpkin is no stylist, but she writes with the sincerity and conviction that come from first-hand knowledge of her setting." L. B. Salomon
Nation 148:301 Mr 11 '39 250w

"Simplicity is the virtue stressed by the publishers of this novel of Southern middle-class family life (c. 1909), and indeed simplicity is the only thing it gives them to exploit. . . But simplicity is not a virtue when it consists in repetition, redundancy and novelist's indigestion." Otis Ferguson
— New Repub 98:259 Ap 5 '39 280w

"[The characters] are all, Miss Lumpkin would seem to say, quite right to regard this most ancient of our surviving folkways with appropriate gravity. It is only when viewed intelligently that it seems barbaric and faintly ridiculous. This suggestion, however, is not thrust upon us. It is allowed to develop unobtrusively during the course of the soberest little novel that ever carried its tongue in its cheek." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p6 F 26 '39 550w

"The story's quiet complexity is handled with considerable skill; but it must be confessed that the total impression one gets from it is rather mild. Despite the genuineness of the author's intentions, the plain truth is that the characters are not very interesting people." Eugene Armfield
+ — Sat R of Lit 19:7 F 25 '39 320w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 9 '39 300w
Time 33:79 F 27 '39 330w

LUND, FREDERICK HANSEN. Emotions; their psychological, physiological and educative implications. 305p il $3.50 Ronald

157 Emotions 39-7102

"This work is not as inclusive as Ruckmick's 'Psychology of Feeling and Emotion' (published in 1936). . . The subject-matter is divided into the following main classifications: different methods and techniques that have been employed to identify emotions, studies that have been made of the neuro-glandular basis of emotional reactions, as well as those which include cardio-vascular, respiratory, gastro-intestinal and sexual changes, and, lastly, the relationship of emotion to learning and to motivation. Dr. Lund deals at length with the topic of the emotions of childhood." N Y Times

"This is a contribution to science, a clear, concise, and objective analysis, and an attempt at interpretation of the available experimental data on the machinery of the emotions in man and other mammals. After pointing out the vagueness, confusion, and general inadequacy of the philosophical and psychological terms in this field, as these evolved prior to the newer information, the author consistently lets the newer data redefine the old terminology. Even the best-informed individual will find the volume an aid to objective orientation in a difficult field. . . In the case of a book of such general excellence, it may seem ungracious on our part to point out the few (and not significant) errors of fact." A. J. Carlson
+ Am J Soc 45:132 Jl '39 210w

"If a sociologist, social worker, or guidance worker had time to read only one book on psychology, the reviewer would recommend this as being more useful to him than any treatise on general psychology." J. K. Folsom
+ Am Soc R 4:877 D '39 230w

Reviewed by Livingston Welch
N Y Times p16 Je 25 '39 380w

LUNDY, MIRIAM (MRS TODD WELLINGTON WRIGHT), ed. Writing up the news; behind the scenes of the great newspapers; top ranking editors and reporters tell their own inside stories. 254p $2.50 Dodd

070 Journalism. Reporters and reporting (W) 39-32749

Twenty editors, reporters, feature writers or columnists, and rewrite men on New York or other city papers, have here presented the "inside stories" of their jobs. Each article is preceded by a brief, informally written biographical sketch. The list of contributors includes Stanley Walker, former city editor of the New York Herald Tribune; Burns Mantle, drama editor and critic for the New York Daily News; Harry Hansen, literary editor and book reviewer of the New York World-Telegram; John Kieran, sports columnist for The New York Times.

Booklist 36:167 Ja 1 '40
Reviewed by S. E. Fitzgerald
Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 130w
Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p6 D 24 '39 500w

LUNN, ARNOLD HENRY MOORE. The science of world revolution. 355p $3 Sheed

335 Revolutions. Communism. Socialism 39-2485

"Mr. Lunn analyzes the pattern that runs through all revolutions—the preliminary destructive work of the intellectuals, the advent of the revolution itself, the destruction of the eternally surprised intellectuals who fostered it, and the advent of practical and ruthless men, each fighting for himself, with little care for what it may cost to get what he wants. He finds that in both America and England three of the symptoms of the final stage before a revolution can be discerned—the drift of the universities and colleges towards the left, the tendency of society to toy with subversive ideas, and the complacent conviction that it can't happen here." Publisher's note

"Despite the fact that Mr. Lunn is an able writer, 'The Science of World Revolution' is merely a deft piece of special pleading." Daniel Aaron
— Boston Transcript p3 My 13 '39 200w
Cath World 149:636 Ag '39 210w

"This reviewer holds no brief for such communist tactics as have victimized and alienated innumerable individuals and groups whose friendship they have sought and needed. He concurs with much that the author says in condemnation of united front strategy. But it is difficult to read the pages of this book and not to conclude that it conceals under a pretentious title the same kind of anti-red hysteria as that which we have come to expect from such organizations as the American Legion, the D.A.R. and the Catholic Church. Mr. Lunn has written an extremely readable tract for the times; but the science of world revolution awaits some one else's pen." E. T. Buehrer

+ — Christian Century 56:448 Ap 5 '39 600w

"Mr. Lunn's book is richer in criticism than in fertile ideas of its own. It is opposed to the Leftist trend of modern politics and passionately anti-communistic without developing the same passion against the Rome-Berlin brand of totalitarianism. In his analysis of Marxism and its Russian version Lunn makes some very good points and displays an unusual talent for treating economic problems in an extremely clean and popular manner. I know no better book for a young Marxist to meditate with regard to the fundaments of his master's doctrines. . . But it seems indispensable to present a better way of social justice after having denounced the errors and tragic consequences of Marxism. In failing to do so you give to naive readers the illusion that present conditions are not so bad, that there is no natural dynamic for a change of our social structure and that the unrest of our time is caused only by professional trouble makers." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 29:641 Mr 31 '39 250w

Foreign Affairs 17:806 Jl '39 20w

LUSSU, EMILIO. Sardinian brigade [tr. from the Italian by Marion Rawson]. 274p $2.50 Knopf

940.48 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives. European war, 1914-1918—Italy (W) 39-27672

Personal narrative of the Italian Alpine campaign of 1916-1917. The author a few years ago wrote of his escape from Mussolini in Road to Exile (Book Review Digest, 1936).

Booklist 36:5 S '39

"Two emotions rule Lussu's book: disgust and indignation. Yet it is, as so many have said, a curiously noble book. It is probably the most dignified of the war autobiographies; and that is the secret of its achievement." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p3 Jl 16 '39 1200w

"Lussu's book is singularly lacking in the disillusionment and bitterness which characterizes so many of the other war reminiscences. Written in a vein of light irony, 'Sardinian Brigade' is not only a biting commentary on modern warfare but a witty and amusing account of the author's experiences." Mary Manning

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 12 '39 360w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 20 '39 500w

"Although published as a novel, this book is frankly autobiographical. With Hervey Allen's 'Toward the Flame' it is probably the best war biography yet to be published. . . It is perhaps the most unpretentious of all the war books and this very lack of pretension is the largest factor in the impression of quiet insanity and horror that the book leaves in the reader, not definitely but as an overtone somehow appealing to the mind rather than the emotions." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 30:442 S 1 '39 500w

"Whoever has read 'Road to Exile,' published in 1936, will find, refined and brightened, those gifts of the narrator and humorist which make Lussu one of the most vigorous of contemporary Italian writers. I placed 'Sardinian Brigade' in the hands of an American college girl without telling her anything about the author, the content or the value of the book. She did not put the book down until she had read it from cover to cover." Gaetano Salvemini

+ Nation 149:129 Jl 29 '39 650w

"Except for this deeply moving book, nothing of importance has appeared in English upon war upon the Italian front. . . For effective restraint, sensitiveness, vividness and other book-cover blurb words, 'Sardinian Brigade' ranks with the best. If Zweig, Remarque & Co. kept you awake nights and gave you cold chills, so should Lussu." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 23 '39 1150w

Pratt p20 winter '40

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 20:10 Jl 15 '39 550w

"Lussu makes the reader aware that he feels the full tragedy of warfare and its gradual suffocation of all finer feelings. His account, like other antiwar narratives by ex-soldiers, may not be free from emotional bias, but it leaves the reader with a persuasive picture."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 750w

Time 34:71 Jl 17 '39 220w

LYNCH, PATRICIA. The turf-cutter's donkey kicks up his heels; il. by Winifred Bromhall. 246p $2 Dutton

39-12106

Further adventures of Eileen and Seamus, the turf-cutter's children, and their unusual donkey, Long Ears. For earlier stories in the series see The Turf-Cutter's Donkey, and The Donkey Goes Visiting (Book Review Digest, 1935, 1936).

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara

Library J 64:563 Jl '39 130w

"Middling."

Sat R of Lit 20:19 Jl 8 '39 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 28 '39 190w

LYND, ROBERT STAUGHTON. Knowledge for what? the place of social science in American culture. 268p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

301 Sociology. Social sciences. Social problems (W) 39-27385

Study of the place of social science in American culture. "Accepting with little debate the idea that social science is in the midst of crisis, Professor Lynd recommends a movement toward integration and synthesis. Social scientists should view the institutions with which they work as parts of a total culture, and they should also 'take the further step of viewing culture as living in and operating as the learned habits and impulses of persons.' 'From this point of view, such processes as motivation and learning within the individual become central to the analysis of cultural change.'" (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

"Lynd has handled a topic of great difficulty with consummate skill and has produced a document that may well become a call to action to social scientists and, I fear, to their detractors as well." Alexander Goldenweiser

+ Am Anthropol 42:164 Ja '40 1000w

Reviewed by J. R. Commons

Am Econ R 29:635 S '39 280w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes

Am Hist R 45:185 O '39 300w

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg

Am J Soc 45:270 S '39 1950w

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

Am Pol Sci R 33:711 Ag '39 650w

Reviewed by Howard Woolston

Ann Am Acad 205:153 S '39 500w

Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39

LYND, R. S.—Continued

"A book of long perspective and stimulating suggestions. It should be mandatory reading for any one working in the social sciences. It is good reading for all civilized people who hope that the scientific method can help to save a combustible world from ignition." Stuart Chase

+ Books p7 Jl 2 '39 800w

"It is regrettable that Mr. Lynd, like so many of his colleagues, ends his quest for unity on the humanistic level. Mr. Lynd finds religion as nominally understood unessential to culture. Some central loyalty that is emotionally satisfactory is an adequate equivalent for him. . . But on his chosen level, Mr. Lynd has written one of the year's most original and provocative books." R. M. G.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 18 '39 550w

"In his ambitious project Professor Lynd is at his best when he is elaborating the concept of culture in terms of habits and impulses of persons, and describing typical American habits of thought and action. His research has given him special preparation for characterizing Americans in these terms. In his evaluations of the social sciences as they are currently being practiced one who admits his view of the socially significant can, with minor reservations, generally agree. Impressive as is his acquaintance with disciplines other than his own, he has in some instances damned too inclusively and overlooked important scholars, the realism of whose orientations rival his own. Professor Lynd is at his weakest in instrumenting his call to action." K. A. Bosworth

+ — Library Q 9:542 O '39 400w

Management R 28:376 O '39 50w

Reviewed by M. S. Stewart

Nation 149:354 S 30 '39 700w

"From the standpoint of an inquiry into personality in culture and culture in personality, his emphasis is the right one. From the standpoint of an inquiry into the nature, sources, dynamics and consequences of social change, it needs extension. . . My quarrel with Lynd is not a basic one, but a matter of emphasis. With Lynd's major thesis and his general direction I agree wholly. And I agree also with the stress he lays on the enormous task that confronts social science." Max Lerner

+ — New Repub 99:257 Jl 5 '39 1600w

"This book needs patient reading, for it is written in 'America.' . . But it is an excellent book, which calls to social scientists to be up and doing before it is too late." C. H. Rolph

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:352 S 2 '39 1000w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p20 My 7 '39 1300w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 20:3 My 6 '39 3650w

"In support of his thesis, Professor Lynd wields his pen with verve and grace. Whether describing the pattern of American culture, commenting on the social sciences as tools, seeking to ascertain the relationship between 'values' and the social sciences, or proposing soberly 'some outrageous hypotheses,' he faces realities and probes deep beneath the surface of many current ideologies. This is a book not merely for the social scientist per se but for all who believe in the essential rightness of the democratic way of life and who hope that 'we may yet make real the claims of freedom and opportunity in America.' "

+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 Ap '39 430w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley

Social Educ 3:512 O '39 700w

Reviewed by Thomas Woody

Social Studies 30:372 D '39 1400w

"Social science is seemingly invited to reconstruct society on a collectivist pattern with Christianity left out. If that is Prof Lynd's real meaning, it is to be regretted that he did not say so directly. It might be asked whether people are not going to be allowed to choose their own religion and determine their own scale of values. But it is enough to point out that this book is an exposition, and that the requisite clarity of thought and expression is not always found." E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 15 '39 1200w

LYONS, DOROTHY. Silver Birch; il. by John Austin Taylor. 308p $2 Harcourt

39-23751

Girl scout story about a troop of Michigan girls, and how they secured horses for each member in order to form a mounted patrol.

Churchman 153:39 D 15 '39 10w

"The stories of Scout activities and the settlement of a bitter feud between two members crowd the book with extraneous details which would have been more interesting had greater attention been paid to the girls' personalities. It is a sound knowledge of horsemanship displayed against a thoroughly American background which lifts this book above the mediocre run." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p12 D 15 '39 280w

M

MAAS, CARL. Common sense in home decoration. 350p il $2.75 Greenberg

747 House decoration 39-2918

Contains chapters on arrangement of furniture and choice of style or design, on color, wall and floor treatments, fabrics, curtains, lighting and accessories. The author is editor of House Beautiful. Bibliography. Index.

"This book contains the answer to almost any question of home decoration. Concise and well arranged, it is full of so much general information that it is pleasant to browse through even if your home furnishing problems are very much on the abstract side." L. D. Bensel

+ Books p17 O 22 '39 250w

Boston Transcript p3 My 20 '39 70w

Reviewed by C. G. Beede

Christian Science Monitor p8 F 28 '39 220w

"A sensible and valuable book."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 29 '39 260w

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 13 '39 350w

MCADAM, ROGER WILLIAMS. Salts of the Sound. 247p il map $3.75 Daye

387.524 Steamboats. Seamen. Long Island sound 40-661

Chronicle of steamboating on Long Island sound from 1815 to the present, containing many pen portraits of the personalities—steamer captains and promoters—who made this chapter in American history. Illustrated with old prints. Index.

"Mr. McAdam's book is heavily anecdotal and full of human interest stories. It might have been more copiously documented as to the size and power of the ships he describes. We would have liked to know more exactly the types of engines, the names of the yards whence these heroic steamers came. 'Salts of the Sound' is far from being a book as valuable as Mr. David Budlong Tyler's 'Steam Conquers the Atlantic,' but it is a readable and enthusiastic fragment of Americana." William McFee

+ — Books p6 D 24 '39 750w

"Mr McAdam shows now and then an inclination to use more words than is necessary. But he tells his stories vividly, and his book is, in a modest way, a contribution to New England biography and the lore of New England waters. At times more information would be welcome."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 8 '39 650w

MCADOO, EVA TARDY. How do you like New York? an informal guide. rev ed 198p il map $2 Macmillan

917.471 New York (city)—Description—Guide books (W) 39-9235

Revised edition of an informal guidebook first published in 1936 (Book Review Digest, 1936). There are four pages added containing information about the World's Fair, 1939. Index.

Books p30 Ap 30 '39 60w

Christian Century 56:484 Ap 12 '39 30w

"The practical visitor who has no time for antiquarian by-paths and who wants to see as much as possible in a week will find Eva T. McAdoo's 'How Do You Like New York?' a most useful little volume. . . The only weak spot in her curriculum is—feet. Can even the biggest stand up under the grueling punishment Miss McAdoo prescribes?" E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 30 '39 180w

"Miss McAdoo's public is composed of country cousins with hearts of oak and muscles of iron, who are expected to spend an entire day charging through the halls of the Metropolitan, with an evening at the theater and a night at the Rainbow Room to follow. She intends them to do most of their traveling by subway or shanks' mare, and does not think they will mind if the information about where to go is surrounded by one of the world's most magnificent collections of travelogue clichés. Probably she is right." Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 20:16 Ap 29 '39 190w

"All guidebooks have their limitations. Eva McAdoo's 'How Do You Like New York?' is among the best of the informal type."

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 20 '39 240w

MCALLISTER, MRS ANNA (SHANNON). In winter we flourish; life and letters of Sarah Worthington King Peter, 1800-1877. 398p il $3.50 Longmans

B or 92 Peter, Mrs Sarah (Worthington) King 39-31320

The first chapters of this work tell the story of the settlement of an aristocratic Virginia family in Ohio in the late eighteenth century. Thereafter the book concerns chiefly Sarah Worthington, second daughter of Governor Worthington. Sarah married twice, was widely traveled and a leader in society in Cincinnati and Philadelphia, but is chiefly remembered for her social work and charities, in the latter years of her life, as a convert to the Catholic church. Index.

"One will search the book in vain for brilliant commentary or shrewd assessments of character. The Worthingtons, to their biographer, are without fault. The women are beautiful, witty and charming, the men gallant and brilliant. Nor does the simple straightforward narration escape a liberal use of clichés. But these defects are abundantly offset by a clear and orderly presentation of utterly fascinating material." A. B. Parsons

+ — Books p6 N 19 '39 1100w

Reviewed by Daniel Aaron

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 20 '40 150w

"An interesting and informative biography."

+ N Y Times p34 N 5 '39 400w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE, and DORRANCE, JOHN GORDON. The Bonapartes in America. 286p il $3 Dorrance

929.2 Bonaparte family 39-12959

An account of the various members of the Bonaparte family who have lived in America or been connected with America, from Napoleon himself down to the twentieth-century Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Books p11 Je 18 '39 750w

" 'The Bonapartes in America' should reach a large public: it is highly recommended as a clear and dramatic survey of a fascinating subject." Albert Guerard, Jr.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 10 '39 420w

Cath World 150:636 F '40 150w

"Their researches add nothing to what had already been published, but they have assembled data not previously collected and much that is not generally known about the Bonapartes and the exiled Bonapartists in America."

Christian Century 56:677 My 24 '39 360w

Churchman 153:35 N 1 '39 60w

Commonweal 30:242 Je 23 '39 120w

"In all, the Bonapartes have numbered several dozen members in this country. With remarkable tenacity and deftness, the authors of The Bonapartes in America cling to their trail—from the earliest members up to Louis Napoleon—twenty-five year old present claimant to the Bonaparte throne. It is a unique and fascinating story, for the American locale brings Napoleon and his various kinsmen close to home." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 50:64 Je '39 480w

N Y Times p3 Jl 2 '39 340w

"An interesting and readable example of family biography with a special purpose."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 16 '39 1400w

MCBURNEY, JAMES HOWARD, and HANCE, KENNETH GORDON. The principles and methods of discussion. 452p $2.50 Harper

808.5 Discussion 39-4928

"Designed for college courses or individual use, here is a book that might help S.L.A. speakers with group or panel discussions, dialogues, symposiums, and forums." (Special Libraries) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 35:249 Ap 1 '39

Reviewed by Adeline Macrum

Special Libraries 30:314 N '39

MCCALL, OSWALD WALTER SAMUEL. The hand of God. 158p il $1.75 Harper

242 God. Devotional exercises 39-31164

"These meditations on the meaning of God in human life are essentially poetry, though their form is that of prose. Their inspiration comes partly from Rodin's familiar marble figure, partly from Job's wrestling with a problem to which he could not find the right answer though he rejected the wrong one, and partly from the Christian revelation." Christian Century

"There is a core of sound thought, but even an accurate summary of it would misrepresent the book, for its mood and color are of the essence of it more truly than any syllabus of its argument."

+ Christian Century 56:927 Jl 26 '39 90w

"In 'The Hand of God,' an extraordinary volume dealing with the deeper things of the Spirit, a widely educated, broadly experienced, keenly cultured scholar, teacher, author, and clergyman has set forth in a form of prose poetry his delightful conclusions regarding many of the popular religious teachings of the day." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 25 '39 400w

"Movingly presented, with fresh glints of real poetic insight and some felicity of expression." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 153:19 O 1 '39 100w

MCCALLUM, JAMES DOW. Eleazar Wheelock, founder of Dartmouth college. 236p $3.50 Dartmouth

B or 92 Wheelock, Eleazar. Dartmouth college 39-30197

"This is neither a history of Dartmouth nor an attempt to trace New England intellectual history as telescoped in the life of Eleazar Wheelock. It is, rather, a detailed analysis of Wheelock and his great life work. . . The Indians had to be shown the path to salvation, and they had to be shown further that the path did not lie through unprotected settlements of the frontier. Wheelock had taught red and white pupils earlier, but with the gift of Colonel Joshua More in 1755 and the establishment of Moor's Charity School, his real work with the natives began. Thereafter events directed Wheelock's journey from Moor's School in Lebanon to Dartmouth in Hanover." New Eng Q

MCCALLUM, J. D. —Continued

"Out of a mass of letters and other documents the author has sifted a clear and significant presentation of a strong clerical personality during the great awakening in mid-eighteenth century New England." C. G. Stillman

\+ Books p35 D 10 '39 350w

"The fullness of documentation and copious extracts from sources add to the value of this book. These explain the life of Eleazar Wheelock because they help to explain the period which gave meaning to Wheelock's life. The drives which impelled Wheelock and his colleagues were formulated in different abstractions, but there is a large residuum which makes eighteenth-century North America much closer to twentieth-century America than we often permit ourselves to think." B. J. Loewenberg

\+ New Eng Q 12:805 D '39 450w

"This book is a piece of scholarly research which brings life and color to historic backgrounds, in the rounded and sympathetic story of one zealous, educational pioneer."

\+ N Y Times p12 Ja 28 '40 400w

MCCAMY, JAMES LUCIAN. Government publicity; its practice in federal administration. 275p il $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge]

353 U.S.—Politics and government. Publicity. Public opinion—U.S. Propaganda, American 39-19734

"This study is concerned with publicity as distinct from teaching or reporting, with public releases by specialists as distinct from unplanned contacts, and with publicity from the administrative branch of government as distinct from legislative, judicial, or political-party arenas. It is a general description of the nature and practice of federal administrative publicity in the period of 1937-38 against a background of the role of publicity in modern administrative statesmanship." (Pref) Index.

"To the emotional and frequently uninformed critics of the government publicist, James L. McCamy's Government Publicity gives an answer in its sympathetic appraisal of this staff aide." E. S. Wengert

\+ Am Pol Sci R 33:916 O '39 290w

"This is about the only and certainly the best treatment of the subject of government publicity now available. It is carefully documented, well organized, and clearly written. In addition to relevant literature, the author has made extensive use of personal interviews and questionnaires in collecting his data." H. L. Childs

\+ Ann Am Acad 207:219 Ja '40 600w

"While the book bears marks of its dissertational origins, and though the author has been more adept in gathering material than in assessing its significance, his exposition of publicity techniques and his analysis of the symbolism by which the New Deal has sought to dramatize its purposes and achievements will have more than peripheral interest for lawyers eager to explore some nonlegal aspects of the problem of administrative sanctions." Merle Fainsod

\+ — Harvard Law R 53:522 Ja '40 850w
J Home Econ 32:43 Ja '40 100w
New Repub 100:111 Ag 30 '39 30w

"An informative and interesting book." H. P. Levy

\+ Survey 75:359 N '39 300w

MCCAUSLAND, ELIZABETH. Changing New York; photographs by Berenice Abbott. 207p $3 Dutton

917.471 New York (city)—Description
(W) 39-9016

Ninety-seven full-page photographs of New York, old and new, with short descriptive notes on each. A publication of the Federal Art project.

Reviewed by Jack Steele
Books p6 My 28 '39 100w

"This first book of New York calls for more. The real city has been invaded but not yet conquered. Miss Abbott deserves some help. She needs printers and plate-makers whose work is not so harsh. She needs to be relieved of editing done from above, if her own picture is to come out whole. Maybe, left to herself, she would find in her inexhaustible files more scenes that convey the heartiness and joy of life that seven million people have brought with them even into poor New York." Douglas Haskell

Nation 148:506 Ap 29 '39 600w

